CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 1 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 6th January 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
I.—POLITICS.
(a)—Foreign:
1.	The Italian-Turkish war	7
2.	Italian atrocities in Tripoli	7
3.	The situation in Persia	7
4.	The situation in Persia	7
(b)—Home:
5.	The attitude of Indian Muhammadans ...	7
6.	The attitude of Indian Muhammadans ...	7
7.	The future of Indian Muhammadans ...	8
8.	The coronation boons and the depressed classes	9
9.	Press representatives at the coronation darbar	9
10.	Another open letter to King-Emperor George V	9
11.	An appeal to the King-Emperor for the protection of cows	10
12.	The working of the Press Act ...	10
13.	A review of the events of the year 1911 ...	10
14.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	10
15.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	10
16.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	11
17.	The Governor of Bengal	11
18.	The Gaekwar incident	11
19.	Social and moral reforms should precede political agitation	11
20.	The Indian National Congress ...	12
21.	The Indian National Congress ...	12
22.	The Indian National Congress ...	12
23.	The Indian National Congress ...	13
24.	The Honours' List	13
25.	The supplementary Honours' List ...	13
26.	The change of Capital	13
27.	Administrative changes in India ...	14
28.	The Royal boons	14
29.	The Royal boons	14
30.	The Royal boons	14
31.	The Royal boons	14
32.	The Royal boons	14
II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.
	Nil.
III.—NATIVE STATES.
	Nil.
IV.—ADMINISTRATION.
(a)—Judicial and Revenue:
	Nil.
(b)—Police:
33.	The abolition of the Special Branch of the Criminal Investigation Department in Bengal	15
(c)—Finance and Taxation:
	Nil.
(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:
34.	The Jullundur cantonment case ...	15
35.	Agra municipal water works case ...	15
(e)—Education:
36.	The proposed Hindu and Muhammadan Universities	16
37.	The proposed denominational universities	16

		Page.
38.	The proposed Hindu University ...	16
39.	The proposed Hindu University ...	16
40.	The proposed Hindu University ...	17
41.	Bengalis and Western education ...	17
42.	Free and compulsory education ...	17
	(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:
43.	Imposition of cesess on lands ...	18
	(g)—General:
44.	Destruction of cattle in Garhwal ...	18
45.	Muharram holidays in the Allahabad High Court	18
46.	Salaries of ahlmads under Mr. Pike's scheme	18
47.	The new coinage	18
48.	The new coinage	18
49.	The new coinage	19
50.	The new coinage	19

		Page.
	V.—LEGISLATION.
51.	The Special Marriage Bill	19
52.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	19
	VI.—RAILWAY.
	Nil.
	VII.—POST OFFICE.
53.	A complaint against the post master of the branch post office, Moradabad ...	21
	VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.
54.	The cow-protection movement ...	21
55.	The present condition of Hardwar ...	21
56.	Social reform	21
57.	Pilgrimage to Mecca	22
	IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.
58.	A suggestion to suppress prostitution ...	22

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st January 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakim Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Kwárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakim Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 38.	600 ,,
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
50	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 30.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 ,,
64	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 ,,
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
66	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
67	Darbar	Agra	Do.
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
71	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*72	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
73	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
74	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
†75	Kanauj Punch	Kanauj (Farrukhabad).	Do. ...	Abdur Rahim Khán; Muhammadan; 53.	500 copies.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Naiyar-i-Azam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	300 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
82	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
83	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
84	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
85	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
86	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
87	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
88	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
89	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
90	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husaini; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
91	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
92	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
93	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
94	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
95	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†96	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
97	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†98	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
99	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
100	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
101	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
102	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
103	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
104	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†105	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
106	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
107	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
108	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
109	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
110	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
†111	Jánhavy	Chunar (Mirzapur)	Do. ...	Shri Kánt Upásni; 35	Very small.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 copies.
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27... ...	5,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Braj Vallabh Misra	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 ,,
†130	Shri Yádvendra	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Rám Charitra Rai ; Brahman ; 34 ...	500 ,,
131	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 ,,
132	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 ,,
133	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 ,,
134	Swadesh Bándhavá ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 ,,
135	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman
136	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal.
*137	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 copies.
138	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 ,,
139	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†140	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
141	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 ,,
142	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
143	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 ,,
144	Knand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 ,,
145	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
146	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 ,,
147	Jain Gazette	Jalesar(Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
148	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†149	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
150	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 ,,
151	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...
152	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
153	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), reviewing the important events of the year 1911, remarks that the recent invasion of Tripoli by the Italians has exposed to the Asiatics the deceitful overbearing and the aggressive nature of the European Powers. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th December 1911.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor says that the people of Asia will in future put no faith in the words and promises of Europeans, and that Asia will acknowledge the superiority of Europe over her only in respect of the latter's superior strength in arms, and not in respect of morality. He goes on to qualify this by saying that of the European countries England alone is straightforward, honest and humane.

2. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th January 1912, referring to the statement of Lord Roberts that the reports regarding Italian atrocities in Tripoli were unfounded, remarks that His Lordship has defended Italy merely because it is a European Power. The editor asks Lord Roberts if he can give any convincing reason as to why European Powers, in utter disregard of all treaties and agreements, proceed against an Asiatic Power which in any way offends Europeans, while they do nothing when any European Power adopts an aggressive attitude towards the Asiatics. He observes that Lord Roberts's assertion cannot be believed, seeing that the whole world has admitted that the Italians committed atrocities in Tripoli. AL MUSHIR, 4th January 1912.

Italian atrocities in Tripoli.

3. The Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 3rd January 1912, reviewing the situation in Persia, remarks that the present foreign policy of the British Government is due to England's fear of Germany, which makes her fulfil every legitimate or illegitimate aspiration of Russia and France. ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 3rd January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor proceeds to review the situation in Morocco, Tripoli and Turkey, and observes that it should be the duty of British statesmen to take into account the feelings of the many British subjects who are Muhammadans when determining their policy towards Muhammadan countries. He says that in the present circumstances the Muhammadans cannot be blamed if they complain that England has given her moral support to those attempting the destruction of the Muhammadan kingdoms of the world.

4. Discussing the recent developments in the situation in Persia, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, says that, notwithstanding its professions to Turkey and England to the contrary, Russia is not likely to evacuate Persia soon, and that the independence of the latter country is seriously endangered. The editor remarks that no one will be surprised at this territorial hunger of Russia, in that it has been the characteristic feature of that Power. He invites attention to the silence of Sir Edward Grey, who was not long ago assuring the outside world of the withdrawal of Russian forces from Persia as soon as the latter accepted the demands made in the latest Russian ultimatum, and suggests that he is too busy considering whether to send a punitive expedition to Persia on account of the recent attack on the Indian sowars there, to spare time for considering Russian action. ABHYUDAYA, 4th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

(b)—Home.

5. The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 28th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), refers to the threat held out by the Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali on several occasions that the loyalty of Indian Muhammadans to Government would be weakened in view of Government policy with regard to Muhammadan countries, and enquires whether their loyalty is so weak and easily estranged as that. HITAISHI, 28th December 1911.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

6. Referring to the proceedings of the Conference of the Muhammadan leaders held at Calcutta on the 24th December under the presidency of the Hon'ble Nawab Saiyad Muhammad of Madras, to consider the present position and determine the future policy of the community, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th December 1911, remarks LEADER, 29th December 1911.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

that it is indeed one of the signs of the times full of happiest augury for the future well-being of India as a whole, that the best minds among the Muhammadan community should have begun to consider seriously the advisability and necessity of revising their policy and attitude towards the Hindus.

The editor expresses gratification that the Muhammadans have at last been awakened, and are beginning to realise that as a subject people their interests and those of the Hindus and of all other communities of India are identical, and that the best hope for the welfare of all the communities lies in union and co-operation.

He states that the Hindus will be glad to receive the Muhammadans into the common fold with open arms, in spite of the fact that the latter were taught to regard with suspicion every act and measure proceeding from the former. He goes on to say that religious differences never prevented intelligent and patriotic Hindus from siding with the Muhammadans and sympathizing with them in the troubles and sufferings of their co-religionists whether in the Transvaal or in Persia or in Turkey.

The editor expresses the hope that there will be no withdrawal from the course now contemplated by the Muhammadans, and that, when once convinced after further deliberation, of the utility and wisdom of the step they propose to take, the leaders will firmly and resolutely withstand all overtures for a reconsideration of their attitude from whatever quarter they may proceed.

The writer then refers to the suggestion that the halting course adopted by Muhammadans was really intended as an experiment and that it was a covert threat to Government made in order to see whether it would be frightened into reversing the new policy inaugurated by the Viceroy under the Royal auspices, of equal treatment and "fair field and no favour," and remarks that the suggestion is unfair and uncharitable, and he indignantly repudiates the charge of insincerity being ascribed to the promoters of the Conference at Calcutta.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 3rd January 1912.

The future of Indian Muhammadans.

7. Nawab Mushtaq Husain contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 3rd January 1912, in which he replies to the criticisms of the Hindustan (Lahore) about his letter which appeared in the issue of the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911), paragraph 13.

Referring to the remark that he meant to threaten Government the Nawab says :—

"But our respectable contemporary has lost sight of the fact that Muhammadans can never threaten Government . . .

To threaten Government has never been our policy, nor can it ever be. Muhammadans are, by their religion, prohibited from being disloyal to their Sovereign.

As long as we are in a country we are in duty bound to act according to the laws of that country . . .

The Muhammadans fully realise that, if (which God forbid) the British rule were to cease in India, they would have to live as subjects of their present fellow-countrymen, which no Muhammadan would tolerate . . . Hence on no account can a Muhammadan threaten Government . . .

Our existence in this country as a successful and respectable community is contingent on the condition that we raise the standard of our education, make industrial progress and improve our trade and, agriculture . . . These are the ways for making progress, and, when we are fairly advanced in education and wealth, then political evolution will become easy for us . . .

The methods adopted by our fellow-countrymen for their advancement are before our eyes . . . If Muhammadans even now awake from their lethargic slumber they will, in spite of their minority, be recognized as an important community, and Government (which has now dared to please a strong section of its subjects without definitely assuring the Muhammadans regarding the protection of their interests) will be obliged in future to have regard for our feelings and rights. It is possible that the present policy of Government may act as a whip in stirring up the Muhammadans from their lethargic sleep . . . In connection with the important changes announced by Government no adequate provision has been made for safeguarding the interests of the Muhammadans . . . The other matter about which Muhammadans can reasonably complain is that the ministers should have advised the King-Emperor of the need to assure the protection of the interests of the Muhammadans, whose morsel is snatched away in order to placate the obstinate opposition of a stronger community . . .

However, bygones should be bygones. but Government should not delay a single moment in announcing, while the King-Emperor is yet in the country, after consultation with the leaders of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, the measures to be adopted for safeguarding their interests."

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, December 1911.

The coronation boons and the depressed classes.

8. The Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for December 1911, contains an article entitled "The coronation and the depressed classes," in which the writer adverts to the boon which has been described by many as the most popular one that His Majesty the King-Emperor could grant at the coronation darbar—the prohibition of cow-killing—in order to urge how much more beneficial and kingly a boon would be the amelioration of the condition of the sixty millions of the depressed classes. He says that cruelty to animals is punishable by law, whereas the cruelty inflicted on the depressed classes is constant and without hope of legal redress.

He says that Queen Victoria's Proclamation of 1858 never benefited them, and rather became a charter for their continued oppression on the pretence of religious observance and custom. He refers to the proposals to effect the elevation of the depressed classes, and suggests that Government have the right to put down tyranny of caste over caste. He warns his readers that it is likely that the emancipation may be effected by a revolution and that that means has precedents in history.

The writer suggests the appointment of an officer designated the Protector of the Depressed Classes to improve the condition of the latter.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, December 1911.

Press representatives at the coronation darbar.

9. Referring to the representatives, Indian and Anglo-Indian, of the press in India, who had been invited to the darbar, the editor of the Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for December 1911, remarks as worthy of note: "that such of these journals as are wholly, or practically wholly, owned by Indian proprietors, are treated as Anglo-Indians, if edited by an Anglo-Indian staff; likewise those owned by Anglo-Indians but edited by an Indian staff, are also treated as Anglo-Indian." He remarks that the Indian Review of Madras was the only monthly journal invited.

He comments on the fact that the press in the Central Provinces and Berar, the North-West Frontier Province, British Baluchistan, Assam and Orissa, was not represented, and also that no Ceylon journalist was invited.

ABHYUDAYA, 31st December 1911.

Another open letter to King-Emperor George V.

10. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 31st December 1911, publishes another article (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 22) entitled "An open letter to King-Emperor George V," purporting to have been contributed by a cultivator, in which he describes the deplorable condition of cultivators in India, and appeals to His Majesty for its amelioration. He commences by remarking that the criterion of the prosperity and strength of a country is the number of its "cultivated citizens" and not the abundance of its revenues or the beauty of its public buildings, and that therefore the scenes of grandeur and magnificence, which His Majesty witnessed on the occasion of his coronation, were no evidence of the condition of the mass of his Indian subjects. He says that the cultivators, who form the real backbone of the country, are not faring well, and that, unless something be soon done to better their condition, even the magnificence [(lit.) magnificient superstructure] which is at present seen will soon disappear. He points out that cattle, which are the chief means of support of the Indian cultivators, have been deciminated by indiscriminate slaughter, and that the recurring famines have thinned the number of the cultivators themselves. He goes on to say that a comparison with European countries shows that the miserable condition of the cultivators is not so much due to the recurrence of famines as to their poverty, since even in times of famine in India the outturn of food grain is sufficient to meet their wants, whereas they have not the money to purchase it in the face of a world-wide competition. He expresses regret that the so-called "natural leaders" of the people, who are in sympathy with the officials and Anglo-Indian journals, oppose the attempts of those made to improve the condition of the masses by the diffusion of education, suggest that dilating on the imaginary evil effects of education is likely to injuriously affect the supply of agricultural labour and say that the officials, in spite of their being Europeans, should have recourse to the oriental doctrine of fatalism in discussing the possibility of preventing famines. He states that criminals in jails fare better than cultivators, in that while twenty-four rupees is the yearly cost for the maintenance of a prisoner, the latter have an average annual income of only about twenty rupees per head. He quotes the Pioneer, Sir Charles Elliot and the agricultural report for 1889 to show the extreme poverty of the bulk of the agriculturists, and remarks that, in spite of the fact that the return from the land is becoming less, the rent is always being increased. The writer, after making several other assertions of a similar nature regarding the unprofitable nature of land tenures in India, suggests that, in order to better the condition of cultivators, Government should carry out its long-deferred promise of making land settlements permanent throughout the country, and expresses the hope that the King-Emperor, who has already won the hearts of his Indian subjects by his high-minded generosity, will exert his influence in this direction.

ABHYUDAYA, 31st December 1911.

An appeal to the King-Emperor for the protection of cows.

11. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 31st December 1911, publishes a poem composed by Pandit Deva Raj Panchanan, in which he dwells on the rejoicings of the people over the coronation of the King-Emperor in India, and the boons announced in connection with it, and pray to His Majesty to prohibit the slaughter of cows, which are of great utility to all classes of his subjects in this country, and says that such a boon will earn the eternal gratitude and loyalty of the Hindus.

ABHYUDAYA, 31st December 1911.

The working of the Press Act.

12. Referring to the proscription by the Punjab Government of the picture of the Asht-Bhuja Devi, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 31st December 1911, expresses regret that the Punjab Government, in acting as it did, took no account of the feelings of the Hindu community, which would be much distressed to see such want of respect on the part of Government towards the image of one of their sacred goddesses.

AL MUSHIR, 4th January 1912.

A review of the events of the year 1911.

13. In its review of the events of the year 1911, Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th January 1912, remarks that the annulment of the partition of Bengal will stamp out anarchism from India, and expresses the hope that, now that there is no need for repressive measures, Lord Hardinge will earn the gratitude of the press by repealing the Indian Press Act. Referring to the Waqf Validation, Elementary Education and the Agra Estates Bills, the editor remarks that the first measure was essential for the advancement of the entire Muhammadan community and should be passed into law, but that the last two were not suited to the present condition of the country.

TRISHUL, 28th December 1911.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

14. In an article entitled "The Motherland," the editor of the Trishul (Benares), in the issue of the 28th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), asks both Hindus and Muhammadans to unite in commemoration of the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and to observe Rakshabandhan ceremony as has hitherto been done by the Bengalis on the partition day.

The editor advises the Muhammadans to stop cow-killing and says that it will restore prosperity to India.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 1st January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

15. The Lucknow Gazette, of the 1st January 1912, expresses regret at the annulment of the partition of Bengal on the ground that it will be injurious to the interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

The editor, however, advises his co-religionists to desist from making any protest against the measure, seeing that it was announced by His Majesty the King-Emperor himself, and asks the leaders of his community to approach Government with the request that proper arrangements be made for safeguarding their interests.

He also expresses appreciation of the acknowledgement of the loyalty of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal mentioned by His Excellency the Governor General in his despatch to the Secretary of State for India.

MASHRIQ, 2nd January 1912.

16. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 2nd January 1912, expresses regret at the annulment of the partition of Bengal, which, the editor remarks, is calculated to injure the interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

He expresses agreement with the views expressed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain in his letter which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13), but does not approve of the advice given by the Nawab to his co-religionists that they should not depend upon Government, but should rely on their own efforts and exertions. He goes on to say that the annulment of the partition does not exhibit the weakness of Government, but that it demonstrates its far-sighted policy, in that it removed the grievances of the Hindus of the two Bengals in this way. He advises the Muhammadans to make friends with the Hindus, and asks Government to safeguard the interests of the Muhammadans in the new presidency, and to provide means for their education.

INDEPENDENT, 1st January 1912.

17. Referring to the rumour that Sir K. G. Gupta would be appointed the Governor of Bengal, the Independent (Allahabad), of the 1st January 1912, remarks that it is not too much for the magnanimity of the King-Emperor, and that it would not be matter of surprise if Indians were appointed to such high and responsible posts.

The Governor of Bengal.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 4th January 1912.

18. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 4th January 1912, publishes translations of the letter of apology addressed to the Viceroy by the Gaekwar of Baroda, of the article that appeared in the Times (London) on the Gaekwar incident and of the letter written to the London Times by the Private Secretary to His Highness to refute the charges made by that paper against the Gaekwar, and remarks that the allegations made against His Highness appear to be unfounded, seeing that a discreet and experienced ruling chief, who is aware of the military strength of the British Government and is anxious for his own existence, is not likely to be ill-disposed towards the Paramount Power. The editor expresses the hope that the London Times will give proof of its good intentions by withdrawing the allegations made against His Highness.

The Gaekwar incident.

LEADER, 6th January 1912.

19. In a leading article entitled "A message for the new year," the Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th January 1912, draws attention to the concluding passage of Pandit Bishan Narayan Dar's address at the Congress, in which he laid stress on the fact that the real need of India was not political agitation so much as social and moral reform. The editor urges that there is no more important work for the Indian patriot to do to-day than the reformation of social abuses and the elevation of the national character.

Social and moral reforms should precede political agitation.

Referring to the criticism of the Bengalee (Calcutta) in this connection he remarks as follows: "While we entirely accept the proposition that the struggle for political reforms and the attainment of those reforms will by themselves produce a whole some effect on the capacity and the character of the people, we must at the same time candidly own that we cannot contemplate with equanimity the concession to our countrymen of all the political rights now enjoyed by the self-governing members of the British Empire, without a vast dissemination of education among the mass of the population, without a relaxation of caste restrictions, and without the emancipation of Indian womanhood." The editor points out that about six crores of Hindus are kept beyond the pale of civilized society for no sin committed by them, and merely because at birth they were declared as of low caste. He says many Hindu girls, belonging to the higher castes and born of respectable parents, have taken to prostitution as a profession, because they were not permitted to re-marry, though they had possibly lost their husbands before they lived as wives. He refers to the saying that the greatest wealth of a nation is its men, women and children, and deplores the enormous drain on the vital resources of the India nation, caused by the appalling mortality of infants, the weakening Indian women owing to premature maternity, and the dangers to Indian, children, physical, mental and moral, owing to the ignorance of mothers about the proper bringing up of children. He asks whether individuality of character and a keen sense of responsibility are essential for men exercising the right of self-government, and suggests that these qualities are suppressed and deadened owing to the conditions of life prevailing in a Hindu joint family. "If caste is to stand in the way of individuals taking to occupations for which they have aptitude, how is industrial development to be brought about? If there is to be an artificial sense of superiority among some, simply because they are born of parents belonging to a so-called higher caste, notwithstanding their utter unworthiness for such superior position; and if a sense of degradation is to be forced upon others, because their parents happened to belong to a so-called lower caste, howsoever able and accomplished these may be, where is that feeling of equality and brotherhood which is a fundamental condition of the enjoyment of common political rights by the community at large?" . . .

"We have heard it argued by apologists of the caste system that the fact that two men could not dine with each other or that there could be no intermarriage between members of two families need be no bar to the existence of harmonious relations between them. This may be a tribute to their amiable and easy-going disposition and accommodating nature, but cultivated minds with a proper sense of human dignity cannot help feeling hurt, if they are not regarded and treated as equals by their peers in no sense better than they and for no more valid reason than that their caste labels are different."

He says that the upholders of the Hindu caste system, who cite the analogy of the class distinction of the west, forget that there is nothing to prevent an ordinary day-labourer in England from rising to the highest positions in his country, provided he has the requisite mental and moral endowments, whereas the most accomplished Sudra in India can never hope to be treated as the social equal of even the most worthless and degenerate Brahman.

He observes that if the people of India are to have a future worthy of their past they should change, renovate and adapt to altered circumstances their social customs and institutions, seeing that mere political agitation, unaccompanied by the most active and zealous endeavours to reconstruct the social fabric, is bound to be barren of result.

He concludes by asking his countrymen to do their utmost for the success of the patriotic labours of Messrs. Gokhale and Basu by impressing up on Government the necessity of thus allowing the two bills to find place in the Statute Book.

BHARAT JIWAN, 1st January 1912.

The Indian National Congress.

20. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 1st January 1912, says that the Congress closed its session at Calcutta as usual after a performance lasting three days, and that the meagre attendance of delegates and visitors at the Congress this year shows that it has become less important than even sectarian or literary conferences. The editor remarks that the introduction of the Congress "creed" and the Congress "convention" have practically destroyed the institution and he expresses doubt as to whether it will last much longer in its present state.

MASHRIQ, 2nd January 1912.

The Indian National Congress.

21. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 2nd January 1912, reviewing the resolutions passed at the last session of the Indian National Congress, expresses surprise at the opposition of the president in the matter of separate electorates on local bodies, and observes that the Congress has never before expressed its disapproval of contentious communal questions in such strong terms.

ABHYUDAYA, 4th January 1912.

The Indian National Congress.

22. Commenting on the last session of the Congress, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, expresses agreement with the views of the president about the lack of sympathy among the Civil Servants towards Indian aspirations, and expresses the hope that the officials will benefit by this criticism, and follow the examples set by the King-Emperor and the Secretary of State in this country in the matter of their genial and sympathetic attitude towards its inhabitants. The editor expresses approval of the sentiments expressed by Babu Surendranath Banerji towards the King-Emperor, the Secretary of State and Lord Hardinge in his speech on the partition of Bengal. He feels confident that Government will accede to the request of the Congress and grant an executive council to the United Provinces in the immediate future. He expresses the hope that the repressive measures will soon be done away with, now that the country has been pacified by the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and when the people are rejoicing over the Imperial visit to the country. He endorses the criticism of the Congress speakers about the opposition of Local Government's to the Elementary Education Bill, and says that those who are opposed to the spread of education should take a lesson from the generous action of the King-Emperor, in granting fifty lakhs of rupees for popularizing education. He expresses the hope that Government will pass the Elementary Education Bill, in view of the fact that the whole country has supported it. He contends that the want of funds cannot be urged as a plea for postponing the measure, seeing that Government cannot consistently refuse to bear the cost of education, when it is prepared to undergo a great expenditure in connection with the transfer of the Capital from Calcutta to Delhi. He urges that now that the Congress has adopted the proposed amendments in its constitution, all classes of congressmen should be satisfied, and should take part in its deliberations for the common good. He expresses gratification that a few prominent Muhammadans joined the Congress this year, and also held a meeting to discuss the advisability of their community as a whole taking part in the Congress. He suggests that the Muhammadans would do well to join it for their own good, as well as for that of the country at large.

23. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 5th January 1912, has an article discussing the last Congress, in which the editor says that he regrets to have to admit that the recent Congress was not a success, that the attendance was poor, the speeches as a whole not up to the usual standard, that the usual enthusiasm was lacking and that there was a great want of organization and method in the arrangements of the Congress. LEADER, 5th January 1912.

The Indian National Congress.

24. An Nazir (Lucknow), for January 1912, has an article entitled "The Honours," in which the editor, after congratulating the Muhammadan recipients of Coronation Honours, makes the following remarks :— AN NAZIR, January 1912.

The Honours' List.

"But we cannot close this article till we have offered our congratulations to Nawab Haji Ismail Khan for the honour which has certainly been conferred on him in recognition of his having wounded the feelings of the entire Muhammadan community of India, and for having adopted a hostile attitude towards the unanimous and general views and sentiments of the leaders of the community in connection with the affairs of the Aligarh College. The title of Nawab is undoubtedly most fitting for such self-conceited and selfish beings.

'God sends to all everything according to their merits,
For the web of a spider never catches anything but a fly.'"

25. The Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 1st January 1912, referring to the rumour that a supplementary Honours' List would be issued shortly, expressed the hope that the names of certain distinguished persons, which were omitted from the Coronation Honours' List, would be included in the supplementary list. The editor suggests as suitable recipients Pandit Ramashankar Misra, retired Collector, Colonel Bindeshari Prasad, Chief Secretary, Benares State, Munshi Prem Bihari, Subordinate Judge, Pandit Chhannun Lal, vakil and president, Sujan Samaj, and Pandit Devi Dat, Health Officer. AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 1st January 1912.

The supplementary Honours' List.

26. An Nazir (Lucknow), for January 1912 (received on the 4th January), says that the change of Capital will cause considerable loss to Government, to the country and to the Muhammadans also. The editor observes that except the leaders of the Bengali community, who resented the partition of Bengal, and some respectable Beharis, who were desirous of Behar being separated from Bengal, very few persons will AN NAZIR, January 1912.

The change of Capital.

welcome the change of the seat of the Government of India from Calcutta to Delhi.

ADVOCATE, 4th January 1912.

Administrative changes in India.

27. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th January 1912, says that the most significant passage in Lord Hardinge's despatch to the Secretary of State for India on the administrative changes announced on the occasion of the coronation darbar at Delhi is, that, in which His Lordship deals with the question of provincial autonomy, and declares that in future the Local Governments are to develop self-government, the Government of India standing side by side and only intervening to prevent misgovernment, and in which reference is made to the scheme for dividing the country into separate presidencies each under a Governor and a council of equal rank and dignity, and corresponding directly with the Secretary of State for India. The editor remarks that Government has to a certain extent accepted the principles enunciated by Mr. John Bright half a century ago, in that Lord Hardinge's words clearly set forth the goal which the Government has in view.

TRISHUL, 21st December 1911.

The Royal boons.

28. Commenting on the annulment of the partition of Bengal, the Trishul (Benares), of the 21st December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), describes this boon as nominal, and remarks that the poor Indian subjects will not at all be benefited by it, seeing that it will not remove their distress.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 4th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

29. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 4th January 1912, referring to the Royal boons, remarks that the annulment of the partition of Bengal will be gratifying to Indians generally, and to the Bengalis in particular. The editor observes that the King-Emperor has fulfilled the wishes, both of the rulers and the ruled, by transferring the Imperial Capital from Calcutta to Delhi, as the former had for a long time been considered as ill-suited for the seat of the Government of India.

Referring to the grant of fifty lakhs for the promotion of the cause of education, he suggests that the sum should be utilized in making arrangements for imparting technical education to Indians, on the ground that their poverty will be removed as soon as the industrial condition of the country is improved.

In conclusion he expresses gratitude for the concession to government servants of fifteen days' pay and remarks that His Majesty has gratified the ruling chiefs, the people and government servants alike by his boons and concessions on the occasion of the coronation darbar.

AL MUSHIR, 4th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

30. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th January 1912, publishes a portion of the article contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, and remarks that it should be impressed upon Government that the annulment of the partition of Bengal will deprive Muhammadans of the advantages which accrued to them from that measure. The editor expresses the hope that Government will see that the interests of the Muhammadan community are not disregarded.

AL MUSHIR, 4th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

31. Referring to the grant of fifteen days' pay to permanent government servants in commemoration of the coronation, Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th January 1911, suggests that government pensioners should also be granted a similar concession.

AL MUSHIR, 4th January 1912

The Royal boons.

32. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th January 1912, contends that Nawab Mushtaq Husain in his article on the subject of Royal boons, contributed to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, said that the King-Emperor should leave nothing behind him but feelings of gratitude and gratification, and not, as the Rajput Gazette puts it, that Muhammadans would mourn His Majesty's visit to India. The editor remarks that so long as journalists of the type of the editor of the Rajput Gazette (Lahore) persist in misrepresenting the writings of Muhammadans no rapprochement can be effected between Hindus and Muhammadans.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

Nil.

(b)—Police.

The abolition of the Special Branch of the Criminal Investigation Department in Bengal.

33. Referring to the announcement that the Special Branch of the Criminal Investigation Department of Bengal is to be abolished, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th December 1911, remarks that the news will be hailed with joy, and that genuine relief will be expressed throughout the country that the people are at last to be rid of this incubus. The editor says that the mischievous activities of this body, directed as they sometimes were against quiet and innocent people, were to some extent responsible for increasing the existing unrest and discontent, while the real culprits escaped undetected. He says that the work of this branch was, in the very nature of things, of an unpopular kind, demanding much tact and discretion, and that some of the acts of blazing indiscretion, of which the department was found guilty, were such as were not at all calculated to inspire confidence in its work.

LEADER, 29th December 1911.

He concludes with the remark that evidently the step taken is part of a settled policy of full trust and conciliation which His Excellency Lord Hardinge's government have decided to inaugurate under the Royal auspices, and he asks all true well-wishers of the country to fully and whole-heartedly reciprocate and thereby strengthen the hands of Government, so as to enable it to persevere in this wise policy, and take, if possible, further steps forward along the same line.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

The Jullundur cantonment case.

34. Under the heading "The topics of the day," the editor of the Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for December 1911, refers to the expulsion of two respectable Indian gentlemen from the Jullundur cantonment under the provisions of sections 210 and 211 of the Cantonment Code. He suggests that they were expelled merely because they incurred the displeasure of the Cantonment Magistrate, and expresses the hope that the Government of India will soon be able to redress the genuine grievance of the Jullundur "deportees," and also see the advisability of so amending the Cantonment Code as to afford security of liberty to all "respectable members of the population" in cantonments.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, December 1911.

Agra municipal water works case.

35. A correspondent of the Advocate (Lucknow), contributes from Agra, in the issue of the 4th January 1912, a short summary of the judgment in the case in which Saiyad Mustafa Husain, a rais and landholder of Shahganj, sued the Agra Municipal Board for Rs. 60 as compensation for non-supply of water according to the water rate levied on him, which was decided by the Munsif of Agra in favour of the plaintiff, and concludes with the following remark :—

ADVOCATE, 4th January 1912.

"The judgment in full, which covers eleven pages of foolscap, will be sent to you by post as soon as it is copied. It has excited a great deal of interest here, and is being copied by the score, as it has been discovered that at page 296 of the Municipal Manual under the heading Water Works—Maintenance, section 17 says :—

'The person appointed to any of the following posts is required to possess technical qualifications :—

Municipal Engineer or Superintendent of Water Works.
Engineer, driver or assistant driver.
Water Works Inspector.'

"The present Municipal Engineer not being possessed of 'technical qualification,' his appointment is illegal."

(e)—Education.

EDUCATIONAL MAGAZINE, November and December 1911.

The proposed Hindu and Muhammadan universities.

36. One Brij Ballabh Kishore of Moradabad contributes an article to the Educational Magazine (Ghazipur) in the combined issue for November and December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), in which he objects to the creation of the proposed Hindu and Muhammadan universities, and remarks that money spent on these institutions will be wasted unnecessarily, seeing that neither the Hindus nor Muhammadans will be at liberty, under the Acts which will be framed by the Government of India, to prescribe the courses of study according to their own discretion. He advises both Hindus and Muhammadans to give up their schemes for the establishment of denominational universities, and to ask Government to modify the existing universities to fulfil their requirements to abolish the age restriction for the matriculation examination, to found scholarships for popularizing industrial education, and to eliminate from the curriculum text-books on history certain incorrect statements which, he says, they contain.

DARBAR, 2nd January 1912.

The proposed denominational universities.

37. The Darbar (Agra), of the 2nd January 1912, in continuation of the article entitled "The proposed denominational universities," remarks that the suggestion that only one denominational university should be established for the education of both Hindus and Muhammadans is not pertinent, seeing that the relations between them are not yet sufficiently cordial, on account of their religious differences. The editor contends that Hindus and Muhammadans cannot be expected to co-operate with each other, until they have forgotten their differences after receiving education separately.

He goes on to examine the contention of the Anglo-Indian press that the existing universities can very well be utilized for imparting religious instruction to Hindus and Muhammadans, and remarks that government universities are not serving all the ends, apart from religious education, which the new sectarian universities are to serve.

MAHAMANDAL MAGAZINE, October 1911.

The proposed Hindu University.

38. The Mahamandal Magazine (Benares), for October 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), contains an article in defence of the proposal for a Hindu University formulated by the Bharat Dharma Mahamandal against the criticism of the editor of the Hindustan Review (Allahabad).

The writer reminds the latter that Hindu orthodoxy is far from dead and that the Mahamandal's proposal was not the song of the dying swan. He asserts that a Hindu is nothing if not a believer in the caste system, and that without varnashrama Hindu society is a "husk without the grain and body without the soul."

The editor goes on to attack those who pose as Hindu leaders while they fail to recognize Brahman pre-eminence, while they eat forbidden food, and while they have nothing of the Hindu in them except the name and blood.

He closes with the remark that the sympathetic attitude of the Mahamandal towards the Hindu University cause is shown by the princely donation of its president, the Maharaja of Darbhanga.

MARYADA, November 1911.

The proposed Hindu University.

39. With the Maryada (Allahabad), for November 1911 (received on the 18th December 1911), was received a booklet in English by Benoy Kumar Sarkar, M.A., entitled The Hindu University—What it means.

In this essay the writer asserts that the need for the Hindu University is due to the present universities not being suited to Hindu needs. He refers to what he calls the "relativity" of educational policies, and says that the same university cannot meet the requirements of different peoples or of the same people in different ages. He emphasizes the fact of "the separateness of Hindu society from other societies of men," and says that this Hindu characteristic would be perpetuated and developed, and the natural and national culture of the Hindu race preserved under the care of the Hindu University.

Stress is laid on the intention that the Hindu University scheme of education should make room for the new sciences of the physical world even in the primary classes, and on the need for applied sciences and commercial knowledge to be cultivated by Hindus to prevent the degeneracy of the Hindu race.

The writer goes on to say that, "besides adding to the educational opportunities of the people, especially of those who have not availed themselves of the facilities offered by the State," the Hindu University would be particularly devoted to the furtherance of the interests of Hindu civilization along modern lines.

A great future in respect of research work is mapped out for the institution, as a result of which "the 'relative' truths of the present-day social sciences have to be revised, modified and corrected in the light of new problems that are likely to be presented by Hindu society and literature." This is to be done by supplying fresh sociological data and through the publication and circulation of the unused literary legacies of the Hindu sages.

LEADER, 5th January 1912.

40. In a note in the issue of the 5th January 1912 of the Leader (Allahabad), the editor says that people are naturally anxious to be informed of the progress of the Hindu University movement, the amount subscribed and realised, and what further efforts are being made to push forward the movement. He expresses the hope that the record of the Hindu University promoters will not suffer by comparison with that of their compatriots in the Muslim community, and asks the former to enlighten the public about their doings.

The proposed Hindu University.

TRISHUL, 21st December 1911.

41. The Trishul (Benares), of the 21st December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), publishes an article entitled "The mode of learning of the Bengalis," in which the editor expresses disapproval of the system of imparting education to Indians through Europeans, whose language he characterizes as imperfect. He remarks that the intelligence and culture of a people depend upon education, which, if not properly imparted, produces bad results. He deplores that English education has induced luxurious ideas amongst the Bengalis, with the result that they are gradually ruining themselves. He expresses regret that the system of education in vogue has changed the atmosphere of Bengali society, and has made both men and women, particularly the latter, shameless to a very great extent. He goes on to admit that the English language and education have such a charm about them that, in spite of the shameful and degraded condition of Western society, people continue going to England and succumb to the temptation of adopting European manners and customs.

Bengalis and Western education.

Referring to the swadeshi movement he expresses satisfaction that people have begun to realise that they have in the past been purchasing worthless articles instead of securing the valuable productions of their own country.

Commenting on the proposed Hindu and Muhammadan universities, the editor observes that it is unwise to spend such a large amount of money in this poor country on such universities, when it is certain that European teachers will have to be appointed, who will not be able to impart religious education to Hindus and Muhammadans. He urges the Hindus to give up the idea of establishing a Hindu University, and to revive the old system of education, if they earnestly desire the advancement of their religion.

The editor goes on to say that the Bengalis have derived no material benefits from the agitation against the partition of Bengal, and, on the contrary, they have been losers in consequence of the change of the seat of the Government of India from Calcutta to Delhi, in that they will be deprived of higher appointments under the Government of India, which will now surely be monopolized by up-country men.

OUDH AKHBAR, 3rd January 1912.

42. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 3rd January 1912, reviewing the important events of 1911 advises Indians to settle the question of free and compulsory education in India amicably with Government, and to adopt a moderate and reasonable measure to attain their ends.

Free and compulsory education.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 3rd January 1912.

Imposition of cesses on lands.

43. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 3rd January 1912, expresses appreciation of the gift of eight lakhs made by Sir Sassoon David of Bombay for the improvement of agricultural conditions, and for the increase of technical knowledge amongst the agricultural classes of the presidency, and remarks that the imposition of cesses on lands discourages the agriculturists from making any improvements in them. The editor suggests that the permanent settlement of the land revenue is the only measure to improve agriculture in India.

(g)—General.

GARHWALI, September, October and November 1911.

Destruction of cattle in Garhwal.

44. The Garhwali (Dehra Dun), in its combined issue for September, October and November 1911 (received on the 23rd December), says that a serious outbreak of rinderpest among the cattle in Garhwal has caused ruin to hundreds of cultivators there, and expresses the hope that Government will liberally help them to purchase new cattle for their use.

LEADER, 4th January 1912.

Muharram holidays in the Allahabad High Court.

45. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, briefly refers to the facts which resulted in the non-observance of ten days' holiday for the Muharram in the Allahabad High Court, and remarks that the arrangement now in practice that the cases of Muhammadans are not put up on the day's list and that they are allowed to absent themselves is unsatisfactory, seeing that a large number of cases is excluded from the cause list, while other cases, in which either the briefs of counsels are not ready or their instructions are not complete appear in it. The editor states that another grievance of the Muhammadans is that the Muharram is not recognized as a general public holiday. He adds that a legal objection has also been suggested, in that the Court is open for all non-Muslims, so that appeals and applications not then filed are barred by limitation.

The editor refers to the deputation that waited upon the late Chief Justice, and observes that it would have been both wise and graceful to do away with this invidious distinction between Muhammadan and non-Muhammadan holidays in the great year of the coronation of the King-Emperor.

He concludes with the following remark :—

"The memory of an undignified squabble between a former Chief Justice and one of the greatest Judges who has yet sat in the Court does not deserve to be perpetuated. Nor should a great community be left to lie under a sense of wrong. It is much to be regretted, therefore, that different counsels have prevailed."

HINDUSTANI, 5th January 1912.

Salaries of ahlmads under Mr. Pike's scheme.

46. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 5th January 1912, publishes a letter from a correspondent in which he describes the arduous nature of the work performed by ahlmads, and remarks that something should be done for them in Mr. Pike's scheme, which is formulated for curtailing the duties of over-worked clerks and for increasing the salaries of in sufficiently paid subordinates.

SAHIFA, 26th December 1911.

The new coinage.

47. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), referring to the rumour that the new Indian rupee contains the likeness of a pig, says that the sight of a pig or its picture is repulsive to Muhammadan feeling, and expresses the hope that Government will take into consideration the religious susceptibilities of a large number of its Muhammadan subjects, and remove the likeness of a pig from the new coin.

INDEPENDENT, 1st January 1912.

The new coinage.

48. Referring to the rumour that the rupee of the new coinage contains the likeness of a pig, the Independent (Allahabad), of the 1st January 1912, remarks that the rumour is false, and that a close scrutiny will show that it is a fold (sic) in the Royal robe which resembles an elephant.

49. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 1st January 1912, referring to an article that appeared in the Waqt (Lahore), stating that the rupee of the new coinage had in its design the likeness of a pig, remarks that the likeness is not that of a pig but of an elephant. The editor says that it would be better if the likeness of the animal were removed from the new coin, seeing that it has created a misunderstanding among Muhammadans. MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 1st January 1912.

The new coinage.

50. The Darbar (Agra), of the 2nd January 1912, refers to the report that appeared in the Civil and Military Gazette (Lahore), that the Muhammadans of Delhi and Lahore refused to handle the new rupee, on the ground that it contained the likeness of a pig and expresses regret that uneducated persons should have so greatly exaggerated a little matter. The editor remarks that the likeness is not that of a pig but is that of an elephant, which represents the Indian Empire, and that it is a matter of gratification that an emblem of the Indian Empire has found a place in the Royal robe. DARBAR, 2nd January 1912.

The new coinage.

V.—Legislation.

51. The Mahamandal Magazine (Benares), for October 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), has the following :— MAHAMANDAL MAGAZINE, October 1911.

The Special Marriage Bill.

"We quote a few of the opinions, expressed by leading Hindu gentlemen and public bodies, in regard to the Marriage Bill, recorded in the head office of Sri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal :—

"The Sanatan Dharma Sabha, Ajmere, thinks that the amendment, if accepted, 'will prove highly harmful, in fact ruinous to the Hindu community.'

"S. D. Sabha, Lakhimpur.—'The proposed amendment is not only unnecessary but prejudicial to the interests of the Hindu community and Hinduism in general.'

"Raja Srinath Roy, Bhaggyakul.—'Will to a certain extent be prejudicial to the interests of the Hindu community.'

"S. D. Sabha, Muzaffargarh.—'We are absolutely opposed to the Marriage Bill.'

"Utkal Dharma Mandal Sabha, Puri.—'It will injure the very foundations of Hindu religion.'

"Sringari Mutt, Sringari (one of the four seats of Hinduism).—'108 Sri Jagatguru Sankaracharya Maharaj is of opinion that the bill, if passed, will lay the axe at the very foundations of Hindu society, and the Sri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal should send a strong deputation to wait upon His Excellency the Viceroy.'

"We need not take up more space to prove what is an unquestionable fact, viz. that the orthodox Hindu community is opposed as one man to the measure."

52. In its leading article entitled "Official opposition to Mr. Gokhale's Bill," the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th December 1911, reviews the opinions of Local Governments and their high officers on the Elementary Education Bill, and remarks that in a sense, though interesting, they are more depressing than elevating. The editor observes that the monotonous condemnation of the measure by every one of the Local Governments and a large majority of the officers whom they consulted, would lead one to think that the bill is an impossibly bad measure, which, on the other hand, is as feasible a measure as ever has been introduced into an Indian legislative council, and that it seeks to achieve most important objects. He adds that the only conclusion that can be drawn from the chorus of disapproval with which it has been met by the responsible Local Governments is something not particularly complimentary to those who indulged in such condemnation, and that it was certainly remarkable and not a little discouraging that the bill failed to commend itself to a single Local Government. LEADER, 29th and 30th December 1911.

The Elementary Education Bill.

He first refers to the views of the Madras Government, which, while acknowledging that the most pressing need in India at the present moment was the wider diffusion of education and the improvement of the character of the instruction imparted, said nothing in favour of the bill, and condemned every clause of it. In this connection he refers to the note in its favour written by the Hon'ble Mr. V. Krishnaswami Iyer and the arguments advanced by him in demonstrating the untenable character of all the objections raised by his colleagues. He quotes passages from the concluding portion of Mr. Iyer's note to the effect that the bill was desirable and necessary, that it was conceived in the best interests of education, that there was no reasonable probability of political or other danger arising from its enforcement, and that it would greatly encourage educational progress.

Adverting to the uncompromising opposition to the bill of the Government of Bombay, he remarks that that administration affects to think that free and compulsory education is a "luxury," and that the introduction of compulsion in education would be regarded as an unwarrantable interference with the liberties of the people.

The editor states that the Government of Bengal, while seeing no objection per se to the principle of compulsory elementary education, which is a recognized policy of the European Government, can find no clear evidence that the classes whose education it is proposed to effect will be materially benefited by it, and that their condition will be improved by means of education.

The Government of the United Provinces, he states, cannot accept the methods proposed in the bill, on the ground that they are not suited in any way to the social and economic conditions of these provinces, and that until the mass of public opinion is in favour of primary education, compulsion will retard instead of accelerating the progress of education.

Continuing in the issue of the 30th December, the editor says that the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab is entirely opposed to any attempt to introduce compulsory education into his province, on the ground that the majority of the people of the Punjab are at present strongly opposed not merely to compulsory education, but to any education whatsoever, and that the dislike and hostility with a martial population like that of the Punjab would render all attempts at compulsion most dangerous.

Referring to Burma he says that though official opinion is rather in favour of the bill the Lieutenant Governor is decidedly opposed to it, for the reason that the Burmans themselves are so alive to the advantages of education that they need no such force to do what they already do spontaneously.

He remarks that Sir Charles Bayley, the Lieutenant Governor of Eastern Bengal and Assam, though admitting that the subject is one of which he has not much personal experience, is opposed to the measure on financial grounds.

The editor says that the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces has no difficulty in concluding that a democratic government in India would not favour a measure of compulsory education, and he enquires from Sir Reginald Craddock whether slavery was abolished only as the result of a plebiscite in favour of the abolition. The editor states that the only administration in favour of the bill, which might with justification have opposed it, is Baluchistan, and concludes the article with the following remark :—

"The consensus of opinion of Local Governments against the bill can only have one meaning, that it will be rejected by the Imperial Legislative Council. The arguments of the several Local Governments throw a fierce light upon the illiberal attitude of the bureaucracy towards measures of popular improvement. If we left to them to introduce any reform, India would probably have to wait, as Pandit Bishan Narayan Dar said in his address at Bareilly last April, till 'Dooms-day in the afternoon.' Is there any wonder that such a close and careful student of Government policy in India has been led to devote so large a space in his presidential address to the Congress on Tuesday to an attack on the bureaucracy? As the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale said in one of his speeches in the Supreme Legislative Council, India is governed by a caste, the Indian Civil Service, and every attempt made to create a breach in the fortress of its monopoly is foiled by successful combined resistance of their caste of modern Brahmans."

VI.—Railway.

Nil.

VII.—Post Office.

53. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), complains against the post master of the branch post office, Moradabad, regarding whom it is alleged that he be haves discourteously towards the public, and that he does not keep a sufficient stock of postage stamps to meet the public demand, which causes considerable inconvenience to the people. The editor draws the attention of the Postmaster-General to the matter.

A complaint against the post master of the branch post office, Moradabad.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th December 1911.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

54. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), publishes a poem in response to the poem composed by one Durga Prasad of Shahjahanpur appealing to the Muhammadans to abstain from cow-slaughter, in which the writer says that Muhammadans cannot give up the slaughter of cows as it is opposed to their religion to do so, and characterizes the appeal as based on selfish motives.

The cow-protection movement.

ITTIHAD, 16th December 1911.

55. With reference to Rai Bahadur Lala Baij Nath's letter on the condition of affairs at Hardwar, which appeared in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th November 1911 (vide Selections No. 48 of 1911, paragraph 76), Parmanand, head panda of Hardwar, writes in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th December 1911, to repudiate Lala Baij Nath's accusation of gross selfishness on the part of the pandas, and refers to the memorial which they submitted to the Executive Engineer of the Canal Department to remove the troubles and difficulties felt by the public at Hardwar. He states that through the efforts of that department the water is gradually rising in the river, and that it is hoped that Hardwar will soon be restored to its former condition. The paper publishes the memorial and the Executive Engineer's reply to it.

The present condition of Hardwar.

LEADER, 29th December 1911.

56. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 31st December 1911, draws attention to the concluding portion of Pandit Bishan Narayan Dar's presidential address at the Calcutta Congress, in which he deplored the social condition of the Indians, and remarks that political progress can never be complete and permanent, unless it is accompanied by social and religious progress, which is said to be unfortunately not keeping pace with the former. The editor adds that Indians cannot achieve swaraj with the mill stones of custom and superstition hanging round their necks. He points out that the disabilities under which their own women and the "untouchables" of the community are made to labour, with the alleged sanction of a so-called religion, which makes the apotheosis of blood and sex the cardinal principle of its social organization, are much greater than those imposed upon them by Anglo-Indian legislation. He specially invites the attention of Bengali leaders and of the organizers of the Hindu University to this great and pressing necessity, and concludes with the following remarks:—

Social reform.

LEADER, 31st December 1911.

"It is no longer meet for the province of Ram Mohan Roy and Vidyasagar to concentrate its attention on politics, leaving religious and social reform to take care of itself. The spirit underlying Kulinism, the worship of Kali and enforced widowhood is not the spirit of which modern democracies are made. Knowledge is the birth-right of every one of God's creatures in the republic of letters, there is neither Jew nor gentile, neither Greek nor barbarian, neither bond nor free. Education is but the gaining and the lack of it the withholding of opportunity, and we must be prepared to concede to every one of our countrymen and countrywomen the very fullest possible opportunity for developing the best and noblest that is in him and her. This is what Mr. Gokhale's Education Bill means; this is what Mr. Basu's Special Marriage Bill aims at. If we will not concede it wisely and generously to-day, it will be wrested from us by force tomorrow. In our interest, in the interest of the suffering classes, and, above all, in the interest of the nation itself, the working out of these reforms has become an imperative necessity. We must be prepared to acknowledge honestly the mistakes made by our ancestors: we have not their excuse of living in an age, when the discoveries of science and sociology had yet to come; we must understand that the highest human law, even though it was made by the Rishis, must give way to the law which is Divine—that to the Fatherhood of God, there must be added the brotherhood of man and the sisterhood of women. 'The cry of a child in distress,' says Mr. Browning, 'curses deeper than a strong man in his wrath,' and the curses, deep and passionate, of the child-widow and the pauper pariah, cannot be evaded even with the help of Royal boons and Acts of the Legislative Council. The past karma of the race shall have to be faced, and a better and higher karma evolved, by the present generation. Idolatry, polytheism, and gross conceptions of purity and pollution must be abolished, and religion raised from its present impure and soulless condition to a purer, spiritual level; the degradation of women must be stopped; above all, the much-talked-of varnashrama dharma must go. After all it is righteousness which exalteth a nation, and if we are to prove ourselves worthy of our political destiny, we must build our social polity on a righteous basis."

HINDUSTANI, 5th January 1912.

Pilgrimage to Mecca

57. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 5th January 1912, contains a contributed article, in which the writer remarks that the Indian Muhammadan pilgrims to Mecca are put to much inconvenience when they are detained in quarantine at Basra, and asks the Muslim League to move the Ottoman Government to look after their comforts.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

ITTIHAD, 16th December 1911.

A suggestion to suppress prostitution.

58. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), referring to the article which appeared in Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th November 1911 (vide Selections No. 47 of 1911, paragraph 60), expresses approval of the suggestions and entertains the hope that in order to leave the health and the well-being of it subjects Government will suppress prostitution, or at any rate check any further increase in the number of prostitutes in India.

The editor asks his countrymen to move Government in the matter and to continue their efforts until adequate steps are taken.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 6th January 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] (32) No. 2 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 18th January 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
	I.—POLITICS.
	(a)—Foreign:
1.	The situation in Persia	29
2.	The situation in Persia	29
3.	The situation in Persia	29
4.	The situation in Persia	29
5.	The situation in Persia	29
6.	The Italian-Turkish war	29
	(b)—Home:
7.	The Royal boons	29
8.	The Royal boons	30
9.	The Royal boons	30
10.	The Royal boons	30.
11.	The Royal boons	30
12.	The darbar Honours' List	30
13.	The change of Capital	31
14.	The change of Capital	31
15.	The administrative changes	31
16.	The darbar and education	31
17.	An open letter to King-Emperor George V	32
18.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	32
19.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	32
20.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	32
21.	Their Majesties' departure	32
22.	Their Majesties' departure	33
23.	The Governorship of Bengal	33
24.	The Governorship of Bengal	33
25.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	33
26.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	34
27.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	34
28.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	34
29.	The Indian National Congress ...	34
30	The Indian National Congress ...	35
31.	The Indian National Congress and the Muhammadans	35
32.	The Pioneer (Allahabad) and its policy towards the Muhammadans ...	35
33.	The attitude of Indian Muhammadans ...	35
34.	The attitude of Indian Muhammadans ...	35
35.	The attitude of Indian Muhammadans ...	36
36.	The attitude of Indian Muhammadans ...	36
37.	The Indian Press Act	36
38.	The working of the Press Act ...	36
39.	National unity	36
40.	Executive Council for the United Provinces	37
	II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.
	Nil.
	III.—NATIVE STATES.
41.	The Gaekwar of Baroda co-respondent in a divorce suit	37
	IV.—ADMINISTRATION.
	(a)—Judicial and Revenue:
42.	The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab ...	37
43.	Restriction of admission to the legal profession in the Punjab	37
44.	Pleaders in the Punjab	38
45.	A suggestion for increasing the number of honorary magistrates	38
46.	The judiciary in India	38

Page.

(b)—Police :

47. The rumoured abolition of the Special Branch of the Criminal Investigation Department in Bengal 38

(c)—Finance and Taxation :

48. Railway and military enquiries ... 38

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs :

49. The octroi duty 39
50. The Agra Municipality 39

(e)—Education :

51. The proposed denominational universities 39
52. The proposed Hindu University ... 39

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land :

Nil.

(g)—General :

53. The new coinage 40
54. Kayasths in government service ... 40
55. The Industrial Conference 40

V.—LEGISLATION.

Nil.

Page.

VI.—RAILWAY.

56. Complaint against railway companies ... 41

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

57. A suggestion to increase the number of Hindu sabhas 41
58. The Musáfir (Agra) and the Musalman (Amritsar) 41
59. Religious differences in India ... 41
60. The Magh Mela pilgrims 41
61. The anniversary of the United Provinces gurukul at Muttra 41
62. Social reform 42
63. The Social Conference 42
64. Primer of Hinduism 43

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st January 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law,
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Anchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-us-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Kwárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 ,,
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalfl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
50	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Álam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 ,,
64	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 ,,
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
66	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
67	Darbar	Agra	Do.
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
71	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*72	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
73	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
74	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
†75	Kanauj Punch	Kanauj (Farrukhabad).	Do. ...	Abdur Rahim Khán; Muhammadan; 53.	500 copies.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
82	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
83	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 „
84	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 „
85	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 „
86	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 „
87	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 „
88	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 „
89	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 „
90	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 „
91	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 „
92	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 „
93	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 „
94	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 „
95	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 „
	ARABIC-URDU.
†96	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
97	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†98	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 „
99	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 „
100	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 „
101	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
102	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
103	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 „
104	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 „
†105	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 „
106	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
107	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
108	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 „
109	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
110	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
†111	Jánhavy	Chunar (Mirzapur)	Do. ...	Shri Kánt Upásni; 35	Very small.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 copies.
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 „
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 „
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 „
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	600 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27... ...	3,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 35 ...	50 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Braj Vallabh Mishra	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 40 ...	1,500 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; Brahman.	2,000 ,,
†130	Shri Yádvendra	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Rám Charitra Rai; Brahman; 34 ...	500 ,,
131	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	1,000 ,,
132	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	1,200 ,,
133	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla; 45	800 ,,
134	Swadesh Bándhaw ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumánt Singh; Rájput; 44	350 ,,
135	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman.
136	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal.
*137	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 37.	1,000 copies.
138	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Talsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 40	250 ,,
139	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†140	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 45 ...	500 copies.
141	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 43.	1,000 ,,
142	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
143	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	775 ,,
144	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 40 ...	300 ,,
145	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
146	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 34	1,500 ,,
147	Jain Gazette	Jalesar(Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
148	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†149	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
150	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám; Khatri; 55 ...	3,000 ,,
151	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...
152	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	Anglo-Bengali.
153	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Political.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 28th December 1911 (received on the 12th January 1912), expresses regret that Russia should be allowed by the European Powers to commit atrocities in Persia and to destroy the independence of that country.

UNION GAZETTE, 28th December 1911.

The situation in Persia.

The editor observes that the increase of Russia's influence in Persia is against the interests of the British Government, and that the short-sighted policy adopted by Sir Edward Grey with regard to Persian affairs will make it easy for Russia to advance on India when the opportunity occurs.

2. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the promises held out by Russia to evacuate the provinces in Persia now occupied by her when peace is restored in the country, observes that when a civilized and upright country like England has not yet fulfilled her promises to evacuate Egypt, no reliance can be put on the promises of a tyrannical and deceitful Government like Russia.

AL BASHIR, 9th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

3. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the Russian aggression in Persia, observes that Russia's advance in Persia is a preliminary to an attack on India, and expresses regret that British statesmen do not realise the danger of the situation.

MASHRIQ, 9th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

4. The Kaisar Hind (Benares), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the promise of Russia to Persia regarding the withdrawal of her forces from the latter country, expresses doubt as to whether she will carry out her pledge, seeing that Russia generally only retreats from a place in which she has once got a footing when she is compelled to do so by a country like Japan.

KAISAR HIND, 9th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

5. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th January 1912, referring to the aggressive behaviour of the Russians and Italians in Persia and Tripoli respectively, observes that if such atrocities were committed by Muhammadans the European Powers would have at once availed themselves of the opportunity to interfere.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor expresses surprise that the resentment felt by the Persians with regard to the action of Russia, and their zeal for independence should have died away so soon, and says that the future generation of Persians will never forgive their ancestors for having preferred to live under disgraceful conditions rather than to die honourably.

6. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the rumour that some European Powers are negotiating for peace between Italy and Turkey, observes that, when they did not pay any attention to the appeal of the Turkish Government to stop the war, they have no right to interfere now in the matter. The editor goes on to say that the sword is the best arbiter of the dispute between the two belligerent powers, and that if Turkey make peace on conditions unfavourable to her, she will fall very low in the estimation of the Muhammadans of the world. He suggests that peace should not be made so long as a single Italian soldier remains in Tripoli, and until security be given by Italy for the payment of a war indemnity.

AL BASHIR, 9th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

(b)—Home.

7. Referring to the grant of fifteen days' pay to government servants in commemoration of the coronation darbar, the Jadu (Jaunpur), of the 26th December 1911 (received on the 10th January 1912), enquires whether persons employed in district and municipal boards and the Court of Wards will also be benefited by the announcement. The editor asks Government to arrange that the boon be extended to the employés of those departments.

JADU, 26th December 1911.

The Royal boons.

ZIA-UL-ISLAM, January 1912.

The Royal boons.

8. The Zia-ul-Islam (Moradabad), for January 1912, expresses appreciation of the change of Capital from Calcutta to Delhi, but remarks that it is not an adequate compensation for the annulment of the partition of Bengal, which will injure the interests of Muhammadans.

AL BASHIR, 2nd January 1912.

The Royal boons.

9. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), referring to the grant of fifty lakhs for the spread of education in India announced by command of His Majesty the King-Emperor on the occasion of his coronation at Delhi, asks Government to apportion a portion of the sum specially for the education of Muhammadans, and urges his co-religionists to move Government on the subject.

TAFRIH, 7th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

10. Commenting on the article contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, the Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th January 1912, remarks that it is a sacrilege to criticise the action of the ruling Sovereign for Muhammadans as well as for Hindus, and expresses regret that the Nawab, who professes to be a loyal subject of His Majesty, should have so adversely criticised the Royal boons. The editor characterizes as an act of ingratitude Nawab Mushtaq Husain's expression of dissatisfaction with the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and remarks that His Majesty has laid the entire public under a debt of gratitude by annulling the partition. He observes that the opinion expressed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain is not shared by the Muhammadans generally, particularly his use of the expressions "a political blunder," "a weakness," and "a breach of promise" in referring to Government.

He goes on to say that the threat held out by Nawab Mushtaq Husain that Muhammadans would join the Congress movement does not reflect any discredit on the Indian National Congress, which is composed of most capable and educated persons, and whose supporters have been looked upon with respect and pride by Government. He, however, tells Nawab Mushtaq Husain that Government cannot be blamed if Muhammadans now desire to join the Congress, in that the Muslim League, by advocating the political importance of Muhammadans, has prevented them from competing with other communities in the acquirement of education. In conclusion he says that he will not be surprised if Muhammadans join the Congress, seeing that it advocates self-reliance instead of countenancing dependence on extraneous help.

HINDUSTANI, 12th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

11. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 12th January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer, referring to the article on the Royal boons contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, expresses surprise that the Nawab should have said that Muhammadans should not ruin their political existence by joining the Hindus, seeing that in the capacity of president of the Vedic and Unani Tibbi Conference, he advised Hindus and Muhammadans to co-operate with each other. The writer says that the annulment of the partition of Bengal does not betray the weakness of Government, as alleged by Nawab Mushtaq Husain, any more than that it is a sign of weakness if the Privy Council reverses the decision of an Indian law court.

MASHRIQ, 9th January 1912.

The darbar Honours' List.

12. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th January 1912, expresses appreciation of the titles and honours liberally conferred on the occasion of the coronation darbar of His Majesty to King-Emperor in India. The editor, however, suggests that there should be some distinction between the honours and titles bestowed on the ruling chiefs and those given to men who do not possess any landed property. He goes on to suggest that Government should not only depend on the recommendations made by the provincial Governments for the conferment of honours, but should have independent enquiries made as to whether the persons recommended for honours are really deserving of it. He expresses regret that the charities by Indian ladies are not recognized on such occasions, and notes with surprise the omission of the names of several Indians employed in the Educational Department and of several Indian and European officers of the police force.

The change of Capital.

13. Referring to the change of Capital from Calcutta to Delhi, the Jadu (Jaunpur), of the 26th December 1911 (received on the 10th January 1912), remarks that Delhi is geographically best suited to be the Imperial Capital of India. The editor observes that the transfer of the seat of the Government of India will produce far-reaching effects on the Punjab, and is calculated to strengthen the bond of friendship between the British Government and the Amir of Kabul. He expresses the opinion that the change of Capital will in course of time considerably reduce the expenditure on the defence of the frontier.

JADU, 26th December 1911.

The change of Capital.

14. Nawab Haji Ismail Khan contributes an article to the Agra Akhbar of the 7th January 1912, in which he expresses approval of the change of Capital from Calcutta to Delhi, and characterizes the measure as a proof of British statesmanship, which will ever remind the people of the visit of the King-Emperor to India.

AGRA AKHBAR, 7th January 1912.

The administrative changes.

15. Babu Govinda Das makes some important suggestions in connection with the administrative changes in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912.

LEADER, 11th January 1912.

Referring to the new province of Behar, Orissa and Chota Nagpur, he says that for the people of Chota Nagpur and Orissa Patna will not occupy a central position, and that the arguments brought forward in favour of Delhi as against Calcutta in the despatch of the Government of India to the Secretary of State apply equally to Patna. He suggests Ranchi as an ideal place for the Capital, and for the location of the future High Court of the new province. With regard to the settlement of boundaries he asks Government to take the public into its confidence in the delimitation of the boundaries of the provinces, and suggests the appointment of a Commission to make enquiries on the spot. He urges that considerations of the language spoken should not be used as the sole grounds for the decision of such important matters, but that ethnological and geographical conditions are of far more importance.

The writer suggests that, since the Indian Councils Act is to be amended by Parliament, Government should insert a clause in it that "whenever a province is raised to the status of a Lieutenant Governorship its highest judicial tribunal will be a High Court," with the provision that all High Courts be, like the Bengal High Court, under the control of the Government of India. In this connection he points out that the Bengal High Court is not in the department of the Law Member, but in that of the Home Member, and says that all the High Courts should be under the Law Member.

Discussing the proposals for the building of the new metropolis of India the editor observes that the town-planning committee of three members which has been appointed is not likely to command much public confidence, and he suggests that a much larger and more representative committee is needed. He also expresses the opinion that it would be graceful as well as politic to invite the ruling chiefs and the big nobles to build palaces for themselves in the new town of Delhi, and that, in view of future developments, everything should be planned on a large scale and with a view to architectural effect.

The Delhi darbar and education.

16. As a sequel to his article on the Arya Samaj and the change of Capital (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 20), Mr. Ratan Lal, B.A., contributes an article entitled "The Darbar and education" to the Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 3rd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), in which he expresses unqualified approval of the King-Emperor's action and motives in making the grant of fifty lakhs of rupees for popularizing education among the children of his poorer Indian subjects. He admits the inadequacy of the amount to meet the existing needs, but points out that this deficiency is made up by the promise to supplement the grant by recurring annual allotments on a generous scale. The greatest significance of the boon, he adds, lies in the solution of the educational problem, which clearly is disclosed in the policy which dictated the grant of it. He remarks that this wise act of the King-Emperor is as it were a proclamation on His Majesty's part that "the English lion was eager to make a lion of India also similar in every respect to itself," so that they may, by their close union, maintain peace in the world. The writer prays that the day may soon come when there will be no need for the Government to release prisoners on any occasion, owing to the educational policy inaugurated by the King-Emperor having proved so successful that the prisons are empty.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 3rd January 1912.

He suggests that the bureaucracy, which was opposed to the spread of popular education in the country on the ground that it was a premature measure, will take a lesson from this noble and wise example of His Majesty the King-Emperor.

ABHYUDAYA, 7th January 1912.

An open letter to King-Emperor George V.

17. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 7th January 1912, publishes another article entitled "An open letter to King-Emperor George V," contributed by "A BHARAT BASI" in which he expresses gratitude to His Majesty for granting boons to Indians on the occasion of the coronation darbar, and for expressing his sympathy for them. He dwells at length on the aggressive attitude which Italy has adopted towards Turkey, and remarks that the attempt made by the former to obtain possession of Tripoli shows that materialism has deprived Europe of all sense of morality, as otherwise the European Powers would have prevented Italy from effecting such a dishonest purpose. He asks the King-Emperor to labour to remove materialism from Europe, seeing that it has led away nations from the paths of righteousness.

KAISAR HIND, 9th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

18. The Kaisar Hind (Benares), of the 9th January 1912, says that the King-Emperor's visit to India has been an unqualified success, that His Majesty has completely endeared himself to his Indian subjects by the unrestained expression of his love for them, and that His Majesty has found out for himself how loyal a people they are. The editor refers to the incidents at the Prinseps ghat and the Zoological Garden as revealing how His Majesty has shown himself to be the loving father and protector of his Indian subjects.

OUDH AKHBAR, 11th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

19. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, remarks that the King-Emperor's visit to India has, from every point of view, proved a great success, and that His Majesty has been successful in removing the dissatisfaction created in the minds of his Indian subjects, which had strained the relations between the rulers and the ruled. He goes on to say that the King's visit has assured the Indians of the fact that there is a greater personage than the civilians and governors, who sympathizes with them and makes no difference between them and Englishmen. He states that His Majesty has laid the foundation of self-government in India, than which no greater boon was expected to be bestowed on Indians on such an auspicious occasion. He expresses the hope that the administrative changes and other boons announced on the occasion of the coronation darbar will meet the demands of the people.

LEADER, 13th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

20. Referring to His Majesty's telegram to Mr. Asquith announcing the success of his visit to India as having exceeded all expectations, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th January 1912, says that it is a matter of supreme satisfaction that His Majesty is so pleased with the visit, and that the jubilation of the British press over it is perfectly justified. The editor observes that the results achieved are indeed "brilliant," seeing that by their announcements and utterances as well as by their personal bearing, which was so well becoming a King and Queen, Their Imperial Majesties have left behind them an unforgetable impression. He refers to the opinions expressed by the Times, the Daily Telegraph and the Morning Post, about the success and significance of the King-Emperor's visit to India and his announcements, and remarks that, with the watchwords of sympathy, hope, and unity given to Indians to inspire them to fresh efforts for the greater weal of the people, and with a new impetus given to the important cause of education, no Indian could have asked for a better result of Their Majesties' gracious visit.

LEADER, 10th January 1912.

Their Majesties' departure.

21. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th January 1912, referring to the departure of Their Majesties from India, observes that it is a matter of the deepest gratification to their loyal Indian subjects that the visit of their Emperor and Empress to this important part of their Empire has been a signal success from every point of view, and says that it will ever remain memorable in the annals of British Indian history. The editor remarks that rarely has a political dependency enjoyed such honour, and the importance of the occasion has been considerably enhanced by the momentous announcements at the darbar. He says that the good-heartedness that Indians have learnt to associate with the occupants of the Throne of England is the pre-eminent characteristic of King George and Queen Mary.

Referring to His Majesty's reply to the address of the Bengal Legislative Council, the editor remarks: "May we say in all humbleness that nothing will, at any time, be a more abiding joy to us in India than to feel that we have been able to impress our Monarch and his Royal consort, that this is our feeling towards them, a feeling which with increasing years will grow more and more? We appreciate more than we can tell; the honour they have done to our country. If ever a feeling of want of loyalty had been possible on the part of any of their Indian subjects, the very vestige of it will no longer be possible . . . His Majesty's ministers in England, if report speaks true, were opposed to the Royal emprise. We never had any fear, for we know, as some people in England might not have known, how invincible is India's devotion to her Sovereign Lord . . . The events have truly falsified the fear of the timorous, as it has completely vindicated the insight and foresight of the King and Queen."

He concludes the article with the following remark: "A great chapter fraught with glory and good draws to a close to-day. The prayers of a nation united in its fidelity to the Throne and person of Their Majesties, and overflowing in its loving gratitude for their gracious condescension in coming over here, accompany them to their distant island home."

22. Referring to Their Majesties' departure from India, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, remarks that every Indian considers that the King's visit has paved the way to the attainment of that privileged position by the people which is enjoyed by British subjects in all parts of the world, and that no concession and boon is to be more valued than the policy enunciated in the despatch of Lord Hardinge on the administrative changes in the country. The editor observes that the King's words are not words of a pro-consul meant to mislead the people, but that they have come from the heart of a loving Sovereign who has been moved by the sentiment of widespread affection for him among his people. He remarks that even "Akhbar at the highest zenith of power was not more popular with his people than George the Fifth, who has proved himself not only a sagacious ruler but a statesman who knows how to consolidate the Empire. Ever loyal to the connection of England, India has become more attached to that connection, and if there was any disloyalty and sedition in the land, its microbes have been scorched. If the European Powers, jealous of the greatness of England, have been impressed with the solidarity of England's Empire in the East, and the talk of a discontented India verging on revolution ceases, and people with vested interests, who cannot look on the political progress of the Indian people without smelling danger, are once for all silenced, the visit of the King-Emperor after India's passing into the hands of the British Crown is the great event which marks a new era in the history of India."

Their Majesties' departure.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

23. Referring to the rumour that Sir K. G. Gupta would be appointed as the Governor of Bengal, the Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 8th January 1912, remarks that it would not be a matter of surprise if the rumour proved true, seeing that His Majesty is inclined to confer honour on the members of the educated community of India.

The Governorship of Bengal.

AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 8th January 1912.

24. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the rumour that Sir K. G. Gupta will be the first Governor of Bengal, expresses approval of it, and observes that his appointment would set at rest the controversy that Englishmen do not like to see Indians raised to their own status and would impress the Indians with the high-mindedness of the British nation.

The Governorship of Bengal.

MASHRIQ, 9th January 1912.

25. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), in continuation of its article that appeared in the issue of the 26th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 24), expresses regret that the annulment of the partition should have been announced on the coronation day, seeing that it has wounded the feelings of Muhammadans, and characterizes as unwise and uncourteous the action of the Government of Lord Hardinge in advising the King-Emperor to do so.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

AL BASHIR, 2nd January 1912.

The editor takes exception to the unconstitutional method in which the partition has been modified. Referring to the despatch of the Government of India he observes that such action on the part of Government will shake the confidence of the Indians in British constitutionalism, and is not a good augury for the stability of British rule in India.

Referring to the effects of the annulment of the partition, the editor remarks that Government will have to sustain very great loss on account of having adopted a wrong policy, and that the changes will instil a new spirit in the Bengalis and their sympathizers. He expresses apprehension that by continuous efforts and sacrifices they will lower the prestige of Government and establish swaraj. He concludes with the remark that it is not praiseworthy to disregard the rights of the weak and to fulfill the desires of the strong, to grant concessions to seditionists and rebels, and to remain indifferent towards the faithful subjects.

TAJIR, 4th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

26. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 4th January 1912 (received on the 8th January), takes exception to the annulment of the partition of Bengal which, the editor says, will merely encourage the party demanding swaraj.

SAHIFA, 5th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

27. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th January 1912 (received on the 8th January), takes exception to the action of the Government of India in advising the King-Emperor to announce the annulment of the partition of Bengal.

The editor asks his co-religionists to refrain from setting on foot any agitation on the subject, and expresses the hope that Government will take proper measures to safeguard the interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

AL BASHIR, 9th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

28. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 9th January 1912, in a leading article on the annulment of the partition of Bengal, says that the Bengalis, who will not be much benefited by the measure, are jubilant over the fact simply because their real aim is to establish swaraj in India, and their outburst of pleasure is a sufficient proof of the fact that they wish to create a spirit in their community that everything can be got by continuous efforts, by agitation and self-sacrifice.

Referring to the deplorable condition of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, the editor expresses surprise that British rule in Bengal for over a century and a half should not have improved their condition, and that they should have been made subject to the tyrannies of their Hindu fellow-subjects. With regard to the acknowledgement of the loyalty and contentment of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal mentioned in his despatch to the Secretary of State by Lord Hardinge, he remarks that loyalty and contentment have proved fruitless, while agitation has been the strongest instrument of success, and observes that, if Muhammadans be impressed with this absurd logic and they lose the good qualities of loyalty and contentment and become agitators, seditionists and disloyal subjects, the responsibility will not rest with the community or its leaders but that the responsibility will rest with the Government of Lord Hardinge.

ZAMANA, November 1911.

The Indian National Congress.

29. Kishen Prasad Kaul, member of the Servants of India Society, contributes an article discussing the aims and objects of the Indian National Congress and its achievements to the Zamana (Cawnpore), for November 1911 (received on the 9th January 1912), in which he observes that congressmen desire British rule in India, not because they are compelled to do so or because they cannot find any other substitute for it, but because they believe that India's future welfare is dependent upon the continuance and permanence of the British rule in the country, and that they appreciate and acknowledge the superiority of the British Government, because it enables its subjects to have their full share in the administration of their country.

He complains of the humiliating position of the Indians in Transvaal, the increasing military expenditure in India and at the indifference of Government to the public demand for the separation of judicial and executive functions, for the permanent settlement of land revenue, and for the curtailing of the large amount of money sent to England every year as Home charge.

The Indian National Congress.

30. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 3rd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), in a review of the activities of the Indian National Congress, remarks that the Congress, in its present form, is practically a dead body and that it is of no use to the country.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 3rd January 1912.

The Indian National Congress and the Muhammadans.

31. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the rumour that some Muhammadans have expressed a desire to join the Congress, seeing that the agitation of the Bengalis resulted in the annulment of the partition of Bengal, advises them not to adopt this course, if their object by doing so is to show their resentment at the action of Government. The editor asks his co-religionists not to abolish the Muslim League, but to try to make it accomplish its aims and objects successfully, and he observes that as the country advances in education and civilization proportionate freedom will come of its own accord.

MASHRIQ, 9th January 1912.

The Pioneer (Allahabad) and its policy towards the Muhammadans.

32. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), takes exception to the disparaging remarks made by the Pioneer (Allahabad) in its editorial columns regarding the Muslim University, affairs in Turkey, the Italian-Turkish war, the aggression of Russia in Persia and on the Right Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali's speech. The editor expresses apprehension that the views of the editor of the Pioneer might create misunderstanding amongst the Muhammadans against Government or Englishmen.

AL BASHIR, 2nd January 1912.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

33. Referring to the Muhammadan Conference held in Calcutta to consider the present position and to determine the future policy of the Muhammadan community, the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 7th January 1912, remarks that the co-operation of Muhammadans with the Hindus will be productive of good results. The editor however contends that it is a mistake on the part of Muhammadans to desire to effect a rapprochement with the Hindus merely because they apprehend that their interests will be disregarded on account of the annulment of the partition of Bengal, seeing that Government will regard them with suspicion if it has reason to believe that they have joined the Hindus because they are dissatisfied with it. He urges the Muhammadans to co-operate with Hindus and at the same time to remain faithful to Government. In conclusion he says that now that the partition of Bengal has been annulled it is not proper for Muhammadans to express their dissatisfaction at it in public meetings.

OUDH AKHBAR, 7th January 1912.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

34. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 7th January 1912, in a leading article refers to the Muhammadan attitude with regard to the recent administrative changes, and remarks that the annulment of the partition of Bengal was bound to be an object of adverse criticism by the coterie of Muhammadan gentlemen who associate with the Nawab of Dacca. The editor, however, congratulates the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal on the good sense displayed by them in the matter, and assures them that their apprehension that the interests of their community will suffer will not prove true. He expresses the hope that the Muhammadans and Hindus of Eastern Bengal will make common efforts to improve the material condition of the people.

ADVOCATE, 7th January 1912.

Referring to Nawab Mushtaq Husain's article that appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette, the editor observes that it is calculated to rouse a feeling of bitterness against those who are the subject of the Nawab's attack. He says that, while no reasonable person will object to the Secretary of the Aligarh College guiding Muhammadan public opinion, he has neither acted fairly towards Government nor towards the Hindu community by writing in this strain. He says that the Nawab means to mislead his co-religionists by saying that the demand for self-government is nothing short of subversion of the British Government, and that, if the Muhammadans throw in their lot with the Hindus they will be committing suicide. Words like these, he remarks, are surely, not calculated to bring about peace between the Hindus and the Muhammadans, nor is the assertion that Government has shown weakness in yielding to the agitation of the Bengalis and that no reliance is to be placed on it likely to strengthen the hands of Government.

The editor reproduces a portion of the Nawab's letter in order to show his attitude and remarks that, in spite of His Highness the Agha Khan's efforts to work on a common platform, there are Muhammadans living in Northern India who see nothing but suicide for their co-religionists in their co-operation with the Hindus. He expresses appreciation, however, of the letter published by Saiyid Raza Ali of Moradabad in the Pioneer (Allahabad) and reproduces it with the Pioneer's comments remarking that the paper has given the only advice which could be given to the Muhammadans, who, while anxious to keep aloof from Hindus, at the same time desire to take some part in the public life of the country. He states that the future of India lies in the hands of the people devoted to joint work, and that Nawab Mushtaq Husain and people who think with him should be grateful to Providence that they are living under such a strong government, which, while ready to show its strength in puting down sedition and crime, took the earliest opportunity of showing its respect for the sentiments of those whom it has been called upon to rule.

KAISAR HIND, 9th January 1912.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

35. The Kaisar Hind (Benares), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the Muhammadan Conference, which was held at Calcutta to discuss the future policy of Muhammadans and the possibility of effecting a rapprochement with the Hindus, remarks that the question has not been raised a day too soon, and that, if the Muhammadans be sincerely desirous of bringing about such a condemnation, the Hindus will not be behind hand in failing to meet their advances.

LEADER, 10th January 1912.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th January 1912, has the following :—

"We thoroughly agree with the following observations of our esteemed contemporary, the Indian Social Reformer :—

'While we welcome the movement among our Muhammadan countrymen to join the National Congress and to cultivate more cordial relations with non-Muhammadan communities, we do not know that we quite like the circumstances in which the desire seems to have arisen. It is not a compliment to the Congress to threaten Government with going over to it if they did not satisfy certain demands, as a leading Muhammadan gentleman is reported to have done. Our Muhammadan countrymen have reason to regret, even more than others, the seeming apathy of His Majesty's Government to the troubles of their co-religionists in Persia and Turkey, but we would rather that they waited till things took a better turn than joined the Congress in a mood of discontent. The only good reason for joining the Congress or any other movement, is that furnished by a firm conviction that it is for the good of the country. Similarly if our Muhammadan countrymen wish to modify their attitude to other communities they must do so for reasons entirely independent of their temporary dissatisfaction with certain phases of current Indian and international politics. No true policy can be founded on the changing tide of circumstance. It must be truly based on the bed-rock of principle.'"

AL BASHIR, 2nd January 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

37. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), says that, in view of the fact that the partition of Bengal has been annulled, there is not likely to be any more seditious writing in the press, and the editor therefore, urges Government to repeal the Indian Press Act of 1910 or at any rate to suspend it till its necessity is felt again.

BHARAT JIWAN, 8th January 1912.

The working of the Press Act.

38. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 8th January 1912, reproduces the remarks made by the Abhyudaya (Allahabad) (vide Selections No. 1 of 1912 paragraph 12), about the proscription by the Punjab Government of the picture of the Asht-Bhuja Devi.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

National unity.

39. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, expresses gratification that the Pioneer (Allahabad), which for so long had maintained that the ideal of an Indian nation was an impossibility owing to the diversity of languages, nationalities and other differences in India, and which had strenuously supported the separatist policy during the last few years, has now recognized that, in spite of all differences, there runs through all India a kind of similarity of ideas which makes India in one sense a true unit. The editor refers to the extract from the Pioneer in which it was stated that "it should be our business to foster all that makes for the development of this sense of unity and not to favour the separatist tendencies" and expresses the hope that the paper will now do all that lies in its power to attain to this noble ideal.

Executive Council for the United Provinces.

40. Referring to the announcement to the Hon'ble Pandit Moti Lal Nehru that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had disallowed his resolution regarding the establishment of an Executive Council in the United Provinces which he intended to move at the next meeting of the Provincial Council, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th January 1912, enquires how public interests will be adversely affected by such a debate in the local Councils. The editor says that probably an explanation of Sir John Hewett's decision is to be found in the circumstance that, while the Government of India are in favour of an Executive Council, His Honour is personally opposed to it. He expresses the opinion that in spite of this Sir John Hewett might have allowed the resolution to be moved and discussed and voted upon without himself taking any part in the debate.

LEADER, 13th January 1912.

He concludes with the remark that "a word of protest is necessary when such a resolution as the one which Pandit Moti Lal intended to move is disallowed in the exercise of the president's discretion."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

The Gaekwar of Baroda co-respondent in a divorce suit.

41. The London correspondent of the Advocate (Lucknow), referring to the proceedings against the Gaekwar in the issue of the 11th January 1912, suggests that the Gaekwar, in order to preserve his good name, should have followed the example of King George, when certain charges were made against him, instead of falling back upon his sovereign rights. The correspondent expresses doubt as to whether His Highness has done himself a good turn, notwithstanding the fact that he has been successful in escaping from the jurisdiction of the court, seeing that he will not be in a position to defend himself while grave allegations are made against him in the case, and that he will have no remedy in the event of the petitioner establishing his case. He says that it would have been better and wiser if His Highness had declined to avail himself of a technical point, and had taken the bolder course of meeting his accusers face to face.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

42. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 10th January 1912, takes exception to the abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

OUDH AKHBAR, 10th January 1912.

The editor asks Government not to do away altogether with the mukhtars, who are easily accessible to the clients on account of their small fees, but to limit their number.

Restriction of admission to the legal profession in the Punjab.

43. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, has the following :—

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

"The order of the Chief Court of the Punjab that from 1914 the number of law graduates who will be admitted to the Chief Court will be limited according to the requirements of the province will create many complications of which perhaps the Chief Court has no idea. What will the graduates, who pass law examinations after 1914 do? Will not the Muhammadans and Sikhs ask the Government to fix a ratio for their communities? If a competitive examination is sanctioned for the bar, with what grace will the Government refuse the same for the services? Will there be any restriction to the enrolment of barristers?

to bring about peace between the Hindus and the Muhammadans, nor is the assertion that Government has shown weakness in yielding to the agitation of the Bengalis and that no reliance is to be placed on it likely to strengthen the hands of Government.

The editor reproduces a portion of the Nawab's letter in order to show his attitude and remarks that, in spite of His Highness the Agha Khan's efforts to work on a common platform, there are Muhammadans living in Northern India who see nothing but suicide for their co-religionists in their co-operation with the Hindus. He expresses appreciation, however, of the letter published by Saiyid Raza Ali of Moradabad in the Pioneer (Allahabad) and reproduces it with the Pioneer's comments remarking that the paper has given the only advice which could be given to the Muhammadans, who, while anxious to keep aloof from Hindus, at the same time desire to take some part in the public life of the country. He states that the future of India lies in the hands of the people devoted to joint work, and that Nawab Mushtaq Husain and people who think with him should be grateful to Providence that they are living under such a strong government, which, while ready to show its strength in puting down sedition and crime, took the earliest opportunity of showing its respect for the sentiments of those whom it has been called upon to rule.

KAISAR HIND, 9th January 1912.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

35. The Kaisar Hind (Benares), of the 9th January 1912, referring to the Muhammadan Conference, which was held at Calcutta to discuss the future policy of Muhammadans and the possibility of effecting a rapprochement with the Hindus, remarks that the question has not been raised a day too soon, and that, if the Muhammadans be sincerely desirous of bringing about such a condemnation, the Hindus will not be behind hand in failing to meet their advances.

LEADER, 10th January 1912.

The attitude of Indian Muhammadans.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th January 1912, has the following :—

"We thoroughly agree with the following observations of our esteemed contemporary, the Indian Social Reformer :—

'While we welcome the movement among our Muhammadan countrymen to join the National Congress and to cultivate more cordial relations with non-Muhammadan communities, we do not know that we quite like the circumstances in which the desire seems to have arisen. It is not a compliment to the Congress to threaten Government with going over to it if they did not satisfy certain demands, as a leading Muhammadan gentleman is reported to have done. Our Muhammadan countrymen have reason to regret, even more than others, the seeming apathy of His Majesty's Government to the troubles of their co-religionists in Persia and Turkey, but we would rather that they waited till things took a better turn than joined the Congress in a mood of discontent. The only good reason for joining the Congress or any other movement, is that furnished by a firm conviction that it is for the good of the country. Similarly if our Muhammadan countrymen wish to modify their attitude to other communities they must do so for reasons entirely independent of their temporary dissatisfaction with certain phases of current Indian and international politics. No true policy can be founded on the changing tide of circumstance. It must be truly based on the bed-rock of principle.'"

AL BASHIR, 2nd January 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

37. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), says that, in view of the fact that the partition of Bengal has been annulled, there is not likely to be any more seditious writing in the press, and the editor therefore, urges Government to repeal the Indian Press Act of 1910 or at any rate to suspend it till its necessity is felt again.

BHARAT JIWAN, 8th January 1912.

The working of the Press Act.

38. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 8th January 1912, reproduces the remarks made by the Abhyudaya (Allahabad) (vide Selections No. 1 of 1912 paragraph 12), about the proscription by the Punjab Government of the picture of the Asht-Bhuja Devi.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

National unity.

39. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, expresses gratification that the Pioneer (Allahabad), which for so long had maintained that the ideal of an Indian nation was an impossibility owing to the diversity of languages, nationalities and other differences in India, and which had strenuously supported the separatist policy during the last few years, has now recognized that, in spite of all differences, there runs through all India a kind of similarity of ideas which makes India in one sense a true unit. The editor refers to the extract from the Pioneer in which it was stated that "it should be our business to foster all that makes for the development of this sense of unity and not to favour the separatist tendencies" and expresses the hope that the paper will now do all that lies in its power to attain to this noble ideal.

Executive Council for the United Provinces.

40. Referring to the announcement to the Hon'ble Pandit Moti Lal Nehru that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had disallowed his resolution regarding the establishment of an Executive Council in the United Provinces which he intended to move at the next meeting of the Provincial Council, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th January 1912, enquires how public interests will be adversely affected by such a debate in the local Councils. The editor says that probably an explanation of Sir John Hewett's decision is to be found in the circumstance that, while the Government of India are in favour of an Executive Council, His Honour is personally opposed to it. He expresses the opinion that in spite of this Sir John Hewett might have allowed the resolution to be moved and discussed and voted upon without himself taking any part in the debate.

LEADER, 13th January 1912.

He concludes with the remark that "a word of protest is necessary when such a resolution as the one which Pandit Moti Lal intended to move is disallowed in the exercise of the president's discretion."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

The Gaekwar of Baroda co-respondent in a divorce suit.

41. The London correspondent of the Advocate (Lucknow), referring to the proceedings against the Gaekwar in the issue of the 11th January 1912, suggests that the Gaekwar, in order to preserve his good name, should have followed the example of King George, when certain charges were made against him, instead of falling back upon his sovereign rights. The correspondent expresses doubt as to whether His Highness has done himself a good turn, notwithstanding the fact that he has been successful in escaping from the jurisdiction of the court, seeing that he will not be in a position to defend himself while grave allegations are made against him in the case, and that he will have no remedy in the event of the petitioner establishing his case. He says that it would have been better and wiser if His Highness had declined to avail himself of a technical point, and had taken the bolder course of meeting his accusers face to face.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

42. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 10th January 1912, takes exception to the abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

OUDH AKHBAR, 10th January 1912.

The editor asks Government not to do away altogether with the mukhtars, who are easily accessible to the clients on account of their small fees, but to limit their number.

Restriction of admission to the legal profession in the Punjab.

43. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, has the following :—

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

"The order of the Chief Court of the Punjab that from 1914 the number of law graduates who will be admitted to the Chief Court will be limited according to the requirements of the province will create many complications of which perhaps the Chief Court has no idea. What will the graduates, who pass law examinations after 1914 do? Will not the Muhammadans and Sikhs ask the Government to fix a ratio for their communities? If a competitive examination is sanctioned for the bar, with what grace will the Government refuse the same for the services? Will there be any restriction to the enrolment of barristers?

The restriction proposed by the Chief Court will lead to a greater influx of Indian law students in England."

LEADER, 11th January 1912.

Pleaders in the Punjab.

44. Referring to the letter addressed by the Registrar, Punjab University, to the Principal, Law College, Lahore, relating to the decision of the Chief Court regarding the future admission of graduates to the second grade of pleaders, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912, remarks as follows:—

"We might have said, comment is needless, for we cannot imagine that in any civilized and enlightened country, where the administration of justice is in the hands of a competent body of trained men, an embargo could be laid on an independent profession as the bar is believed to be. But, some years ago, in the backwoods and uplands of Kumaun, the Commissioner, it is reported, declined to enrol a new practitioner, because he thought there were already too many pleaders in his court. In a non-regulation province, where civil rights have to be ascertained and enforced (or, may be, refused) by military officers, one must be prepared for surprises. But what about the Chief Court of the Punjab, which will allow only a certain number of graduates to practise as pleaders, and no more? Educated men, beware, you are not wanted in large numbers in independent professions."

MASHRIQ, 9th January 1912.

A suggestion for increasing the number of honorary magistrates.

45. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th January 1912, suggests that Government should appoint honorary magistrates in villages also, as it has done in cities and towns, seeing that it will add to the peace and security of the villagers, and that persons who are really capable and desirous of work should be selected for these appointments.

LEADER, 12th January 1912.

The judiciary in India.

46. Referring to the judgment of Mr. E. de M. Humphries, District Magistrate of Bulandshahr, in a bad livelihood case, in which he remarked that "an oriental population cares nothing for guilt or innocence and has simply no conception that either duty or self-interest calls upon it to give true evidence," the Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th January 1912, emphatically protests against the calumny, and asks Government whether it is discharging its duty towards either itself or the people by entrusting with judicial work a man whose avowed "line of argument" is "that all native witnesses are untrustworthy until the contrary is very definitely proved."

The editor enquires whether expressions such as these, deliberately recorded in a judgment of court, are calculated to bring about the unity and concord which His Gracious Majesty the King-Emperor wishes to see governing the daily relations of private and public life in this country.

He invites the attention of Government to an extract from a speech of the present Lord Chief Justice of England stating that the confidence in the judiciary of the British Empire was to a large extent due to the fact that their ranks were recruited from experienced members of the bar, who, in their profession, had learnt boldness, impartiality, respect for other people's opinion and freedom of speech, and concludes with the following remark:—

"Surely the day for Judges who lack both a legal training and a judicial frame of mind is long passed."

(b)—Police.

MUSAFIR, 5th January 1912.

The rumoured abolition of the Special Branch of the Criminal Investigation Department in Bengal.

47. Referring to the rumoured abolition of the Special Branch of the Bengal Criminal Investigation Department at the conclusion of His Majesty's visit to India, the Musáfir (Agra), of the 5th January 1912 (received on the 8th January), remarks that the action of Government shows that it has now begun to trust its subjects, and entertains the hope that this policy will succeed in achieving its object.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

LEADER, 10th January 1912.

Railway and military enquiries.

48. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th January 1912, expresses regret that no competent Indian will be associated with Lord Inchcape in his railway enquiries, and that a similar omission has been made in the case of the Military Reductions Committee over which Sir William Nicholson will preside. The editor expresses satisfaction that Sir William Meyer will serve on it as a representative of the Financial Department, and contends that it is eminently desirable that there should be an Indian member on the committee, seeing that it is the Indian tax-payer who is primarily concerned in the question of economy in military expenditure. He suggests the names of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale and Mr. D. Wacha to be appointed as members of the Nicholson Committee, and remarks that it is not too late for the Secretary of State and the Government of India to consider the suggestion made by him.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

49. Referring to the hardships and troubles caused to the people owing to the imposition of octroi duty, "AN ANONYMOUS PILGRIM TO BENARES" writes to the Trishul (Benares), of the 11th January 1912, to say that the income from this source is not very great and serves no useful purpose. He urges that Government should forego this income for the sake of the comfort of the people, and says that in the other provinces of India, as well as in other civilized countries, no such duty is imposed, and he asks Government to abolish this form of taxation, which is doing considerable harm to trade and commerce also.

The octroi duty.

TRISHUL, 11th January 1912.

50. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 11th January 1912, expresses surprise that the new ward roll of the Agra Municipality has not yet been prepared, although the time for the election of members is drawing near. The editor remarks that the present municipal members do not discharge their duties properly, and asks the voters to elect public-spirited persons in future.

The Agra Municipality.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 11th January 1912.

(e)—Education.

51. In continuation of the article entitled "The proposed denominational universities," the Darbar (Agra), of the 9th January 1912, expresses doubt as to whether the existing universities sufficiently encourage the study of arts and sciences, and remarks that the knowledge of graduates in those branches is not as good as might be expected. The editor complains that very few of the graduates are brilliant, not because Indians have no brains, but because the system of imparting education obtaining in the existing universities is defective. He points out that the latter do not aim at imparting instruction and training likely to help students in earning their livelihood. He observes that circumstances compel Indians to acquire education chiefly with a view to service, and that owing to defective education it so often happens that the right men are not found in the right places. He expresses the opinion that colleges, instead of teaching philosophy and natural sciences should only teach English literature, and should give general instruction calculated to make a man fit for government service, seeing that such an arrangement would save a student much time and energy. He points out that it is incorrect to say that the existing universities are promoting the cause of arts and sciences, and observes that the establishment of the proposed universities will be of no good unless they make arrangements to remove the defects obtaining in the present ones.

The proposed denominational universities.

DARBAR, 9th January 1912.

52. The Kaisar Hind (Benares), of the 9th January 1912, expresses gratification at the fact that the educated community has begun to realise the need for the proposed Hindu University and its importance. The editor expresses the opinion that the University will encourage self-help among Indian youths, and that it will succeed in doing away with the sectarian spirit of exclusiveness of different castes and will improve the material and economical condition of the people.

The proposed Hindu University.

KAISAR HIND, 9th January 1912.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 3rd January 1912.

The new coinage.

53. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 3rd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), publishes a letter from a correspondent on the subject of the rupee of the new coinage containing the likeness of a pig and the consequent objection of uneducated Muhammadans to accept it. He expresses the opinion that the likeness is that of an elephant, but asks the editor to urge on Government the advisability of its removing the likeness from the coinage, in case it be established by a microscopic examination to be that of a pig. He says that the Hindus should co-operate with their Muhammadan brethren in getting it removed.

AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 8th January 1912.

Kayasths in government service.

54. The Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 8th January 1912, contains a contributed article, in which the writer, after emphasizing that the Kayasths consider that they are born only to serve the ruling Sovereign in the capacity of clerks, expresses regret that the educated members of other communities make every endeavour to deprive the Kayasths of government service. He contends that there is no harm in the preponderance of Kayasths in government service, when Brahmans have monopolized the priestly work, Vaishyas have taken commerce exclusively in their own hands, when Kshattriyas alone are ruling chiefs, and the Kurmis and Ahirs form the majority of the agriculturists. He goes on to say that the reformers who draw the attention of Government to the monopoly by the Kayasths of government service should justify their position by having a law passed giving equal shares to all the Indian communities in different professions. He questions why exception should be taken to the preponderance of Kayasths in government service, when the Kshattriyas, Pathans, Gurkhas and Sikhs are in excess in the Army and in the armed and civil police, and no objection is made to that. He observes that the Kayasths are subjected to these hardships because they are incapable of protecting their rights.

In conclusion he asks the leaders of the Kayasth community to submit a representation to Government so that justice may be done to them.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

The Industrial Conference.

55. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, draws attention to the inaugural address of the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji at the Industrial Conference in which he urged that the industrial revival of the country was a matter in which the interests of the people and Government were identical, and that it would be wrong to ascribe the present unrest to a mere yearning on the part of the people for political power. He said that the other causes at work were the poverty of the people, the want of openings for employment, the contraction of the productive sources of wealth, the absence of commercial facilities and of fiscal autonomy, and the prevalent imperssion that the advancement of British industrial interests forms the dominating principle of British rule in India. The editor, while expressing agreement with the above views, observes that some of the proposals made by the president are of a thoroughly impracticable nature, for instance Indians would not be justified in asking Government to insist on their right to buy up foreign concerns. He also expresses disapproval of the proposals made by Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji for obtaining the help of Government in other ways in order to effect the industrial development of the country.

Referring to the improvement of the supply of labour, the editor expresses agreement with his argument that for the encouragement of labour and to facilitate free movement such legislation as the Assam Labour Law should be repealed, but he doubts whether Government can check the free movement of people to other countries.

He says that Mr. Dadabhai voiced the general feeling of educated India when he pleaded for protection of India's industries, and urged that the want of a protective tarift was keenly felt by everybody interested in the industrial development of the country.

V.—Legislation.

Nil.

VI.—Railway.

56. A correspondent, signing himself "A PASSENGER," contributes an article to the Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 8th January 1912, in which he complains that, notwithstanding that the major portion of the earnings of the railway companies comes from the pockets of the third class passengers, no arrangements are made for their comfort and convenience.

ARYA MITRA, 8th January 1912.

Complaint against railway companies.

He asks the railway authorities to severely punish any officer against whom they receive a complaint from the public, and suggests that by so doing they will reduce the inconveniences to which third class passengers are at present subjected.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

57. One Madho Ram of Ambala contributes an article to the Zamana (Cawnpore), for November 1911 (received on the 9th January 1912), in which he observes that the Hindus have done their best to establish friendly relations with Muhammadans, but that the latter make no response and seem determined to follow a separatist policy.

ZAMANA, November 1911.

A suggestion to increase the number of Hindu sabhas.

He urges his co-religionists to form Hindu sabhas in every district in order to safeguard the interests of the Hindus, and observes that, when the Hindus have become a united and powerful body in themselves, the Muhammadans will be obliged to join them in order to effect the good of the country.

58. In the course of its reply to an article entitled "The Musáfir acknowledging the conversion of three Hindus to Islam," that appeared in the Musalman (Amritsar), of the 19th December 1911, the Musáfir (Agra), of the 5th January 1912 (received on the 8th January), has the following :—

MUSAFIR, 5th January 1912.

The Musáfir (Agra) and the Musalman (Amritsar).

"To conclude from the conversion to Islam of an ignorant woman who is overcome with passion of a minor who has no power of discretion, and of an uneducated workman who is a glutton, that Islam is a true religion, is to heap curses on one's own faith. Islam is made up of the following five elements: (1) the greed for exploitation and plunder, (2) the bloodthirsty sword of jehad, (3) sensualism (in matters) religious, worldly as well as heavenly, and delicious wine and roasted meat, (4) prejudice and bigotry, (5) the fear of a terrible hell. Islam does not include even an iota of truth and devotion. Though the conversion to such an Islam of an ignorant woman, an innocent minor and an uneducated workman was not brought about with the help of the sword, it was secured by other disgraceful methods (which will be brought to light by the Secretary of the Konch, Arya Samaj, Jalaun district).

59. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 7th January 1912, expresses surprise that Muhammadans, who resent other communities indulging in festivities on the occasion of the Muharram, do not respect the religious susceptibilities of non-Muhammadans. He observes that a country, where so much religious bigotry prevails, can make no progress.

ABHYUDAYA, 7th January 1912.

Religious differences in India.

60. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 7th January 1912, expresses gratification that a body of volunteers is being organized in Allahabad to look after the comforts of the Magh Mela pilgrims, and describes the various ways in which that body can be useful to the intending pilgrims. The editor remarks that, as a very large number of pilgrims are expected to come to bathe in the Ganges, the wealthy citizens of Allahabad should also co-operate with the young band of volunteers in looking after the convenience and comfort of the pilgrims.

ABHYUDAYA, 7th January 1912.

The Magh Mela pilgrims.

61. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 8th January 1912, publishes a brief account of the last anniversary of the United Provinces Arya Samaj gurukul held at Muttra, and, referring to the enthusiasm which prevailed when subscriptions were realised,

ARYA MITRA, 8th January 1912.

The anniversary of the United Provinces gurukul at Muttra.

expresses the belief that, in spite of the fact that the Arya Samaj does not receive any substantial pecuniary help from eminently wealthy persons, it will be able to run its educational institutions under the protecting hand of the British Government.

ADVOCATE, 11th January 1912.

Social reform.

62. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912, expresses gratification that the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, who opposed the introduction of the Special Marriage Amendment Bill in the Supreme Legislative Council, has now recognized the importance and utility of inter-caste and inter-provincial marriages, and notes that he emphasized the paramount importance of social reform in a country like India, when concluding his address at the Industrial Conference. The editor observes that Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji rightly pointed out that, so long as the industrial castes remain depressed and excluded there cannot be any extensive healthy activity in the direction of the industrial regeneration of the country.

LEADER, 13th January 1912.

The Social Conference.

63. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th January 1912, publishes a contributed article on the Indian Social Conference, in which the writer says that the recent conference was not a success, in that there was a want of organization, and the usual enthusiasm was lacking, though some of the speeches were attractive and the attendance was fairly large. He describes the presidential address as of a rambling nature, and deplores that the first subject that was taken up was of a contentious nature which created a disturbance.

He suggests that a constitution should be given to the Social Conference, that in places where there are no social reform associations, the local Arya, Brahma and Prarthana Samajes be requested to form a district social reform association, and that the services of a junior member of the Servants of India Society be requisitioned from time to time to carry on all correspondence under the direction of the general secretary.

LEADER, 13th January 1912.

Primer of Hinduism.

64. Mr. J. N. Farquhar writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th January 1912 to protest against the employment by the Leader's reviewer of the words " 'rise Christians, the motive force of whose conversion lies not in their hearts or brains but in their stomachs, and whose fulcrum is the belly," which occurred in the concluding portion of the article entitled "A missionary on Hinduism" which was a review of Mr. Farquhar's Primer of Hinduism.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD :
The 13th January 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

ERRATUM.

In Selections from the Native Newspapers published in the United Provinces, no. 2 of 1912, received up to 13th January 1912, page 42, paragraph 64, lines 3 and 4, for "rise Christians" read "rice Christians".

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation department, United Provinces.

CONFIDENTIAL.] [ ] No. 3 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 20th January 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
	I.—POLITICS.
	(a)—Foreign:
1.	The situation in Persia	49
2.	The situation in Persia	49
3.	The situation in Persia	49
4.	The situation in Persia	49
5.	The situation in Persia	49
6.	The situation in Persia and the Muhammadans of India	49
7.	The situation in Persia	49
8.	The situation in Persia	49
9.	The situation in Persia	50
10.	The situation in Persia	50
11.	The situation in Persia	50
12.	The situation in Persia	50
13.	The Italian-Turkish war	50
14.	The Italian-Turkish war	50
15.	The Italian-Turkish war	50
16.	Turkey and Italy	50
17.	The Italian-Turkish war	51
18.	The Chinese revolution	51
	(b)—Home:
19.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	51
20.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	51
21.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	51
22.	The King-Emperor's visit to India ...	51
23.	The coronation darbar	52
24.	The coronation darbar	52
25.	The Royal boons	52
26.	The Royal boons	52
27.	The Royal boons	52
28.	The Royal boons	52
29.	The Royal boons	52
30.	The Royal boons	53
31.	The Royal boons	53
32.	An open letter to King-Emperor George V	54
33.	The change of Capital	54
34.	The change of Capital	54
35.	The change of Capital	54
36.	The Gaekwar incident	54
37.	Maharaj-Adhiraj as the synonym for King-Emperor	55
38.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	55
39.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	55
40.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	55
41.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	55
42.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	55
43.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	56
44.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	56
45.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	56
46.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	56
47.	Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar ...	56
48.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	56
49.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	57
50.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	57
51.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	57

Page.

52. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 57
53. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 57
54. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 57
55. The Indian National Congress ... 58
56. The Indian National Congress ... 58
57. A rumour about Sindh being placed under the Punjab Government ... 58
58. A review of the events of the year 1911 58
59. An objectionable article in the Zamindar (Lahore) 58
60. Integrity and independence ... 58

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

61. The coronation boon in the Jhind state... 62
62. Muhammadans of the Jhind state ... 62

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

63. Alleged punishment for salaaming improperly 62
64. The abolition of examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab 63
65. The appointment of District Judges in India 63

(b)—Police:

66. A complaint against the Calcutta police 63

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

67. The Agra municipal water works case ... 63
68. A complaint against the municipal roads of Agra 63
69. The Benares Municipality 63

(e)—Education:

70. A suggestion to raise the Faiz Am school, Meerut, to the standard of a high school 63
71. The resignation of Nawab Mushtaq Husain from the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh 64

Page.

72. Free and compulsory education in India 64
73. Free and compulsory education in India 64

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

74. Coolie Emigration Depôt, Allahabad ... 64
75. The new coinage 64
76. Muhammadan officers in Konch, district Jalaun 64
77. A suggestion to appoint a Muhammadan reporter to Government 64
78. The last census 65
79. Complaint against vaccinators ... 65
80. Premature deaths amongst educated Indians 65
81. The prevention of epidemics in India ... 65
82. Proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett 65
83. Scarcity of ghi and milk 65

V.—LEGISLATION.

84. The Court of Wards Bill 65

VI.—RAILWAY.

85. Railway complaints 66
86. Railway administration 66
87. Sweetmeat vendors at Hardwar station 67

VII.—POST OFFICE.

88. A complaint against the post office, Moradabad 67

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

89. Inflammatory articles in Al Haq (Delhi) 67
90. An inflammatory article in the Afghan (Peshawar) 68
91. The sanctity of the Quran 68
92. A review of Hadises 68
93. The preachers of the Anjuman Hidayat-ul-Islam and the Nau-Muslims ... 68
94. Muharram in Amroha 69
95. The depressed classes 69
96. The Magh mela pilgrims 69
97. Social reform 69
98. Government and caste system in India... 70

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st January 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra ...	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Hussain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 „
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 „
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 „
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 „
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 „
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 „
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 „
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 „
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Álam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 „
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 „
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 „
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 „
64	Kwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 „
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 „
66	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
67	Darbar	Agra	Do.
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 „
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 „
71	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*72	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 „
73	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 „
74	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
†75	Kanauj Punch	Kanauj (Farrukhabad).	Do. ...	Abdur Rahim Khán; Muhammadan; 53.	500 copies.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 „
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	800 „
78	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 „
80	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
82	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
83	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
84	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
85	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
86	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
87	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
88	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
89	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
90	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
91	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
92	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
93	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
94	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
95	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†96	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
97	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†98•	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
99	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
100	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
101	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
102	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
103	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
104	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Guláb Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†105	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
106	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
107	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
108	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
109	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
110	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
†111	Jánhavy	Chunar (Mirzapur)	Do. ...	Shri Kánt Upásni; 35	Very small.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 copies.
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27...	5,000 „
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 „
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 „
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Braj Vallabh Misra	750 „
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 „
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 „
†130	Shri Yádvendra	Ghasipur ...	Do. ...	Rám Charitra Rai ; Brahman ; 34 ...	500 „
131	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 „
132	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 „
133	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 „
134	Swadesh Bándhavé ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 „
135	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman
136	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal.
*137	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 copies.
138	Veda Prakáśh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 „
139	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†140	Kám Dhenu	Hardwat ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
141	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 „
142	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
143	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 „
144	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 „
145	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 „
146	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 „
147	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
148	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†149	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
150	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 „
151	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...
152	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
153	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Mukhbir-i-Álam (Moradabad), of the 8th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), expresses regret at the acceptance of Russian demands by Persia and asks the British Government to save Persia from falling under the Russian domination.

The situation in Persia.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th January 1912.

2. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), commenting on the recent occurrences in Persia, remarks that Russia is not much to blame and that Persia has paid the penalty of losing the independence of its northern territories on account of her weakness, which is a great crime.

The situation in Persia.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 10th January 1912.

3. Nawab Mustaq Husain contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), in which he reviews the situation in Persia, Tripoli, Morocco and Tunis, and expresses the opinion that Muhammadans have justification for imagining that the European Powers have decided amongst themselves to destroy the independence of Muhammadan kingdoms.

The situation in Persia.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 10th January 1912.

He condemns the policy adopted by Sir Edward Grey regarding the Persian affairs, and says that it is calculated to wound the feelings of Muhammadans.

He advises his co-religionists that they should, while refraining from boycotting English goods, use country-made articles as far as possible, and that if they boycott foreign goods at all they should do so for the sake of economy and not for the sake of wreaking vengeance on foreign countries.

4. Haji Muhammad Unus Khan of Datauli contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), in which he takes exception to the foreign policy adopted by the British Government in regard to Persia, which, he says, is detrimental to the interests of India. He suggests that a deputation composed of eloquent speakers should be sent to England to educate the public mind with regard to the situation in Persia and the dangers which surround it, and he expresses the opinion that, if Russia gets a footing in Persia, the British Government will not be able to enjoy the same security as it now does in India.

The situation in Persia.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 10th January 1912.

5. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), refers to the execution in Persia of Sikat-ul-Islam, a high ecclesiastic, and remarks that the action of the Russian officials in selecting the Muharram day for the execution shows that Russia desires to crush the spirit of independence among the Persians by wounding their susceptibilities. The editor observes that the Persians may now be said to have lost their independence, and that they can live as happily under Russian and British rule as Morocco lived some time ago under Spanish and French rule.

The situation in Persia.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

6. Referring to the resolution passed by the Persian residents in Madras in a public meeting regarding the boycott of Russian and British goods, the Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, expresses the hope that the Muhammadans of India, who trust that the British Government will help the Persians, will not act upon that resolution.

The situation in Persia and the Muhammadans of India.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

7. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th January 1912, expresses regret at the deplorable condition of Persia and its impending dismemberment.

The situation in Persia.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th January 1912.

The editor refers to the rumour that a British force would shortly be sent to Persia and observes that such action would create considerable resentment among Indian Muhammadans.

8. The Ittehad (Moradabad), in the combined issue of the 8th and 16th January 1912 (received on the 17th January), referring to the alleged Russian atrocities in Persia, expresses regret that Europe, in spite of its boasted sense of justice and fair play should have consented to such unwarranted aggression on the part of Russia in Persia. The editor asks the British Government to save Persia from falling under the domination of Russia and thus to earn the gratitude of the entire Asiatic people.

The situation in Persia.

ITTEHAD, 8th and 16th January 1912.

ITTEHAD, 8th and 16th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

9. The Ittehad (Moradabad), in the combined issue of the 8th and 16th January 1912 (received on the 17th January), referring to the donation made by His Highness the Agha Khan to the Persian Red Crescent Society, Calcutta, urges the Muhammadans of India to follow the example set by their leader and to open subscription lists in aid of their oppressed brethren in Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

10. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th January 1912, expresses disapproval of the action of mullahs in exciting the people against the Europeans, and commends the suggestion made by the Times (London) that the British Government should occupy the ports on the Persian Gulf.

MASHRIQ, 16th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

11. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th January 1912, referring to the rumour that the Amir of Kabul had promised to help Persia against the Russians, expresses approval of the proposal, and asks the British Government to strengthen Afghanistan in order to check the further expansion of Russia in Asia.

TRISHUL, 18th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

12. Referring to the Russian aggression in Persia, the Trishul (Benares), of the 18th January 1912, says that the increase of Russia's influence in Persia is against the interest of the British Government, as its advancement in Persia is a preliminary to an attack on India. The editor observes that the British Government should not affect unconcern in the matter and rely upon the ability of Kabul to resist aggression, but that it should support Persia and exert all its influence to check the advancement of Russia, as that country has for many years past coveted India.

'URDU-I-MUALLA, November 1911.

The Italian-Turkish war.

13. The Urdu-i-Mualla (Aligarh), for November 1911 (received on the 16th January 1912), says that one effect of the Italian-Turkish war on Asiatics in general, and on Muhammadans in particular, will be that they will in future retain no confidence in the words, promises, agreements and treaties of European Powers.

The editor remarks that every important European Power without exception is altogether overcome by selfishness and rapacity and he suggests that, if the Hindus express their sympathy with the sufferings of Muhammadans in Tripoli, Persia and Morocco, and if the Muhammadans give up ridiculing the Hindus on account of their just aspirations for freedom, there will spring up between the two communities a feeling of union which nothing else could bring into existence. He advises the young Turks not to form any alliance with any of the European Powers, and observes that if any alliance is at all necessary it should be with Persia, Afghanistan and especielly with Sennousis who might help them in restoring the independence of Muhammadan possessions in Africa.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

14. The Mukhbir-i-Álam (Moradabad), of the 8th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), referring to the rumour that peace will shortly be made between Italy and Turkey, observes that no peace should be made until the former is thoroughly punished for her atrocities in Tripoli.

SAHIFA, 12th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

15. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), says that the Italian-Turkish war has shown the extent of the unity of the Muhammadans of the whole world. The editor observes that Turkey is likely to gain many political advantages as a result of the war, one of which will be the strengthening of the bonds of friendship between the Turkish and British Governments.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 10th January 1912.

Turkey and Italy.

16. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), says that the Italian-Turkish war has seriously reflected on the sincerity of the European Powers in their vaunted love of liberty and sense of justice, and that it has asserted the principle of might is right to the disadvantage of both the parties.

17. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 10th January 1912, expresses approval of the donation made by the Amir of Kabul and by his subjects to the Turkish relief fund, but expresses surprise that no subscription list has yet been opened in India for the relief of Persians killed and wounded in the recent conflict with Russia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 10th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

18. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), says that the revolution in China ought to have a salutary effect on the reigning dynasty in China. The editor however expresses the earnest hope that the outcome of the conflict may be to the advantage of the royalists, as he considers that the continuation of the monarchical system of government is essential for the welfare of the country in its present circumstances.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 10th January 1912.

The Chinese revolution.

(b)—Home.

19. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), remarks that the annulment of the partition of Bengal has convinced the people of India of the magnanimity of His Majesty. The editor expresses approval of the other Royal boons also and expresses the opinion that the feeling of admiration for the eminent qualities and sympathetic attitude of His Majesty is universal throughout India.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

20. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), refers to the fact that the majority of the spectators could not recognize the King-Emperor on the occasion of the State entry into Delhi, and complains of the arrangement made by the officials responsible, which he describes as cowardly and unreasonable, remarking that it was not His Majestys fault, seeing that he was always anxious to give the people an opportunity of having a look at him. The editor expresses regret that His Majesty has departed from India, and remarks that, Indians being as much the subjects of the King-Emperor as Englishmen are, it is not fair that the latter should throughout the year have His Majesty in their midst. He expresses the hope that His Majesty will occasionally come out to India and says only such visits can make the relations between the rulers and the ruled more cordial.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

21. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer observes that the King-Emperor's visit to India has been, from every point of view, a great success, and he trusts that Indians will not now be treated with contempt in British colonies. With regard to the Royal boons he says that the annulment of the partition of Bengal has secured for the King-Emperor the goodwill of his Indian subjects, and has convinced the people of India of the mercifulness of the British Government. He observes that the announcement regarding the transfer of the Imperial Capital to Delhi has been received with satisfaction by Hindus and Muhammadans alike, and that the grant of fifty lakhs to promote the cause of education will be regarded by Indians in general as the best boon granted to them by His Majesty. In conclusion he says that the sympathy which His Majesty feels for his Indian subjects augurs well for the future of India.

HINDUSTANI, 15th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

22. The Independent (Allahabad), of the 15th January 1912, remarks that the speeches delivered by the King-Emperor during his stay in India show that His Majesty has the well-being of India at heart, and that he desires that the relations between the various Indian communities should be cordial. The editor observes that the King-Emperor has granted fifty lakhs of rupees to make education more accessible, because His Majesty wishes that the estrangement between one Indian community and another should be removed by means of spreading education among them. He expresses the hope that the Hindus and Muhammadans will, in accordance with the expressed wish of His Majesty, make up their differences. He states that the King-Emperor laid stress upon the creation of amicable relations between the rulers and the ruled, and he entertains the hope that with the spread of education relations between Europeans and Indians will become harmonious. In conclusion he remarks that His Majesty's visit to India will be productive of much good to India.

INDEPENDENT, 15th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's visit to India.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 16th January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

23. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), publishes the fourth letter entitled "Religion" contributed by Mr. Ratan Lal, B.A., in connection with the coronation darbar, and remarks that in effect the King-Emperor has proved himself to be the philosophical Emperor of modern India. He says that His Majesty has virtually proclaimed, by holding his coronation darbar at Delhi, that "religion is the fountain-head of the true prosperity of every country," and he asserts that Swami Dayanand was justified in impressing upon the public mind the desirability of religious education being as widely diffused as possible, and that too through the medium of the Indians themselves and in their own language. In conclusion he remarks that Indians should feel grateful to their Emperor for his love of them and should express their gratitude by devoted service to the Imperial House.

DABDABA-I-SIKANDARI, 15th January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

24. The Dabdaba-i-Sikandari (Rampur), of the 15th January 1912, referring to a contributed article published in the London Times which characterized the expenditure incurred on the occasion of the coronation darbar at Delhi as unnecessary, says that, while it is necessary that Government should help generously those Indians who are suffering from famine, the money spent on the darbar was not wasted for the Indians wanted to have the honour of seeing their Sovereign and were ready to spend any amount of money for the realization of their earnest desire.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

25. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret that the employés in the Court of Wards have not been offered half a month's salary in honour of the King-Emperor's coronation in India, and draws the attention of the members of the Board of Revenue to the matter.

TAJIR, 11th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

26. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), publishes a poem in the course of which the following passage occurs :—

"Now it is the pleasure of Government to make Delhi the capital of India, the agitation proved successful and the partition of Bengal is annulled."

He asks his co-religionists to shake off their lethargy and to realise the situation in which they are placed, and observes that they too would have got some reward if they had not remained idle.

TAJIR, 11th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

27. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), referring to the grant of Rs. 50 lakhs for education in honour of the coronation of the King-Emperor in India, asks Government to specify a definite amount out of this sum for the education of Muhammadans only.

HINDUSTANI, 15th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

28. A correspondent, signing himself "A MUNICIPAL EMPLOYE," contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th January 1912, in which he urges that the municipal and district board employés should also be granted half a month's pay in commemoration of the coronation darbar, and enquires whether the ruling chiefs of India too have commemorated His Majesty's coronation darbar by granting half a month's pay to their employés.

LEADER, 16th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

29. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th January 1912, says that a proposal was discussed by the Allahabad Municipal Board for awarding fifteen days' pay as a bonus to the municipal employés in honour of the Imperial visit to India, and expresses regret that Mr. Mumford, the chairman, should have given his opinion against the concession, seeing that it was supported by a majority of members.

The editor remarks that the reason for the objection was the want of funds, but he urges that the cost would not exceed Rs. 4,000, and that it is not a recurring charge, like that of Exchange Compensation Allowance for the "highly-paid" chairman, which it was recently decided should be met by the board with the agreement of Government, and which will have to be met so long as a whole-time civilian chairman holds the appointment. He expresses the hope that the Commissioner will not veto the board's resolution.

LEADER, 17th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

30. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th January 1912, reproduces from the Gloucestershire Journal an article by Sir William Wedderburn, Bart., entitled "Conciliation for India," in which the writer summarized the happy results of His Majesty's visit to India, and of the Royal boons, and declared that, in freely meeting the popular aspirations of the Indians, the King-Emperor and his advisers had acted in furtherance of the established British policy towards India. Sir William Wedderburn laid stress on the claim of the Indian National Congress to be the voice of the Indian people by which the latter could express its needs and wishes, and advised the British public that the serious condition of affairs in India, known as "unrest," had been produced solely by the struggle between autocracy and the growing claims of the Indian people, and that an utter disregard of the latter in Lord Curzon's Viceroyalty had increased the bitterness.

He referred to the annulment of the partition of Bengal as being in itself of sufficient importance to justify the Royal visit to India, which marked a great national reconciliation and the dawn of a new era of confidence and progress.

ADVOCATE, 18th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

31. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th January 1912, publishes an article entitled "An important Indian problem," which begins with the remark that no Royal boon would have been received with more enthusiasm and gratitude than some attempt on the part of the Government of India to remove to a certain extent the race disqualification of Indians in the matter of service in the Army, the importance of which is being gradually realised by the British people. Quotations are made from an article contributed to the Contemporary Review by Major-General H. B. Jeffreys, C.B., who observed that sixty years ago Sir Henry Lawrence had given it as his opinion that a more liberal treatment of the native officer was necessary, and that he had proposed that native infantry regiments should be of three descriptions, those officered by a full complement of Europeans, others partially so officered and others again commanded and officered entirely by Indians. The writer urged that legitimate outlets be afforded for military energy and ability in all ranks and among all classes, and stated that "the minds of subadars and resaldars, sepoys and sawars can no more with safety be for ever cramped, trammelled and restricted as at present, than can a 20 feet embankment restrain the Atlantic."

Major-General Jeffreys recalled the fact that in the early days, when the foundations of the Indian Empire were being laid, Indian troops under Indian officers in the pay of the British fought for them against the French as their allies, and that, in the Army raised by Clive, there were only three white officers to a battalion, so that native officers could rise to positions very superior to what was possible now, and that their influence was real was shown when they kept the men true to their duty at the time of the mutiny of the Madras Army in 1809. He pointed out that there was no historic precedent for the conditions now obtaining in India, and expressed the opinion that the time had now come when a drastic change of policy should be introduced.

The following as well as other passages were reproduced in full:—

"We preach equality of race, and pretend that it is our wish to elevate and instruct those under our rule, and to provide them with employment commensurate with their fitness for responsible positions. In Egypt, the native officer has a career open to him and can rise to command. In South Africa the world has wondered at the spectacle of a conquered people being given full self-government a few years after their defeat, including entire control of such local forces as they care to raise. Can we wonder if in India the class of men who hold their own with us in a gallop after pig or in a hotly-contested polo match, and who in a native state can rise to military command, grows discontented and asks how long he is going to be made to feel that he belongs to a subject and inferior race."

The editor suggests that the reasons advanced for the continuance of the policy are first that an Indian soldier is considered unfit to command; and, secondly, it is contended that the introduction of Indian officers would increase the danger of another mutiny. With reference to the first objection he refers to Major-General Jeffreys's remark that there was no inherent reason why the white man should be a braver or a more efficient leader than his black or brown brother, and says that history abounds with evidence of courage and military ability on the part of Asiatic and other coloured races. Regarding the second reason he avers that too much is made of the bogey of mutiny, there being the two safeguards, the mixture of races in the Army and the practical non-existence of native artillery.

The editor expresses approval of the views of the writer, and observes that if the progress of Government in India is to continue, the authorities should look in the future to rule the country, through the affections of the people and through what they feel is their best interest.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th January 1912.

An open letter to King-Emperor George V.

32. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912, publishes another article entitled "An open letter to King-Emperor George V," contributed by "A BHARAT BASI" in which he expresses regret that the King-Emperor is leaving Indian soil. He expresses gratification that now no distinction will be observed between Europeans and Indians. He asks His Majesty to endeavour to effect a reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans, and says that the existing estrangement between the two communities has produced disastrous effects on the country. He says that, though Indians are poor and could not present any thing to His Majesty, the Hindu gods would surely present to him a garland which would consist of beads symbolical of qualities which are rarely found in Europe.

OUDH PUNCH, 11th January 1912.

The change of Capital.

33. The Oudh Punch (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses appreciation of the change of Capital from Calcutta to Delhi.

He proposes that a statue of the King-Emperor and Queen-Empress should be placed where Their Majesties sat on the coronation day at Delhi, and suggests that the new Delhi should be named Georgegarh, Georgeabad or George town.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 15th January 1912.

The change of Capital.

34. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 15th January 1912, expresses appreciation at the intended change of the capital from Calcutta to Delhi.

The editor observes that the change of the capital will enable the Government to efficiently supervise the native States in Rajputana and Central India, and that it will be in a position to exert a healthy influence on their internal administration.

LEADER, 18th January 1912.

The change of Capital.

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 18th January 1912, discussing the reference in the despatch of the Government of India to the Secretary of State advocating the removal of the Government of India from Calcutta to Delhi, remarks that there is undoubtedly need for the development of and for increasing the efficiency of local bodies, so that in that way the aspirations of educated Indians may be fulfilled. The editor refers to the remark said to have been made by Sir Reginald Craddock in reply to addresses from municipalities and district councils during his tours, to the effect that in view of the scanty powers and functions which they had, and the petty resources that they could command, the wonder was not that there was so little but that there was so much interest.

He invites attention to the resolution at the last Indian National Congress asking for the reconstitution of the local bodies on a more popular basis, and praying for larger financial aid, and asks the Indian members of the Imperial Council to urge upon Government the necessity of a thorough overhauling of the machinery of local finance. He expresses the opinion that with Sir Reginald Craddock installed as the next Home Member the development of local self-government may be confidently awaited.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 11th January 1912.

The Gaekwar incident.

36. The Kaisar-i-Hind (Lucknow), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that the letter of apology addressed to the Viceroy by the Gaekwar of Baroda, and the disclaimer on the part of Krishna Varma that since 1907 he never saw the Gaekwar, completely disprove the allegations made against His Highness by the Times (London), and expresses regret that Al Bashir (Etawah), should have published a leading article in its issue of the 26th December 1911 emphasizing that the allegations against the Gaekwar are true.

37. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), takes exception to the fact that the King-Emperor is called by Hindus "Maharaj-Adhiraj," which he says is not the correct translation of "King-Emperor." The editor asks his Hindu contemporaries to refrain from using the wrong expression, and urges them to use "Shahanshah Kaisar-i-Hind" instead of "Maharaj-Adhiraj" for King-Emperor.

Maharaj-Adhiraj as the synonym for King-Emperor.

SAHIFA, 12th January 1912.

38. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), says that the Hindus of Bengal are pleased at the annulment of the partition of Bengal because the rights of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, who form 66 per cent. of the whole population of the province, are ignored. The editor advises his co-religionists to abstain from joining the Indian National Congress and asks them to depend for their salvation on their own exertions.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

SAHIFA, 12th January 1912.

He expresses regret and surprise that the Pioneer (Allahabad) should have committed a blunder by putting a wrong interpretation on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13).

Referring to the remarks made by the Hindustan (Lahore) about the Nawab's letter, he remarks that the articles written by the Hindustan are extremely provocative, and observes that the existence of such rabid papers is inimical to the maintenance of public peace.

39. The Agra Akhbar of the 14th January 1912, referring to the resolution passed in a meeting of the Muhammadans held at Dacca on the 30th December 1911, expresses the hope that His Excellency the Governor General will not lose sight of the just aspirations of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

AGRA AKHBAR, 14th January 1912.

40. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th January 1912, takes exception to the annulment of the partition of Bengal, on the ground that the reunion is calculated to injure the interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

ZUL QARNAIN. 14th January 1912.

The editor observes that the Government of Lord Hardinge in proposing the annulment of the partition has shown a weakness, which betrays fear of the revolvers and bombs of the Bengalis.

He asks his co-religionists to shake off their reticence and to lay their grievances before the British nation, and observes that unless they give up sycophancy and rely on their own efforts and be self-respecting their voice will carry no weight.

41. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 16th January), remarks that, with the exception of the Nawab of Dacca, all the Muhammadans of Bengal had opposed the partition of Bengal, and that both Hindus and Muhammadans of the province have joined in expressing gratification at the annulment of the partition. The editor observes that the reunion of the two Bengals will lead to the cultivation of harmonious relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, seeing that the latter have in a public meeting expressed their desire to effect a rapprochement with the former. He points out that Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk has made a great mistake in characterizing the annulment of the partition of Bengal as "a political blunder," as "likely to make the public distrust the action and promises of Government," as creating general dissatisfaction among Muhammadans and as "utter disregard of Muhammadan interests on the part of Government," seeing that it is calculated to improve the relations between the two communities.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

42. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 16th January 1912, in another leading article discussing the disadvantages the Muhammadans will be placed in by the annulment of the partition of Bengal, says that it is childish to expect that, when they are smarting from the injury caused to them by the annulment of the partition, they should rejoice because of the restoration of Delhi to its former position as the capital of India.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

AL BASHIR, 16th January 1912.

The editor observes that the voice of the Muhammadans, who are contented and loyal, carries no weight with the Government, while the Bengalis, who throw bombs, commit political dakaitis, shoot government officials with revolvers and wreck railway trains, are given what they desire.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

43. One Tika Ram Tripathi contributes an article to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), in which he refers to the last Muharram at Allahabad and says that large numbers of Hindus offered malida to Imam Sahib. He expresses regret that Muhammadans do not do like the Hindus and show respect for the religious susceptibilities of other communities, and he asks the Hindus not to join Muhammadans in religious celebrations when the Muhammadans desire to remain separate from Hindus in all matters.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 11th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

44. The Kaisar-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), suggests that the Hindus and Muhammadans should make up their differences in commemoration of the unique event of His Majesty's visit to India. The editor expresses regret that the two communities should be living on unfriendly terms at present, and tells the Muhammadans that if they will express their desire to effect a rapprochement with the Hindus, the Hindus will gladly extend their arms to receive them. He states that, if the Muhammadans will only cease to grudge the Hindus a few seats in councils and local boards, the Hindus will themselves try to assist the Muhammadans to make progress, and he expresses the opinion that the reunion of the Hindus and Muhammadans will be productive of good results.

LEADER, 17th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

45. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th January 1912, expresses approval of the recently published views of the secretary of the Moradabad Muslim League, in which the separatist policy of the Muslim community was denounced and unity with the Hindus advocated.

The editor endorses contention of Saiyid Raza Ali that there was no risk of the Muhammadans losing their individuality and being merged into the fold of Hinduism in case they joined forces with the Hindus on the ground that theirs was a proselytizing religion, and that seventy millions could not easily be absorbed, and he reminds them that the Parsis, who do not exceed one hundred thousand, are as distinct from the rest of the Indians to-day as on the day when they landed in this country.

ADVOCATE, 18th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

46. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th January 1912, publishes an article entitled "Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans," in which the editor refers to another explanation on the part of the editor of the Aligarh Institute Gazette, regarding Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk's first letter, and remarks that in one breath he asks Muhammadans to support such resolutions of the National Congress as appear advantageous to both communities, and in the next he tells them to beware of Hindus who want to supplant British by Hindu government. The editor endorses the views of Mirza Salim Beg, who exhorts the Muslims to join the Hindus in the common cause and to set them right when they go wrong, and thus to establish cordiality of feeling between the two communities, without which further progress is impossible.

'INDEPENDENT, 15th January 1912.

Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar.

47. The Independent (Allahabad), of the 15th January 1912, refers to the rumour that the Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar have amicably settled between themselves the questions of cow-killing and separate representation, and remarks that it would be better if the Hindus and Muhammadans of other provinces were to follow such an excellent example.

TAJIR, 11th January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

48. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), expresses regret that some of the Muhammadans should wish to join the Congress.

The editor exhorts his co-religionists to abstain from so doing and asks them to depend on their own strength and resources and not to seek favours from others.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 10th January 1912.

49. The Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), expresses regret that a wrong interpretation should have been given to the letters contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 and 3rd January 1912 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13, and Selections Nos. 1 of 1912, paragraph 7), by the Pioneer (Allahabad), and by several papers advocating Congress views.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor observes that the reason for Muhammadans not joining the Congress was not their dislike for the Hindus but because they considered such a course detrimental to their interests.

He says that Hindus and Muhammadans can serve their respective communities better by standing on different platforms when voicing their wishes and requirements than by working in unison with one another.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

50. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 16th January), expresses regret that some of the Indian leaders unlike the public men of England change their policy whenever expediency requires. The editor deplores that Nawab Mushtaq Husain, who in his capacity as president of the Tibbi and Vaidic Conference, Lucknow, strongly urged that Hindus and Muhammadans should co-operate with one another, should, in the course of an article contributed by him to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, have insisted that the Muhammadans should not lose their national organization by merging their identity in the great mass of the Hindus, which is a predominant community. He prays that both Hindus and Muhammadans may not have leaders who injure the nation and the country by changing their policy.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

AL BASHIR, 16th January 1912.

51. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 16th January 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer, referring to the desire expressed by some of the Muhammadans to change their future political policy, asks them to give the question due consideration, and expresses the hope that they will adopt a policy which will be in keeping with the Muhammadan religion, which teaches them to be loyal well-wishers of their Sovereign.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

TAJIR, 11th January 1912.

52. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), expresses regret at the present degraded condition of the Muhammadans in India, and observes that it is due to their having lost sight of the need for unity of purpose and action, and to their deviation from Islamic principles. The editor observes that unless the Muhammadans become united no hope can be entertained of their future progress.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

SAHIFA, 12th January 1912.

53. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), publishes a poem in which the following passage occurs:—

"Their enemies are rejoicing because Muhammadans find it very hard to provide for themselves the necessaries of life.

Europeans are invading the territories of Turkey and of Persia.

Europeans do not deem it worth while to pay any regard to treaties made with Muhammadans."

KAISAR-I-HIND, 11th January 1912.

54. The Kaisar-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), notes with pleasure that the attendance of Muhammadans at the last Indian National Congress was greater than in previous years. The editor expresses regret that Muhammadans should have kept themselves aloof from the Congress to such an extent, and opines that it is the Muhammadans who are chiefly to blame for the estrangement between them and the Hindus. He points out that Muhammadans being in the minority cannot work out their regeneration separately, and suggests that they should co-operate with Hindus.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 3rd January 1912.

55. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 3rd January 1912 (received on the 8th January), commenting on the last Calcutta session of the Congress, remarks that, although it was a ludicrous and disgraceful failure, it was not such a great failure as it was expected to be. The editor says that it was because of the announcement of many unexpected boons on the occasion of the coronation darbar that only a few "bare heads" (Bengalis) were seen in the visitors' section of the Congress pandal and that the Congress was a lifeless and dull affair. In conclusion he remarks that if the leaders of the Congress do not even now try to remove the existing defects of the Congress in a calm and dispassionate manner, the term Congress itself will become a term of reproach throughout the length and breadth of India.

The Indian National Congress.

The editor describes the presidential address as a healthy, inspiriting and fearless speech both in form and in subject matter.

He says that the Hon'ble Babu Bhupendranath Basu's address was on the whole a good oration, but that there were two or three points to which objection could justifiably be taken. He could not, the editor says, rise above provincial sympathies, and failed to appreciate which language should be the common language of the country.

Commenting on Mr. Gokhale's speech on the Elementary Education Bill the editor states that he now withdraws the objections made in previous issues of this paper, and expresses full sympathy with the principles of the bill.

He refers to the Congress resolution regarding Indian residents in British colonies, and remarks that this question was one of the few interesting problems discussed in the Congress.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 10th January 1912.

56. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), reproduces the article which appeared in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 5th January 1912, on the Indian National Congress.

The Indian National Congress.

MUKHBIR-I ALAM, 8th January 1912.

57. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 8th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), referring to the rumour that Sindh is to be placed under the Punjab Government, expresses approval of the proposal, and observes that if this be done Sindh will gain rather, than lose in importance in spite of the apprehensions expressed by some of the Sindh papers.

A rumour about Sindh being placed under the Punjab Government.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 11th January 1912.

58. The Kaisar-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 11th January 1911 (received on the 15th January), in the course of its review of the events of the year 1911, refers to the change of capital from Calcutta to Delhi as likely to be advantageous to Indians generally and to Muhammadans in particular. With regard to the annulment of the partition of Bengal, the editor says that while it will be gratifying to the Bengalis it will be injurious to the interests of the Muhammadans.

A review of the events of the year 1911.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

59. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, refers to an article published in the Zamindar (Lahore), in which Muhammadans were advised to take a lesson from the perseverance of the Bengalis who, regardless of the repressive measures adopted by Government, did not give up their attempts to secure the reunion of Bengal until their object was gained, and expresses the opinion that the tone of that article was no less objectionable than that of the Yugantar which was so for its inflammatory publications.

An objectionable article in the Zamindar (Lahore).

LEADER, 19th January 1912.

60. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th January 1912, has the following :—

Integrity and independence.

"INTEGRITY AND INDEPENDENCE.

"A Socratic dialogue.

"Now that we are on the topic of Empire-building, we are indeed lucky to have in our company Thrasymenes, just returned from Asia. You are, we know, a good deal of an expert in this business of Imperial expansion, Thrasymenes; or ought I rather to call it an art?

"Yes, indeed, O Socrates, and a fine art too, and quite the largest of the fine arts in its scope and aims.

"Excellent! For I see, Thrasymenes, that you are not only an expert but an enthusiast. You are evidently the very man Eubulus and I are looking for. For in our talk of Empire-making, we have been fumbling with mere phrases and ideas, having at hand no practical experience to guide us. We both supplicate you to lighten our darkness.

"I will do my best, Socrates, though, as you are aware, lecturing is not much in my line. 'Deeds, not words,' is my motto.

"Certainly, it is deeds we too are after. But I suppose I should be right in seeking for a purpose in your deeds.

"Assuredly; and a really elevated purpose, for it is nothing less than the civilization of the world that we are after. For this is the destiny and mission of an Imperial race.

"It is indeed a grand goal you set before us, Thrasymenes, and for one who sets so little store on words, you phrase it admirably. Such a task as you describe, I suppose, is not for everybody to undertake. I presume that some rare quality distinguishes those to whom Nature assigns this destiny, or Providence this mission?

"Yes, indeed, the quality is rare enough; it is the power of organizing things which we call efficiency. A man, or a nation, having this talent must not hide or waste it. If he is a business man, he must extend his organizing power into a Trust. A people must use this quality of soul to make an Empire. And, indeed, this is no chance analogy between business and politics. For the enlightened moralist will recognize that Empire is nothing else than a political Trust, undertaken by the efficient nation in the wider interest of civilization.

"Pray, halt a moment here, Thrasymenes, for Eubulus and I are a little out of breath with your expansive mode of argument.

"Yes, indeed, Socrates, added Eubulus, whose face had been visibly swelling with pent-up expostulation; if Thrasymenes will let us, I would like to go back a few steps in this Imperial progress.

"Well, where is it that you get stuck?

"It is just here. You say, Thrasymenes, that it is the destiny and mission of the efficient people to take in hand and organize the inefficient people, and that in this way the civilization of the world is advanced.

"Yes, that is what I maintain.

"But how is one to know which is the efficient nation?

"If that is your difficulty, it is soon solved. For it belongs to the very nature of efficiency to recognize itself. The efficient nation simply asserts itself, and by the very act of doing so, attests its efficiency.

"But surely, Thrasymenes, that isn't the way in which other services of trust are regulated.

"What do you mean?

"Why, a servant or a clerk is not usually taken on a character he writes himself. And a money-lender wants some other security than the self-recommendation of the borrower before he makes a loan. Do you really consider the profession which a nation makes of its superior efficiency as a sufficient warrant for taking in hand the organization of another nation?

"Pardon me, Eubulus. To the practical statesman the points you raise seem nothing else than academic quibbles. The nation that is conscious of its efficiency simply sees a peace of work ahead and does it. The proof of the efficiency is the effect.

"If I may interpose, said Socrates, I would suggest that in the investigation of so elusive an art we should postpone our judgment alike of motives and effects until the process or practice of the art itself is clearly seen. I would, therefore, seek to learn from Thrasymenes precisely how the efficient nation deals with the backward State which it seeks to civilize. It does not, I presume, go at it by sheer brute force, like a bull with its head down for the charge.

"No, indeed, it does not, Socrates. The approved methods are those of peaceful penetration, the approach, not of an enemy, but of a benefactor.

"That is excellent! But it appears to involve an initial difficulty. For if, as you show, it belongs to the efficient nation to recognize its efficiency, it would seem to belong to the backward or inefficient nation not to recognize its efficiency.

Will not that be so? And will not the inefficient one be somewhat reluctant to receive the approaches of its benefactor?

"Why, yes, Socrates; history shows the inefficient to be extremely obstinate in this regard, especially if they suspect the bona fides of the approach? The veriest tyro in the art of Imperialism knows this.

"I suppose, then, your first work must be directed chiefly to disarm these unworthy suspicions?

"Quite right. So the first steps are in no sense political. Indeed, the Imperial power is careful to keep quite out of sight. It simply allows or encourages some of its citizens to enter the country it has marked down for ultimate absorption, as traders for their private profit, as explorers, or as missionaries. And when the country is a little better known, and sufficient confidence of its rulers has been won or bought, other citizens obtain permission to work mines or plantations, or to lend money to the rulers of the inefficient State.

"But are not these commercial and other dealings very dangerous for those who undertake them?

"Why, yes, indeed; but these private dangers are the very seeds of Imperialism.

"How do you make that out?

"Well, you see, it works like this. In a simple, backward people, each of these intrusions makes for general disorder. The traders who bring guns and strong drink, foment internal feuds; new trade routes act as a demand for brigands; the miners and other foreign settlers get at loggerheads with the inhabitants; and, best of all, generous loans stimulate extravagance and make for bankruptcy.

"Best of all, indeed! But how can the noble fruits of civilization grow from such baleful seeds as those?

"Ah, it is just here that we enter the arcana of our art. The disorder thus produced becomes intolerable. The property, nay, the very lives, of our valuable subjects are imperilled. These cry out to their government to save them. And so the government, which has been waiting, has then to intervene.

"You mean it annexes the country?

"Why, no such thing! Nothing could be further from its action or professions—at this stage. It merely intimates that compensation must be made to its injured subjects, and that better order must be kept than an inefficient government is capable of keeping. And next, as the disorder continues, it offers its disinterested advice and assistance to enable the rulers to perform their duties in a more satisfactory manner.

"But does not this move arouse the very suspicions which you said just now it was so desirable to allay?

"Why, yes, it does. And this is where the moral capital of an efficient Imperial race comes in so useful.

"What exactly do you mean, Thrasymenes?

"I mean the faith or confidence which the rulers of the backward State will naturally repose in the plighted word or declaration of a great civilized State. For the stage we have now reached is one that requires this pledge.

"What pledge do you mean?

"I mean a bold, uncompromising undertaking to maintain for ever the integrity and independence of the backward State. For only by this means could an open rupture of relations be avoided and the game of peaceful penetration be continued.

"I quite realise the value of such a pledge. For this I apprehend is the precise point where the political process of absorption really begins.

"Yes; and that is why the pledge should be given with full formality. And if there should happen to be two Imperial Powers alike devoted to this civilizing mission who will jointly pledge themselves to this sacred duty, so much the better, for the moral security is doubled.

"But may they not find it inconvenient at a later stage to keep this pledge?

"That indeed, O Socrates, may well happen. But in that case they will redeem it by another pledge of greater value.

"But what can be of greater value than independence?—broke in Eubulus.

"Nothing, perhaps, for you, with your narrow nationalism. But others would hold that a larger, truer liberty is found in forming part of a great civilized Empire.

"But, said Socrates, our present business is, I take it, not to judge, but to trace the actual process of Imperial expansion. Now the stage we have reached at present is an early one. But I suppose you architects of Empire have a name for each stage.

"Yes, indeed. It is all excellently graded in the language of diplomacy. The country that is being watched by a civilizing power, which as yet has only inserted trade 'feelers', is called 'a sphere of interest.' But when the disorder has gone far enough to call for pacific intervention, it passes into 'a sphere of influence.'

"But stop a minute, Thrasymenes! put in Eubulus. Haven't you forgotten one item in your list of 'spheres'?

"I don't think so. But what is it, Eubulus?

"Why, that valuable expresssion 'a legitimate sphere of aspiration,' quite the most illuminative of the phrases, which describes so accurately the present attitude of civilizing powers towards China.

"And a very good phrase too, say I, and a very proper attitude for the trustees of world-civilization. What say you, Socrates?

"I am still waiting, all agog, Thrasymenes, to learn the final processes in your art.

"Why, to tell the truth, Socrates, after once the 'sphere of influenee' has been safely entered, everything runs quite smoothly and the further processes of absorption are so nearly automatic that the most inexpert of Foreign Ministers can hardly fail.

"But I suppose there is an orthodox method of completion?

"Why, yes, and sometimes it takes a considerable time, especially when, as sometimes happens, two rival benefactors begin the civilizing process upon the same body.

"Why, what will happen then?

"Well, instead of proceeding in a single step from sphere of influence to plain protectorate, the power that has gone furthest in the swallowing process will declare 'a veiled protectorate.'

"And what exactly does that come to?

"It has been described as a situation where the civilizing power is 'in a position to give authoritative advice' to the rulers of a country still in nominal possession of its independence.

"And how is this authority exercised?

"Why, the method is simplicity itself. Behind the native ruler you set a ruler of your own, while each native official is duplicated by an official of the civilizing power. And for the rest, though you allow the native ruler to appoint his servants, you reserve a veto upon those who are appointed.

"But isn't this a direct breach of the pledge of independence?

"I admit it looks a little like it. But, after all, you must remember these Oriental people don't regard promises and declarations with that meticulous scrupulosity that obtains among us. Besides, the civilizing power generally guards itself by some provision relating to 'the force of circumstances.'

"This 'force of circumstances,' I take it, said Eubulus, is a sort of sudden twist in the stream of Destiny which carries the Imperialist nation to port.

"Yes, and a very serviceable twist sometimes. But, Socrates, my tale is nearly told. For when the veil is removed from the protectorate, the absorption is practically complete. The step to an administrative province is a short and easy one. For disorders will continue to arise from time to time in the best-regulated protectorate, and these will compel the protector to tighten the grasp of his protecting arm and gather his protégé into a closer political embrace.

"With what unction you describe the process of deglutination and absorption, Thrasymenes, and quite convincingly, as if Imperialism were merely a matter of spacious phraseology.

"Whatever can you mean, Socrates? I have described the practice as exactly as I could, concealing nothing.

"Yes; but I fancy that one quite important truth was in danger of escaping our notice.

"What is that?

"The truth that each step in the practice of this art is a squandering of that 'efficiency,' which, as you have shown, is the vis motrix of the process. I really don't understand you, Socrates.

"Well, I will make my meaning plain. Each one of those slippery phrases which your art employs carries with it by necessity a slippery action, and each of these slippery actions simply cancels so much of the faith in your good intentions which constitutes your fund of moral efficiency. The actual process which you describe is simply the killing of the liberty of a weaker by a stronger nation. All your phrases cannot hide this fact. But their smoothness costs your nation very dear all the same—dearer even than you understand.

"Why, indeed, Socrates, we are well aware how heavy is the burden which this civilizing mission lays upon us.

"I doubt, Thrasymenes, if you have even an inkling of the real cost. I mean the back-stroke of Imperialism.

"Why, what is that?

"It is the destruction of liberty in that nation which destroys the liberty of another. For Nemesis works surely and accurately this way. To kill the liberty of another people is to strike a blow at the spirit of liberty at home. This surely is the inner meaning of that proverb, 'What shall it profit a nation if it gain the whole world and lose its own soul'? For nothing less than this is the cost of the career of duplicity and treachery which you describe. And your vindication and approval of it is a simple measure of the moral degradation it entails. This unctuous rectitude of the civilizing mission is the last penalty but one for the nation that commits itself to an Imperial career.

"The last but one, said Eubulus; pray, Socrates, what is this last?

"Oh, there remains one lower depth than that of slayer of liberty. It is the state of soul of that nation which, like Saul in the legend, holds the cloak of another tyrant that he may stone the life out of the helpless nation whose integrity and independence he has undertaken to preserve.—The Nation."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th January 1912.

The coronation boons in the Jhind state.

61. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 8th January 1912, expresses approval of the action of His Highness the Maharaja of Jhind for having allowed his Muhammadan subjects to sound the azan in their mosques as one of the boons given by him in connection with the coronation darbar at Delhi, and suggests that other Hindu states should follow the example set by the Maharaja.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

Muhammadans of the Jhind state.

62. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Maharaja of Jhind in granting permission to the Muhammadans of his state to sound the azan (the summons to prayer) in their mosques in commemoration of the coronation darbar.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

Alleged punishment for salaaming improperly.

63. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, referring to the reported sentence of a fine of Rs. 5 and in default seven days' rigorous imprisonment passed on a boy of seven years of age by one Mr. Jackson, Joint Magistrate of Chingleput in Madras, because the boy called out salaam loudly to Mr. Jackson, expresses surprise that the complainant himself should have been allowed to try and convict the accused. The editor expresses the hope that, when Lord Hardinge and the Governor of Madras will come to know the facts of this case, they will realise that such cases are to a great extent responsible for the unrest in the country. He concludes by expressing the hope that the responsible officers of Madras will set aside the sentence passed by Mr. Jackson.

64. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th January 1912, takes exception to the abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab, and to the order of the Chief Court, Punjab, restricting the number of pleaders to be enrolled every year.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th January 1912.

The abolition of examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

The editor questions the advisability of thus restricting the number of vakils, and observes that the restriction is likely to spread discontent amongst the graduates and asks the Government of the Punjab to reconsider its decision on the matter.

65. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th January 1912, expresses appreciation of the article contributed to the Law Quarterly Review by Sir E. T. Kennedy, C.S.I., about the appointment of Judges in India, and observes that Judges should deliver their judgments with due regard to the circumstances of the case and that they should not be confused with the technicalities of law.

MASHRIQ, 16th January 1912.

The appointment of District Judges in India.

(b)—Police.

66. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th January 1912, expresses regret at the report that police constables used whips when controlling the crowd on the occasion of His Majesty the King-Emperor's visit to Calcutta, and the editor trusts that the police will not resort to brute force in future when required to control a crowd, but that they will perform their duty peacefully and politely.

MASHRIQ, 16th January 1912.

A complaint against the Calcutta police.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

67. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912, refers to the case recently decided by the Munsif of Agra against the Agra Municipality for the non-supply of water which was instituted by one Saiyid Mustafa Husain, and remarks that in the course of the trial it transpired that the Secretary Engineer had no certificates as an Engineer, and that on that account his appointment is not in order.

LEADER, 14th January 1912.

The Agra Municipal Water Works case.

68. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 15th January 1912, complains that the municipal roads of Agra are in a very deplorable condition, and that no attention is paid by the members of the board to this matter.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 15th January 1912.

A complaint against the municipal roads of Agra.

The editor takes exception to the proposed increase in the number of reservoirs for the water works and to the proposal for contracting a loan of fifty thousand rupees for the purpose.

He observes that the income of the municipality is enough to meet its expenses, and draws the attention of the municipal chairman and of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor to the extravagance of the board.

69. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 15th January 1912, takes exception to a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Sujan Samaj regarding the desirability of "bulls" being transported from the city to the other side of the Ganges. The editor expresses the opinion that "the owners of such bulls should be warned to keep them confined in some enclosure and that they should not be allowed to wander about where they like."

BHARAT JIWAN, 15th January 1912.

The Benares Municipality.

He points out that they cause no injury to any one unless they have been teased, and remarks that the feelings of the Hindu community will be hurt if they are starved by being transported to the other side of the Ganges.

(e)—Education.

70. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), appeals to his co-religionists of Meerut to raise the Faiz Am school, Meerut, to the standard of a high school, which, the editor says, is most essential for spreading education amongst the Muhammadans.

TAJIR, 11th January 1912.

A suggestion to raise the Faiz Am school, Meerut, to the standard of a high school.

AL BASHIR, 16th January 1912.

71. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 16th January 1912, expresses regret at the resignation by Nawab Mushtaq Husain of the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and asks him not to leave the Muhammadans at such a crisis, when on the one side the Hindus are against them and on the other the Government, not appreciating their loyalty and contentment, has withdrawn its favour from them.

The resignation of Nawab Mushtaq Husain from the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th January 1912.

72. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th January 1912, reviewing the condition of education in the different countries of the world, says that the educational condition in India is most deplorable.

Free and compulsory education in India.

The editor asks his countrymen and Government to try to spread education in India until it is within reach of every individual Indian.

OUDH AKHBAR, 17th January 1912.

73. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 17th January 1912, expresses appreciation of the sympathy shown by His Majesty the King-Emperor for popular education in India.

Free and compulsory education in India.

The editor asks his countrymen to hold meetings in every district in support of Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, and observes that, when Indian, without any distinction of race or creed, are unanimously in favour of free and compulsory primary education, and when even the people of Baroda are given such an education, it is quite time that free compulsory primary education should be introduced into British India.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th January 1912.

74. A correspondent named Debi Datt Dwivedi contributes an article to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), in which he complains that the recruiting agents of the Allahabad Coolie Emigration Depôt entice ignorant Indians to the depôt. He reports that a coolie who was recruited in order to be sent to British Guiana died suddenly and he suggests that the District Magistrate should enquire into the cause of his death. He also asks the District Magistrate not to permit the emigration of any coolie unless he satisfies himself through an Indian officer that he is willing to go abroad. He remarks in conclusion that the Magistrate should also see that there are adequate arrangements for the feeding and clothing of recruited persons in the depôt.

Coolie Emigration Depôt, Allahabad.

TAJIR, 11th January 1912.

75. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), referring to the rumour that the rupee of the new coinage contains the likeness of a pig, says that though the rumour is false Government should remove the figure from the new coinage seeing that it has caused so much sensation amongst the Muhammadan public.

The new coinage.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

76. The editor of the Musáfir (Agra), in the issue of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), reports that the secretary to the Arya Samaj, Konch, in the Jalaun district, has informed him that the Muhammadan tahsildar of the town is displeased with him (the secretary) because the local Arya Samaj reclaimed two Hindus who had been converted to Islam. He draws the attention of Government to the fact that in Konch the tahsildar, the thanadar and the municipal secretary are all Muhammadans, and asks Government to earn the gratitude of the Hindus of the town by posting a Hindu officer there.

Muhammadan officers in Konch, district Jalaun.

SAHIFA, 12th January 1912.

77. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), says that the grievances of Muhammadans expressed in Urdu papers are not brought to the notice of the authorities because the reporter to the Government is a Hindu.

A suggestion to appoint a Muhammadan reporter to Government.

The editor asks Government to appoint a Muhammadan also for the work who, he says, will be better able to keep the authorities informed about the demands of his co-religionists.

He refers to the letters published by the Leader (Allahabad) complaining of the preponderance of Muhammadans in Sambhal in the Moradabad district, and says that the statement was contradicted by the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad). In this connection he observes that the representation of the former produced a result while that of the latter had no effect.

78. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer suggests that some promotion should be granted to the permanent government servants in recognition of their services in connection with the last census.

HINDUSTANI, 15th January 1912.

The last census.

79. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th January 1912, reviewing the annual report on district and municipal boards by the Hon'ble Mr. Burn, says that it is generally believed by the people that it is only when vaccinators are offered some hope of reward that they do their duty carefully, and that otherwise they vaccinate children carelessly and in that way cause fever and other troubles.

MASHRIQ, 16th January 1912.

Complaint against vaccinators.

The editor asks the authorities and civil surgeons to remove the cause for public complaint against the vaccinators.

80. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th January 1912, publishes an article contributed by Lala Baijnath, retired Judge, under the heading "Premature deaths among educated Indians" in which the writer expresses approval of the suggestion of the Times of India (Bombay), that medical men should investigate the reasons for the frequent deaths at an early age of educated people in India. He invites medical practitioners in the country as well as other men of light and learning to express their views on certain questions tabulated by him. In his opinion the educated classes are greater sufferers than the rest of the community from certain constitutional complaints and nervous diseases, and he suggests the need for early steps being taken to check the evil. The recent untimely deaths of the Hon'ble Mr. Krishnaswami Iyer of Madras and Rai Bahadur Lala Ramanuj Dayal of Meerut from diabetes suggested to him the need for such an enquiry.

LEADER, 17th January 1912.

Premature deaths amongst educated Indians.

81. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 18th January 1912, congratulates the medical authorities in charge of the darbar camp for having successfully adopted measures to prevent the outbreak of epidemics within the darbar area, and asks Government to adopt similar preventive measures in the various parts of India to combat the epidemics of plague and cholera in the country.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th January 1912.

The prevention of epidemics in India.

82. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 18th January 1912, refers to the appeal issued by the Hon'ble Raja Pratab Singh Bahadur of Partabgarh asking the taluqdars of Oudh to take some steps to perpetuate the administration of Sir John Hewett, whose term of office is about to expire, and remarks that, as His Honour endeavoured to improve the condition not only of the taluqdars but also of the public, the public should also contribute liberally towards the fund for the proposed memorial.

OUDH AKHBAR, 18th January 1912.

Proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett.

83. The editor of the Trishul (Benares), in the issue of the 18th January 1912, refers to the scarcity of pure ghi and milk, which are he says are more nutritous than meat, fish, wheat and rice, and to the adulteration of the former by mixing tallow made from pigs fat and serpents, and attributes these evils to the decrease in the number of cows, the paucity of pasture grounds and to the indiscriminate slaughter of cattle by butchers. He urges educated Hindus not to squander their time, energy and money in unprofitable pursuits, but to exert themselves and find out the real reason for their misery. He goes on to say that the decrease in the number of cows has impoverished India and that their preservation will again make this country prosperous.

TRISHUL, 18th January 1912.

Scarcity of ghi and milk.

V.—Legislation.

84. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th January 1912, publishes an article in connection with "The Court of Wards Bill," particularly referring to the article by an

ADVOCATE, 18th January 1912.

The Court of Wards Bill.

Indian civilian in the January number of the Hindustan Review supporting the bill in its entirety, as well as the proposed section 58 of the bill, which had been omitted by the Select Committee, in deference to the strong views against it by the highest judicial officers of these provinces. The editor refers to the writer's remarks that the zamindari classes would supply, as time went on, men of the leisured classes who would take an interest in public questions, and observes that, even admitting that fact, he doubts the justice of passing a legislative measure which creates disabilities against a whole body.

With reference to the writer's remark that district officers are no longer the autocrats they used to be, he says that they would be less than human if they did not become autocrats, in view of the powers the bill would confer on them of going into the details of the expenditure of every zamindar, the annual interest of whose debts is more than one-third of his annual income. The editor observes that the mere fact of such an enquiry, which might be started at the instance of some interested party, would bring disgrace on the zamindars and humiliate them, so that they would always remain in terror of the district officers.

The claim that the Courts of Wards management was a more sympathetic administration as regards the tenants than private management is disputed, and the editor asserts that tenants of estates have bitterly complained of want of sympathy on the part of the Court of Wards' agents, that the rapacious agents of a zamindar have given place to another set of "rapacious' underlings, who with the prestige of the Collector behind them, feel that they can do many things with impunity which an ordinary agent of a zamindar would not dare to do, and that there are cases where managers have humiliated taluqdars simply because they showed sympathy towards their tenants and brought their grievances to the notice of the District Officers. He says that he knows of highly respectable ladies, whose estates have been taken under the Court of Wards, not because they were indebted but simply because they were ladies, and that the managers of Court of Wards ruled over them as if they were the real owners and not the ladies. He advises that the operations of the Court of Wards should not be unnecessarily extended and that the zamindars should not be put in constant fear of being called upon to prove that they are not spendthrifts.

VI.—Railway.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th January 1912.

Railway complaints.

85. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret that on the tickets issued by the Bengal and North-Western Railway the name of the places of issue and destination is not given in Urdu, which is alleged to cause a great deal of inconvenience to the majority of passengers.

He complains that railway compartments labelled "For Europeans only" are generally occupied by Native Christians, who do not allow any man of another creed to get in, which, he says, is insulting to Indians and is calculated to cause a breach of the public peace.

LEADER, 17th January 1912.

Railway administration.

86. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th January 1912, while inviting Indian publicists to watch the progress of Lord Inchcape's mission in connection with the railway administration of India, declares that Indians have no grievance against the Government of India for not carrying out the recommendations of the committee presided over by Lord Inchcape which sat at the India Office a few years ago, but that their grievance is that too much is spent on railways while insufficient is given to irrigation.

The editor asks the Government of India to exercise stricter control over railway administration, because of their alleged tendency to run up working expenses beyond reasonable proportions and to neglect the interests of the public for the sake of earning higher dividends. He says that the result of this tendency is that the tax-payers and the public suffer for the benefit of the foreign shareholders, while the elementary comforts of third class passengers remain unattended to and he complains that the Railway Board has not insisted as strongly as was necessary on the protection of the interests of the passengers.

The editor also invites attention to the incidence of the railway rates on goods, which, he says, is mostly to the disadvantage of Indian trades and industries.

He remarks that Lord Inchcape's committee will conduct its enquiries in private, and that probably its recommendations, conceived primarily in the interests of the companies, will make matters worse and not better for Indian interests. He expresses the opinion that there was no need for such a committee and that the Secretary of State was ill-advised to appoint it. He considers that it would have been different if a competent Indian like the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale or Mr. D. E. Wacha had been associated with Lord Inchcape. He notes in conclusion that the scope of the enquiry by the committee has not been specified, and he asks some member of the Viceroy's Council to take the matter up and obtain information on the subject.

87. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer complains that there is no sweetmeat vendor at the Hardwar railway station which causes much inconvenience to the passengers, and asks the railway authorities to remove the grievance of the public.

Sweetmeat vendors at Hardwar station.

TAFRIH, 14th January 1912.

VII.—Post Office.

88. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), complains that several V. P. orders issued by the Zia-ul-Islam office have not been returned to the office and that Al Mushir is not properly delivered to its subscribers by the post office.

A complaint against the post office, Moradabad.

AL MUSHIR, 11th January 1912.

The editor draws the attention of the Postmaster General of the province to the fact, and expresses the hope that a thorough investigation will be made into the matter.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

89. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), complains that Al Haq (Delhi) in every issue quotes unconnected passages from the religious articles that are published in its columns and excites Muhammadans against Hindus by making inflammatory comments on them. The editor refers to an article entitled "Will not the Musáfir be prevented from indulging in foul language" that appeared in Al Haq of the 5th January 1912, and remarks that the sentence "Islam is a hot-bed of evils" to which Al Haq takes exception, was written by him in answer to the review of the Satyarth Prakash published in the Tashhid-ul-Azhan, in which Mirza Qadiani defamed Swami Dayanand, and endeavoured to prove that Islam was the fountain-head of virtues, while other religions contained more evil than virtues. He remarks that being the subject of a just Sovereign, who has granted religious freedom to the people of India, he sees no reason why he should not defend the Vedic faith and expose the absurdities of other religions. He expresses surprise that Al Haq should try to deprive Indians of the religious freedom granted to them by Government; only because it is ill-disposed towards the Musáfir, and remarks that none can prevent anybody from wounding the feelings of Muhammadans, seeing that their political importance has made them so sensitive that everything unpleasant to them, whether it happens in Tripoli or in Persia, hurts their feelings. He points out that Muhammadans should practise religious toleration themselves if they desire that their religious susceptibilities be not wounded in case any one happen to criticise Islam. He then proceeds to quote certain passages from the Tashhid-ul-Azhan which, he says, are more objectionable than the language of the Musáfir to which Al Haq took exception in its issue of the 5th January. He tells Al Haq that Government knows quite well that it wants to accentuate the religious differences between Hindus and Muhammadans by publishing inflammatory articles, and asks it to change its policy otherwise the Punjab Government will deal with it in the same manner in which the Punch Bahadur was dealt with by the Government of Bombay.

Inflammatory articles in Al Haq (Delhi).

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

An inflammatory article in the Afghan (Peshawar).

90. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that the Afghan (Peshawar) still persists in publishing articles calculated to wound the susceptibilities of Hindus, and draws attention of Government to the following article which appeared in the Afghan of the 1st January 1912:—

"To contract another marriage during the lifetime of the wife is viewed with disfavour among Hindus. There are many wealthy Hindus who do not like to marry another woman, though their wife does not beget a child. Nay, the teachings of the holy Vedas have enjoined the Hindus to be so parsimonious in the matter as to consider one wife sufficient for five brothers if they can manage to live happily. Even now we can find such instances in the Mahabharata and other religious books and in the pure lives of gods, rishis and munis. Contrary to this, our Muhammadan brethren like to marry more wives than one. Disunion has ruined the Muhammadans who would not have been brought to this pass if they had been conversant with good manners. (If) they even now care to study and act upon the Hindu philosophy like their Hindu brethren, I will tell them the golden principle of Hinduism; that if they make up their differences only one wife will be sufficient for a whole village, provided she is used carefully and moderately. The great Hindu reformer of the modern times, Mahashai Dayanandji Maharaj, has after much research and investigation, acquainted us, who are blind, with a yet more practical teaching that husbands should not be narrow-minded with regard to their wives, but that they should, if suffering from any physical disease, try with patience and forbearance to have children born to their wives by other men. It is allowed that the assistance of from one to eleven men can be taken. This is the highest (form of) moral education. Though most of the Muhammadans can hardly get one meal a day they have two wives. Bravo, Hindu queens (who are) chastity personified! God has made you rich and given to you in abundance the articles of luxury. He has also endowed you with beauty. Why then, should you become miserly and niggardly? For what day should you preserve these gifts of God? What useful purpose will they serve if you do not become magnanimous, satisfy your own ambition, cherish the poor and satisfy the needs of the needy? As you sow, so you will reap."

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

The sanctity of the Qoran.

91. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that, though it has been pointed out to Muhammadans that the Qoran is defective, owing to being full of tautalogies they still persist in urging that the style of the Qoran is very eloquent and elegant. The editor remarks that, even if it be granted for the sake of argument that the style of the Qoran is elegant, it cannot be maintained that the book is a divine revelation, seeing that the eloquence and the elegance of style are not the criteria of divine revelation.

With regard to the verse in the Qoran challenging persons entertaining a doubt as to the divine origin of the book to compose a verse similar to that of the Qoran he observes that that verse was composed ten years after Muhammad claimed to be a prophet and was addressed to the people of Medina whose dialect was different from that of the people of Mecca. He quotes the opinions expressed by some unprejudiced Muhammadans in support of his contention that the eloquence and the elegance of the style in which the Qoran is written are not of such a high order as to secure for the book a place among divine revelations.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

A review of Hadises.

92. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that next to the Qoran come Hadises as forming the basis of Islam, seeing that most of the verses of the Qoran are terse, equivocal and meaningless, and are accordingly unintelligible to Muhammadans in general. The editor points out that there are six chief books containing Hadises which the Muhammadans think are as good as the six Hindu Shastras. He quotes translations of certain Hadises without making any comments on them to enable the public to judge whether or no the philosophy of the Shastras is superior to that contained in the Hadises.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

The preachers of the Anjuman Hidayat-ul-Islam and the Nau-Muslims.

93. The editor of the Musáfir (Agra), in the issue of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), referring to the report made by the secretary to the Arya Samaj, Salwan, in the Karnal district, that the preachers of the Anjuman Hidayat-ul-Islam go from village to village to make the Nau-Muslims staunch Muhammadans and that no efforts are made by the Arya Samajists to reclaim them, remarks that the Secretary of the Bharat Shuddhi Sabha is aware of the fact that the preachers of the Anjuman Hidayat-ul-Islam are making earnest efforts in the Agra, Mainpuri, Etawah, Hardoi and Shahjahanpur districts to secure converts to Islam, but he says that the sabha owing to its want of funds is unable to save Hindus from being converted to Islam.

He urges the need for Arya Samajists to render pecuniary help to the sabha.

94. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), expresses surprise that the District Magistrate of Moradabad should have issued an order restraining the Hindus of Amroha from blowing conch-shells and from celebrating marriages during the Muharram festival. The editor observes that the order of the Magistrate amounts to asking the Hindus to join the Muhammadans in mourning on the occasion of the Muharram, and invites the attention of the higher authorities to the action of the Magistrate.

Muharram in Amroha.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

95. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 12th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), refers to Pandit Shiva Kumar Shastri's opinion that the depressed classes also were Hindus, which was expressed on the occasion of the last census, when, on political grounds, the Muslim League attempted to have them excluded from the pale of Hinduism, and expresses regret that high caste Hindus do not even now accord proper treatment to low caste Hindus. The editor expresses apprehension lest, in case high caste Hindus persist in refusing equal treatment to them, the depressed classes should accept Christianity.

The depressed classes.

MUSAFIR, 12th January 1912.

96. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912, reports that a meeting was held at Bharti Bhawan to organize a band of volunteers for service at the Magh Mela, and commends the public spirit shown by the Allahabad young men. The editor remarks that the gentlemen who organized the movement in Allahabad approached the District Magistrate in order to obtain his approval for their employment at the mela, but that he put them off with the assurance that the police arrangements would be adequate and that extraneous assistance was unnecessary. The editor observes that there was no idea of reflecting on the efficiency of the official arrangements, and that there was no intention to take the place of the police, but that the help proferred by the volunteers was in the nature of attendance on the weak and the old, which could not be attempted by the police. He suggested that it was something like private charity supplementing the Government relief operations at the time of a famine or flood.

The editor expresses the hope that the magistrate may yet be convinced of their good intentions and permit the volunteers to work as they hoped to do.

The Magh Mela pilgrims.

LEADER, 14th January 1912.

97. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, discusses the views of Sir Subramaniyar Iyer on the Indian social policy, and refers in that connection to an article contributed to the Wednesday Review by Sir Subramaniyar Iyer on the caste system, in the course of which the latter urged that, sound as the caste system was in its inception, and though its benefits at one time were considerable, it was foolish not to acknowledge that the existing system was not suitable to present-day conditions, and that as reform was urgently needed the sooner it was seriously undertaken the better it would be for all concerned.

The editor expresses agreement with the opinion of Sir Subramaniyar Iyer as to the need for the abolition of the existing practice of child marriage, and with his expression of wonder as to "how this un-Arya practice came so firmly to establish itself among the people, and how, in spite of the irresistible evidence to be found in the Shastras as to the propriety of union only between those who are mature enough to enter into matrimony, we so desparately cling to this practice with all its attendant evils."

He approves of the writer's suggestion that the wide diffusion of education was needed in order to banish this evil from India.

Social reform.

ADVOCATE, 14th January 1912.

The editor is not prepared to endorse in their entirety the suggestions of the writer regarding religious education.

AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 16th January 1912.

Government and the caste system in India.

98. A correspondent, signing himself "AZAD," contributes an article to the Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 16th January 1912, in which he observes that the caste system has been in vogue in India for such a long time that it cannot be abolished easily, and that no exception can be taken to the interference on the part of the just British Government with the caste system, seeing that the aim of Government is to grant equal privileges to its Indian subjects. He observes that the policy of the British Government in not restricting any profession to any particular community, which is the principle underlying caste system, has more adversely affected the clerical class of India than any other caste, and suggests that in justice to Indians in general it is proper for the just British Government to equalize the number of men in each caste so that Indians may have equal share in different professions.

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 20th January 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 4 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 27th January 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The Italian-Turkish war 77
2. The Italian-Turkish war 77
3. The situation in Persia 77
4. The situation in Persia 77
5. The situation in Persia 77
6. The situation in Persia 77
7. The situation in Persia 78
8. The situation in Turkey and Persia ... 78
9. The situation in Persia 78
10. The situation in Persia 78
11. The situation in Persia 78
12. The situation in Persia 78
13. The situation in Persia 78
14. The situation in China 79
15. The situation in China 79
16. The situation in China 79
17. The situation in China 79
18. Relations between England and Germany 79
19. Russian aggression 79
20. The relation of Japan with other Asiatic countries 79

(b)—Home:

21. The Royal visit to India 80
22. The Royal visit to India 80
23. The Royal visit to India 80
24. The Royal visit to India 80
25. The Royal visit to India 81
26. The coronation darbar 81
27. The Royal boons 81

Page.

28. Distribution by Their Imperial Majesties of seventy thousand rupees among charitable institutions 81
29. The Honours' list... 81
30. The Gaekwar incident 82
31. The change of Capital 82
32. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 82
33. The annulment of the partition of Bengal and Muhammadans 82
34. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 83
35. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 83
36. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 83
37. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 83
38. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 83
39. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 84
40. The Indian National Congress ... 84
41. The Indian National Congress ... 84
42. Muhammadans and the Indian National Congress 84
43. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 84
44. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 84
45. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 84
46. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 85

		Page.
47.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar...	85
48.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	85
49.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	85
50.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	85
51.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	85
52.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	86
53.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	86
54.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	86
55.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	86
56.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	86
57.	The successor of the late Sir Krishnaswami Aiyar	86
58.	The Executive Council in Madras ...	87
59.	Legislative Council in the United Provinces	87
60.	Separate representation of Muhammadans in the new Bengal Legislative Council	87
61.	The Indian Press Act	87
62.	The Indian Press Act	87
63.	Complaint against the Pioneer (Allahabad) and the Times (London) ...	87
64.	The labour trouble in England ...	87
65.	Self-government in India	88
66.	The Governorship of Bengal	88
67.	Mr. Bepin Chandra Pal	88

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

68.	The coronation boon in Jhind State ...	88

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

69.	Restriction in enrolment as pleaders in the Punjab	88
70.	The judiciary in India	89

(b)—Police:

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

71.	Imposition of house tax in Banda ...	89
72.	House tax in Kakori, Lucknow ...	89
73.	Alleged inadequate representation of Muhammadans on the Municipal Board, Bareilly	89
74.	A complaint against the members of the Municipal Board, Bijnor	89
75.	Members of district boards	89
76.	The Cawnpore Municipal Board ...	90

(e)—Education:

77.	Education for prisoners in jails ...	90
78.	Education for prisoners in jails ...	90
79.	The proposed Hindu University ...	90
80.	The proposed Muhammadan University	90
81.	Female education...	90
82.	The King-Emperor's reply to the Calcutta University address	91
83.	Supply of lists of marks in various subjects by the Punjab University ...	91

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

84.	The Vaishyas and agriculture and cattle breeding	91

(g)—General:

85.	The swadeshi movement	91
86.	The Co-operative Credit Societies ...	91
87.	Hindi as the national script	91
88.	Kayasths in government service ...	91
89.	Certain concessions to Burma Ruby Mines Company	92
90.	Madh Uttar should be substituted for the name "United Provinces of Agra and Oudh"	92
91.	The courts of pargana officers ...	92

V.—LEGISLATION.

92.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	92
93.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	92
94.	The Agra Estates Bill	92

VI.—RAILWAY.

Nil.

VII.—POST OFFICE.

95.	Value payable orders	93
96.	Value payable orders	93

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

97.	The cow-protection movement ...	93
98.	The cow-protection movement ...	93
99.	Relations between the Sunnis and Shias...	93
100.	Relations between the Sunnis and Shias...	93
101.	The Indian sadhus	93
102.	The Magh mela	93
103.	The sanctity of the Qoran	93
104.	Islam in England...	94
105.	Jehad in Islam	94
106.	Pollution by touch and Muhammadans...	94
107.	Muharram in Budaun	94
108.	Pilgrimage to Mecca	94
109.	The gurukul at Hardwar (Kangri) ...	94
110.	Party feeling in the Arya Samaj ...	94
111.	The position of women in the West ...	94

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st January 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 ,,
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	35 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	300 ,,
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 ,,
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 ,,
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 ,,
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Párai (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 ,,
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 ,,
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 ,,
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 ,,
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 ,,
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	300 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 ,,
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 ,,
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 ,,
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 ,,
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 ,,
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 ,,
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 ,,
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 ,,
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 ,,
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 ,,
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 ,,
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 ,,
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 ,,
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 ,,
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára	Nánpára (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 39	525 ,,
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 „
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 „
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 „
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 „
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
50	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 „
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 „
52	Al Nasir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 „
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 „
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 „
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 „
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 „
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 „
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 „
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do.	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 „
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 „
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 „
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 „
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 „
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 „
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-úd-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	800 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27... ...	5,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	30 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 ,,
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 ,,
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 ,,
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 ,,
133	Swadesh Bándhavé ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	650 ,,
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman.
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 ,,
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwat ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 ,,
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
142	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 ,,
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 ,,
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 ,,
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	8,000 ,,
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Surma-i-Rozgar (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), remarks that the European Powers originally proposed to Turkey that she should accept a sum of £25,000,000 as compensation and give over Tripoli to Italy, but now their proposal is that she should permit the dismemberment of Persia as well as lose Tripoli in return for the £25,000,000.

The Italian-Turkish war.

SURMA-I-ROZGAR, 16th January 1912.

The editor says that such a proposal is preposterous, and that if Turkey does not resist to the utmost before yielding to Italy and accepting the proposals made by European Powers, she will lose the sympathy of the Muhammadans of the world and will bring about her own ruin.

2. A correspondent named Saiyid Muhammad contributes an article to Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd January 1912, in which he takes exception to the remarks made by the Jhang Sial (Jhang) which attributed the inactivity of the Turks in the beginning of the Italian-Turkish war to their cowardice.

The Italian-Turkish war.

AL BASHIR, 23rd January 1912.

He states that the entire European press is loud in its praise of the heroism and fortitude of the small Turkish force in Tripoli, while the editors of the Jhang Sial and other Hindu newspapers refuse to recognize the real facts.

3. The Surma-i-Rozgar (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), reproduces the article entitled "The situation in Persia," from the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 3rd January 1912 (vide Selections No. 1 of 1912, paragraph 3).

The situation in Persia.

SURMA-I-ROZGAR, 16th January 1912.

4. One Zuriat Husain of Agra contributes an article to the Surma-i-Rozgar (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), in which he condemns the aggression of Italy and Russia in Tripoli and Persia respectively, and asks the Muhammadans to arouse themselves and to realise the situation they are placed in.

The situation in Persia.

SURMA-I-ROZGAR, 16th January 1912.

He urges his co-religionists to subscribe liberally towards the relief of widows and children of the Turkish soldiers killed and wounded in Tripoli, and expresses gratification that Government has granted permission to raise such subscriptions.

5. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), denounces the Russian aggression in Persia, and expresses appreciation of the change which has been effected in public opinion in England with regard to Persian affairs.

The situation in Persia.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 18th January 1912.

The editor observes that no agreement between Russia and England is likely to last, because the former is a faithless, unjust and tyrannical power, and he counsels the British Government to refrain from making any agreement or convention with Russia in future.

6. The Kaisar-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), publishes a leading article on the situation in Persia, in which the editor remarks that not merely Muhammadans but all humanely inclined men are disgusted at the alleged Russian atrocities in Persia. In this connection he observes as follows: "It is strange that dishonesty, violation of treaties, and treachery are called culture and civilization; that oppressing the helpless and despoiling the weak are regarded as the characteristics of a civilized and educated nation, and that the age in which vows are taken to usurp the rights of weak and subject races by means of cunning devices is regarded as the age of progress." He expresses regret that Persia, in spite of a glorious past, should be torn to pieces by the claws of the savage Russian bear. He remarks that the Muhammadans all over the world are greatly distressed at the aggression of Russia in Persia, and that the interests of India are also at stake, seeing that Russia cannot be expected to abide by any treaty or convention she may enter upon.

The situation in Persia.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 18th January 1912.

AL MUSHIR, 18th January 1912.

7. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), reviewing the situation in Persia and Tripoli, remarks that European Powers do not consider it necessary to observe international laws when dealing with non-Christian Powers.

The situation in Persia.

The editor urges his co-religionists to arouse themselves and to see the affliction which is befalling Islam on every side, and observes that flagrant acts of aggression by European Powers against Muhammadan kingdoms are being countenanced by the whole of Europe in spite of its civilization, justice and fair play.

OUDH AKHBAR, 19th January 1912.

8. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), refers to the situation in Turkey and in Persia, and remarks that the European Powers seem to take pleasure in the Italian-Turkish war, as they made no attempt to dissuade either country from going to war. The editor observes that the action of Persia in yielding to the demands of Russia show that Persia is willing to act according to the advice of Russia, and remarks that the alleged commission of atrocities in Persia after her demands had been satisfied shows that Russia's main object is to weaken Persia beyond measure.

The situation in Turkey and Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th January 1912.

9. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th January 1912, expresses agreement with the views of Lord Lamington that it is better to keep Persia as a buffer state than to allow Russia to establish her supremacy at Teheran. The editor suggests that Persia will only be relieved of her present troubles in the event of complications arising in the relations between Russia and England with regard to Persia.

The situation in Persia.

LEADER, 23rd January 1912.

10. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 23rd January 1912, supports the views of the Englishman (Calcutta) about the apprehensions entertained by the Indian Muhammadans and by the Amir of Afghanistan with reference to the British attempts to restore order and safeguard trade in Southern Persia, and remarks that the Muhammadans would be less than human not to be hurt by the very unceremonious manner in which a country still on the list of independent nations is being disposed of for no fault except that for the moment it is weak while its neighbours have power, strength and money.

The situation in Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 23rd January 1912.

11. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 23rd January 1912, remarks that the action of Persia in yielding to the demands of Russia and in promising that she will not in future appoint any foreigner without the permission of Russia and England, shows that she is desirous of peace. The editor observes that, now that Persia has accepted the demands of Russia, the danger is averted of the two great Powers coming into conflict with each other, as was apprehended by Lord Lamington. He points out that some of the Englishmen have expressed their sympathy with Persia and remarks that their attitude towards Persia augurs well for that country.

The situation in Persia.

MASHRIQ, 23rd January 1912.

12. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd January 1912, denounces the Russian and Italian aggression in Persia and Tripoli respectively, and remarks that such a state of affairs is the result of the many differences and misunderstandings between the different Muhammadan peoples.

The situation in Persia.

The editor observes that Persia is in danger of losing her independence, while the fate of Turkey also is hanging in the balance, and he exhorts his co-religionists to sink all differences of opinion and to become a united body.

SAR PANCH, 25th January 1912.

13. The Sar Panch (Shahjahanpur), of the 25th January 1912, expresses regret at the situation in Persia and says that if the independence of Persia be destroyed, every individual Muhammadan will feel that it concerns him and that the prestige of his community suffers.

The situation in Persia.

The editor exhorts his co-religionists to show the utmost sympathy with their oppressed brethren in Persia, and to help them in every possible way.

14. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that the foreign policy of the Russian Government shows that either Russia is predominant among the European Powers or else that all the European Powers are in agreement to crush the weak and the helpless. The editor observes that there is nothing to justify the demand made by Russia from China with regard to Mongolia, and questions whether Russia has any sense of justice. He expresses surprise that the other Powers have not interfered to prevent Russian aggression, and urges that the Powers should allow the Chinese to settle their own affairs in China, seeing that if peace be effected by the foreign Powers it will not be lasting.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

The situation in China.

15. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), remarks that in Asia, those countries in which efforts have been made for the establishment of a republican form of government, have been chiefly beset with troubles, and the editor expresses the apprehension that China may in the near future lose Mongolia and Tibet. He hopes that the integrity of China may be preserved.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912

The situation in China.

16. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd January 1912, reviewing the situation on China, says that it is not yet time to express gratification at the success of the revolutionaries in China.

MASHRIQ, 23rd January 1912.

The situation in China.

The editor observes that the European Powers do not like a constitutional form of government in any Asiatic country, and that this has been shown by the situation in Persia and affairs in Turkey.

17. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 25th January 1912, referring to the suggestion made by Sir Robert Filton in the Times (London) to appoint Dalai Lama to the throne of Tibet, under the combined protection of the Chinese and the British Governments, says that when the Anglo-Russian convention could not save the integrity of Persia, the Dalai Lama or the Chinese people will have little security of non-interference in the internal affairs of Tibet by the Chinese Government.

AL MUSHIR, 25th January 1912.

The situation in China.

18. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), expresses regret at the strained relations between England and Germany and suggests that Germany, before waging war with England, should try to improve her condition. The editor observes that the well-being of the world depends upon the continuance of harmonious relations between the various European Powers, failing which the state of Europe will become as bad as that of Asia after the Mahabharat.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

Relations between England and Germany.

19. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, refers to the unsuccessful manner in which Russia tries to appropriate the territories of neighbouring kingdoms, and remarks that, despite its past bitter experiences, it has again begun to make encroachments for the expansion of its Empire. The editor states that the Russian Government is not content with the acquisition of the northern half of Persia, but desires to establish its suzerainty in Mongolia as well. He observes that "Russia ought not to forget Korea and Manchuria too."

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

Russian aggression.

20. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), expresses regret that Japan did not help the Asiatic kingdoms which, encouraged by the wonderful successes achieved by Japan, desired to follow its example. The editor observes that the European Powers, which were anxiously watching the reawakening in Asia caused by the successes of Japan, sought pretexts to interfere in the internal administration of the countries, which were passing through a state of transition, and endeavoured to establish their supremacy there. He says that the interests of Japan will be at stake in case disturbances occur on the coast of China, and asks Japan to help other Asiatic countries in the maintenance of peace and order if she has regard for the prosperity of Asia as well as for her own safety.

OUDH AKHBAR, 19th January 1912.

The relation of Japan with other Asiatic countries.

AL MUSHIR, 18th January 1912.

7. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), reviewing the situation in Persia and Tripoli, remarks that European Powers do not consider it necessary to observe international laws when dealing with non-Christian Powers.

The situation in Persia.

The editor urges his co-religionists to arouse themselves and to see the affliction which is befalling Islam on every side, and observes that flagrant acts of aggression by European Powers against Muhammadan kingdoms are being countenanced by the whole of Europe in spite of its civilization, justice and fair play.

OUDH AKHBAR, 19th January 1912.

8. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), refers to the situation in Turkey and in Persia, and remarks that the European Powers seem to take pleasure in the Italian-Turkish war, as they made no attempt to dissuade either country from going to war. The editor observes that the action of Persia in yielding to the demands of Russia show that Persia is willing to act according to the advice of Russia, and remarks that the alleged commission of atrocities in Persia after her demands had been satisfied shows that Russia's main object is to weaken Persia beyond measure.

The situation in Turkey and Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th January 1912.

9. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th January 1912, expresses agreement with the views of Lord Lamington that it is better to keep Persia as a buffer state than to allow Russia to establish her supremacy at Teheran. The editor suggests that Persia will only be relieved of her present troubles in the event of complications arising in the relations between Russia and England with regard to Persia.

The situation in Persia.

LEADER, 23rd January 1912.

10. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 23rd January 1912, supports the views of the Englishman (Calcutta) about the apprehensions entertained by the Indian Muhammadans and by the Amir of Afghanistan with reference to the British attempts to restore order and safeguard trade in Southern Persia, and remarks that the Muhammadans would be less than human not to be hurt by the very unceremonious manner in which a country still on the list of independent nations is being disposed of for no fault except that for the moment it is weak while its neighbours have power, strength and money.

The situation in Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 23rd January 1912.

11. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 23rd January 1912, remarks that the action of Persia in yielding to the demands of Russia and in promising that she will not in future appoint any foreigner without the permission of Russia and England, shows that she is desirous of peace. The editor observes that, now that Persia has accepted the demands of Russia, the danger is averted of the two great Powers coming into conflict with each other, as was apprehended by Lord Lamington. He points out that some of the Englishmen have expressed their sympathy with Persia and remarks that their attitude towards Persia augurs well for that country.

The situation in Persia.

MASHRIQ, 23rd January 1912.

12. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd January 1912, denounces the Russian and Italian aggression in Persia and Tripoli respectively, and remarks that such a state of affairs is the result of the many differences and misunderstandings between the different Muhammadan peoples.

The situation in Persia.

The editor observes that Persia is in danger of losing her independence, while the fate of Turkey also is hanging in the balance, and he exhorts his co-religionists to sink all differences of opinion and to become a united body.

SAR PANCH, 25th January 1912.

13. The Sar Panch (Shahjahanpur), of the 25th January 1912, expresses regret at the situation in Persia and says that if the independence of Persia be destroyed, every individual Muhammadan will feel that it concerns him and that the prestige of his community suffers.

The situation in Persia.

The editor exhorts his co-religionists to show the utmost sympathy with their oppressed brethren in Persia, and to help them in every possible way.

14. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that the foreign policy of the Russian Government shows that either Russia is predominant among the European Powers or else that all the European Powers are in agreement to crush the weak and the helpless. The editor observes that there is nothing to justify the demand made by Russia from China with regard to Mongolia, and questions whether Russia has any sense of justice. He expresses surprise that the other Powers have not interfered to prevent Russian aggression, and urges that the Powers should allow the Chinese to settle their own affairs in China, seeing that if peace be effected by the foreign Powers it will not be lasting.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

The situation in China.

15. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), remarks that in Asia, those countries in which efforts have been made for the establishment of a republican form of government, have been chiefly beset with troubles, and the editor expresses the apprehension that China may in the near future lose Mongolia and Tibet. He hopes that the integrity of China may be preserved.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912

The situation in China.

16. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd January 1912, reviewing the situation on China, says that it is not yet time to express gratification at the success of the revolutionaries in China.

MASHRIQ, 23rd January 1912.

The situation in China.

The editor observes that the European Powers do not like a constitutional form of government in any Asiatic country, and that this has been shown by the situation in Persia and affairs in Turkey.

17. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 25th January 1912, referring to the suggestion made by Sir Robert Filton in the Times (London) to appoint Dalai Lama to the throne of Tibet, under the combined protection of the Chinese and the British Governments, says that when the Anglo-Russian convention could not save the integrity of Persia, the Dalai Lama or the Chinese people will have little security of non-interference in the internal affairs of Tibet by the Chinese Government.

AL MUSHIR, 25th January 1912.

The situation in China.

18. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), expresses regret at the strained relations between England and Germany and suggests that Germany, before waging war with England, should try to improve her condition. The editor observes that the well-being of the world depends upon the continuance of harmonious relations between the various European Powers, failing which the state of Europe will become as bad as that of Asia after the Mahabharat.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

Relations between England and Germany.

19. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, refers to the unsuccessful manner in which Russia tries to appropriate the territories of neighbouring kingdoms, and remarks that, despite its past bitter experiences, it has again begun to make encroachments for the expansion of its Empire. The editor states that the Russian Government is not content with the acquisition of the northern half of Persia, but desires to establish its suzerainty in Mongolia as well. He observes that "Russia ought not to forget Korea and Manchuria too."

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

Russian aggression.

20. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), expresses regret that Japan did not help the Asiatic kingdoms which, encouraged by the wonderful successes achieved by Japan, desired to follow its example. The editor observes that the European Powers, which were anxiously watching the reawakening in Asia caused by the successes of Japan, sought pretexts to interfere in the internal administration of the countries, which were passing through a state of transition, and endeavoured to establish their supremacy there. He says that the interests of Japan will be at stake in case disturbances occur on the coast of China, and asks Japan to help other Asiatic countries in the maintenance of peace and order if she has regard for the prosperity of Asia as well as for her own safety.

OUDH AKHBAR, 19th January 1912.

The relation of Japan with other Asiatic countries.

(b)—Home.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

The Royal visit to India.

21. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that India has risen in the estimation of the people of the world on account of the visit of the King-Emperor to the country. The editor observes that the Royal visit to India shows that in the eyes of His Majesty India occupies a place second only to Great Britain. He goes on to say that it appears that His Majesty came to India only to give it a message of sympathy, hope and unity, so that Indians may be better able to improve their condition.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

The Royal visit to India.

22. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, in its leading article discusses the effects of the Imperial visit to this country. The editor says that the visit is one of historical importance, and that it will surely be remembered as marking an important epoch in the annals of India. He observes that the time at which it was undertaken enhances all the more the importance and significance of the visit. The announcement of the visit at a time when there was tension of feeling between the rulers and the ruled caused both the officials and the people to cease from wrangling and to wait impatiently for the great event. He states that some of the effects of the Imperial visit are substantial, while others are hypothetical. Among the latter are included the change of Capital, the release of criminals, and the remissions of debt. The editor remarks that the effects of such boons cannot be said to be wholly beneficial, unless certain necessary conditions are fulfilled. Among the substantial boons, he says, is the annulment of the partition of Bengal, seeing that the policy underlying this measure was dictated from the highest of considerations, namely, that the Government of India should rectify the mistakes it happened to commit in the administration of the country. He expresses the opinion that this is a hopeful sign, and shows that Government has now come to acknowledge that it is a human institution and as such is liable to error, and that the mission of British rule in India is to improve the lot of its inhabitants. He observes that this masterly stroke of statesmanship will prove an effective deterrent to anarchical crime in future and that it has inspired the people with renewed faith in the intentions of the British Government. He remarks that the other substantial effect of the Imperial visit ought to be the putting of European and Indian subjects on a footing of equality in the British Empire, a matter which His Imperial Majesty always considered during his stay in the country.

TRISHUL, 18th January 1912.

The Royal visit to India.

23. The Trishul (Benares), of the 18th January 1912, publishes an article entitled "India and the watchword of hope" in which the various advantages that have and will accrue to India under British rule are enumerated, and in the course of which the editor expresses the opinion that the Royal guarantee of hope will strengthen and invigorate her endeavours to educate her children to value the august rights and privileges of British citizenship. The editor trusts that the "uncouth differences and distinctions standing for centuries," which have been the direct cause of her political dependence, will give place to a spirit of national unity, which will unite the different races into a compact body, and that the result will ensure the future glory of India. He observes that the watchword of hope will animate her intellectual and moral being to work out her political emancipation under British rule, and he asserts that all the signs of the times presage such a result.

ADVOCATE, 21st January 1912.

The Royal visit to India.

24. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912, in an article entitled "The administration of India," remarks that the British people have now begun to take an interest in Indian affairs, and that many books and articles have been published discussing the Indian administration from various standpoints. This, the editor states, is partly due to the unrest in India and partly to the visit of Their Imperial Majesties the King-Emperor and the Queen-Empress. He discusses Dr. John Beattie Crozier's article on the subject contributed to the current number of the Fortnightly Review and expresses satisfaction that the writer has urged that educated Indians should be given free scope for the fullest fruition of their personal ambitions.

25. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), says that the visit of His Majesty the King-Emperor to India has imposed new responsibilities on British officers in this country. ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 19th January 1912.

The Royal visit to India.

The editor expresses the hope that some compensation will be soon awarded to the Muhammadan community for the injuries which it will sustain by the recent changes effected in the administration of the country, and observes that if British Ministers adopt a more liberal policy with regard to the existing Muhammadan powers it will greatly please the Muhammadan subjects of His Majesty and they will remember with gratitude His Majesty's visit to India.

26. The London correspondent of the Advocate (Lucknow), in his letter published in the issue of the 25th January 1912, refers to the cinematograph pictures of the darbar shown in London, and remarks that the British public particularly wondered at the absence of the crowds which were understood to have hailed the King at every point of his Royal progress. Discussing the Gaekwar incident the writer observes that his critics professed to have found confirmation of what was called the insolence of his behaviour in the pictures, and in this connection he wrote as follows: "But the common sense view is that it was all a mere matter of punctilio. It is doubtful whether half a dozen people among those who witnessed the actual scene placed upon it the sinister construction which the unscrupulous enemies of the Gaekwar have affixed to it. Some men can bow much more gracefully than others, and when it comes to walking backwards any one who has tried to do it even under ordinary circumstances will hesitate to condemn the Gaekwar's omission. At the worst he was only guilty of carelessness and for that his apology—which was accepted by the Viceroy on behalf of His Majesty—is surely a sufficient atonement. It is evidently not so to the Times, for that paper returns to the charge this week with extracts from private letters and an insinuation that the incident aroused a feeling of profound resentment and disgust amongst the ruling chiefs. ADVOCATE, 25th January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

I have no special interest in the Gaekwar of Baroda or any other prince, but I think the way in which His Highness is being persecuted in certain quarters calls for the severest reprobation. Even a Sovereign ruler deserves fair play, and this is just what the Gaekwar's critics refuse to give him. They are magnifying an insignificant episode into an act of high treason, and if some of them would have their way they would hound him from the gadi altogether. The misconduct of the Gaekwar, if such it was, is being exaggerated in a way that is mean and despicable."

27. One Saiyid Ahmad Ali of Mandawar in the district of Bijnor contributes an article to the Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), in which he expresses regret that the Royal boon granting half a month's salary to government servants has not been extended to the clerks attached to the office of honorary magistrates, and asks the District Magistrate of Bijnor to move the authorities in the matter. TOHFA-I-HIND, 18th January 1912.

The Royal boons.

28. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), reproduces an article from the Vakil (Amritsar), in which exception was taken to the distribution by Their Imperial Majesties the King-Emperor and the Queen-Empress of seventy thousand rupees among charitable institutions, on the ground that no money was given to any Muhammadan institution. The editor, commenting on the article, says that no exception would be taken if almost the whole amount had been distributed among Christian charitable institutions, in view of the great number of Christian charitable institutions which are well conducted as compared with Hindu and Muhammadan institutions. HINDUSTANI, 19th January 1912.

Distribution by Their Imperial Majesties of seventy thousand rupees among charitable institutions.

29. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), expresses the opinion that some grave omissions have been made in the list of honours granted on the occasion of the coronation darbar at Delhi. The editor observes AL MUSHIR, 18th January 1912.

The Honours' list.

that people who actually perform no public service, and advertise themselves a great deal and gain the favour of high officials by sycophancy, get titles while the rights of those who do real good to their community and country are ignored, and he refers to the cases of Nawab Mushtaq Husain, Hon'ble Sahibzada Aftab Ahmad Khan and Mr. Aziz Mirza, secretary to the Muslim League.

He also complains that the title of Shams-ul-Ulma is not granted to deserving persons, and suggests that this title should be bestowed on a person whose speeches or compilations have benefited his community or his country, and expresses the hope that in future the Government of India will be more careful when preparing a list of honours.

TAFRIH, 21st January 1912.

The Gaekwar incident.

30. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912, remarks that it is not a matter for surprise that the English newspapers should ascribe disloyal motives to His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda in connection with his omission to render homage in the correct manner to His Majesty the King-Emperor, seeing that on the occasion of the darbar of 1877 a ruling chief was also suspected by the British public of disloyalty, because he left the procession and went to his camp to answer a call of nature.

ADVOCATE, 21st January 1912.

The change of Capital.

31. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912, in an article entitled "The change of Capital," criticises the action of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association in proposing to protest strongly against the change of Capital, and to ask for more extensive European representation on the new Bengal Council, the editor refers to their indifference on the occasion of the partition of Bengal, but concedes that there can be no objection to an extra membership being given to the two bodies, provided that the representation of the non-official members remains undisturbed.

The editor observes that if the Chamber of Commerce were to learn to support Indians with regard to any act done by officials in defiance of non-official public opinion, it would find very few occasions to send protests to Government.

The editor refers to an article recently contributed to the Panjabee (Lahore) in which the writer expressed the apprehension that the Government of India would, when at Delhi, be put out of touch with the Indian public opinion and might adopt an incorrect course from which strong public opinion might have deterred it, and the editor advises the organization of a strong press in Delhi by the Punjab and the United Provinces. He states that public opinion has to be created, and that Government must be made to feel the force of healthy non-official opinion.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

32. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), takes exception to the views expressed by His Highness the Agha Khan to the representative of the Times of India (Bombay), on the effect which the annulment of the partition of Bengal will produce on the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal. The editor observes that mere majority in numbers will do the Muhammadans no good, seeing that although in the Punjab they form the major portion of the population, the Hindus preponderate in every department of public service.

ANAND, 18th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal and Muhammadans.

33. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 18th January 1912, says that the reunion of the two Bengals has undoubtedly given satisfaction to the Bengalis, and that it has removed the causes of unrest in the country. The editor expresses the opinion that these considerations should lead every loyal and patriotic Indian to feel gratified at this Royal boon, and that it was on this account that the European mercantile community of Calcutta and the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, despite their temporary personal losses involved in the change of Capital, acquiesced in the altered arrangements. The editor admits the justice of the demands of the Muhammadans of Bengal for the protection of their rights, but takes exception to the political agitation which is being gratuitously engineered by the Aligarh school of politics in connection with the Royal boons. He endorses the criticism of the Pioneer (Allahabad) on the letter of Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk, which was published in the Aligarh Institute Gazette on the subject. He urges that the threat held out by the Nawab regarding the Muhammadans joining the Congress is altogether based on selfish motives and cannot be expected to prove effective. He observes that Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk and his party are mistaken if they suppose that they have laid the Government under an obligation by keeping themselves aloof from the Congress, and that that body was a disloyal organization. He says that, if the Congress were a seditious body, it would have been stopped long ago, and that if the Muhammadans earned the goodwill of local officers by dissociating themselves from it they must have been rewarded by their co-religionsits being provided liberally with posts in the public service in the gift of those officers.

He concludes with the remark that the letter shows how lacking politicians of the type of Nawab Mushtaq Husain are in qualities of statesmanship.

34. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th January 1912, urges that no opposition should be offered to the measure, seeing that the annulment of the partition of Bengal was announced by the King-Emperor himself. The editor expresses the opinion that the annulment which has been announced after deep and mature consideration cannot adversely affect the interests of any community. He points out that even British statesmen had admitted that the partition of Bengal was an administrative blunder, and says that so far from its annulment showing the weakness of Government, it actually reveals its strength in determining to rectify its errors and to do only what is right. He goes on to say that the annulment of the partition displays the justice of Government and not, as Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk says, any breach of promise on the part of Government.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

35. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th January 1912, refers to the advice given to the Bengalis by a European member of Parliament that they should give their attention to the prevention of political dakaitis in Bengal, and remarks that if the partition of Bengal was the chief reason for the commission of those dakaitis then they may be now expected to cease. The editor expresses the hope that the Bengalis will help their new Governor in administrative matters, and he commends the suggestion that a statue should be erected in honour of Lord Hardinge.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

36. Nawab Haji Ismail Khan of Datauli contributes an article to the Agra Akhbar of the 21st January 1912 in which he expresses approval of the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and observes that as a result of that reform Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal should not expect any injury to their interests. He urges the need for effecting an extension of the education of their community as being the best means of improving their prospects.

AGRA AKHBAR, 21st January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

37. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912, expresses regret that the Muhammadans should have so much resented the annulment of the partition of Bengal. The editor refers to the wish expressed by some of the Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, and observes that such a step would be considered as a threat to Government and that the Hindus do not regard it as a compliment to them.

OUDH AKHBAR, 21st January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

38. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd January 1912, contains another leading article on the annulment of the partition of Bengal, in which, while the editor declares it to be harmful to the interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, he asks his co-religionists not to carry on any agitation against the measure, seeing that it was announced by His Majesty the King-Emperor. He urges the leaders of the Muhammadan community in Eastern Bengal to improve the educational condition of their co-religionists, to approach Government with the request to safeguard their interests, and to specify a certain number of posts in the public service to be allotted to Muhammadans, and in case capable Muhammadans be not forthcoming in the province to import them from other provinces. The editor lays stress on the need for fixing the number of posts for Muhammadans because he thinks this is the only way for safeguarding the interests of Muhammadans and for protecting them from the domination of the Hindus.

AL BASHIR, 23rd January 1912.

OUDH AKHBAR, 26th January 1912.

39. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 26th January 1912, takes exception to the adverse comments made by some journals regarding the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and describes them as unjust. The editor asserts that the Hindus will continue to agitate until equal rights are granted to Hindus and Muhammadans.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 15th January 1912.

40. The Lucknow Gazette of the 15th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), takes exception to the action of Mr. Hassan Imam, Barrister-at-Law, in having invited the Indian National Congress to meet next year at Patna. The editor asserts that it was unwise of Mr. Hassan Imam to ever join the Congress, where such action is opposed to the policy of his co-religionists. He doubts whether any Hindu would leave his community in this way and join another.

The Indian National Congress.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

41. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, refers to the controversy between the Bengalee (Calcutta) and the Amrita Bazar Patrika (Calcutta) regarding the withdrawal by Mr. Gokhale of a resolution put forward by him at the last session of the Congress on the subject of certain amendments in the Congress constitution. The editor expresses surprise that the leaders of the party that caused a split in the Congress ranks at Surat by disregarding the opinion of another stronger party, should announce that they did not observe "the rule of majority" for fear of a disruption in the Congress at its session at Calcutta. The editor asserts that, while he is himself indifferent as to which party has the upper hand in the Congress, there is no doubt that its conveners do not always observe the rules and regulations by which such a body should be guided.

The Indian National Congress.

MUSAFIR, 19th January 1912.

42. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), reproduces an article from the Zamindar (Lahore) in which the Muhammadans were asked to consider the advisability of joining the Congress movement, and remarks that the wish expressed by Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress is not complimentary to it, seeing that the change in their attitude towards the Congress is only in the nature of a threat to Government.

Muhammadans and the Indian National Congress.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

43. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), refers to the desire of the Muhammadans to co-operate with the Hindus, and remarks that the Hindus should not receive them unless they are willing to make some sacrifice for their past folly. The editor expresses gratification that the Muhammadans of Behar have so far realised their mistake that they have resolved to stop cow-killing in order to effect a rapprochement with the Hindus, while the latter in their turn will not interfere in the celebration of religious festivals by Muhammadans. He cordially approves of the Hindus co-operating with the Muhammadans, provided that the latter do away with their sectarian institutions which came into existence as a result of the strained relations between them and the Hindus.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 15th January 1912.

44. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 15th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), refers to the speech of His Majesty in which he observed that he would consider that the object of his coming out to India had been accomplished if all the Indian communities made up their differences and lived in amity with one another, and expresses regret that some of the Hindu newspapers should have accentuated the differences between Hindus and Muhammadans by severely criticising the article contributed to the Aligarh Institute Gazette by Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk asking Muhammadans not to join the Indian National Congress.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

45. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, discusses the Hindu-Muhammadan problem in the light of the resolutions passed at the Muhammadan conference, which was held at Calcutta in the last week of December 1911, and remarks that the Hindus are always ready to join hands with the Muhammadans, while that the latter have always endeavoured to keep themselves aloof. The editor suggests that the reason for this is that the Hindus give all their devotion to India, the Muhammadans have an almost equal regard for Turkey and Persia. He expresses the opinion that the Indian Muhammadans have received a rude shock owing to those two countries having been humiliated, and that some of them are therefore urging their co-religionists to effect a rapprochement with the Hindus. He remarks that the Hindu community is well-known for its forbearing and forgiving nature, and it will not therefore refuse to join hands with the Muhammadan community, forgetting all differences of the past, provided the latter make advances in all sincerity for the good of the country. He says that a rapprochement based on selfish motives will neither be useful nor lasting.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

46. A correspondent signing himself "HAFIZ" contributes an article to the Kaisar-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), in which he refers to the strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, and denies that the matter of cow-killing, the alleged oppression of Hindus by Muhammadan rulers, the religious differences, and the principle of pollution by touch obtaining among Hindus are the causes of estrangement between the two communities. He observes that after a careful examination of the facts that are generally regarded as the causes of the estrangement between Hindus and Muhammadans he has formed the opinion that it is due to a misunderstanding of the principles of nationality. In conclusion he urges Hindus and Muhammadans to forget their religious and communal differences and to work together.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 18th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

47. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), expresses gratification that the Hindu and Muhammadan leaders of Behar have proposed to take steps to effect a rapprochement between the two communities. The editor expresses the wish that the Hindus and Muhammadans of Bengal, the Punjab and the United Provinces may follow their excellent example.

MUSAFIR, 19th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar.

48. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912, says that Nawab Mushtaq Husain is wrong in contending that Muhammadans will dissolve their national organization by joining the Congress movement like a river passing into the ocean. He describes the various disadvantages which have resulted to both Hindus and Muhammadans from the estrangement between them, and asks Nawab Mushtaq Husain not to do anything calculated to accentuate the differences between the two communities. He concludes by saying that Hindus and Muhammadans should now live in friendship and work for the good of India.

TAFRIH, 21st January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

49. The Lucknow Gazette of the 15th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), takes exception to the remarks made by the Tafrih (Lucknow) (vide Selections No. 3 of 1912, paragraph 50), about the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain, which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13). The editor says that the letter was a very moderate one on the subject of the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and he expresses regret that the editor of the Tafrih should have lost sight of the reprehensible agitation carried on by his co-religionists in Bengal over the partition.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 15th January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

50. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), referring to the letter from Mr. Raza Ali, which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1911, about the future policy of Indian Musalmans, remarks that the letter was the result of the excitement and shock caused by the succession of misfortunes to Muhammadans in Tripoli and Persia and in the annulment of the partition of Bengal.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor observes that the present policy of Sir Edward Grey with regard to Persian affairs is not only detrimental to the Muhammadan kingdom of Persia but to the British Government as well, and he asks his co-religionists to follow the policy adopted by their former leader, the late Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan, and to refrain from joining the Indian National Congress.

51. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), referring Mr. Raza Ali's letter on the future policy of Indian Musalmans, which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad) of the 4th January 1912, advises the Muhammadans never to join the Indian National Congress.

SAHIFA, 19th January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor observes that the views expressed in the letter are those of an inexperienced young man, and he asks his co-religionists to follow the advice given to them by Nawab Mushtaq Husain in his letter which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13).

UNION GAZETTE, 21st January 1912.

52. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 21st January 1912, urges the need for the Muhammadans of India to strictly follow the principles of their religion as being essential to their progress.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor asserts that the leader of Indian Muhammadans are sycophants, and men whose sole wish is not to serve their community but also to effect personal aggrandizement.

ZUL QARNAIN, 21st January 1912.

53. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 21st January 1912, takes strong exception to the wish expressed by some of the Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress. The editor says that it is to the interest of Muhammadans that they should keep aloof from the Congress, and he urges his co-religionists to depend on their own exertions for their political progress.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

AL BASHIR, 23rd January 1912.

54. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd January 1912, publishes a contributed article, in which the writer refers to the wish expressed by certain inexperienced Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, and describes this wish as suicidal.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

He says that the political aims and views of Hindus and Muhammadans can never be identical, and he expresses apprehension that if Muhammadans on the impulse of the moment join the Congress, they will become extremist in their views, so that he advises them to keep aloof from the Congress for the sake of their own interests.

He remarks that the Muhammadan leaders will be best able to guide their young men, and he deprecates any change in their long-established policy merely because Government, in spite of the acknowledged loyalty of the Muhammadans, sacrificed their interests to gain the favour of agitators.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 24th January 1912.

55. Haji Musa Khan of Aligarh contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 24th January 1912 in which he refers to the suggestion made in several journals that the Muhammadans of India should not sympathize with the Muhammadan sufferers in Tripoli and Persia, and says that the religion of Muhammad teaches his followers to consider one another as brethren, and for that reason objection should not be raised to the sympathy shown by Indian Muhammadans with their co-religionists in Tripoli and Persia. As regards the wish expressed by certain Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, he characterizes the wish as injudicious and as sacrifying their self-respect, and he urges that Muhammadans should have a separate institution to safeguard their interests to voice their grievances and to demand their rights, and he advises his co-religionists to depend for their salvation on their own exertions.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

OUDH AKHBAR, 25th January 1912.

56. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 25th January 1912, referring to the wish expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, commends the proposal, but reminds that community that unity between the Hindus and Muhammadans is only possible when the latter forego their claims of political importance.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

57. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, discussing the question of the successor of the late Sir Krishnaswami Aiyar on the Madras Executive Council, mentions that there is a rumour to the effect that a Eurasian or Anglo-Indian barrister has been recommended by the Madras Government for the post, who is said to be a man of no special qualifications and one who has never taken an active interest in public affairs. The editor remarks that if this rumour be correct, it may be said that there is no one in the Madras Government who can distinguish between jewel and shell.

The successor of the late Sir Krishnaswami Aiyar.

LEADER, 25th January 1912.

The Executive Council in Madras.

58. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th January 1912, discusses the observations made by the Madras Mail on the subject of "Executive councillors and administrative experience," and remarks that the Indian reform party can be better represented by a leader of public life than by a "sun-dried bureaucrat," though he may be an Indian, and that official experience is not a requisite qualification for an executive councillor.

The editor observes that the Indian community will be satisfied with any appointment made on Lord Carmichael's recommendation.

LEADER, 24th January 1912.

Legislative Council in the United Provinces.

59. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th January 1912, referring to the last meeting of the United Provinces Legislative Council, remarks:—

"Among the absent members was the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, who is too busy with the Hindu University work to give time to his duties as an elected member of the Legislative Council. We yield to none in our high appreciation of the noble unselfishness which informs all of the Pandit's work or in our recognition of the importance of his new labours, but systematic inattention to Council work virtually amounts to the disfranchizing of the constituency which has the honour to be represented by him. The position will be admitted by all to be unsatisfactory."

LEADER, 25th January 1912.

Separate representation of Muhammadans in the new Bengal Legislative Council.

60. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th January 1912, refers to the meeting recently held by the Muhammadans in Bengal and suggests the advisability of Bengali Hindus in not opposing the retention by Muhammadans of their separate representation on the new Bengal Legislative Council, but urges the need for resisting their claim to the right to participate in the general electorate.

Referring to other claims of separatism made by the Central National Muhammadan Association with respect to education and other matters, the editor remarks that they are likely to create difficult administrative problems and that Government will be obliged to declare that the separatist mania is passing all bounds.

AL MUSHIR, 18th January 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

61. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), expresses regret that no boon was granted to the Indian press in commemoration of the coronation darbar at Delhi, and draws the attention of His Excellency the Governor General to the omission.

The editor expresses the hope that the severity with which the press has been treated owing to the new Press Act may be relaxed.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th January 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

62. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), says that in view of the fact that the partition of Bengal is annulled and the whole country is now peaceful there is no necessity for the existence of the new Press Act. The editor suggests that in case the repealing of the Act be inadvisable it should be so modified that publishers of new journals be not required to furnish security and that the existence of the old ones be not dependent on the will of the district authorities.

UNION GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

Complaint against the Pioneer (Allahabad) and the Times (London).

63. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), says that the writings of the Pioneer (Allahabad) and the Times (London) are always inimical to the interests of Asiatics in general and of Muhammadans in particular. The editor condemns the aggression of Russia in Persia and the policy of Sir Edward Grey with regard to Persian affairs.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

The labour trouble in England.

64. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, refers to the labour trouble in England, and remarks that the dissatisfication of workmen does not augur well for the future of that country. The editor also refers to the miserable condition of labourers and artizans in India, and points out that, as they are uneducated, they are not dissatisfied with their degenerate condition, whereas those of England are discontented because they are educated.

HINDUSTANI, 19th January 1912.

Self-government in India.

65. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), reproduces an article on the subject of the colonial form of self-government in India from the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), and says that the grant of self-government on colonial lines to India is only a question of time. The editor observes that, considering that British rule is directed to the safeguarding of liberty and justice and to winning the hearts of the subjects, the grant of self-government on colonial lines to India is not an absurdity and that that form of government will be introduced in the country as soon as Indians show themselves fit for it.

LEADER, 23rd January 1912.

The Governorship of Bengal.

66. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 23rd January 1912, has the following :—

"We frankly own we do not know why Lord Carmichael should be asked to exchange Madras for Bengal. He arrived in Madras less than three months ago and spent a fortnight out of this period at the darbar at Delhi. Madras and Bombay are both Governorships with equal status and emoluments, while good work informed by Liberal principles is essential no less in Madras than in Bengal. Only one explanation suggests itself to us, i.e. that Lord Carmichael is Lord Crewe's favourite. Among the first acts of the noble Marquess at the Colonial Office was to send his friend to Australia as a Governor. One of his earliest acts at the India Office was to appoint him to Madras. Now that a new government is created, again it is Lord Carmichael who has been preferred. We can only hope that he will justify Lord Crewe's faith in him. Meanwhile, our Madras friends will begin to speculate once more as to who will be their next Governor."

OUDH AKHBAR, 24th January 1912.

Mr. Bepin Chandra Pal.

67. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 24th January 1912, expresses regret at a reported dispute between the police and Mr. Bepin Chandra Pal on the occasion of His Majesty the King-Emperor's visit to Calcutta.

The editor observes that the action of the police on the occasion was unjustifiable, seeing that Mr. Bepin Chandra Pal had adopted moderate views.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th January 1912.

The coronation boon in Jhind state.

68. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), expresses approval of the action of the Maharaja of Jhind in having allowed his Muhammadan subjects to sound the azan in their mosques, as one of the boons granted by him in his state in honour of the King-Emperor's coronation darbar at Delhi.

The editor trusts that other Hindu states will follow the example set by the Maharaja, and he complains that the Sikhs of Chauharkana in the district of Gujranwala (Punjab) do not allow the Muhammadans to sound the azan in their mosques.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

Restriction in enrolment as pleaders in the Punjab.

69. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), referring to the letter addressed by the officiating Registrar of the Punjab University, to the Principal, Law College, Lahore, on the subject of restricting the enrolment of LL.Bs. as pleaders in the Punjab, expresses surprise that the Hon'ble Judges of the Chief Court should have decided to restrict the number of Indians in an independent profession. The editor reminds educated Indians that there are some people who resent the admission of Indians in large numbers to independent professions.

The judiciary in India.

70. Referring to the judgment of Mr. E. deM. Humphries, District Magistrate of Bulandshahr, in a bad livelihood case, in which he remarked that an oriental population cares nothing for guilt or innocence and has simply no conception that either duty or self-interest calls upon it to give true evidence, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), observes that no good can result either to Government or to the people by entrusting judicial work to officers of the type of Mr. Humphries. The editor expresses the hope that Government will give a proper admonition to officers like Mr. Humphries, as otherwise the desire of His Majesty that "unity and concord may for the future govern the daily relations of private and public life" in India will not be realised.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

Imposition of house tax in Banda.

71. A correspondent, signing himself "A RESIDENT OF BANDA," contributes an article to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), in which he remarks that the announcement by beat of drum made on behalf of the Banda Municipality regarding the proposed imposition of house tax in the city, has been received with dissatisfaction by the people. He remarks that in view of the poverty of the people the Municipal Board of Banda should not impose a house tax there.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

House tax in Kakori, Lucknow.

72. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 22nd January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer remarks that, though Government has sanctioned the payment of the salaries of chaukidars from the government treasury, and the application of house taxes to improve the sanitary condition of towns, yet no amendment has been made in the Act relating to house tax. He suggests that the disbursement of money realised from house tax should be entrusted to an overseer instead of a low paid bakhshi. He complains that of the two Hindu house tax panchas of Kakori, Lucknow, one is the uncle of the other, and that of the three Muhammadan panchas one is of fifteen years' standing. He draws the attention of the Deputy Commissioner and the tahsildar to the matter, and asks them to remove the grievance of the people of Kakori when the next election of panchas takes place.

HINDUSTANI, 22nd January 1912.

Alleged inadequate representation of Muhammadans on the Municipal Board, Bareilly.

73. One Saiyid Muhammad Abdul Wadud contributes an article to the Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), in which he complains that although Muhammadans form the major portion of the population of Bareilly town they are not represented adequately on its municipal board.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th January 1912.

A complaint against the members of the Municipal Board, Bijnor.

74. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), refers to an order recently passed by the members of the Municipal Board, Bijnor, restricting the sale of beef which the editor characterizes as unjust, and says that it was only passed because there was a majority of Hindus on the board.

SAHIFA, 19th January 1912.

Members of district boards.

75. One Muhammad Shabbir Hasan Mohsin contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 26th January 1912, in which he complains that there is a class of men who obtain their election as members of district boards by gaining the good will of tahsildars and deputy collectors, and that such persons, when they become members, use their position for their own personal benefit.

HINDUSTANI, 26th January 1912.

LEADER, 26th January 1912.

The Cawnpore Municipal Board.

76. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 26th January 1912, refers to a controversy which has recently occurred between certain members of the Cawnpore Municipal Board and the chairman, and criticises the action of the latter in excluding press representatives from the meeting, at which the protests were publicly made by the members of the board against his order closing the Parade bazaar.

In the course of this article the following passage occurs:—

"It is unfortunately clear that it is necessary for the Government to make an impartial examination of the state of affairs there and bringing about a better situation than at present prevails. The best arrangement will, of course, be that Cawnpore, as all other cities wherever this is not absolutely impossible, should be allowed an elected non-official chairman, with a whole-time executive officer under the board to carry on the daily work of the municipality, as is the case in Bombay. This is the arrangement recommended by the Royal Commission on Decentralization, and His Honour Sir John Hewett will earn the sincere thanks of the community if, before he lays down the reins of his high office, as he will do a few months hence, he will take steps to introduce it in the larger cities of the United Provinces."

(e)—Education.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 23rd January 1912.

Education for prisoners in jails.

77. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 23rd January 1912, expresses regret that no arrangement is made for the education of adult prisoners in jails. The editor observes that if prisoners be given secular combined with religious instruction in jails, there will be a considerable decrease in the number of crimes committed every year. He expresses approval of the action of the Madras Government which has circularized the jail authorities to provide means for the instruction of their prisoners, and trusts that its action will be followed by all the provincial Governments.

OUDH AKHBAR, 15th January 1912.

Educ ation for prisoners in jails.

78. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 15th January 1912, expresses approval of the action of the Government of Madras which has allowed experiments to be made in giving instruction to the prisoners in the Rajmandri and Cananore jails. The editor expresses the hope that the education given to prisoners will tend to decrease.

LEADER, 21st January 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

79. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st January 1912, publishes an article contributed by Lala Baijnath suggesting the establishment of one daily paper capable of voicing Indian opinion, of a branch of the Servants of India Society and of a college on non-sectarian lines in Delhi, as well as the restoration of the Delhi Hindu College to the B.A. standard. Reproducing a contributed article from the Amrita Bazar Patrika (Calcutta), which suggests that the Hindu University should be founded in Delhi instead of at Benares, the editor expresses the opinion that Delhi as the Imperial city and Metropolis of India should be the seat for the All-India Hindu University, and that the money proposed to be spent on the expansion of the Central Hindu College, Benares, should be applied to the improvement and enlargement of the Delhi Hindu College.

MASHRIQ, 23rd January 1912.

The proposed Muhammadan University.

80. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd January 1912, takes exception to the Hon'ble Mr. Butler's demand made to the supporters of the proposed Muhammadan University scheme that they should first collect thirty-five lakhs of rupees and then ask Government for the grant of a university Charter.

The editor says that twenty-five lakhs of rupees, combined with the capitalized value of the present income of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, will be sufficient to start the university work, and he asks Government to remove the restriction of thirty-five lakhs.

LEADER, 25th January 1912.

Female education.

81. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th January 1912, in an article on "Public instruction in the United Provinces" advocates the education of girls on a more extensive scale, and, while emphasizing the importance of the movement, asks Government to make more liberal grants towards female education than has hitherto been done. The editor denies the truth of the statement that there is no demand for the education of girls, and says that the Arya Samaj have started girls' schools in nearly every district in the province. He is of opinion that if more funds were forthcoming more teachers could be trained, more girls enrolled and more done in the direction of zenana instruction.

82. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, expresses approval of the King-Emperor's reply to the Calcutta University address, and remarks that the ideal sketched by His Imperial Majesty should be the ideal of every Indian University. The editor observes that it is needless to mention that the existing official universities do not and cannot act up to this ideal.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

The King-Emperor's reply to the Calcutta University address.

83. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 23rd January 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Punjab University in ruling that an examinee can be supplied with a list of marks received by him in the various subjects in which he has been examined by the University, provided he pays a fee of five rupees. The editor, however, objects that this rule will only benefit rich students and he asks the University authorities either to supply the list of marks to poor students without charging any fee or to supply the list to all examinees after charging a moderate and reasonable fee from all of them.

OUDH AKHBAR, 23rd January 1912.

Supply of lists of marks in various subjects by the Punjab University.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

84. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), contains a contributed article, in which the writer refers to the presidential speech delivered by the Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh at the Vaishya Maha Sabha asking the Vaishyas to take to agriculture, cattle breeding and commerce, as being their ancestral professions. He draws the attention of the president of the Vaishya Maha Sabha to the fact that the Vaishyas of the Punjab have been excluded from the class of agriculturists by the Punjab Land Alienation Act, and asks him to request the Punjab Government not to prevent by legislation the Vaishyas from following their ancestral profession. He points out that the exclusion of the Vaishyas from the class of agriculturists prevents them from cattle breeding also, and he suggests that the president of the Vaishya Maha Sabha should move the Punjab Government in the matter of helping the Vaishyas in cattle breeding.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

The Vaishyas and agriculture and cattle breeding.

(g)—General.

85. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), remarks that the revival of Indian industries can only be brought about by means of the swadeshi movement. The editor expresses regret that the imports of foreign goods in the month of November last was large as compared with those of the corresponding month of the preceding year. He asks Indians not to purchase foreign goods at all, as otherwise much harm will result to the country.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

The swadeshi movement.

86. One Raghubir Saran of Dehra Dun contributes an article to the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), in which he expresses regret that, unlike the people of other civilized countries, Indians should prefer service to commercial enterprise, and he lays great stress upon the usefulness of Co-operative Credit Societies. He advises his countrymen to take advantage of the Co-operative system.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

The Co-operative Credit Societies.

87. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), expresses regret at the want of interest exhibited by the Hindus in the propagation of the Hindi language, in spite of the fact that they form the major portion of the population of India and he urges them to realise the duty which they owe to it.

RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

Hindi as the national script.

88. Referring to the government circular regarding the adequate representation of all Indian communities in government service, the Kayasth Hitkari (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), advices the Kayasths to take to trade. The editor concedes that it is only fair on the part of Government to give

KAYASTH HITKARI, 16th January 1912.

Kayasths in government service.

equal shares to all communities in government service, although he contends that the qualification and not the caste of a candidate should be taken into consideration at the time of filling any appointment.

LEADER, 21st January 1912.

Certain concessions to Burma Ruby Mines Company.

89. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st January 1912, refers to the report that Lord Crewe had agreed to remit certain arrears of rent and other debts to the Burma Ruby Mines Company, expresses the hope that the Secretary of State will have no objection to rendering similar help to other concerns more or less similarly situated, which can make out a case for themselves.

HINDUSTANI, 22nd January 1912.

Madh Uttar should be substituted for the name "United Provinces of Agra and Oudh."

90. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 22nd January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer remarks that the expression "United Provinces of Agra and Oudh" as a name of these provinces is a misnomer and does not convey the proper significance. He ascribes the backwardness of this province to the fact that it has not got a suitable and appropriate name. He suggests that the name Madh Uttar should be given to this province, seeing that it lies in the centre (madh) of northern (uttar) India. He asks the leading men of these provinces to move Government to change the name of these provinces into Madh Uttar.

MASHRIQ, 23rd January 1912.

The courts of pargana officers.

91. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd January 1912, takes exception to the holding of courts by pargana officers in the head quarters of the districts.

The editor says that the system gives a great deal of trouble to people who have to come in a long distance from the mofussil to conduct their cases in head quarters, with the result that they waste time which could have been profitably employed by them, and he suggests that Government should order the pargana officers to hold their courts at the head quarters of the tahsil of which they are pargana officers.

Referring to the local arrangements he takes exception to the holding of court by the pargana officer of the Hata tahsil in Deoria Sub-division, and observes that either the pargana officer of the Hata tahsil should hold his court at Hata or even at Gorakhpur, which is nearer to Hata than Deoria.

V.—Legislation.

LEADER, 19th January 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

92. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th January 1912, publishes an article criticising the views recently published by Government which were expressed by certain Commissioners and Collectors of the United Provinces about the proposed Elementary Education Bill. The editor expresses satisfaction at the assurance given by Government that it was unnecessary to premise that the extension and popularization of education in the primary stage at which the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale aimed were eminently desirable objects, and that it shared the almost universal view that those objects deserved the strongest encouragement and all reasonable sacrifice on the part of the administration and the people.

LEADER, 21st January 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

93. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st January 1912, in continuation of the article entitled "United Provinces officials against elementary education," further criticises the views expressed by some of the Commissioners and Collectors of these provinces against elementary education.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th January 1912.

The Agra Estates Bill.

94. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), takes strong exception to the Agra Estates Bill and remarks that if the bill be passed into law the feeling of Muhammadans will be considerably wounded, that discontent will increase amongst them and they will despair of obtaining equitable treatment.

The editor observes that in the event of the bill becoming law Muhammadans will consider the action of Government as a direct interference with their religious freedom, and he asks Government not to take into account the opinions of some Muhammadan supporters of the bill, who, he says, are actuated by the hope of personal gain.

VI.—Railway.

Nil.

VII.—Post Office.

95. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), takes exception to the system of realising money-order fees from the senders of value payable orders as unjust. AL MUSHIR, 18th January 1912.

Value payable orders.

The editor draws the attention of the Director General of Post Offices in India to the matter and suggests that the money-order fee should be realised from the addressee in case he accepts the value payable packet.

96. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 23rd January 1912, takes exception to the system of realising value payable commission before a value payable packet is accepted by the addressee. NASIM-I-AGRA, 23rd January 1912.

Value payable orders.

The editor characterizes the system as unjust, and suggests that either value payable commissions should be realised from the sender when the value payable packet is accepted by the addressee, or in case of refusal by the addressee to accept the packet that he should be compelled to pay the commission.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

97. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 25th January), remarks that the cow-protection deputation taken by Mr. Jassawalla to England is doing good work there, and the editor expresses the hope that in case Mr. Jassawalla succeed in securing the support of the entire British public the slaughter of cows in India will without doubt be stopped. RAHBAR, 14th January 1912.

The cow-protection movement.

98. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 19th January 1912, expresses gratification at the success of the cow-protection movement which the deputation to England headed by Mr. Jassawalla has met with at the hands of the British public. NASIM-I-AGRA, 19th January 1912.

The cow-protection movement.

99. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 15th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), refers to the advice given by the Ulmas of Arabia to the Sunnis and the Shias to make up their differences, on the ground that the occupation of Muhammadan kingdoms by foreigners is due to the differences between the two sects. The editor asks the Indian Ulmas and the Islami anjumans to try their best to establish harmonious relations between the Sunnis and Shias of India. MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 15th January 1912.

Relations between the Sunnis and Shias.

100. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), refers to the efforts made by some mullahs in Arabia to bring about a union between the Shias and Sunnis, and to their statement that the subjection of several Muhammadan countries is due to the disunion amongst the several sects of Muhammadans, and suggests that Indian Ulamas (learned men) too should exert their influence in bringing about a union amongst the different sects to be found in the country. ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th January 1912.

Relations between the Sunnis and Shias.

101. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th January 1912 (received on the 15th January), remarks that the grand and pompous procession of sadhus on the occasion of the Magh mela shows how rich the Indian sadhus are, and observes that if the mahants were to spend their money on some work of public good the condition of India would be greatly improved. ABHYUDAYA, 14th January 1912.

The Indian sadhus.

102. The Leader (Allahabad) of the 21st January 1912, refers to the unseemly sight presented by the nagas in their shameful nudeness on the occasion of the Maghi Amavasya, and remarks that the law must be defective if they could not be prevented from parading themselves in that way before the public gaze. LEADER, 21st January 1912.

The Magh mela.

103. In continuation of the article entitled "The sanctity of the Qoran," the Musáfir (Agra), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 23nd January), in support of the contention that the style of the Qoran is neither elegant nor eloquent, remarks MUSAFIR, 19th January 1912.

The sanctity of the Qoran.

that the verses said to be revealed to Muhammad in reply to questions put to him by the public are not pertinent.

MUSAFIR, 19th January 1912.

Islam in England.

104. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), refers to a pamphlet entitled Shaikh Sanausi aur Namwar Hazrat Imam Mehdi written by Khwaja Hasan Nizami Sufi, in which the author said that in the course of his travels the great Sufis informed him that the King of England, with his English subjects, was going to accept Islam, and remarks that after what the Khwaja has written no one will dare to deny the existence of a mad man [(lit.) Sheikh Chieti (?)] in the twentieth century.

MUSAFIR, 19th January 1912.

Jehad in Islam.

105. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), remarks that Indian Muhammadans are wrong in maintaining that Islam does not preach quarrels and jehads, seeing that Muhammadans in Tripoli and Persia have been excited to rise in jehad. The editor states that the principle of jehad has always helped Muhammadans in acquiring fresh territories under the cloak of religion.

ITTIHAD, 24th January 1912.

Pollution by touch and Muhammadans.

106. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 24th January 1912, expresses regret that Muhammadans do not resent the doctrine of pollution by touch among the Hindus who treat them as Mlechhas. The editor quotes some verses from the Qoran to show that Muhammadans are enjoined not to take kafirs in their confidence, and asks his co-religionists to act upon the injunction of the Qoran and not to pollute themselves by accepting food offered to them by Hindus.

ITTIHAD, 24th January 1912.

Muharrum in Budaun.

107. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 24th January 1912, takes exception to the provision of amusements, on the occasion of the last Muharrum in Budaun, on the ground in front of the boarding-house of the District High school. The editor draws the attention of the officer in charge of Muharrum arrangements and of the District Magistrate of Budaun to the matter, and expresses the hope that in future no such amusements will be allowed as they are calculated to wound the feelings of a section of the Muhammadan community.

AL MUSHIR, 25th January 1912.

Pilgrimage to Mecca.

108. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 25th January 1912, takes exception to the Government of India's order which requires the pilgrims to Mecca to sail from the port of Bombay only.

The editor says that the order has caused considerable trouble to the pilgrims from the Punjab, Baluchistan, Afghanistan and Central Asia, and suggests that the port of Karachi also should be opened for pilgrims starting for Mecca.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 17th January 1912.

The gurukul at Hardwar (Kangri).

109. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 17th January 1912, refers to the opinions of Messrs. Nevinson, Myron Phelps, Maxwell, the representative of the Daily Mail, and Mr. St. G. Lane Fox Pitt regarding the good intentions of the Arya Samaj and the gurukul, as well as regarding their work, and asks whether "our brethren, the Anglo-Indians and officials, will not take any lesson from these examples, whether they will not even now admit that the chief reason of their suspicions about the gurukul is their ignorance." The editor also enquires how they can form a correct opinion about the gurukul, when none of them care to take trouble to inspect it for themselves.

MUSAFIR, 19th January 1912.

Party feeling in the Arya Samaj.

110. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 19th January 1912 (received on the 22nd January), expresses regret that party feeling is paving the way to destruction for the Arya Samaj. The editor states that though Christians and Muhammadans are also divided among themselves yet they, unlike the Aryas, forget their differences when the interests of their respective religions are at stake. He asks the Arya Samajists to work in concert with one another.

SADDHARMA PRACHARRAK, 10th January 1912.

The position of women in the west.

111. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 10th January 1912 (received on the 12th January), reproduces the substance of an article which appeared in the January number of the Modern Review (Calcutta) on the position of women in the West over the signature of Lala Har Dayal, and urges that many educated Indians, who have daughters to educate, will do well to peruse the article. The editor observes that if they think for themselves they will known that the ideals of womanhood in India in ancient times were not so bad and that there were several points in their favour. The editor incidentally expresses the opinion that political domination over another nation is sometimes an indispensable condition for the regeneration of the latter, but that intellectual subjection alone is really destructive of the existence of a nation. He says that self-depreciation is the first symptom of intellectual subjection which makes Indians condemn their ancient civilization and adopt European modes of life in utter disregard of social, moral and economical environments.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

Allahabad :
The 27th January 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.
25

CONFIDENTIAL.] (6) No. 5 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 3rd February 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
	I.—POLITICS.
	(a)—Foreign:
1.	The Italian-Turkish war	103
2.	The Italian-Turkish war	103
3.	The Italian-Turkish war	103
4.	The Italian-Turkish war	103
5.	The Italian-Turkish war	103
6.	The situation in Persia	103
7.	The situation in Persia	103
8.	The situation in Persia	104
9.	The situation in Persia	104
10.	The situation in Persia	104
11.	The situation in Persia	104
12.	The situation in Persia	104
13.	The situation in Persia	104
14.	The situation in Persia	105
15.	The situation in Persia and Tripoli ...	105
	(b)—Home:
16.	The Delhi darbar and the historic announcement by the King-Emperor ...	105
17.	The coronation darbar	105
18.	The Gaekwar incident	105
19.	The Gaekwar incident	106
20.	The change of Capital	106
21.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	106
22.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	106
23.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	106
24.	Relations between Europeans and Indians	106
25.	Relations between Europeans and Indians	106
26.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	107
27.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	107
28.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	107
29.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	108
30.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	108
31.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	108
32.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	108
33.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	108
34.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	108
35.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	109
36.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	109
37.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans...	109
38.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	109
39.	The audacity of the Muhammadans ...	109
40.	The loyalty of Indian Muhammadans ...	109
41.	The memorial submitted by the Muhammadans of Bengal	110
42.	The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association ...	110
43.	Home Rule campaign in Ireland ...	110

		Page.
44.	Home Rule campaign in Ireland ...	110
45.	An executive council for the United Provinces	110
46.	The United Provinces Legislative Council	111
47.	The Indian Press Act	111
48.	The Indian Press Act	111
49.	The new Governor of Bengal ...	111
50.	The Governorship of Madras ...	111
51.	Babu Bepin Chandra Pal and the Calcutta police	111
52.	The release of Mr. Tilak	111
53.	The Indian National Congress ...	112
54.	A review of the year 1911	112
55.	A patriotic poem...	112
56.	Cause of the present degraded condition of India and its remedy	112
57.	The Bhishma-Astami day	113
58.	The Indian Civil Service	113
59.	Indians in South Africa	113
60.	The policy of the European Powers ...	113
61.	The recent methods of annexing countries	113
62.	A rumour that the title of His Majesty will be conferred on the Nizam of Hyderabad	114

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

63.	A complaint against the Tahsildar of Narwone in the Patiala State ...	114

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

64.	Restriction in enrolment as pleaders in the Punjab	114
65.	A young boy sentenced for salaaming improperly	114
66.	A suggestion for increasing the number of honorary magistrates	114
67.	Mr. A. Chaudri and Mr. Hassan Imam as Judges of the Calcutta High Court ...	115

(b)—Police:

68.	Police reform	115
69.	Reform in the Criminal Investigation Department	115

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

70.	Zamindars and income tax	115

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

71.	Complaint against the Municipal board, Bareilly	115
72.	Complaint about the existing rules regarding the election of members for district and municipal boards ...	115
73.	Bench magistrates for the town of Ujhiani in the district of Budaun ...	115
74.	A suggestion to keep a price list of the current market rate in the Municipal Board, Gorakhpur	115

		Page.
(e)—Education:
75.	Free and compulsory education ...	116
76.	Primary education and the district boards	116
77.	The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab ...	116
78.	The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ...	116
79.	The Kangri Gurukul	116
80.	The need for scientific education in India...	116
81.	Complaint against the Principal, St. John's College, Agra	117
82.	Instruction in hygiene to villagers ...	117
83.	A review on the report of the Director of Public Instruction for the year 1910-11	117
84.	Seat of the proposed Hindu University...	117
85.	Increase of fees in government schools...	117
(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:
86.	Famine in Gujrat...	117
(g)—General:
87.	Mr. Moreland's book on revenue administration of the United Provinces ...	117
88.	The Kaithi script in the courts of Behar	118
89.	Paucity of Muhammadan employés in the Court of Wards, Fyzabad ...	118
90.	The Zamindar (Lahore) on Kedar Nath Saigal's arrest	118
91.	European and Anglo-Indians and native money-lenders	118
92.	Paucity of lady doctors in India ...	118
93.	Indian sugar industry	118

V.—LEGISLATION.

94.	The United Provinces Court of Wards Bill	119
95.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	119
96.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	119
97.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	120

VI.—RAILWAY.

98.	A collision averted on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway	120

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

99.	The United Provinces Arya Samaj gurukul at Muttra	120
100.	The Gurukul and Dharmpal	120
101.	The sanctity of the Quran	121
102.	The tale of Islam...	121
103.	Reform of Indian sadhus	121
104.	Beef and pork	121
105.	Strange view of women in the West ...	121
106.	Prevention of cow-slaughter... ...	122

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st February 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	2,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	30 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	208 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	400 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	3,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adíb	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,060 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	800 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	900 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	425 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	890 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulláh, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 38.	600 ,,
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 ,,
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Áwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Azam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Alí; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rosgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmadí; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	500 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	800 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27...	5,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál ; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	... ...	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 ,,
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 ,,
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 ,,
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 ,,
133	Swadesh Bándhavé ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 ,,
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 ,,
139	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwat ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 48.	1,000 ,,
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
142	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 ,,
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 ,,
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 ,,
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 ,,
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad. ...	Do.
151	Abhyudáya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, expresses regret at the small amount of money raised by the Muhammadans of India up to this time in aid of the Turkish and Arab sufferers in Tripoli. — MUSLIM GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor asks his co-religionists in India, and particularly those in the United Provinces, to subscribe liberally towards the Turkish relief fund.

2. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, expresses approval of the boycott of Italian goods effected by the Muhammadans and says that it is a happy sign of union amongst the Muhammadans of different countries in the world. — MUSLIM GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor observes that if this national feeling spread throughout the whole Muslim world no power on earth will be capable of destroying Islam.

3. The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 20th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), referring to the controversy between the Watan (Lahore), and the Arya Musafir (Jullundur), on the subject of the Italian-Turkish war, expresses regret that the Watan should have established relations with Turkey instead of rendering allegiance to the British Government only. The editor observes that any comment on the war should be made very cautiously, seeing that Government has issued a proclamation enjoining its Indian subjects to observe strict neutrality. — HITAISHI, 20th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

4. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), denounces Italian aggression in Tripoli, and expresses the opinion that the foreign policy of the Turkish Government is responsible for their present trouble, seeing that it wrongly relied on the friendship of Germany. — KAISER-I-HIND, 25th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor urges his co-religionists to arouse themselves and to realise the situation in which their brethren in other countries are placed, and expresses the hope that the foreign policy of Sir Edward Grey may be altered in favour of Muhammadan countries.

5. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 30th January 1912, expresses regret that the activity of the Italian warships in the Red Sea should have been allowed to continue by the European Powers. — MASHRIQ, 30th January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor says that the refusal of the Europeans to interfere is due either to their fear of the Italian navy or to the rumoured secret understanding between the British, French and Italian Governments.

6. One Muhammad Abdul Baqiulvi of Kakori contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, in which he describes European politics as exemplifying deceit and fraud. — MUSLIM GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

He condemns European aggression in Asiatic countries, and complains that the European Powers endeavour to crush all independent spirit shown by Asiatics.

He expresses the opinion that the time seems to have come when all the Asiatic kingdoms should unite.

7. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 26th January), remarks that the situation in Persia has created discontent and dissatisfaction among Indian Muhammadans, seeing that they believe that the safety of Turkey and Afghanistan depends upon the integrity and independence of Persia. The editor expresses regret that Russia, which is regarded by Indian Muhammadans as an old enemy not only of themselves but also of Great Britain, should interfere in Persian affairs, and that the British Minister for foreign affairs should countenance such interference. He asks whether the British Government desires to purchase friendship with Russia by disregarding the susceptibilities of Muhammadans, and whether Government is convinced that Russia will not enter India after occupying Persia, and he suggests that Government should assure its — MUSLIM GAZETTE, 21st January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

Muhammadan subjects that it is not a party to a conspiracy secretly formed by European Powers to destroy Muhammadan kingdoms and to exterminate Islam. He urges the need for the British Government to prove that it is on terms of friendship with Muhammadans, and, after drawing the attention of Government to the alleged Russian atrocities in Persia, expresses the hope that the British Government will uphold its reputation as a champion of the weak and the oppressed.

KAISER-I-HIND, 25th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

8. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), denounces Russian aggression in Persia, and says that, if Russia secure a foot-hold in Persia, she will undoubtedly some day attack India.

The editor expresses surprise that the British Ministers should have not have realised the grave consequences of Russian occupation of Persia, and he asks the British Government to maintain the integrity and independence of that country.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 25th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

9. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), complains of Russian and Italian aggression in Persia and Tripoli respectively. The editor refers to the many expressions of opinion by distinguished British statesmen and writers as to the dangers of the Persian situation, and observes that the destruction of Persian independence will bring in its train many troubles and difficulties.

He therefore asks the British Government to persuade Russia to act in accordance with the Anglo-Russian convention, and to prevent her from taking advantage of the weakness of Persia.

MUSAFIR, 26th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

10. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), refers to the reply given by the India Office to the London Muslim League to the effect that Government had reason to believe that the negotiations between Russia and Persia, which it had done its utmost to facilitate, were on the point of reaching a satisfactory conclusion, in which case as soon as order was re-established the situation in Persia would revert to its normal state, and that Government was unable to intervene in the particular disputes concerning only Russia and Persia, because Government's general policy was merely to secure that Russian influence, which had long existed in the North, should not be extended in directions prejudicial to India. The editor observes that while Indians may sympathize with the present deplorable condition of Persia, they being a subject race should not concern themselves with disputes in foreign countries, and so compel Government to interfere in matters relating to other countries.

MUSAFIR. 26th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

11. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), refers to the reply given in the course of a speech at Sunderland by Sir Edward Grey to the question as to what steps Great Britain was taking to prevent Russia annexing Persia and says that it was wise and statesmanlike, and remarks that if, in view of that reply, any man asks Great Britain to interfere in Persia, he should be regarded as selfish and as feeling no love for Great Britain.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 28th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

12. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, denounces Russian aggression in Persia and says that it is the earnest desire of the Muhammadans as a whole to see the Anglo-Russian convention respected by Russia.

The editor appeals to the British Government to maintain the integrity and independence of Persia.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 28th January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

13. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, takes exception to the reply given by Sir Edward Grey to the question as to what steps Great Britain was taking to prevent Russia annexing Persia, and remarks that the reply was not in keeping with the past traditions of England, and is looked upon by the Muhammadans of India with dismay. The editor observes that though the speech of Sir Edward Grey was disheartening to the Muhammadans, they believe that the British Government will one day pay attention to their earnest desire and save Persia from falling under Russian domination.

14. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 1st February 1912, takes exception to the opinion expressed by some of the Muhammadan journals that the British Government, on account of its weakness, could not prevent Russian aggression in Persia. OUDH AKHBAR, 1st February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor says that the non-interference of the British Government in the Persian affairs was not due to its weakness but was based on diplomacy.

15. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), publishes a cartoon in which is represented a combat between an Italian and a Turk and a Russian and a Persian. An indignant figure represents the Muslim League, while a bird sitting at the feet of the Muslim League is represented as extending one leg to kick the Italian and the other to kick the Russian, while a Hindu is depicted as giving the following advice: "You see, brother, it is unwise to stretch your legs so far and to interfere in the disputes of foreigners. However, you know your business best. It was my duty to explain this to you and you are free to do whatever you please." MUSAFIR, 26th January 1912.

The situation in Persia and Tripoli.

(b)—Home.

16. The editor of the Hindustan Review (Allahabad), in the editorial notes of the issue for January 1912, sets together extracts from Mr. Lovat Fraser's India under Curzon and After (page 396) and from the despatch from the Government of India to the Secretary of State, dated the 25th August 1911. He notes that Mr. Lovat Fraser's remarks sum up his conclusions at the end of a prodigious chapter of thirty pages devoted to the partition—conclusions based upon a distorted view of the measure and its effects, the outcome of a prejudiced mind; while those of the Government of India sum up their view based on an actual experience of the working of Lord Curzon's scheme. The editor commends all the boons, particularly the separation of Behar from Bengal. HINDUSTAN REVIEW, January 1912.

The Delhi darbar and the historic announcement by the King-Emperor.

The editor refers to the recent session of the Indian National Congress at Calcutta as having been disappointing, and suggests that in Calcutta, after the revocation of the partition of Bengal, possibly the announcement of the removal of the Capital to Delhi was to some extent responsible for it. While commending the speech of the president, he remarks that it was more critical than constructive, and that it was not marked by any common note of underlying principle pervading all its parts.

17. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 31st January 1912, has the following:— LEADER, 31st January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

"We hope not even the worst mind of Anglo-India will sympathize with the attack on the darbar concessions that that lost mind, Sir John Rees, has seen fit to publish through the pages of the Fortnightly Review. Sir John Rees is half a century behind the age when he decries agitation in the manner he does. But it will be unkind to him and unwise for us to take him seriously. He is designed to amuse the passers-by and this function he performs, occasionally well and often clumsily. There let us leave him. Sir William Wedderburn in the Contemporary Review extends his cordial approval to the wise and beneficent statesmanship of Lords Hardinge and Crewe, and in doing so, faithfully voices the opinion of the entire educated community of India. Sir William's tribute to the leaders of Bengal will find an echo in the hearts and minds of all non-Bengali Hindus."

18. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 31st January 1912, remarks that the 12th December, which was a day of rejoicing for Indians, proved very unfortunate for the Gaekwar of Baroda, who, on account of nervousness, failed to do homage properly to the King-Emperor on the occasion of the coronation darbar. The editor observes that the incident has been adversely commented upon by the Times, the Saturday Review and the Globe and other English papers, though the Gaekwar had addressed a letter of apology to the Viceroy and the matter should have been allowed to end there. He remarks that the loyalty of the Gaekwar SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 31st January 1912.

The Gaekwar incident.

being unquestioned he would not have noticed the adverse comments of the English papers had it not been for the evil effect which the incident seems to be producing in the State. He expresses doubt as to whether the postponement of the marriage of Princess Indra with the Maharaja of Gwalior, and the calling back of Mr. Seddon, whose services had been lent to the Baroda State, are due to the unfortunate incident.

OUDH AKHBAR, 1st February 1912.

The Gaekwar incident.

19. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 1st February 1912, takes strong exception to the remarks made by the Times (London) on the Gaekwar incident.

The editor says that the Maharaja's loyalty to the British Throne cannot be impugned and asks Government to stop the publication of libels against the Maharaja by the Times and other English journals.

ADIB, December 1911.

The change of Capital.

20. Abul Ala Hakim Saeed Ahmad of Lucknow contributes an article to the Adib (Allahabad), for the month of December 1911 (received on the 28th January 1912), in which he remarks that the change of Capital from Calcutta to Delhi has been effected for political reasons, because any danger to India may be apprehended from the West and not from the East, and observes that many political advantages will accrue to Government from this change. He expresses the hope that, in commemoration of His Majesty's coronation darbar in India, Indians will be treated with more consideration by Government.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

21. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, expresses approval of the patriotism, courage and perseverance of the Bengalis, and says that the annulment of the partition of Bengal has encouraged them so much that they are now contemplating the prospect of self-government for the Bengali-speaking race on the model of Australia, Canada and other British colonies.

The editor remarks that the progress of the Bengalis is due to the efficiency of their education, and expresses the desire for a more general diffusion of education amongst the Muhammadans.

ABHYUDAYA, 28th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

22. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 28th January 1912, expresses regret that the people of Eastern Bengal should have been prevented from presenting an address to the Viceroy expressing their gratification at the annulment of the partition of Bengal. The editor remarks that the officers of Eastern Bengal did not like the idea of an address being presented to His Excellency the Viceroy, because it was they who had chiefly benefited from the partition of Bengal. Referring to the severe criticism said to have been made by an officer of Dacca of the annulment, he expresses surprise that officers who criticise an announcement made by His Majesty should presume to teach loyalty to Indians.

AL BASHIR, 30th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

23. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 30th January 1912, expresses approval of the memorial submitted to His Excellency the Governor General by the Central Muhammadan Association of Calcutta, and remarks that the requests made in the memorial are proper and just. The editor then refers to the reply given by His Highness the Agha Khan to the address of the Sindh Association at Karachi, in which he is reported to have said that the annulment of the partition of Bengal will actually benefit the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, and remarks that the view expressed by His Highness the Agha Khan can carry no weight with it, seeing that he has very little opportunity of judging the grievances of his co-religionists in Eastern Bengal.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 25th January 1912.

Relations between Europeans and Indians.

24. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), takes exception to the infliction of a fine on a boy of seven years by a joint magistrate in Madras for not saluting him properly.

The editor expresses the hope that the Madras Government will take notice of the case.

OUDH AKHBAR, 27th January 1912.

Relations between Europeans and Indians.

25. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 27th January 1912, says that, notwithstanding the efforts which have been made to remove the distinction between Europeans and Indians, and to improve friendly relations between them, no success worth mentioning has yet been achieved. The editor says that if Indian ladies mix freely with European ladies relations are likely to become more friendly, but he observes that until Indian ladies are better educated and until all distinction between Indians and Europeans is removed no real benefit can be derived from such inter-change of visits.

HITAISHI, 20th January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

26. The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 20th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), referring to the attempts made by the Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar to effect a rapprochement, expresses the wish that the relations between the two communities may also become friendly in Bengal, United Provinces and the Punjab. The editor ascribes the present strained relations between them to the claim put forward by Muhammadans to political and religious importance. He points out that their religious importance has not been recognized by Government, which has granted religious freedom to all the Indian communities, and suggests that Hindus and Muhammadans should come to a peaceful settlement as to how they should celebrate their respective religious festivals and thus spare Government much time and trouble. In conclusion he says that Hindus and Muhammadans, while cultivating harmonious relations, should remain faithful and loyal to Government and should not bother themselves with the Italian-Turkish war and the situation in Persia.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 21st January 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

27. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 26th January), contains a contributed article in which the writer says that the annulment of the partition of Bengal has led the Muhammadans to think that it is necessary for them to depend not on others but on their own efforts. He points out that Muhammadans, finding that the political aspirations of Hindus are being fulfilled, have decided to co-operate with Hindus in political matters and to share with them the self-government which, thanks to the magnanimity of Government, is likely to be granted to Indians.

LEADER, 2nd February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

28. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd February 1912, publishes a letter from Rai Bahadur Lala Baij Nath of Agra on the Hindu-Muhammadan question. The writer, in referring to recent correspondence published in the press regarding the policy to be adopted to ensure a better feeling between the two communities, remarks that the present state of tension has been brought about by persons who wanted to accomplish their own selfish ends by keeping them apart. He goes on to say that twenty or thirty years ago the Hindus and Muhammadans mixed freely and cordially with each other, shared in each other's fairs, festivals and social ceremonies, and that neither community stood in the way of the other's celebrating its religious rites as it chose. Now, the writer says, all this is changed and the ill-feeling is not confined to political matters, but is extending to business and social relations. Each Muharram, Baqr-Id or Ram Lila witnesses a disturbance of feeling which it never did before. In every government office there are cliques and combinations, and even in judicial matters Judges and Magistrates have begun showing favour to litigants or practitioners of their own religion. The writer suggests that Muhammadans should join the Congress, forego all claims to separate representation, and cease to assert their "political importance" as compared with Hindus, and that they should recognize the social and religious scruples and rights of the Hindus. He expresses the opinion that, if they (the Muhammadans) will but meet them with regard to the vexed questions of cow-killing and religious processions, the Hindus will help them in their own religious and social observances. He says that any rapprochement depends upon the attitude of the Muhammadans, and he advocates the formation of a committee of a few of the leading members of each community which should tour through the principal cities, ascertain the causes of tension of feeling, suggest methods of removing it and arrive at a definite understanding upon matters which concern the two communities. He refers to the interest taken by the Muhammadans in Turkish and Persian affairs as being merely sentimental, and urges that their interest in their motherland should be deeper, and that they can as little afford to separate from the Hindus as the latter from them.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

29. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, expresses regret at the annulment of the partition of Bengal, which is alleged to be due to the agitation of the Bengalis.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor advises his co-religionists to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and urges them not to join the Indian National Congress.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 21st January 1912.

30. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 26th January), reproduces translations of the articles contributed by Mirza Sami-ullah and a Muhammadan to the Pioneer (Allahabad) and the Indian Review (Madras) respectively, and an article from the Vakil (Amritsar) in order to show that Muhammadans desire to change their policy. The editor observes that, though there is a difference of opinion as to what should be their future policy, they all share the view that they "should stand on their own legs and depend upon their own exertions."

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th January 1912.

31. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), publishes a leading article on the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans, in which the editor strongly urges the Muhammadans to keep aloof from the Indian National Congress. He observes that though the annulment of the partition of Bengal has naturally caused despondency amongst the Muhammadans they have no occasion for an immediate change of policy towards Government.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

He goes on to say that the continuance of the British rule in the country is essential to the existence of the Muhammadans in India, but suggests that his co-religionists should do away with the habit of sycophancy, depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and spread education among the masses.

SAHIFA, 26th January 1912.

32. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), takes exception to the letter by Mr. Raza Ali on the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans, which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912. The editor says that the writer of the letter is alone responsible for the views expressed therein, and he urges his co-religionists to keep aloof from the Indian National Congress.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

LEADER, 27th January 1912.

33. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 27th January 1912, congratulates Mr. Mushir Husain Kidwai on the sentiments contained in a letter to the paper on "The future policy of Indian Muslims." In this letter Mr. Kidwai advises his co-religionists to radically change their present policy, which he describes as one of fear, unwise diplomacy, separatism and reliance on favouritism, and to adopt in its place a policy of courage, straightforwardness, union and self-reliance. He says that this will be attained by joining the National Congress.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The writer urges that, acting upon the advice of the King-Emperor, who bequeathed to them the watch-word of hope, the Hindus and Muhammadans should unite for the common good, and that their separate schemes of universities should also be amalgamated, because their union would have a sober influence over the Anglo-Indian officials, whom he describes as a reactionary section of His Majesty's subjects.

He states that the materialists of Europe are trying to forcibly crush the Muslim power in Europe, Asia and Africa, and that therefore the spirit of Pan-Islamism also demanded from his co-religionists that they should unite with the Asiatics, who were also a spiritual people.

UNION GAZETTE, 28th January 1912.

34. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 28th January 1912, takes exception to the proposal expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor urges that what is needed is that his co-religionists should uproot the evils that have found their way into their social system, and that they should become pious, upright and straightforward in all their dealings. He suggests that it would help them to do this if they were to adopt the costume and the manners of the Arabs.

35. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 30th January 1912, takes exception to the opinion expressed in some journals that the policy of Nawab Mushtaq Husain is other than straightforward merely because as a president of the Tibbi Conference held at Lucknow he advocated unity between the Hindus and Muhammadans, and when writing on the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans he asked them to keep aloof from the Indian National Congress. MASHRIQ, 30th January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor says that the attitude of the Nawab was perfectly correct on both occasions.

36. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 30th January 1912, refers to the suggestion made in the Indian Daily Telegraph (Lucknow), that the Muhammadans should make an alliance with the Anglo-Indians, and remarks that the Muhammadans, in accordance with the advice of the late Sir Saiyid Ahmad, tried their best to win the friendship of Englishmen but were not successful in extending their friendly relations with them. AL BASHIR, 30th January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor says that the idea of the Muhammadans forming a political alliance with the Anglo-Indians seems absurd, seeing that the latter already enjoy special privileges and have no need of any alliance, and also that they will resent it if the same privileges and rights were to be given to the Muhammadans.

He asks his co-religionists to give up the idea of forming friendship with the Englishmen on the terms of equality, but at the same time he urges them to give up the habit of sycophancy and servility.

37. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Budaun), of the 1st February 1912, takes exception to Mr. Raza Ali's letter which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January. MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 1st February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor condemns the action of the writer in asking advice from the Pioneer as to the future policy of the Muhammadans, in putting the blame on the Muhammadans for the strained feelings between them and the Hindus, and in deprecating the sympathy shown by Indian Muhammadans with their suffering brethren in Persia and Tripoli.

He characterizes the letter as the outcome of a disturbed and confused mind.

38. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 2nd February 1912, discussing the need for a change in the policy of the Indian Muhammadans, observes that their policy should not be such as to prejudice Government against them, and he asks the community to be as loyal to Government as before and to demand their rights in a strictly constitutional manner. OUDH AKHBAR, 2nd February 1912

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

39. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 29th January), refers to an article which appeared in the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), about a murder case in Kashmir which was committed by Muhammadans, in order to obtain possession of a woman, and observes that it was very daring of Muhammadans to treat Hindus in this way in a Native State of which the ruling chief is a Hindu. The editor remarks that when they can meet with such success in Native States they are emboldened to disregard the interests of Hindus even in British India, and quotes as an instance a case in which one Nawab Fateh Muhammad Khan with fourteen musahibs is being charged with the murder of a young girl. He goes on to say that, not content with insulting Hindus, they are prepared to accord similar treatment to Europeans and refers to the charge which is being made against Khan Bahadur Khwaja Muhammad Khan of Hoti Mardan of wrongfully confining two European ladies. He observes that the Muhammadans have thought fit to interfere in administrative matters, seeing that the Vakil (Amritsar) took exception to the distribution of charity by the King-Emperor and the Queen-Empress, while the Observer (Lahore) criticised the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and he suggests that Government should curb the ambitions of the Muhammadans. RAHBAR, 21st January 1912.

The audacity of the Muhammadans.

40. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), remarks that just because Russia and Italy have with little or no justification preyed upon two MUSAFIR, 26th January 1912.

The loyalty of Indian Muhammadans.

Muhammadan kingdoms, and because no special boon was granted exclusively to their community on the occasion of the coronation darbar, the Muhammadans have chosen the annulment of the partition of Bengal as a pretext to threaten Government. The editor refers to an article which appeared in Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 16th January 1912, and in which it was said that the Royal Proclamation of the 12th December had led the Muhammadans, who had up to then relied on Government to protect their rights and privileges, to fear that their very existence would be in danger, in case they persisted in patiently and silently depending on Government.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 28th January 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Muhammadans of Bengal.

41. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, expresses approval of the memorial submitted to His Excellency the Governor General by the Central National Muhammadan Association of Bengal, which, the editor says, is due to the political awakening amongst the Muhammadans of the province. He urges his co-religionists to carry on constitutional agitation till their just demands be satisfied by Government, and asks them not to feel disheartened if they happen to fail in their first attempt.

ABHYUDAYA, 28th January 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association.

42. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), referring to the memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association, Bengal, to the Viceroy suggesting the ways in which the privileges of the Muhammadans should be safeguarded, expresses the hope that the impartial and just Viceroy will not accede to the requests of the association. The editor observes that, though the separatist tendency of the Muhammadans makes the formation of an Indian nation an impossibility, and though it is calculated to prove injurious to Indians generally, yet the Hindus are not eager to unite with Muhammadans. Referring to the demand of Muhammadans for the grant of separate electorates, he says that Hindus will not have any objection to separate electorates being granted to Muhammadans, provided they have no right to elect their representatives through mixed or general electorates. With regard to the request of the association that one member of the Executive Council should be a Muhammadan, and that if this be found unfeasible the appointment should go alternately to a Hindu and to a Muhammadan, he observes that the qualification and not the caste should be taken into account when filling up appointments.

In conclusion he expresses the apprehension that Muhammadans will sooner or later request Government to make roads and cities exclusively for their use.

HINDUSTANI, 29th January 1912.

Home Rule campaign in Ireland.

43. Referring to the Home Rule campaign in Ireland the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 29th January 1912, expresses regret that the Ulstermen should have opposed Government and that they should have decided to violently prevent Mr. Churchill from speaking in the Ulster Hall, and expresses wonder as to what Government would do if Indians were to oppose its measures like the people of Ulster.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 31st January 1912.

Home Rule campaign in Ireland.

44. Referring to the remark made by the Nation (London) that what is suitable for the United States is likely to be suitable for China, the Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 31st January 1912, similarly observes that what is regarded as good in Ireland would not be so regarded in India, and says that if Indians had acted in the manner in which the people of Ulster are doing in connection with the Home Rule campaign in Ireland, they would have been described by Anglo-Indians as seditionists.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th January 1912.

An executive council for the United Provinces.

45. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), refers to the intimation given by the Chief Secretary to the local Government to the Hon'ble Pandit Moti Lal Nehru that his resolution regarding the establishment of an executive council in the United Provinces had been disallowed by the Lieutenant Governor, and remarks that it is difficult to understand how public interests would have suffered by the discussion of the resolution in the local Council. The editor observes that Indians asked for the establishment of executive councils, because they wanted that not only the officials but also the non-official Indians should have a voice in deciding questions affecting them. He expresses the opinion that if Sir John Hewett were not in favour of the establishment of an executive council in the United Provinces he could have allowed the resolution to be moved and discussed and voted upon without himself taking part in the debate, or he could have even left the chair to be taken by the vice-president of the Council. He remarks that the people of these provinces desire an executive council in order that the power exercised by the president of the Council may be curtailed to a certain extent, and that the whole authority may not be vested in one man only.

ADVOCATE, 28th January 1912.

The United Provinces Legislative Council.

46. Referring to the Leader's criticism regarding the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's absence from the Provincial Legislative Council, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, remarks that the Pandit had been regularly attending the meetings and that he had worked most zealously for his constituents. The editor observes that the sacrifices made by the Hon'ble Member in the interests of the public were second to none, and that the Leader was unnecessarily severe in criticising his absence from the last meeting of the Council, which was due to ill health.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 21st January 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

47. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 26th January), lends its support to the resolution passed by the Indian National Congress that the Indian Press Act should be repealed, and remarks that now that the partition of Bengal has been annulled there is no need for restraining the liberty of the press.

TAFRIH, 28th January 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

48. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, expresses approval of the resolution passed at the last session of the Indian National Congress at Calcutta for repealing the Indian Press Act.

The editor observes that since Government have disposed of the evil, which necessitated the passing of the Indian Press Act, by annulling the partition of Bengal, the existence of the Act is no longer necessary.

ADVOCATE, 28th January 1912.

The new Governor of Bengal.

49. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, expresses approval at the appointment of Lord Carmichael as the first Governor of Bengal, and after observing that the government of Bengalis will not be an unmixed pleasure, the editor remarks that every well-wisher of the country will agree that no better selection could have been made, and that Lord Carmichael's sympathetic and liberal policy is likely to be productive of solid benefits to the people of Bengal.

The editor states that the esteem and admiration which His Excellency had won from all classes of people in Madras during the short period he had been amongst them were apparent from the fact that the people of that Presidency were intending to send representations to His Majesty the King-Emperor and to the Secretary of State that His Excellency's transfer would be detrimental to the interests of that Presidency.

MASHRIQ, 30th January 1912.

The Governorship of Madras.

50. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 30th January 1912, expresses approval of the appointment of Lord Carmichael as the Governor of Bengal, and suggests the name of Sir John Hewett as his successor in Madras.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th January 1912.

Babu Bepin Chandra Pal and the Calcutta police.

51. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), referring to the account given in the Sanjivani (Calcutta) of the arrest of Babu Bepin Chandra Pal by a police inspector on the charge of theft, remarks that the account, if correct, is greatly to the discredit of the Indian police. The editor remarks that nobody except an officer of the Indian police could have conceived that Babu Bepin Chandra Pal would steal a shawl, and he asks the police authorities to investigate the matter and to punish the inspector in case he be found guilty of having arrested Mr. Pal without sufficient grounds.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st January 1912.

The release of Mr. Tilak.

52. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 23rd January), expresses regret that the reports regarding the release of Mr. Tilak have proved false. The editor observes that the report published in the Capital (Calcutta) that

Mr. Tilak would be released on the 10th January led the people of Ballia and some other places to observe the 10th January as a day of rejoicing. He remarks that it is very unfortunate that Mr. Tilak was not released in commemoration of the coronation darbar.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st January 1912.

The Indian National Congress.

53. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 23rd January), has an article discussing the last Congress, in which the editor expresses regret that the usual enthusiasm was lacking at the recent Congress, and remarks that if the supporters of the Congress will not remove the cause of its growing unpopularity it will die a natural death in the near future. The editor concedes that the hostile attitude of Government towards any institution proves detrimental to its interests, but contends that the Congress has in the last few years won the sympathy of Government. He points out that the cause of the growing unpopularity of the Indian National Congress is that the methods which it adopts for the accomplishment of its objects are not in harmony with the changed circumstances of modern India. He goes on to say that, as no new subjects are discussed in the Congress, people naturally get tired of it, and he asks the supporters of the Congress to adopt new methods in order to accomplish the aims and objects of the institution.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 24th January 1912.

A review of the year 1911.

54. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 26th January), contains a contributed article in which the writer reviews the events of the year 1911 and refers particularly to the services of the Arya Samajists in the matter of rendering relief to famine-stricken people. He urges the need for co-operation between the various Indian communities, and deprecates the establishment of various institutions with different aims and objects. He concedes that there is no harm if the different communities work out their regeneration separately, provided they do not injure one another's interests. He describes the Indian National Congress as the one national institution through which the various Indian communities may unite and recover their past greatness, and he says that it is only through the Congress that the relations between the rulers and the ruled are likely to become cordial. He recognizes the possibility that the Congress may some day become the governing body of India.

ANAND, 25th January 1912.

A patriotic poem.

55. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 30th January), publishes a patriotic poem on the subject of the regeneration of India, the second verse of which is as follows :—

"Friends, bring about the regeneration of the motherland, which is unfortunate, distressed and constantly visited by famine,

You missed the opportunity once, and are suffering in consequence,

If you repeatedly miss opportunities, what will be your condition, you will have cause for regret.

If you are not ashamed of being despised and contemptuously treated in the world, the advice of Kamlasan for the regeneration of the country will be in vain."

Indians are urged to acquire courage, and skill in science and art and to give up evil customs.

TRISHUL, 25th January 1912.

Cause of the present degraded condition of India and its remedy.

56. In an article entitled "The cause of the present degraded condition of India and its remedy," the Trishul (Benares), of the 25th January 1912, refers to the hardships and troubles which the Indians had to suffer during the régime of the overbearing Muhammadan rulers, and remarks that it was a divine mission for England to conquer India in order to redress the sufferings of the Indians. The editor expresses regret that from the time that the British Government took possession of India the Europeans have constantly doubted the loyalty of the Indians, but he is pleased to say that the auspicious visit of His Majesty the King-Emperor George V has removed those doubts, and he has great hope for the future prosperity of India. He urges all the communities to show their loyalty by uniting and reviving the decadent trades and industries of this country, and to utterly eschew anarchism and useless agitation. He shows the necessity of establishing technical and agricultural schools and colleges, and he expresses assurance that if real endeavours be made there will be no difficulty in securing Government sympathy and patronage. He reminds his countrymen that the first essential is a thorough reform of the national character and observance of religion, without which people cannot achieve success.

ABHYUDAYA, 25th January 1912.

57. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th January 1912, has an article on the Bhishma-Astami day, which concludes as follows :—

The Bhishma-Astami day.

"We, Hindus, desire to improve our condition. We are groping for light to show us the way to progress. Many of us are turning to the West for it—they have closed their eyes at the sun (the ideal) of Bhishma in the East (in India), and are looking about for it towards the West. The clouds of ignorance conceal from our view the sun's (ideals) of Bhishma and others. We should dispel those clouds by means of education, and receive the light from those suns, which will take us to that height of joy, prosperity and power, of which we read a brief account in the Ramayan and other ancient books. If we do this we may hope that the power which evolves a plant out of stone, insects out of a plant and human beings from insects will restore to us our ancient happiness, prosperity, powers and godliness [(lit.) Godhead].

ADVOCATE, 28th January 1912.

58. Referring to the circular issued by the Government of India referring to the compulsory retirement of any incompetent officers in the Indian Civil Service, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, expresses satisfaction that the Government have recognized the necessity of exercising more scrupulous attention to the selection of District Officers and Judges, and hopes that the rejection of the unfit will be more stringent in the future than it has been hitherto.

The Indian Civil Service.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 28th January 1912.

59. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, takes exception to the disabilities placed on Indians in South Africa as unjust and tyrannical. The editor urges his countrymen without distinction of colour or creed to unanimously support the cause of their oppressed brethren in South Africa, to draw the attention of the Imperial Government to their deplorable condition and to render them every possible help.

Indians in South Africa.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 28th January 1912.

60. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, refers to the speech in which the German Emperor, when a guest of the Sultan Abdul Hamid, declared himself a friend of the three hundred million Musalmans of the world, and remarks that recent developments in European politics have proved that those words were insincere and uttered merely to gain some advantage for the Germans.

The policy of the European Powers.

The editor observes that the Turks and Muhammadans were mistaken in putting reliance on the friendship of Germany, as they had been mistaken several times before in putting confidence in the friendship of other European Powers. He says that the Muhammadans are now beginning to realise that the European Powers have combined to crush the independent Asiatic countries, and that their first attempt is to annihilate the independence of the Muhammadan kingdoms, and he asks the British Government to refrain from such a conspiracy out of consideration for the feelings of the vast number of Muhammadan subjects under its rule.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 31st January 1912.

61. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 31st January 1912, remarks that in ancient times the only way to annex any country was to send an army against it and to depose its ruler, but in modern times there are many ways whereby that object can be achieved. The editor points out that one of these ways is to take in one's own hands the administration of a country with the object of spreading civilization there; and that a second way is not to wait for an invitation but to take a country under one's protection, with the object of preserving its integrity He says that it is in this way that Russia has extended its protection to Mongolia.

The recent methods of annexing countries.

The third way, he says, is to have one's own suzerainty recognized in a portion of a country and the suzerainty of some other Power recognized in the other portion of that country. He says that the European Powers as a rule only apply the third method to Asiatic kingdoms but that, in case any Asiatic kingdom is like Japan capable of withstanding any European Power, the third method cannot be applied to it.

OUDH AKHBAR, 2nd February 1912.

A rumour that the title of His Majesty will be conferred on the Nizam of Hyderabad.

62. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 2nd February 1912, takes exception to the opinion expressed by some journals that the title of His Majesty should be conferred on the Maharana of Mewar and not on the Nizam of Hyderabad.

The editor says that the Nizam of Hyderabad, seeing that he is the premier prince of India, deserves the title of His Majesty, and observes that if Government confers such a title on the Nizam the whole Indian public will feel gratified.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 24th January 1912.

A complaint against the Tahsildar of Narwone in the Patiala State.

63. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 26th January), refers to the alleged arrest of Babu Bepin Chandra Pal by a police inspector on a charge of theft, and remarks that the unwise actions of subordinate police officers cause great dissatisfaction to law-abiding people. The editor goes on to complain that the Tahsildar of Narwone, in the Patiala State, prevented an Arya Samajist, named Dalip Chand, who was among those charged with sedition about two years ago, from going to Delhi to see the coronation darbar. He expresses surprise that an officer of the State should have stopped a man from seeing His Majesty, when it was the earnest desire of the King-Emperor to enable his subjects to have a look at him. He draws the attention of the Maharaja of Patiala to the matter, and expresses the hope that His Highness will duly punish the Tahsildar.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

ANAND, 25th January 1912.

Restriction in enrolment as pleaders in the Punjab.

64. Referring to the recent decision to restrict the number of pleaders enrolled in the Punjab, the Anand (Lucknow), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 30th January), remarks that reduction in the number of vakils will be productive of no good results, seeing that the clients will have to pay larger fees in order to engage vakils when their number is reduced.

HINDUSTANI, 29th January 1912.

A young boy sentenced for salaaming improperly.

65. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 29th January 1912, referring to the case in which a young boy was sentenced for salaaming improperly, reports that Mr. Jackson has written to the father of the accused that as the accused was tried without the permission of the District Officer the trial as well as the sentence was void.

The editor expresses surprise at such ignorance of law on the part of Mr. Jackson, who is a first class magistrate of ten years' standing.

MASHRIQ, 30th January 1912.

A suggestion for increasing the number of honorary magistrates.

66. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 30th January 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer doubts the advisability of the increase in the number of honorary magistrates for villages, as suggested by the Mashriq in its issue of the 9th January (vide Selections No. 2 of 1912, paragraph 45). He takes exception to the appointment of honorary magistrates for villages through the recommendations of tahsildars, who, he says, only nominate their favourites for such posts, and observes that men thus appointed can be of no real good to the country but would be mere tools in the hands of the police.

He suggests that only deserving men should be appointed honorary magistrates and that their appointments should be made direct by the District Magistrates.

67. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 1st February 1912, while expressing gratification at the report that of the four new Judges in the Calcutta High Court two will be Mr. A. Chaudhri and Mr. Hasan Imam, regrets that they will not now be able to take such an active part in public matters.

ABHYUDAYA, 1st February 1912.

Mr. A. Chaudhri and Mr. Hasan Imam as Judges of the Calcutta High Court.

(b)—Police.

68. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 29th January), refers to certain cases in which police officers have been implicated in the commission of criminal offences, and suggests that if such cases indicate any need for police reform Government should give its attention to it.

RAHBAR, 21st January 1912.

Police reform.

69. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), reports that Krishna Kumar Mitra, who was in 1908 deported under the Regulation of 1818, is being put to annoyance by the police who keep a strict watch on his house. He says that such action on the part of the police does not increase the prestege of Government and he expresses the hope that Government will introduce proper reforms in the Criminal Investigation Department.

ABHYUDAYA, 28th January 1912.

Reform in the Criminal Investigation Department.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

70. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th January 1912, expresses approval of the reply given by Government to the question put by the Hon'ble Thakur Khushalpal Singh in the last session of the United Provinces Legislative Council about the advisability of exempting zamindars from income tax on the profits obtaining by lending seed-grain to their tenants.

The editor characterizes the reply as most suitable, and observes that there is no reason to exempt the zamindars from income tax, seeing that they make immense profit by lending seed-grain to their tenants.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th January 1912.

Zamindars and income tax.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

71. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), complains that the Municipal Board, Bareilly, does not perform its duties honestly, and that the members of the board exercise their influence for their own and not for the public good.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th January 1912.

Complaint against the Municipal Board, Bareilly.

72. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th January 1912, takes exception to the existing rules regarding the election of members for the district and municipal boards. The editor observes that the members thus elected are not the true representatives of the people, and asks Government to pass such rules as will enable the public to elect their representatives for the boards independently and freely, without tahsildars and other public officers interfering to influence their choice.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th January 1912.

Complaint about the existing rules regarding the election of members for district and municipal boards.

73. One Hassan Afzal of Budaun contributes an article to the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th January 1912, in which he refers to a rumour about the appointment of four bench magistrates for the town of Ujhiani in the Budaun district. He suggests that at least one of the magistrates should be a Muhammadan, elected from the Muhammadans of the town, and that no Hindu, who carries on any sort of trade, should be appointed as a bench magistrate in the town.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th January 1912.

Bench magistrates for the town of Ujhiani in the district of Budaun.

74. One Param Sukh Avasti contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 30th January 1912, in which he complains of the want of uniformity of prices in the different markets of Gorakhpur, which, he says, causes a great deal of trouble to the citizens. He asks the municipal board to remove the cause of complaint and suggests that it should periodically publish the current market rates.

MASHRIQ, 30th January 1912.

A suggestion to keep a price list of the current market rate in the Municipal Board, Gorakhpur.

(e)—Education.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 14th January 1912.

Free and compulsory education.

75. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 14th January 1912, quotes statistics to show the progress made in Japan in primary education.

The editor asks his co-religionists to strongly urge Government to make primary education in India free and compulsory, and observes that, if Government be not prepared to incur the expenses of such an innovation it should be urged to impose an educational cess on the people.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 1st February 1912.

Primary education and the district boards.

76. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 1st February 1912, expresses regret that the district boards do not spend a sufficient amount of money in extending the lower primary education within the limits of their jurisdiction.

The editor invites the attention of the boards to this defect and expresses the hope that they will endeavour in future to increase the number of lower primary schools within their limits.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 23rd January 1912.

The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

77. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 23rd January 1912 (received on the 1st February), takes exception to the abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab as unjust.

The editor says that Muhammadans, being backward in education, will not be able to compete with the Hindus in the higher law examinations, and observes that the abolition of the examination for mukhtarship will reduce the number of Muhammadan legal practitioners and thus will injure the interests of the Muhammadan public.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th January 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

78. One Saiyid Muhammad Abdul Wadud of Bareilly contributes an article to the Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), in which he refers to the resignation of Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk from the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and discusses the candidates for the post. He expresses the opinion that no one in government service, whose services could be lent to the college, nor any one drawing a pension from Government should be eligible as they are sure to be under its influence. He suggests the name of Mr. Aziz Mirza, B.A., secretary to the All-India Muslim League, for the post, and observes that he is the only person who could properly discharge his duties as secretary to the college, and on whom the whole Muhammadan community could rely.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 24th January 1912.

The Kangri Gurukul.

79. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 26th January), publishes the report of an inspection by Mr. R. C. Hobart, Joint Magistrate, Roorkee, which, the editor says, should dispose of the erroneous ideas which some persons entertain about the gurukul. In the report the gurukul is said to be described as an extraordinarily well-managed institution where the best parts of the British public school system, combined with the indigenous methods, have been adopted. Mr. Hobart is also recorded to have said in the report that the system of discipline seemed to be excellent, that cleanliness is certainly a feature of the life, and that the professors are a very self-sacrificing set of men, and seem to take a similar interest in their pupils to that taken by an English schoolmaster.

ABHYUDAYA, 28th January 1912.

The need for scientific education in India.

80. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 28th January 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer observes that no country in the world has achieved progress until its inhabitants were educated, and that the regeneration of India cannot be brought about until education is diffused among the masses. He remarks that the present system of education is defective, and that India stands badly in need of scientific education, and he reminds the public of the importance attached by Herbert Spencer to this branch.

In conclusion he urges the need for the establishment of educational institutions of the type of the Prem Maha Vidyalaya, Brindaban (Muttra).

81. The Agra Akhbar of the 28th January 1912, complains that the Principal of St. John's College, Agra, has wounded the feelings of the Muhammadans by extending the college compound so as to include a mosque within the college premises. The editor draws the attention of the District Magistrate of Agra to the fact and expresses the hope that justice will be done to the Muhammadans.

AGRA AKHBAR, 28th January 1912.

Complaint against the Principal, St. John's College, Agra.

82. The Anwar Alam (Dehra Dun), of the 29th January 1912, expresses approval of the suggestion made by a correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette (Lahore), to give instruction in hygiene to villagers through government pensioners, and asks Government to make an experiment of the suggestion.

ANWAR ALAM, 29th January 1912.

Instruction in hygiene to villagers.

83. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 30th January 1912, expresses regret that the report of the Director of Public Instruction of the United Provinces for the year 1910-11 does not show clearly the progress made by Muhammadans in education, nor the amount of help given by Government to their private educational institutions.

AL BASHIR, 30th January 1912.

A review on the report of the Director of Public Instruction for the year 1910-11.

The editor invites the attention of the local Government to the fact, and expresses the hope that in future the Director of Public Instruction will discuss the educational condition of the Muhammadans in a separate chapter of his report.

84. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st February 1912, publishes a letter contributed by one Sham Sahai of Shafiuddinpur, under the title of "Some suggestions regarding Delhi," in which the writer, while admitting that Delhi has much in its favour to commend it as the seat of the proposed Hindu University, urges the superior claims of Benares as being the most sacred Hindu town in India and the ancient seat of Hindu and Brahmanical learning, besides being the home of Hinduism from time immemorial.

LEADER, 1st February 1912.

Seat of the proposed Hindu University.

He also urges that Delhi would never find favour with Mrs. Annie Besant, who can raise large sums of money for the University from foreign countries and that prudence should not allow the Hindu community to lose her assistance and wise counsel.

The writer suggests the need for establishing a representative daily newspaper at Delhi, and trusts that one or more of the following newspapers will make the necessary move :—

The Empire, the Amrita Bazar Patrika and the Indian Nation of Calcutta, the Tribune of Lahore, the Advocate of Lucknow, the Indian Social Reformer of Bombay and the Leader of Allahabad.

85. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 1st February 1912, referring to the increase of fees in government schools and the concession of half tuition fees for the sons of teachers drawing salaries below fifty rupees, suggests that the concession should be granted also to other government servants getting a monthly pay of fifty rupees or less.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 1st February 1912.

Increase of fees in government schools.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

86. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), referring to the famine in Gujrat, remarks that the scarcity there is not only of food-grain but also of water. The editor exhorts every Indian, rich or poor, to contribute towards the Gujrat famine relief fund.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th January 1912.

Famine in Gujrat.

(g)—General.

87. In the course of a very favourable review of Mr. Moreland's book entitled The Revenue Administration of the United Provinces, the editor of the Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for January 1912, commends it to the young men of the educated classes in the following terms :—

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, January 1912.

Mr. Moreland's book on revenue administration of the United Provinces.

"Education is so much centered nowadays in cities and towns that the college-bred lad is apt to lose touch with rural economy. On the other hand, agriculture is the pivot of everything in this province, and agriculture is intimately affected by the revenue administration. In the old days the leaders of the people all came from rural parts and spent a great deal of their time in the villages. It is, therefore, essential that the first-hand experience of our fathers should be replaced for the present generation, at least, by the study of a careful and suggestive book like that of Mr. Moreland's. The Allahabad University cannot do better than prescribe this work as one of the text-books in history and economics for all aspirants for an arts degree."

ANAND, 25th January 1912.

The Kaithi script in the courts of Behar.

88. The Ánand (Lucknow), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 30th January), referring to the fact that the Kaithi script is much in vogue in courts in Behar, expresses the hope that now that it has become a separate province the Beharis will replace the Kaithi by the Nagri script.

KAISER-I-HIND, 25th January 1912.

Paucity of Muhammadan employés in the Court of Wards, Fyzabad.

89. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 25th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains of the paucity of Muhammadan employés in the Court of Wards, Fyzabad, and of their oppression by the Hindu officers.

He draws the attention of the Manager of the Court of Wards, Fyzabad, to the matter and trusts that his Muhammadan subordinates will not be left at the mercy of the Hindus.

MUSAFIR, 26th January 1912.

The Zamindar (Lahore) on Kedarnath Saigal's arrest.

90. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), remarks that the silence of the Zamindar (Lahore), at the acquittal of Kedarnath Saigal shows that its article on his arrest was not written in good faith. The editor asks Kedarnath to take legal steps against the paper which always ridicules and abuses the Hindu community.

OUDH AKHBAR, 28th January 1912.

European and Anglo-Indians and native money-lenders.

91. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 28th January 1912, refers to a contributed article published in the Civil and Military Gazette (Lahore) in which the writer suggested that some legislation be effected by Government to save Europeans and Anglo-Indians from the clutches of rapacious native money-lenders and says that the mahajans incur a great risk in lending money to persons who can give no security, and that on that account they are entitled to charge a high rate of interest.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 31st January 1912.

Paucity of lady doctors in India.

92. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 31st January 1912, expresses regret that female mortality has considerably increased in India on account of the paucity of efficient lady doctors, and approves of the suggestion made by the Times (London) that a medical college for women should be opened in India. The editor observes that if the authorities of the Kanya Maha Vidyalya, Jullundur, start a medical class in the institution, and if widows be admitted into that class, many lady doctors would be forthcoming and the vexed question of the destiny of widows would also be solved.

LEADER, 1st February 1912.

Indian sugar industry.

93. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st February 1912, published an article entitled "A threatened industry," in which the editor draws attention to the danger with which the Indian sugar industry is threatened, and states that imports are going up at an alarming rate associated simultaneously with a decline in internal production. He quotes statistics showing the quantities and values of sugar imported during the last five years, and goes on to say that, whereas ten years ago imported sugar formed only 5·9 per cent. of India's sugar supply, it now forms more than 20 per cent. of it. India, being the largest single producer of sugarcane in the world, is also one of the largest consumers of sugar, and, with an abundant supply of raw material and a ready market at home for the manufactured article, the question arises as to why the industry is declining and unable to hold its own against imported foreign sugars. The editor attributes this to the antiquated and wasteful methods of manufacture, and advocates the appointment of an expert engineer and chemist under the Board of Agriculture to assist the industry with their advice, so as to work on scientific and up-to-date lines. He lays stress on the necessity to adopt the central factory system, which has proved so successful in other sugar-producing countries, and is of opinion that by the adoption of that system alone

India will be able to compete with other countries. In conclusion he states that it is the duty of the Directors of Industries to attract capital to the enterprise by furnishing information and data.

V.—Legislation.

94. The Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for January 1912, has an article entitled "The United Provinces Court of Wards Bill," by "An Indian member of the Indian Civil Service," which purports to discuss and examine the proposals of Government without passion or prejudice. After commending the general principle of conserving the great landed families of the provinces the writer asserts that the chief need of the present day is men of the leisured class, to devote themselves to public service, and that such men will be more numerous if Government will give its protection and encouragement to large estate owners. He points out that it is to the tenant's interest as well as to that of Government that the land should be owned by large landlords rather than small proprietors. He expresses the hope that the proposed bill may prevent the traders, bankers and professional classes from investing their savings in land, and induce them to resort instead to industrial enterprises.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, January 1912.

The United Provinces Court of Wards Bill.

The writer proceeds to discuss the provisions for empowering Government to declare a proprietor incapable of managing his estate owing to his having entered upon a course of extravagance or owing to his failure to discharge the debts or liabilities due by him. He shows that these powers were adequately safeguarded. He says that it is fully recognized that in ordinary cases management by the person directly interested is more efficient than management by the subordinates of bureaucracy, and he relies on the efficiency of the advisory committee (of the landholders).

He refers to the objection made by a certain member of the Legislative Council in the meeting in August last that the taking over of an estate by the Court of Wards involves injury to tenants, and says that this is a complete misapprehension. He thinks that the Act will be more useful as a deterrent than as a remedy.

He refers to section 19 as the most debateable provision of the bill, and expresses the opinion that there should be no interference with contracts in force.

He supports the provision in section 58A of the bill for meeting from the estate any expenditure incurred by the Court of Wards in the cause of litigation undertaken regarding ownership on behalf of the ward.

95. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), in the issue of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 26th January), publishes a letter from a correspondent criticising certain objections recently published in the Times of India (Bombay) to the Elementary Education Bill. The writer describes the objections as frivolous and remarks that parents have always to use compulsion to send their children to school, and that it is the duty of Indian leaders to allay any discontent which may arise from the introduction of compulsory education among the masses. He expresses the opinion that, now that the Indian leaders are aware of the utility of education, they will not resent the imposition of a small tax for the promotion of the cause of education. In conclusion he points out that the experiment of compulsory primary education has made satisfactory progress in Baroda and that no difficulty has so far been experienced there.

MUSLIM GAZETTE. 21st January 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

96. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 26th January), expresses satisfaction at the statement made in the Viceroy's Council that the sum of fifty lakhs for the promotion of truly popular education announced by His Excellency the Governor General on the day of the coronation darbar at Delhi would be an Imperial grant in addition to the existing expenditure on primary education and would be an annually recurring grant. The editor remarks that Government will earn the gratitude of the people more completely by passing Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill into law, and he urges that elementary education should at least be introduced in places where the public is in its favour. He suggests that if Government cannot meet the entire cost of primary education it should realise half the cost from Indians.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 21st January 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

LEADER, 2nd February 1912.

97. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd February 1912, published an article entitled "Educational stagnation in the United Provinces," in which the writer criticises Sir Leslie Porter's action in opposing the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Bill for the extension of elementary education, and observes that it is not educational progress but educational stagnation that is witnessed in the United Provinces, and that no province in British India is more backward in the dissemination of education. He urges the establishment of more primary schools, and says that this step would unquestionably be followed by an increase in the number of scholars.

The Elementary Education Bill.

The writer condemns the argument that schools cannot be started without decent buildings and certificated teachers, and contends that an uncertificated teacher with a competent knowledge of reading, writing and arithmetic, is sufficient for the needs of a primary school. As regards the lack of accommodation, he quotes Mr. Krishnaswami Iyer's opinion that substantial school buildings are unnecessary, and that thatched or tiled sheds are more suitable to the climate of the country. He concludes with the remark that the education of the whole of the people of India is the accepted policy of the Government of India, and that the longer they delay in taking up the matter of elementary education the more difficult the problem will become.

VI.—Railway.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th January 1912.

98. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), expresses appreciation of the care and skill with which the staff and relieving station master of Rampur station averted an imminent collision between a goods and passenger train there on the night of the 23rd January 1912. The editor trusts that the services of the staff and the relieving station master will be appreciated by the railway authorities and that some reward will be given to them.

A collision averted on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

ARYA MITRA, 16th January 1912.

99. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), publishes an article on the United Provinces Arya Samaj gurukul at Muttra, in which the editor appeals to those Arya Samajists, who have taken offence at the transfer of the gurukul from Farrukhabad to Muttra to sink their personal differences in view of the importance of their mission, which is to work for the good of humanity generally, and he urges them to co-operate with other workers in improving the condition of this deserving institution. He reminds them that their rivals, the Hindus, the Christians and Muhammadans, far out-number them, and urges that they should not weaken the cause of the propagation of the Vedic faith by party strife.

The United Provinces Arya Samaj gurukul at Muttra.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 31st January 1912.

100. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 31st January 1912, publishes an article in reply to certain criticisms of the Kangri Gurukul made by Dharmpal, the editor of the Indar (Lahore). The editor reproduces Munshi Ram's letter to the Prakash (Lahore), and expresses regret that Munshi Ram should have had occasion to defend the gurukul. In the course of the article the editor observes as follows :—

The gurukul and Dharmpal.

"Dharmpal has played another trick to injure the interests of the gurukul. This trick is as mean as it is treacherous. This time he has attempted to mislead Government against the gurukul. In the first issue of the Indar a threat was several times held out that the writer was in possession of facts on the publicity of which the gurukul could not exist even for a day. I wondered what sort of bomb Dharmpal and his supporters had prepared which would tear the gurukul into pieces. In another issue of the Indar a letter was published which was said to have been written by Brahmachari Indra to Brahmachari Jai Chand. Seeing this I was struck dumb. I had read in legends of persons who, on account of selfishness, did not care for truth and falsehood; but on that day I for the first time found a living man who, for personal advantage, could do such a treacherous act. According to Mahatma Munshi Ram, Indra denies authorship of the letter. I think the views of Brahmachari Indra regarding Government are not so secret that any one could deceive the public on the strength of a fabricated letter. His views from time to time have been published in the Prachárak. Those who have read in the Prachárak (may remember) the note entitled 'Our duty towards Government' (vide Selections No. 38 of 1911, paragraph 4). Those who do not remember the note may refresh their memory by reading the same on page 12 of this issue, and those who have read the article 'King-Emperor should reside here' in no. 36G of the Prachárak (vide Selections No. 50 of 1911, paragraph 13), when it had become a 'daily' on the occasion of the darbar, cannot be deceived by this letter. But there is no need for me to write anything more in this connection. It is useless to criticise by arguments a letter whose very veracity is in question. In my opinion Mahatma Munshi Ram has acted generously in giving Dharmpal an opportunity to repent of his action and to apologize for (publishing) the fabricated letter. If he even now persist (in his action) he should be prepared for the consequences."

101. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), comments on the article that appeared in the Nur (Qadian, Gurdaspur), and the Musalman (Amritsar), in reply to its articles on the sanctity of the Qoran. Referring to the contention of the Nur that tautology in the Qoran is no defect, seeing that it is human nature to repeat an act, such as eating, bathing, hearing, &c., &c., several times, and that repetition is calculated to make a lasting impression on the minds of men, the editor says that God does not follow in the footsteps of men and that it is foolish to compare Him with men. He points out that, if a note saying "Read every verse a thousand times" had been prefixed to the Qoran, or if it had been ordained that the Qoran should be regularly read daily, the object of impressing the readers with the idea set forth in the Qoran would have been gained without running the risk of repeating a story over and over again.

MUSAFIR, 26th January 1912.

The sanctity of the Qoran.

In reply to the contention of the Musalman that tautology in the Qoran is not a defect, seeing that the Qoran, being a compilation of a series of religious lectures, cannot be free from tautology, he asks Sanaullah to prove that the Qoran contains nothing but lectures and to point where and before whom they were delivered.

102. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 26th January 1912 (received on the 29th January), has an article entitled "The tale of Islam," in which he publishes hadises with their translations under the following headings:—

MUSAFIR, 26th January 1912.

The tale of Islam.

"The age of hell" "Miraculous performances by fire," "Hours and minutes in hell," and "The scorpion of hell."

103. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), contains a contributed article in which the writer remarks that, according to the census returns, the number of Indian sadhus amounts to fifty-two lakhs and that some thirteen lakhs of rupees are spent daily for their maintenance. He urges the need for reforming the sadhus, the majority of whom would prove good religious preachers. He suggests that the learned Hindus who come to bathe in the Ganges in the month of Magh should convene a meeting of the sadhus and direct them to work in the cause of their religion.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th January 1912.

Reform of Indian sadhus.

104. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st January 1912 (received on the 29th January), takes exception to the action of the Hindus of Jharia in the Shahpur district of the Punjab who are said to have eaten pork to spite the Muhammadans who insisted on eating beef, and remarks that Hindus ought not to have resorted to evil means to compel the Muhammadans to give up beef-eating.

RAHBAR, 21st January 1912.

Beef and pork.

105. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 27th January 1912, condemns the "strange view of women in the West" expressed by Lala Har Dayal in an article contributed to the January number of the Modern Review, and remarks that the writer's views are narrow and extremely perverse.

LEADER, 27th January 1912.

Strange view of women in the West.

The editor observes that in European countries, where the laws of natural selection are recognized to a much greater extent in matrimonial matters than in the East, there is that powerful incentive to development of types of perfect manhood and womanhood which is wholly lacking in the East, and especially in India, and that it would have been better if the writer had taken care to depict accurately the disabilities, the misery, the contempt, the awful cruelty from which the Indian women suffer.

He also observes that extremists of the type of Har Dayal cannot expect to guide or lead Indian opinion unless they look to both sides of the question.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 31st January 1912.

Prevention of cow-slaughter.

106. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 31st January 1912, publishes some poems composed by Vaidya Manohar Lal of Mirzapur in which the Queen-Empress is welcomed to India and asked to remove the sufferings of Indians and to put a stop to the slaughter of cows.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

ALLAHABAD: } Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
The 3rd February 1912. } Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 6 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 10th February 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
	I.—POLITICS.
	(a)—Foreign:
1.	The Italian-Turkish war	129
2.	The awakening of China	129
3.	The situation in Persia and China ...	129
4.	The situation in Persia	129
5.	The situation in Persia	129
6.	The situation in Persia	129
7.	The situation in Persia	130
	(b)—Home:
8.	The need for union among Hindus ...	130
9.	Capable public workers in India ...	130
10.	Hindus and the King-Emperor ...	130
11.	The memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association of Bengal ...	130
12.	The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association ...	130
13.	The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association ...	131
14.	Self-government for India	131
15.	Proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett	131
16.	Muslim League	131
17.	The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) and the Muslim League	131
18.	Home Rule campaign in Ireland ...	131
19.	Muhammadans and the Indian National Congress	132
20.	Lord Hardinge at Dacca	132
21.	Lord Hardinge at Dacca	132
22.	The British press and the Gaekwar incident	132
23.	The sunset circular	132
24.	Relations between rich and poor Muhammadans	132
25.	The creation of an Indian council to advise His Majesty on Indian affairs ...	133
26.	Measures for the advancement of the Muhammadan community... ...	133
27.	Measures for the advancement of the Muhammadan community... ...	133
28.	The differences of opinion among enlightened Muhammadans	133
29.	The Royal boons	133
30.	Mr. Bonor Law's speech at the Albert Hall	133
31.	Election of Nawab Asad-ullah Khan to the Legislative Council	133
32.	The loyalty of Brahmans	134
33.	The Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar	134
34.	The Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar	134
35.	The "drain"	134
36.	The loyalty of Indians vindicated ...	135
37.	Permanent successor of Sir Archdale Earle...	135
38.	The change of capital	135
39.	The change of capital	135
40.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal and the attitude of Muhammadans	135
41.	Lord Curzon and the annulment of the partition of Bengal	136
42.	The annulment of the partition of Bengal	136
43.	The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	136
44.	The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	137
45.	The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	137
46.	The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	137
47.	The Indian Press Act	137

The editor observes that in European countries, where the laws of natural selection are recognized to a much greater extent in matrimonial matters than in the East, there is that powerful incentive to development of types of perfect manhood and womanhood which is wholly lacking in the East, and especially in India, and that it would have been better if the writer had taken care to depict accurately the disabilities, the misery, the contempt, the awful cruelty from which the Indian women suffer.

He also observes that extremists of the type of Har Dayal cannot expect to guide or lead Indian opinion unless they look to both sides of the question.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 31st January 1912.

Prevention of cow-slaughter.

106. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 31st January 1912, publishes some poems composed by Vaidya Manohar Lal of Mirzapur in which the Queen-Empress is welcomed to India and asked to remove the sufferings of Indians and to put a stop to the slaughter of cows.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

ALLAHABAD: The 3rd February 1912.

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, United Provinces.

PRINTED BY P. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 6 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 10th February 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The Italian-Turkish war 129
2. The awakening of China 129
3. The situation in Persia and China ... 129
4. The situation in Persia 129
5. The situation in Persia 129
6. The situation in Persia 129
7. The situation in Persia 130

(b)—Home:

8. The need for union among Hindus ... 130
9. Capable public workers in India ... 130
10. Hindus and the King-Emperor ... 130
11. The memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association of Bengal ... 130
12. The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association ... 130
13. The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association ... 131
14. Self-government for India 131
15. Proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett 131
16. Muslim League 131
17. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) and the Muslim League 131
18. Home Rule campaign in Ireland ... 131
19. Muhammadans and the Indian National Congress 132
20. Lord Hardinge at Dacca 132
21. Lord Hardinge at Dacca 132
22. The British press and the Gaekwar incident 132
23. The sunset circular 132
24. Relations between rich and poor Muhammadans 132
25. The creation of an Indian council to advise His Majesty on Indian affairs ... 133

Page.

26. Measures for the advancement of the Muhammadan community... ... 133
27. Measures for the advancement of the Muhammadan community... ... 133
28. The differences of opinion among enlightened Muhammadans 133
29. The Royal boons 133
30. Mr. Bonor Law's speech at the Albert Hall 133
31. Election of Nawab Asad-ullah Khan to the Legislative Council 133
32. The loyalty of Brahmans 134
33. The Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar 134
34. The Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar 134
35. The "drain" 134
36. The loyalty of Indians vindicated ... 135
37. Permanent successor of Sir Archdale Earle... 135
38. The change of capital 135
39. The change of capital 135
40. The annulment of the partition of Bengal and the attitude of Muhammadans 135
41. Lord Curzon and the annulment of the partition of Bengal 136
42. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 136
43. The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 136
44. The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 137
45. The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 137
46. The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 137
47. The Indian Press Act 137

Page.

48. The Indian Press Act 137
49. The Indian Press Act 137
50. The Indian Press Act 138
51. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 138
52. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 138
53. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 138
54. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 138
55. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 138
56. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 139
57. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 139
58. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 139
59. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 139
60. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 139

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

61. Medical officers in native states ... 139
62. A murder case in Kashmir state ... 140
63. The postponement of the marriage of the Princess Indra with His Highness the Maharaja of Gwalior 140

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

64. Restriction in enrolment as pleaders in the Punjab 140
65. The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab ... 140
66. Judgment in a case concerning a mosque at Meerut 140
67. Vakils and district judgeship ... 140
68. Rigorous imprisonment to a sick man ... 141
69. Mr. Saiyid Hasan Imam and Mr. A Chaudhari as Judges of the Calcutta High Court... 141
70. A clerk dismissed for not salaaming a Police Superintendent at Ahmednagar 141
71. India's judicial officer 141

(b)—Police:

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

72. The proposed abolition of the octroi duty 142

(e)—Education:

73. The proposed Hindu University ... 142
74. State scholarship tenable in Europe for the study of Sanskrit and Arabic ... 142
75. Shankar Lal school at Sambhal, in the Moradabad district ... 142
76. Gurukuls started by Swami Darshanananand 142
77. A survey of the gurukul 142
78. A suggestion for a Islamia college at Delhi 143

Page.

79. The Khwab-o-Khiyal 143
80. The Khwab-o-Khiyal 143
81. The proposed Muslim University ... 143
82. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 143
83. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 143
84. The proposed Dacca University ... 143
85. The proposed Dacca University ... 143
86. The proposed Dacca University ... 144
87. The secretaryship of the Muslim Hewett school 144

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

88. Agricultural improvement 144

(g)—General:

89. Supply of rasad 145
90. The condition of Indian Muhammadans, 145
91. Husainabad wakf trusteeship ... 145
92. Bakshish to a chaprasi 145
93. Co-operative credit societies ... 145
94. The Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal dharamshala 145
95. The hand-loom industry 146
96. Corruption among Government servants 146
97. The Hindi-Urdu controversy ... 146
98 The Hindi-Urdu controversy ... 146
99. Preservation of estates belonging to Hindus 146

V.—LEGISLATION.

100. The need for a bill to regulate insurance and other companies 146
101. The medical bill in the Bombay Legislative Council 146

VI.—RAILWAY.

102. Overcrowding of passengers in railway trains 146
103. A complaint against the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway 147
104. A grievance on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway 147

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

105. The religious festivals of Hindus and Muhammadans 147
106. The Kayasth community 147
107. The Muharram at Agra 147
108, The Arya Samaj and Christianity ... 148
109. The Musafir and Islam 148
110. A religious controversy between the Musáfir (Agra) and the Curzon Gazette (Delhi) 148
111. The prohibition of cow-killing in Ajodhya 148
112. Indian sadhus 148
113. Prevention of conversion of minors as sadhus 149
114. Prevention of early marriages ... 149
115. Bathing ghats and Muhammadan constables... 149
116. "The impressions of a traveller among non-Christian races" 149

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st February 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	300 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 „
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 „
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 „
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 „
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 „
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 „
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 „
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 „
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 „
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 „
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 „
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 „
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 „
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 „
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 „
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 „
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 „
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	800 „
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 „
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Asam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahifa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasim-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyóti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	300 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27... ...	5,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	30 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 40 ...	1,350 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; Brahman.	2,200 ,,
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	1,000 ,,
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	1,200 ,,
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla; 45	500 ,,
133	Swadesh Bándhavé	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 44	550 ,,
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman.
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 40	850 ,,
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 43.	1,000 ,,
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
142	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	775 ,,
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 40 ...	200 ,,
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 34	1,500 ,,
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám; Khatri; 55 ...	3,000 ,,
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Jadu (Jaunpur), of the 23rd January 1912 (received on the 10th February), commends the zeal shown by the students of the Aligarh Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College in subscribing funds for the relief of wounded and suffering Turks and reports that a first instalment of Rs. 3,800 has been sent. JADU, 23rd January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

A meeting is reported to have been held in the college mosque after prayers at which the students discussed the miserable plight of the Turks and agreed that they should refrain from taking tea, spices, and other articles of food that might be considered luxuries, and that they should live on plain fare so as to be able to raise more money for the Turkish relief fund.

2. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 8th February 1912, refers to the signs of awakening in Asiatic kingdoms, and observes that the changes of recent years in Turkey and Persia have exposed the fallacy of the European theory that the republican form of Government was an impossibility in oriental countries. The editor expresses the opinion that the awakening of China is a still more wonderful phenomenon, seeing that in spite of the enormous size of the country China has assimilated a democratic constitution in such a short period. He remarks that there is little doubt that the days of absolute monarchy in China are numbered, and that democracy is destined to take its place permanently. He concludes the article by reproducing the substance of the recent manifesto issued by Dr. Sun-Yat-Sen, the proposed president of the Chinese republic. ABHYUDAYA, 8th February 1912.

The awakening of China.

3. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), ascribes the present deplorable situation in Persia to the selfishness of the ex-Shah of that country, as well as to the effect produced on the Persians by the example of Japan. The editor observes that not long ago Persia ridiculed the suggestion of Japan that friendly relations should be cultivated among Asiatic kingdoms similarly to those obtaining among European powers, while she is now looking to Japan for help. With regard to affairs in China he expresses gratification that the Emperor has consented to abdicate the throne for the good of China, and warns the people of that country of the need for forgetting their differences whenever any foreign power interferes in the administration of the country. RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

The situation in Persia and China.

4. The Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 31st January 1912 (received on the 5th February), refers to the alleged revelation of secret designs on the part of Russia to attack India, said to have been discovered at the house of a Russian General at St. Petersburg, and observes that it remains to be seen whether this disclosure results in any change in British foreign policy, and whether it will convince the India Council that the occupation of Persia by Russia means the cotermination of Russian and Indian boundaries. ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 31st January 1912.

The situation in Persia.

5. The Ittihád (Moradabad), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 3rd February), strongly condemns the atrocities alleged to have been committed by Russia in Persia, and lays the responsibility on the former for all the internal troubles in the country. ITTIHAD, 1st February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor expresses apprehension of an attack on India by Russia if she gains a foothold in Persia.

6. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 4th February 1912, refers to the article published in the Times (London) on the inadvisability of sending an expeditionary force to Southern Persia, and to the advice given by Lord Lamington that the British Government should try to maintain the integrity of Persia. The editor observes that the British public now seem to be favourably inclined towards Persia, and he asks the Muhammadans of India to request the British Government to save Persia. TAJIR, 4th February 1912.

The situation is Persia.

AGRA AKHBAR, 7th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

7. One Karamat-ullah of Atrauli contributes an article to the Agra Akhbár, of the 7th February 1912, in which he denounces Russian and Italian aggression in Persia and Tripoli respectively.

He expresses surprise that the European powers take no notice of the atrocities alleged to have been committed by two of their number in Persia and Tripoli, and observes that if any Muhammadan power had been guilty of such conduct all of them would have considered their duty to interfere.

(b)—Home.

RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

The need for union among Hindus.

8. The Rahbár (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), publishes a lengthy article in which the editor, urging the need for union among Hindus, describes the moral lessons that can be derived from the Ramayan, and remarks that, if the leaders of the Hindu community desire that the Hindus should live in amity, they should establish Vidya Bardhani sabhas at various places to educate the children of their community so that they may have regard for the rights of others.

RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

Capable public workers in India.

9. The Rahbár (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), expresses regret that there are very few capable men in India, and that on the death of a good public worker it becomes difficult to find a suitable substitute for him. The editor observes that of the four main supports of the British committee of the Indian National Congress, Mr. W. C. Bonnerji is dead, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji is living in retirement in India, Mr. Hume has reached his eighty-second year and is unable to be an active worker, while Sir W. Wedderburn, in view of his advancing years and indifferent health, can hardly be expected to work much longer on the committee. He observes that unless Indian leaders make arrangements to prepare a large number of Indians for public work the regeneration of India cannot be effected.

RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

Hindus and the King-Emperor.

10. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), expresses regret that a rumour should have gained circulation in Great Britain that some Indian had attacked the King-Emperor. The editor observes that, while it cannot be denied that some young Hindus might attack English officers, it is preposterous to think that a Hindu, who regards a king as an incarnation of God, would attack His Majesty, particularly as he is of so noble a disposition.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 31st January 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association of Bengal.

11. Nawab Mushtaq Husain contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 31st January 1912 (received on the 5th February), in which he refers to the memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association of Bengal to the Government of India, and remarks that the members of the association should not have demanded representation on the local and district boards in proportion to their population, but ought to have only tried to secure half the seats on the boards, and that they ought not to have suggested the alternate appointment of a Hindu and Muhammadan as a member in the executive council, seeing that such an appointment will not meet with the approbation of the community which will not be represented in the executive council. He suggests the simultaneous appointment of two members (a Hindu and a Muhammadan) for the executive council of the new presidency of Bengal.

As regards the other resolutions passed by the association he expresses his agreement and observes that the Muhammadans of other provinces also fully approve of them.

ANAND, 1st February 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association.

12. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 3rd February), examines at some length the grounds urged in the memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association of Bengal to His Excellency the Viceroy in connection with the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and observes that the requests contained in the memorial are not justifiable, and that if they be granted it will be to the detriment of other communities.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association.

13. Referring to the memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association, Bengal, to the Viceroy, the Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), expresses surprise that Muhammadans should on the one hand suggest co-operating with Hindus and joining the Indian National Congress and on the other demand special rights and privileges from Government. The editor remarks that in view of the unreasonable demands set forth in the memorial no one can help saying that the cry of Muhammadans to join hands with Hindus was only in the nature of a threat to Government, so that they might be better able to accomplish their object.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

Self-government for India.

14. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), in a leading article discussing the possibilities of self-government for India urges Indians, regardless of differences of religion, to settle their all points of dispute, and to learn to work in harmony. The editor says that the efforts of their countrymen should first be directed towards making British rule in the country as stable as possible, and then they should constitutionally ask Government to extend the powers of the ruling chiefs and to appoint them as Lieutenant Governors under the direct supervision of Governor General. He observes that, in case the Indians get self-government, either the Indian National Congress or the Muslim League should cease to exist, and expresses the opinion that the latter could be then easily dispensed with. He refers to the apprehension expressed in some journals that in case India gets self-government civil wars will ensue in the country, and that Afghanistan will interfere in favour of the Muhammadans and Nepal in favour of the Hindus, and observes that recent developments in Persia will never allow Afghanistan to think of anything but her own boundaries, and that the suggestion of an attack on India by Nepal like the conquest of a fort by a besieged army.

SURMA-I-ROZGAR, 1st February 1912.

Proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett.

15. With reference to the proposal to establish a memorial to Sir John Hewett, the present Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, the Surma-i-Rozgár (Agra), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 10th February), says he hopes that it will not take the form of a statue and suggests that the memorial should take the form of an educational institution. The editor urges the advisability of establishing such memorials in all districts.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

Muslim League.

16. The Lucknow Gazette, of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 3rd February), expresses regret at the absence of any branch of the Muslim League in Sindh, and remarks that the members of the league in other provinces do not perform the duties that are due to their community, and that they should not give the Hindus the opportunity of criticising the working of their league.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) and the Muslim League.

17. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, refers to a note of the Paisa Akhbár (Lahore), of the 30th January 1912, in which it was stated that the Muslim Gazette was the organ of the Muslim League and denies the truth of the statement.

The editor says that, if at the next session of the All India Muslim League the members do not declare their policy according to the real feelings and sentiments of the community, it will become necessary to bring into existence a more courageous party which will extend political training amongst Muhammadans and will start constitutional agitation to safeguard their interests.

He observes that the British Government in India is a blessing for the Muhammadans, and he expresses the wish to see them progressing independently and boldly as other communities are doing.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

Home Rule campaign in Ireland.

18. Referring to the opposition of the Ulstermen to the proposed speech by Mr. Churchill in the Ulster Hall in connection with the Home Rule campaign in Ireland, the Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), remarks that if in India there had been a dispute between two parties over a lecture, Government would have settled the dispute by requiring both the parties to furnish security for keeping the peace.

OUDH AKHBAR, 3rd February 1912.

Muhammadans and the Indian National Congress.

19. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 3rd February 1912, referring to the advice given by a Muhammadan that the Hindus and Muhammadans of Behar should join the Indian National Congress, when it holds its sittings at Bankipur, remarks that Muhammadans seem to be sincere in the expression of their desire to co-operate with Hindus. The editor observes that Muhammadans should place full confidence in the Congress, if they are desirous of joining it and should secure for it the sympathy of such of the Muhammadans as are still opposed to the Congress.

LEADER, 4th February 1912.

Lord Hardinge at Dacca.

20. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "Lord Hardinge at Dacca" in which the editor discusses the replies made by His Excellency the Viceroy to the Muhammadan deputation that waited on him there. As regards the starting of a university at Dacca he expresses the opinion that the creation of similar institutions in Burma, Behar and the Central Provinces cannot long be postponed; that the larger the number of universities the more easy it will be for them to be teaching and not merely examining bodies, and that the establishment of more universities will mean a powerful impetus to educational progress. Referring to the replies regarding proportional representation upon district and local boards, appointments to executive councils, and the reservation of a proportion of appointments in the public services, the editor remarks that the enunciation of the principles is encouraging, but that it cannot be said that the principle of only appointing qualified Muhammadans to the public service has been adhered to in recent years.

ADVOCATE, 4th February 1912.

Lord Hardinge at Dacca.

21. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th February 1912, in a leading article entitled "Lord Hardinge at Dacca" expresses appreciation of the very cordial reception accorded to His Excellency, which the editor observes was but natural in view of the recent administrative changes. He also states that the Hindus and Muhammadans of Dacca had always lived peacefully together, and it was only after the partition measure that their relations became strained, and remarks that now the cause of their differences has been removed, the two communities will live in harmony in future.

Referring to His Excellency's speeches, the editor expresses satisfaction that there is to be no departure from the established principles regarding separate electorates.

ADVOCATE, 4th February 1912.

The British press and the Gaekwar incident.

22. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th February 1912, has the following :—

"The remark made by the Overland Mail (London) that 'there is a general expectation that the Indian Government will not be content with the publication of His Highness's letter of apology, and indeed that document is clearly insufficient without the indication of the view taken by the Viceroy as to the adequacy of the Gaekwar's explanation' is, however, an ominous one. We hope the Government will have the wisdom to let the curtain fall now on this unfortunate incident."

ABHYUDAYA, 4th February 1912.

The sunset circular.

23. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, refers to the case in which Mr. John Cowan, late editor of the Sindh Gazette (Karachi), was punished for infringing "the sunset circular," and suggests that in the present circumstances of the country, which have mainly been brought about by the gracious visit of Their Imperial Majesties, there is no apparent need for the continued enforcement of the circular. The editor expresses the hope that Government will give due consideration to the matter, and that, if necessary, it will cancel the circular.

TAJIR, 4th February 1912.

Relations between rich and poor Muhammadans.

24. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 4th February 1912, expresses regret that the rich Muhammadans do not accord equal treatment to their co-religionists, which the editor says is likely to injure the interests of the national institutions. The editor asks the Muhammadans to change their attitude towards their poor brethren.

25. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 4th February 1912, takes exception to the suggestion of the Pioneer (Allahabad), that, in view of the fact that the India Office consisted merely of Englishmen, and was so unable to properly advise His Majesty on Indian affairs, an Indian council consisting of Anglo-Indians should be created to advise the King-Emperor in matters relating to India. The editor characterizes the suggestion as detrimental to the interests of India, seeing that the majority of Anglo-Indians do not sympathize even with the legitimate aspirations of Indians.

The creation of an Indian council to advise His Majesty on Indian affairs.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 4th February 1912.

26. Nawab Haji Ismail Khan contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, in which he advises the Muhammadans to learn Western sciences, and observes that it is the only means whereby to effect their regeneration.

He says that the weakness of the Turkish and the Persian governments is not due to the desire of the European powers to destroy Muhammadan independent kingdoms, but to their disregard for the study of modern sciences.

He asks his co-religionists not to waste their time unnecessarily in requesting the British Government to interfere in the affairs of Persia and Turkey, and urges them to recognize the ignorance of the Muhammadans of Western sciences as their chief stumbling block and to endeavour to remove it.

Measures for the advancement of the Muhammadan community.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

27. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, expresses approval of the advice given by Nawab Haji Ismail Khan to the Muhammadans to learn Western sciences, but questions the wisdom of his advice that they should not request the British Government to help the Turks and the Persians, as well as the truth of his statement that European powers were not determined to destroy the existence of independent Muhammadan kingdoms.

The editor says that the British Government has under its rule the largest number of Muhammadans in the world, and that therefore it should be its duty to pay regard to the feelings and sentiments of its millions of Muhammadan subjects, and he asks why European powers do not interfere in the internal affairs of petty Christian countries.

Measures for the advancement of the Muhammadan community.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

28. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th February 1912, expresses regret at the differences of opinion among the enlightened Muhammadans, who are alleged to have no sympathy for their poor and suffering co-religionists.

The editor expresses approval of the patriotism of the Hindus and of their unanimity in following the advice of their leaders, and deplores the absence of such a spirit amongst the Muhammadans.

He takes exception to the remarks made by Mr. Seraj-ud-din, Barrister-at-law of the Punjab, on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13), and observes that the letter of the Nawab was moderately and wisely written, while the criticisms of Mr. Seraj-ud-din are wholly devoid of truth.

The differences of opinion among enlightened Muhammadans.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th February 1912.

29. The Independent (Allahabad), of the 5th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the administrative changes announced by His Majesty the King-Emperor at Delhi, and remarks that the changes will facilitate the administration of the provinces affected by the change and will give them ample opportunities for making improvements.

The Royal boons.

INDEPENDENT, 5th February 1912.

30. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 6th February 1912, refers to the speech delivered by Mr. Bonar Law, the leader of the Conservative party at the Albert Hall, and remarks that while it is commendable to express one's opinion freely on any subject it is seditious to speak violently on any topic. The editor remarks that Mr. Bonar Law could have criticized Government measures in moderate terms.

Mr. Bonar Law's speech at the Albert Hall.

OUDH AKHBAR, 6th February 1912.

31. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th February 1912, has the following:—

Election of Nawab Asad-ullah Khan to the Legislative Council.

LEADER, 6th February 1912.

"A local nawab has been elected to represent the Meerut city municipality on the Legislative Council in the place of the late lamented Rai Bahadur Lala Ramanuj Dayal. Among gentlemen elected by the mixed constituencies are two other Muhammadans—the Raja of Jahangirabad for the Fyzabad division and Khan Bahadur Al-i-Nabi for the Agra municipality. Among the nominated members are three more—His Highness the Nawab of Rampur, the Nawab of Pahasu and Mr. Raffique. There are four Muhammadans returned by their separate electorates. Thus there are ten Muhammadans in a Council in which there are sixteen Hindus, though in the province the latter form nearly 86 per cent. of the population and the former only about 14 per cent. Let fair-minded men judge of the justice and impartiality of the arrangement. We do not now ask for the abolition of the separate electorates, but we do urge emphatically that those who asked for and have obtained the separate electorates ought not to have the privilege of snatching away any of the general electorates' seats. How can the Hindus help complaining of the present system?"

ZUL QARNAIN, 7th February 1912.

The loyalty of Brahmans.

32. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 7th February 1912, refers to the article by Dr. J. Beattie Crosier published in the Fortnightly Review in which it was suggested that the Brahmans are responsible for spreading dissatisfaction amongst the Indians against the British Government, and remarks that the author was wrong in condemning the whole race of Brahmans as disloyal to Government, and observes that it was unjust to brand the whole community for the guilt of a few members.

LEADER, 6th February 1912.

The Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar.

33. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th February 1912, publishes a note referring to the rumoured appointments of the Hon'ble Maulvi Saiyid Shams-ul-Huda as a member of the new Bengal Executive Council, and of the Maharaja of Darbhanga to the Executive Council of Behar. The editor expresses the opinion that Mr. Huda is an able man, though somewhat of a reactionary, being, for instance, a pronounced opponent of the Elementary Education Bill. As regards the Maharaja of Darbhanga he remarks as follows:—"We may at once admit that he has taken a larger part in public affairs than many other zamindars, but he cannot be said to possess ability, and his appointment will naturally give less satisfaction to the 'intellectuals' than that of a member of the reform party would do."

ADVOCATE, 8th February 1912.

The Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar.

34. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912, commenting on the rumoured appointment of Mr. Shams-ul-Huda and the Maharaja of Darbhanga to the Executive Councils of Bengal and Behar respectively, expresses satisfaction with the selections made, and remarks that the Maharaja is a cultured member of the aristocracy, who has already served with distinction as a revenue officer and who will be able to render every help to the Government of the new province. The editor says that he would, however, have been pleased had the Maharaja been left free to work for the Hindu University and other causes dear to him, and if the appointment had been given to a representative from the middle classes.

LEADER. 7th February 1912.

The "drain."

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "Poverty in India, its causes, effects and remedies" in which the writer remarks that it is an accepted fact that India is a poor country, and that it would be no exaggeration to say that many of the inhabitants live on the verge of starvation, as they can only afford one meal a day. He attributes the present state of poverty to the early commercial policy of England. India from being a manufacturing country had to fall back upon agriculture, as her industries were destroyed through the high and prohibitive import duties on goods sent to England, and her exports are now largely raw material. Agriculture, which has become the only source of the nation's income, is so heavily taxed that it leaves the cultivator barely enough to keep him alive in an ordinary year. The writer then turns from the source of wealth to its distribution, and states that a quarter of the revenue of India is remitted to England as home charges, to which must be added the large sums remitted by European officers out of India, all of which is lost to the country for ever. The effect of these operations is the ever-growing poverty of the people and the increase in crime in India. The whole population, more or less, is dependent on agriculture, and if agricultural depression occurs it means famine.

The remedies suggested by the writer are the reduction of taxes, permanent settlement for the whole of India, the revival of industries under Government encouragement, and the stopping of the extension of railways by means of state loans or under guarantee of interest from taxes.

36. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th February 1912, has the following :— TAFRIH, 7th February 1912.

The loyalty of Indians vindicated.

"The King-Emperor during his stay in Calcutta and other places proved by walking about without restraint that he had full confidence in the loyalty of his Indian subjects. When His Excellency the Viceroy came to know that with the exception of a few misguided persons the people of Bengal were loyal, and that the district authorities had unnecessarily kept open a new branch in the Criminal Investigation Department for their safety he ordered the abolition of the branch at the beginning of the present year. The suspicion of the district authorities ought to have abated by the noble example set by His Majesty and the Viceroy. But it is a matter of regret that the suspicion continues. The Viceroy stayed in Dacca on the 29th and 30th January. In connection with the arrangements for his visit the local authorities had ordered the vacation of a certain house until the Viceroy should have passed along a certain road. The persons affected by this order were much aggrieved, and it was withdrawn. It appears that the district officers had to issue the order in consequence of the kindness of the police, and that His Excellency must have ordered its withdrawal when he heard of it. This action of the Viceroy besides gratifying the people of Dacca must have taught a lesson to the officers who rely on police reports and suspect the loyalty of their faithful subjects."

37. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th February 1912, publishes a note in which the editor expresses the hope that it is not the intention of the Government of India to confirm Mr. H. Wheeler as Home Secretary, as he is not a Madras civilian. He remarks that it is right and proper that every presidency and province should be represented in the central Government, and that as Madras is not now so represented, a senior officer of that presidency should be appointed as the permanent successor of Sir Archdale Earle. LEADER, 8th February 1912.

Permanent successor of Sir Archdale Earle.

38. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February, refers to the statement made by Surendra Nath Banarji in the course of his speech at the Calcutta Congress that the influence of Bengal in the Government did not depend upon whether Calcutta was or was not the capital for three months of the year, but upon the moral and intellectual character of the Bengali people, which remained unaffected by the change, and to the favourable comments of the Manchester Guardian (Manchester) on that statement. The editor expresses surprise that the Anglo-Indians should oppose the transfer of the seat of the Imperial capital, when 95 per cent. of the Bengalis do not object to the announcement made by the King-Emperor. RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

The change of capital.

39. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912, in an article entitled "The Bengal Chamber of Commerce on the changes" criticizes the letter addressed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce to the Government of India on the administrative changes announced at the Darbar. The editor remarks that the announcement of the transfer of the seat of Government to Delhi has been a severe shock to the Anglo-Indian community of Calcutta, and that it has created considerable bitterness and disappointment among them. He notes that from a perusal of the letter and from the discussion which took place at the meeting it is evident that the Chamber have not considered the opinion of the people of the country. Public opinion according to them is the opinion of the European community in India, and it is a strange irony of fate that such a body should come forward to accuse the Government of want of consideration for the views of others and of disregard of public opinion. ADVOCATE, 8th February 1912.

The change of capital.

40. The Darbár (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), commenting on the article on the subject of the annulment of the partition of Bengal that appeared in the Paisa Akhbár (Lahore), remarks DARBAR, 16th January 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal and the attitude of Muhammadans.

that the reform of a measure which was said to be a settled fact by Lord Morley should not be regarded as a blunder, seeing that every Government makes amendments in its rules and laws according to the changing circumstances. The editor observes that it is not wise to conclude from the annulment of the partition of Bengal that the Secretary of State and the Viceroy were afraid of the opponents of the partition, seeing that the Viceroy in his despatch said that, "a settlement to be satisfactory and conclusive must be so clearly based upon broad grounds of political and administrative expediency as to negative any presumption that it has been exacted by clamour or agitation." The editor states that it is preposterous to suggest that Muhammadans have expressed a desire to join the Indian National Congress in order to threaten Government for having annulled the partition of Bengal against their wishes.

Commenting on the article on the attitude of Muhammadans that appeared in the Indian Social Reformer (Bombay) he says that, though it cannot be admitted that Muhammadans desire to join the Congress only because they are offended at some of the Government measures, it cannot be denied that they interest themselves too much in the affairs of Turkey and Persia. He says that apparently Muhammadans have no cause for dissatisfaction, and that they are wrong if they think that Government has been unjust to them. He observes that Indians have no right to criticize the relations of Government with other foreign powers, and he advises both Hindus and Muhammadans to effect a rapprochement, seeing that both communities are equal in the eyes of His Majesty.

ABHYUDAYA, 4th February 1912.

Lord Curzon and the annulment of the partition of Bengal.

41. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, refers to the various stages by which Lord Curzon has been falling in the estimation of the world, and points out how among others Sir Andrew Frazer, who was the right hand of Lord Curzon in the matter of the partition of Bengal, is now expressing approval of its annulment, now that times have changed and His Imperial Majesty has re-united the two Bengals. The editor remarks that such a radical change is either due to the spirit of the times or that it shows that the quondam supporters of Lord Curzon were time-servers.

AL BASHIR, 6th February 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

42. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 6th February 1912, refers to the replies given by His Excellency the Governor General to the different addresses presented to him at Dacca, and expresses appreciation of the proposal of a university for the Eastern Bengal and hopes that in the new university special attention will be paid to the needs and requirements of the Muhammadans. The editor suggests the opening of Government Muhammadan high schools in the province as has been done in Berar, the transformation of the oriental side of the Calcutta Madarsa into a Muhammadan Government College on the model of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and the abolition of the system of maktab education from Bengal, and observes that if Government introduces facilities for the education of the Muhammadans and frees them from the domination of the Bengalis the former will have no cause of dissatisfaction at the annulment of the partition. He expresses gratification at the declaration by His Excellency that the pledges given to the Muhammadans regarding separate electorates would be respected, but he urges the need of separate representation on local boards as well, and trusts that the pledges given to the Muhammadan community by Lord Minto will be fulfilled.

He goes on to lay stress on the need for specifying the number of posts in the public service for Muhammadans, and suggests that they should import capable Muhammadans from the other provinces until the province itself can supply them.

He suggests that in order that Government may be in touch with Muhammadan requirements a certain part of the year be fixed for the Governor's stay at Dacca.

JADU, 16th January 1912.

The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

43. The Jadu (Jaunpur), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 10th February), ascribes the unfavourable comments of the Congress organs on the article contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, to the fact that he had advised that Muhammadans should keep themselves aloof from Hindus. The editor observes that, in spite of the differences obtaining among Muhammadans, they are still in a condition to effect their own regeneration separately, and he expresses surprise that Hindus should resent any attempt being made by Muhammadans to remove their shortcomings. He reminds the Hindus that the Muhammadans were once a conquering nation and that they are unwilling to disgrace their name by allowing any other community to exercise undue influence over them or to disregard their interests.

44. The Cawnpore Gazette, of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), urges the necessity for unity between the Hindus and Muhammadans for the good of the country. The editor invites the attention of his countrymen to this matter of improving relations and trusts that in the near future the differences between the two communities will be settled. CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

45. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912, expresses regret at the little progress made by Indians in recent years in spite of great efforts, and remarks that unless the need for co-operation is recognized little hope can be entertained of any real improvement. OUDH AKHBAR, 8th February 1912.

The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

The editor refers to the want of unity and of method in the efforts made by different communities for their advancement, and observes that if they were to become united and to demand their rights as one community, all existing friction and jealousy would disappear.

46. Nawab Mushtaq Husain contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 8th February 1912, in which he expresses approval of the holding of joint meetings of Hindus and Muhammadans provided their aim and object is a common one and provided they do not give expression at such meetings to views and opinions contrary to each other's interests. He observes that if this is impossible the holding of separate meetings is likely to do more good to each community. ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

The relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

47. The Cawnpore Gazette (Cawnpore), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), supports the complaint made by the Hindu (Lahore) about the hardship caused by the Press Act to the Indian press, and that its severity was admitted by the King-Emperor himself on the occasion of the Coronation Darbar, remarks that its repeal will be the greatest boon that can be conferred upon the Indian press. The editor observes that the Hindu papers had been urging its repeal from the very beginning, but that since the annulment of the partition of Bengal the Muhammadans also have changed their policy, and begun to urge that the Act should be repealed. He expresses the hope that the Hindus and Muhammadans by their combined efforts may succeed in getting it repealed. CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

48. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), says that seeing that peace is restored in the country and Government is assured of the loyalty of the people the existence of the Indian Press Act is no longer necessary. The editor strongly urges Government to repeal the Act, which is alleged to be an obstacle to the progress of the country. ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

49. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), referring to the security demanded from the Edward Gazette (Abbotabad), remarks that though it is a matter of regret that the Press Act should have been brought into operation after His Majesty's visit to India, yet Government is not to blame, seeing that the provisions of the Act were knowingly violated. The editor observes that though Muhammadans, unlike the Hindus, strongly supported the Act when it was passed, in the hope that as they were the favourites of Government the Act would not affect them, yet Government, with characteristic justice showed no favour to them, and the Muhammadans have had, so far, to suffer from the Act more than any other community. MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th February 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

50. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912, suggests that now that the state of affairs in India has become satisfactory the Indian Press Act should be repealed. The editor observes that newspapers are a source of information to Government and that it is not proper to restrict the liberty of the press. He remarks that it was due to the passing of the Indian Press Act that the Indian press could not inform Government of the attitude of the Maharaja of Baroda towards Government. He expresses the hope that Government will earn the gratitude of the press by repealing the Act.

VEDIC MAGAZINE, Magh (January 1912).

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

51. The editor of the Vedic Magazine (Hardwar), in his editorial notes for the month of Magh (January 1912). discusses at some length the letter by Saiyid Raza Ali, the secretary of the Moradabad District Muslim League, urges the Muhammadans to follow the advice given by Mr. Raza Ali, and expresses the hope that Muslim goodwill towards Hindus will not depend upon British foreign policy, which is a changing factor, but that it will rest upon the solid and adamantine foundations of a common heritage and common traditions.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

52. The Lucknow Gazette, of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 3rd February), takes exception to the wish expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress and remarks that such a course will be detrimental to their best interests.

The editor urges his co-religionists to devote their energies to the spread of education, and asks them to depend for their salvation on their own exertions and to get rid of the idea of receiving favours from others.

JADU, 2nd January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

53. The Jadu (Jaunpur), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th February), takes strong exception to the comments of the Pioneer (Allahabad) on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13), and remarks that the comments were unjustified and based on a perversion of the facts. The editor complains that the Pioneer has adopted a hostile attitude towards the interests of the Muhammadans since the departure of Mr. Archbold from the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and that since then it has always been trying to do injury to the Muhammadans.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

54. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), remarks that in 1907 Muhammadans adopted a political policy and demanded special rights and privileges from Government on the ground of their political importance, with the result that the relations between them and the Hindus became strained. The editor observes that in the words of the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) the political policy adopted by Muhammadans on the advice of some of their leaders was that of sycophancy and servility, which, besides straining the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, proved detrimental to the interests of the latter as is pointed out by the Muhammadan press. He states that, though Muhammadans have given up that policy, there is still some difference of opinion as to what should be their future policy. He advises his Muhammadan brethren not to replace the policy of sycophancy and servility by a policy calculated to excite hatred and distrust against Government, which, notwithstanding its shortcomings is, he says, the best of all Governments. He observes that he gives this advice because the tone of the Muhammadan press has recently so changed as to be likely to excite hatred and distrust against Government.

AL MUSHIR, 4th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

55. The Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th February 1912, takes exception to the comments made by the Pioneer (Allahabad), and some other journals on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13). The editor remarks that the letter was written in very moderate language and that it did not deserve the hard comments made by those journals. As regards the future policy of the Muhammadans he says that it will be the same as it has been in the past, which is to be loyal to the British Government, but he asks his co-religionists to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and to humbly approach Government and ask it to safeguard their interests whenever they are in danger, and never to join the Indian National Congress until they become sufficiently strong to safeguard the interests of their community.

56. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th February 1912, takes exception to the statement of Mr. Raza Ali in his letter which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, that Muhammadans are responsible for the strained feelings between them and the Hindus.

SAHIFA, 5th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor asserts that the Muhammadans even when they were reigning in the country always treated the Hindus on the terms of equality, and he blames the latter for the absence of good feelings between the two communities.

He expresses agreement with Mr. Raza Ali's statement that the annulment of the partition of Bengal was due to the agitation of the Bengalis and that it manifested utter disregard for the interests of the Muhammadans, and observes that if Muhammadans also had carried on constitutional agitation the foreign policy of Sir Edward Grey would not have been such it is at present, and the action of Russia in Persia would not have been described as being in the best interests of the Persians.

57. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, does not approve of the advice given by the Indian Daily Telegraph (Lucknow) to the Muhammadans to join the Anglo-Indians for their political advancement.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor remarks that the Muhammadans will gain nothing by following such a course, as they will never dare to oppose any measure which will be detrimental to their own interests but beneficial to those of Anglo-Indians.

58. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th February 1912, writes a leading article on the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans, in which the editor urges his co-religionists to refrain from joining the Indian National Congress. He asks the members of his community to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and observes that the nation that lives at the mercy of others must sooner or later disappear from the face of the earth.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

59. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th February 1912, has an article on the future policy of Indian Muhammadans, in which the editor suggests that Muhammadans should live in amity with other Indian communities; that they should recognize as their leaders men who are educated, loyal, and good principled; that they should depend upon their own exertions; that they should not insist upon separate representation being granted to them on account of their minority; that they should insist upon the admission of efficient persons alone into government service, and that they should spread education in their community. The editor goes on to say that Muhammadans should try to be Indians first and Muhammadans afterwards, and that they should spend their money on charitable objects. He urges the need for the Muhammadans keeping themselves aloof from the Muslim League and paying more attention towards agriculture, commerce and industry.

TAFRIH, 7th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

60. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 9th February 1912, refers to the suggestion made by some journals that the Muhammadans should form a political alliance with the Anglo-Indians, and remarks that Al Bashir (Etawah) was right in declaring the absurdity of the suggestion, and in saying that no good could come out of such an alliance to the Muhammadans.

OUDH AKHBAR, 9th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

61. The Cawnpore Gazette, of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), takes exception to the system of appointing Englishmen as chief medical officers in native states and remarks that the system is due to the weakness of the rulers

CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

Medical officers in native states.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th February 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

50. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912, suggests that now that the state of affairs in India has become satisfactory the Indian Press Act should be repealed. The editor observes that newspapers are a source of information to Government and that it is not proper to restrict the liberty of the press. He remarks that it was due to the passing of the Indian Press Act that the Indian press could not inform Government of the attitude of the Maharaja of Baroda towards Government. He expresses the hope that Government will earn the gratitude of the press by repealing the Act.

VEDIC MAGAZINE, Magh (January 1912).

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

51. The editor of the Vedic Magazine (Hardwar), in his editorial notes for the month of Magh (January 1912), discusses at some length the letter by Saiyid Raza Ali, the secretary of the Moradabad District Muslim League, urges the Muhammadans to follow the advice given by Mr. Raza Ali, and expresses the hope that Muslim goodwill towards Hindus will not depend upon British foreign policy, which is a changing factor, but that it will rest upon the solid and adamantine foundations of a common heritage and common traditions.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

52. The Lucknow Gazette, of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 3rd February), takes exception to the wish expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress and remarks that such a course will be detrimental to their best interests.

The editor urges his co-religionists to devote their energies to the spread of education, and asks them to depend for their salvation on their own exertions and to get rid of the idea of receiving favours from others.

JADU, 2nd January 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

53. The Jadu (Jaunpur), of the 2nd January 1912 (received on the 8th February), takes strong exception to the comments of the Pioneer (Allahabad) on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13), and remarks that the comments were unjustified and based on a perversion of the facts. The editor complains that the Pioneer has adopted a hostile attitude towards the interests of the Muhammadans since the departure of Mr. Archbold from the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and that since then it has always been trying to do injury to the Muhammadans.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

54. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), remarks that in 1907 Muhammadans adopted a political policy and demanded special rights and privileges from Government on the ground of their political importance, with the result that the relations between them and the Hindus became strained. The editor observes that in the words of the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) the political policy adopted by Muhammadans on the advice of some of their leaders was that of sycophancy and servility, which, besides straining the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, proved detrimental to the interests of the latter as is pointed out by the Muhammadan press. He states that, though Muhammadans have given up that policy, there is still some difference of opinion as to what should be their future policy. He advises his Muhammadan brethren not to replace the policy of sycophancy and servility by a policy calculated to excite hatred and distrust against Government, which, notwithstanding its shortcomings is, he says, the best of all Governments. He observes that he gives this advice because the tone of the Muhammadan press has recently so changed as to be likely to excite hatred and distrust against Government.

AL MUSHIR, 4th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

55. The Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th February 1912, takes exception to the comments made by the Pioneer (Allahabad), and some other journals on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13). The editor remarks that the letter was written in very moderate language and that it did not deserve the hard comments made by those journals. As regards the future policy of the Muhammadans he says that it will be the same as it has been in the past, which is to be loyal to the British Government, but he asks his co-religionists to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and to humbly approach Government and ask it to safeguard their interests whenever they are in danger, and never to join the Indian National Congress until they become sufficiently strong to safeguard the interests of their community.

56. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th February 1912, takes exception to the statement of Mr. Raza Ali in his letter which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, that Muhammadans are responsible for the strained feelings between them and the Hindus. SAHIFA, 5th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor asserts that the Muhammadans even when they were reigning in the country always treated the Hindus on the terms of equality, and he blames the latter for the absence of good feelings between the two communities.

He expresses agreement with Mr. Raza Ali's statement that the annulment of the partition of Bengal was due to the agitation of the Bengalis and that it manifested utter disregard for the interests of the Muhammadans, and observes that if Muhammadans also had carried on constitutional agitation the foreign policy of Sir Edward Grey would not have been such it is at present, and the action of Russia in Persia would not have been described as being in the best interests of the Persians.

57. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, does not approve of the advice given by the Indian Daily Telegraph (Lucknow) to the Muhammadans to join the Anglo-Indians for their political advancement. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

The editor remarks that the Muhammadans will gain nothing by following such a course, as they will never dare to oppose any measure which will be detrimental to their own interests but beneficial to those of Anglo-Indians.

58. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th February 1912, writes a leading article on the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans, in which the editor urges his co-religionists to refrain from joining the Indian National Congress. He asks the members of his community to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and observes that the nation that lives at the mercy of others must sooner or later disappear from the face of the earth. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

59. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th February 1912, has an article on the future policy of Indian Muhammadans, in which the editor suggests that Muhammadans should live in amity with other Indian communities; that they should recognize as their leaders men who are educated, loyal, and good principled; that they should depend upon their own exertions; that they should not insist upon separate representation being granted to them on account of their minority; that they should insist upon the admission of efficient persons alone into government service, and that they should spread education in their community. The editor goes on to say that Muhammadans should try to be Indians first and Muhammadans afterwards, and that they should spend their money on charitable objects. He urges the need for the Muhammadans keeping themselves aloof from the Muslim League and paying more attention towards agriculture, commerce and industry. TAFRIH, 7th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

60. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 9th February 1912, refers to the suggestion made by some journals that the Muhammadans should form a political alliance with the Anglo-Indians, and remarks that Al Bashir (Etawah) was right in declaring the absurdity of the suggestion, and in saying that no good could come out of such an alliance to the Muhammadans. OUDH AKHBAR, 9th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

61. The Cawnpore Gazette, of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), takes exception to the system of appointing Englishmen as chief medical officers in native states and remarks that the system is due to the weakness of the rulers CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

Medical officers in native states.

of those states. The editor suggests that capable and experienced Indians holding diplomas and degrees of European medical institutions should be appointed as chief medical officers, and that this would effect a saving in the expenses of the states, and observes that if native rulers think they will please Government by appointing Englishmen in their states they are wrong, as Government only requires good work done by capable men and not the appointment of Englishmen.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 3rd February 1912.

A murder case in Kashmir state.

62. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 3rd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), refers to a murder case in Kashmir in which an accused was sentenced to death by the Chief Judge of Jammu and the sentence was upheld on the appeal first by the High Court and then by His Highness the Maharaja of Kashmir. The editor says that the murderer was acquitted on appeal to the Government of India through the Resident of the state, and enquires how it is possible for the Government of India to interfere in such cases in independent native states.

MU KHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th February 1912.

The postponement of the marriage of the Princess Indra with His Highness the Maharaja of Gwalior.

63. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912, on the authority of the Paisa Akhbár (Lahore) reports that a rumour is current with reference to the postponement of the marriage of the Princess Indra with His Highness the Maharaja of Gwalior that Government interfered as it did not consider an alliance by marriage desirable between two such important chief native states.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

DARBAR, 16th January 1912.

Restriction in enrolment as pleaders in the Punjab.

64. The Darbár (Agra), of the 16th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), refers to the adverse comments of the Leader (Allahabad) on the letter addressed by the officiating Registrar of the Punjab University, to the Principal of the Lahore Law College, about the restriction of the enrolment of pleaders in the Punjab. The editor expresses the hope that the warning given by the Leader to educated men that they are not wanted in large numbers in independent professions may lead them to take to other professions besides that of law, and he says that there are several such professions. He commends the action of the Judges of the Court, Punjab, in deciding to restrict the number of pleaders.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 31st January 1912.

The abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab.

65. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 31st January 1912 (received on the 5th February), expresses regret at the abolition of the examination for mukhtarship in the Punjab, and remarks that the abolition will chiefly affect the Muhammadans and will effect a decrease in the number of Muhammadan lawyers.

The editor urges the Muhammadans either to appeal to Government against the order, or to stop filing suits in Courts and to settle their differences by arbitration.

TAJIR, 4th February 1912.

Judgment in a case concerning a mosque at Meerut.

66. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 4th February 1912, takes exception to the judgment delivered in the case concerning a mosque situated in the Nil-ki-gali, Meerut, and remarks that Pandit Kaleshar Nath, Additional Munsif, is wrong in holding that there was no mosque at the place in dispute, and that it cannot be treated as a waqf property, seeing that it has not been used for a long time.

ADVOCATE, 4th February 1912.

Vakils and district judgeships.

67. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th February 1912, in an article entitled "Vakils and district judgeships" comments on the views expressed in the Indian Daily News (Calcutta) about the proposal to compulsorily retire members of the Indian Civil Service who are found to be incompetent, and also about the appointment of vakils and barristers as district judges. The editor agrees with the suggestions of the Indian Daily News that the Government should restrict the claims of civilians to judicial appointments within the narrowest possible limits, and also that barristers should be made eligible for appointment as district judges. The following extract from the Indian Daily News is quoted in full :—

"A barrister or vakil is good enough to become a High Court Judge to start with, but he is not to be thought of in connection with district judgeships. If civilians and barristers and vakils can be appointed in fixed proportion to the High Court bench, why should a similar rule not be laid down in the case of district judgeships. In fact, the time has come for doing away altogether with the tradition that a proportion of the highest appointments to the judicial bench should necessarily be reserved for the members of the Indian Civil Service. Trained lawyers can be easily attracted to the Indian judiciary if the civilian monopoly is broken and suitable pension rules framed. The freeing of the judiciary from civilian dominance is a reform which merits the attention of every well-wisher of the country. Only vested interests stand in the way—the vested interests of the Indian Civil Service."

68. The Saddharm Pracharak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 7th February 1912, expresses surprise at the action of the Joint Magistrate of Allahabad in sentencing a man who was suffering from a contagious disease to twelve days' rigorous imprisonment in addition to a fine of thirty rupees, and remarks that such a sentence shows that the court followed the letter of the law rather than its spirit. The editor concedes that the Magistrate was not to blame in the matter seeing that officers are bound to act according to the words of the law.

Rigorous imprisonment to a sick man.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 7th February 1912.

69. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th February 1912, expresses gratification at the appointment of Mr. Saiyid Hasan Imam and Mr. A. Chaudhari as Judges of the Calcutta High Court for two years. The editor observes that Messrs. Hasan Imam and Chaudhari are strong supporters of the Congress movement, and expresses surprise that Nawab Viqar-ul-mulk should have questioned the loyalty of the Congress, seeing that Government has conferred high appointments on its supporters.

Mr. Saiyid Hasan Iman and Mr. A. Chaudhari as Judges of the Calcutta High Court.

TAFRIH, 7th February 1912.

70. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th February 1912, refers to a report in the Mahratta (Poona) that a clerk of the Registration department was dismissed by the District Magistrate, Ahmednagar, for neglecting to salaam the Superintendent of Police. The editor remarks that the Magistrate was not justified in dismissing the clerk, and expresses the opinion that the Magistrate should have only fined him. He expresses the hope that the Government of Bombay will issue an order for the re-instatement of the clerk in his post, seeing that such action on the part of the District Magistrate is calculated to make that officer unpopular with the subject race.

A clerk dismissed for not salaaming a Police Superintendent at Ahmednagar.

TAFRIH, 7th February 1912.

71. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "India's judicial officers" in which the editor refers to the rumoured intention of the Hon'ble Mr. M. B Dadabhoy to move a resolution in the Viceroy's Legislative Council regarding the judicial training of Indian civilians, and expresses the opinion that it would be better if he were to move for the recruitment of the judicial service more largely from among members of the legal profession.

He states that it is recognized that the first qualification of a judge is a knowledge of law, and that it may be candidly acknowledged that in this essential respect the barrister or vakil judge is any day the superior of the civilian judge, and he contends that the latter are not picked men with any special training or aptitude for the work.

India's judicial officers.

LEADER, 7th February 1912.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

The proposed abolition of the octroi duty.

72. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), takes exception to the abolition of the octroi duty and to the imposition of terminal taxes, and the remarks that the procedure will be detrimental to the interests of both the public and Government.

The editor urges that recourse to octroi duty should not be abandoned.

(e)—Education.

VAIDIC SARVASWA, December 1911 and January 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

73. The Vaidic Sarvaswa (Allahabad), in its combined issue for December 1911 and January 1912 (received on the 2nd January), condemns the attack made by the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair on the Brahmans in his letter on the proposed Hindu University, and remarks that the way in which he expressed his views on the subject shows that he is likely to forfeit what little respect he still commands among the people.

RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

State scholarship tenable in Europe for the study of Sanskrit and Arabic.

74. The Rahbár (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), refers to the notice given by the Local Government that candidates desirous of applying for State scholarships tenable in Europe for the scientific study of Sanskrit and Arabic should send in their applications to the Director of Public Instruction, United Provinces, and expresses surprise that the approved candidates should be subjected to a careful medical examination, with particular reference to their ability to stand the English climate, in view of the fact that the scholarship admits of residence in Europe. The editor takes exception to the provision in the notice that approved candidates will be required to give a written undertaking that they will devote themselves exclusively during the tenure of their scholarship to the study of the subject for which their scholarships is granted, and remarks that no harm can result to Government if any intelligent candidate manages to study law or any other subject without any detriment to the subject for which the scholarship is granted to him.

RAHBAR, 28th January 1912.

Shankar Lal school at Sambhal, in the Moradabad district.

75. The Rahbár (Moradabad), of the 28th January 1912 (received on the 5th February), publishes a letter complaining that the prosperity of Shankar Lal public school at Sambhal is likely to suffer owing to the selfishness of some would-be benefactors of the school. The editor observes that any people who suspect that some of the promoters of the scheme are actuated by selfish motives should refrain from contributing towards the school funds. He suggests that the school should be named the Shankar Lal Hindu public school, seeing that the majority of the subscriptions have been raised from among the Hindus. He says that Hindus are likely to lose their importance in political matters, seeing that they do not sufficiently consider their communal interests.

GURUKUL SAMACHAR, January 1912.

Gurukuls started by Swami Darshananand.

76. The Gurukul Samachár (Budaun), for January 1912, complains that disunion exists amongst the members of several gurukuls, and that the managers and workers of one institution, as a result of their rivalry with other gurukuls, induce the students to leave other gurukuls and join their own. The editor states that this practice is very injurious to the students as well as to the institutions themselves, and he urges that at least those which have been started by Swami Darshananand should not be so injured, and that they should make it a rule that no student who has left one institution be admitted into another until a lapse of a certain period, as is the rule in the case of Government schools and colleges.

KAISER-I-HIND, 1st February 1912.

A survey of the gurukul.

77. Maulana Abdul Kadir, professor of the Madrasa Illahiat, Cawnpore, contributes an article to the Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), in which he expresses approval of the system of education in the gurukul, and of the manner in which physical training is given to its students.

He deplores the absence of the same system in the Muhammadan educational institutions, and observes that the education in the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, is conducted on the wrong lines.

78. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the efforts made by the Hindus of Delhi to establish a first grade Hindu college in that place, and suggests to the leading Muhammadans of Delhi that they should start a Islamia college.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

A suggestion for a Islamia college at Delhi.

79. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, takes strong exception to the publication of a book named Khwab-o-Khiyal by the Baptist Mission of Calcutta, and to its being prescribed as a text book for the examination of military and civil officers.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 5th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

The editor quotes several passages from pages 114 and 238 and from paragraph 317 of the book to show that an unjust attack has been made by the author on the loyalty of the Muhammadans, and complains that Government should first of all never have allowed the book to be published, and at any rate not have allowed its being prescribed as a text book for the examination of officers. He invites the attention of Government to the matter and suggests that if not the life of Sita Ram, at least the objectionable passage in it, should be cancelled from the book.

80. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 6th February 1912, reproduces the article on the Khwab-o-Khiyal from the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February, and takes strong exception to the book being prescribed for the examination of civil and military officers. The editor characterizes the book as dangerous, seeing that Muhammadan loyalty has been grossly attacked in it, and asks that Government should stop the publication of the book.

AL BASHIR, 6th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal

81. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 6th February 1912, deplores the failure to fulfil the promises made in aid of the Muslim University, and expresses regret that the attention of the Muhammadans should have been so much absorbed in the Italian-Turkish war and in sending relief for the war sufferers as to forget their own more immediate needs.

AL BASHIR, 6th February 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

82. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 6th February 1912, reproduces the article from the Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th January 1912 (vide Selections No. 5 of 1912, paragraph 78), and remarks that it will be impossible to get a man for the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, who can fulfill the conditions imposed by the author of the article as indispensible for the post. The editor takes exception to the proposal that no Government pensioner should be eligible for the secretaryship, and observes that such a proposal will restrict the number of candidates.

AL BASHIR, 6th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

83. The Aligarh Institute Gazette, of the 7th February 1912, reports that Nawab Mushtaq Husain, the honorary secretary of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, has withdrawn his resignation in accordance with the advice of the trustees. The trustees decided that it was immaterial whether he did much of the actual work himself, as the clerical work of the secretary could be efficiently done by Nawab Muzammil-ullah, Khan Bahadur, the joint secretary. The editor says that this state of affairs can be allowed to continue until a suitable secretary be found to take Nawab Mushtaq Husain's place.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 7th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

84. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 7th February 1912, expresses approval of the proposal made by His Excellency the Governor General to establish a university at Dacca, and remarks that the university will be specially beneficial to the Muhammadans provided particular attention be given to their needs and requirements.

ZUL QARNAIN, 7th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

85. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "The Dacca announcements" in which the editor remarks that, while the desire of the Government to afford further facilities for education in Eastern Bengal is highly commendable, the opinions of all sections of the community should have been ascertained before arriving at the decision to found a university, for which it

ADVOCATE, 8th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

may not be difficult to find a crore of rupees, but for which it might be difficult to find a capable Senate and Syndicate to work. He is of opinion that, instead of constituting a university at Dacca, the Government should first try to establish one at Patna and another at Nagpur, so as to relieve the Allahabad University, as the latter cannot maintain efficient control over the colleges under it. He expresses the hope that, if a university at Dacca is to be brought into existence, the Government will take the leaders of both communities into its confidence. Referring to the appointment of Mr. Shams-ul-Huda to the Executive Council of Bengal, the editor remarks that Government has proved true to its word that Muhammadan interests would not be ignored. He also expresses satisfaction with His Excellency's reply to the Muhammadan deputation in answer to their prayer for separate and proportionate representation on local bodies and a fixed share in the public service, and concludes with the hope that the Muslim League will see the reasonableness of the position taken up by the Government of India, and will not start an agitation which will only create bitterness and do no good to the country.

ADVOCATE, 8th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

86. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912, has an article entitled "The proposed Dacca University and Bengal opinion" in which the editor states that it would appear that the proposal is not acceptable to any section of the community, and that non-official European opinion, as expressed in the Statesman, is as much opposed to the scheme as is Indian public opinion, which finds expression in the leading Bengali newspapers. He goes on to quote the following declaration made by Babu Surendra Nath Banarji in his speech at the Calcutta Town Hall on the afternoon of the 3rd February :—

"You have read in the newspapers that there is a proposal to start a university at Dacca. I can only say that the announcement has created a sense of alarm and anxiety in the public mind. It will be an educational partition fraught with the most direful consequences. Peace, harmony, conciliation are the watchwords of the present Government. Peace, harmony, conciliation are part and parcel of the Royal boons. They will be nullified if this proposal is carried out. We want peace and not agitation. I hope and trust His Excellency the Viceroy will consider this matter. The Hindus do not want it. The Muhammadans do not want it. Who then wants it? Let not this apple of discord once again be thrown among our midst." The editor concludes with an expression of hope that it will yet be possible for the Government of India to carry out an educational scheme for the people of Eastern Bengal with the support of public opinion in Bengal.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 8th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muslim Hewett school.

87. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912, publishes a portion of the letter addressed to it by Ahmadullah Khan to show that Ibrar Husain is not fit for the post of secretary to the Muslim Hewett school, Moradabad. The editor suggests that Ibrar Husain should be replaced by some suitable man.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

LEADER, 6th February 1912.

Agricultural improvement.

88. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "Agricultural improvement" contributed by one Nagendra Nath Ganguli of Meerut. The writer asserts that the chief impediment to the improvement in the agricultural methods of the country is the poverty of the Indian ryot, and that another greater obstacle in the province of Agra is that 70 per cent. of the tenants are without occupancy rights, and hold their land only from year to year or on leases for short periods, so that it is open to the zamindar to renew their leases or to turn them out when they have cut their standing crops. In such circumstances they cannot be expected to take much interest in the land they cultivate, as they are always liable to ejectment. An ordinary zamindar will not fail to eject a ryot before the latter acquires the right of occupancy by an undisturbed tenancy of twelve years, as he deems it in his best interests to prevent the formation of a body of under-proprietors with a vested interest in the land. That the twelve years rule, which was first introduced in 1856, has not worked satisfactorily, is proved by the small number of tenants who have acquired occupancy rights during the forty-two years since the Rent Act was made law in 1859, and the passing of Act II in 1901. The writer details what he says are common and favourite devices resorted to by zamindars to prevent tenants from acquiring occupancy rights under the twelve years' rule, such as a slight alteration in the tenant's name in the patwari's papers every few years which is sufficient to prevent him from proving continuous occupation, and the transfer of tenants from one holding to another on paper. He concludes the article with the remark that the well-meaning civilians of bygone times had the welfare of the ryot nearest their hearts, and they would lie uneasy in their graves if they knew that their lifelong labour was nullified by the machinations of the cunning patwari.

(g)—General.

89. The Garhwali (Dehra Dun), for December 1911 (received on the 18th January 1912), remarks that the residents of Garhwal are thankful to Sir Leslie Porter, the late Lieutenant Governor of these provinces, for making payments for labour and other articles of necessity supplied to His Honour's camp during his recent tour in the hills, and also for declaring that in future supply of labour and rasad will not be demanded free.

GARHWALI, December 1911.

Supply of rasad.

The editor remarks that in case His Honour's promises are given effect to in future the people of Garhwal will consider themselves very fortunate.

90. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), expresses regret at the deplorable condition of the Indian Muhammadans. The editor says that mere increase in the number of graduates will not improve the condition of the Muhammadan community, and observes that until they resort more extensively to trade, and pay more attention to industrial education and economics no real progress need be expected.

KAISER-I-HIND, 1st February 1912.

The condition of Indian Muhammadans.

91. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 3rd February 1912, expresses regret that so far not a single suitable man has been elected as a trustee of the Husainabad waqf, because the really suitable candidates do not descend to improper means for securing votes in their favour. The editor expresses the hope that, now that the election of a trustee is shortly to take place, the district authorities will try to secure the election of a suitable candidate who has experience of the management of waqf properties.

OUDH AKHBAR, 3rd February 1912.

Husainabad waqf trusteeship.

92. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, refers to a communication which, the editor says, he has received from a correspondent complaining of the difficulties encountered in the course of a visit to a Collector, because the visitor had the temerity to refuse bakshish to a chaprasi.

LEADER, 4th February 1912.

Bakshish to a chaprasi.

93. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th February 1912, in an article entitled "Co-operative credit" remarks that, though the movement is still in its infancy in India, there can be no doubt that it has taken a firm root in some parts of the country, and states that it is a very hopeful feature that the educated classes are realizing that co-operation should be relied upon more confidently than any other economic agency to effect a permanent improvement in the social and industrial condition of the people.

ADVOCATE, 4th February 1912.

Co-operative credit societies.

Referring to the annual reports on the working of the societies in the Punjab and Burma, the editor expresses satisfaction with the progress made in those provinces, and with the interest that it has created among private persons.

94. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, refers to the report that the Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal dharamshala in Bharauli Bazaar, tappa Deoria (Majhauli), district Gorakhpur, has been closed in accordance with the orders of the District Magistrate since the 19th November 1910, and points out that the pilgrims are in consequence put to much inconvenience and trouble. The editor argues that a dharamshala does not fall within the meaning of the term "sarai," and that it cannot therefore be registered under "the Sarai Act." He expresses the hope that the memorial submitted to the Lieutenant Governor by the present managers of the dharamshala will receive due consideration at the hands of His Honour, and that he will redress their grievances.

ABHYUDAYA, 4th December 1912.

The Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal dharamshala.

ABHYUDAYA, 4th February 1912.

The hand-loom industry.

95. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Bombay Government in deciding to render substantial help towards reviving the hand-loom industry, and urges the need of the United Provinces Government taking similar steps to encourage the decaying textile industry of these provinces. The editor discusses at some length the question of the superiority of the hand-loom over the power-loom, and observes that in the existing circumstances of the country the development of the hand-loom industry will be productive of better results, in that such a course is not likely to throw the present workmen out of employment and will not lead to mental and physical deterioration in the mass of the people.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 4th February 1912.

Corruption among Government servants.

96. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 4th February 1912, complains that the taking of illegal gratifications by Government servants is much in vogue in India, and urges the need for putting an end to the corruption.

SAHIFA, 5th February 1912.

The Hindi-Urdu controversy.

97. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th February 1912, complains that the Government servants entrusted with the service of summonses are instructed by some officials to serve the duplicate of the summons in the Nagri character, and that the postal authorities distribute money order forms mostly in Nagri character, which the editor says cause great inconvenience to the public.

He says that Hindu officials do this merely to show that the number of Hindi knowing persons in the province is greater than that of the Urdu knowing population and invites the attention of Government to the matter.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th February 1912.

The Hindi-Urdu controversy.

98. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th February 1912, publishes a contributed article, in which the writer complains that the Government servants entrusted with the service of summonses are instructed by some officials to serve the one copy of the summons written in the Nagri character and to bring back to the court the other copy written in Urdu. He invites the attention of Government to the matter, and observes that the serving of summonses written in the Nagri character only causes a great deal of inconvenience to the public.

HINDUSTANI, 9th February 1912.

Preservation of estates belonging to Hindus.

99. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 9th February 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret that Hindus have so far done nothing in the matter of devising any means for the preservation of their estates. He suggests that the transfer and partition of landed property should be forbidden and that the law relating to the joint family system should be modified.

V.—Legislation.

VYAPARI AND KARIGAR, 15th January 1912.

The need for a Bill to regulate insurance and other companies.

100. The Vyapari and Karigar (Benares), of the 15th January 1912 (received on the 20th January), urges the necessity of Government passing the proposed bill to regulate insurance and other companies at an early date, so as to protect the public from mushroom and fraudulent Joint Stock and Insurance Companies.

OUDH AKHBAR, 7th February 1912.

The medical bill in the Bombay Legislative Council.

101. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 7th February 1912, refers to the meeting held by the hakims and vaidyas of Delhi on the 20th January to consider the medical bill introduced in the Bombay Legislative Council, and remarks that if the bill be passed into law the cause of the indigenous systems of medicine will grealy suffer. He suggests that meetings should be held in every district to support the amendments in the bill suggested by the hakims and vaidyas of Delhi.

VI.—Railway.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 31st January 1912.

Overcrowding of passengers in railway trains.

102. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 31st January 1912 (received on the 5th February), complain of the overcrowding of passengers in the railway trains on the occasion of fairs.

The editor invites the attention of the railway authorities to the inconvenience thus caused to the passengers, and suggests that either tickets should be issued according to the number of seats in the trains or that extra carriages should be attached when needed, and that no more than the maximum number of persons should be allowed to enter each carriage.

103. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), complains of the want of consideration shown to the public by the Traffic Superintendent of the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway and by his subordinates, and says that the public are put to great trouble owing to delay in providing wagons for conveying goods on the line.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st February 1912.

A complaint against the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway.

The editor invites the attention of the Railway Board to the matter and trusts that it will ask the Traffic Superintendent to pay more regard in future to the convenience of the public.

104. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th February 1912, publishes a letter entitled ' A grievance on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway " in which the writer draws attention to the long hours guards and drivers of mixed trains are kept on duty, and expresses the opinion that twelve to fifteen hours continuous duty is too much of a strain for the nerves of any human being, and is likely to lead to collisions and other dangerous accidents. He urges that the time a man be kept on duty should be limited to eight hours, both in the interests of the travelling public and for the convenience of the railway employés themselves.

LEADER, 7th February 1912.

A grievance on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

105. The Fitnah (Gorakhpur), of the 24th January 1912 (received on the 2nd February), contains a contributed article discussing the Basant Panchami festival in which the writer observes that, since the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans have become strained, their maulvis preach that Muhammadans should not take part in Hindu festivals, while the Arya Samajists describe co-operation with Muhammadans as a great sin. He remarks that in the circumstances it is not strange that religious festivals have lost their significance. He expresses the opinion that Western civilization is also to a great extent responsible for the irregular observance of festivals, and that, if it not were for holidays granted in Government offices, the public would not even know the dates on which religious festivals take place. He remarks that as the festivals are not properly observed there is no need for holidays being granted.

FITNAH, 24th January 1912.

The religious festivals of Hindus and Muhammadans.

106. The Kayasth Hitkari (Agra), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 5th February), publishes the proceedings of the meeting of the Kayasth Varan Nernai Committee at Ajodhya in the Fyzabad district. The meeting was held with the object of ascertaining whether the objectionable traditions and sayings concerning the Kayasth community published in the Brahman Sarvaswa (Etawah), for April 1911, are true, and whether Thakur Chheda Singh, Barrister-at-law, was right in classifying Kayasths as Sudras in his book. Resolutions were passed at the meeting to the effect that books should be collected in order to enable the committee to determine the caste to which Kayasths really belong.

KAYASTH HITKARI, 1st February 1912.

The Kayasth community.

107. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), expresses regret that an unpleasant incident took place at Agra on the occasion of the Muharram, when Messrs. Satya Narayan and Company asked the Muhammadans to remove a shed which they had placed without their permission in front of their shop for supplying thirsty travellers with water during the month of Muharram. The editor observes that the refusal on the part of Muhammadans to remove the shed might have led to trouble if Mr. Satya Narayan had not followed the sound advice of Mr. Williamson, Superintendent of Police, Agra.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

The Muharram at Agra.

He complains that in spite of Satya Narayan having acted in accordance with the advice of the Superintendent of Police, some prejudiced Muhammadan papers thought fit to attack him. He reports that Satya Narayan has served a notice on the Paisa Akhbár (Lahore), the Surma-i-Rozgár (Agra), and the Darbár (Agra) asking them to apologize for publishing insulting remarks, as otherwise legal steps will be taken against them.

VEDIC MAGAZINE, Magh (January 1912).

The Arya Samaj and Christianity.

108. The editor of the Vedic Magazine (Hardwar), in the Magh number (January 1912), in his editorial notes has two articles about Christianity entitled "Signs of the times" and "Christian intolerance and the Arya Samaj." In the first the editor refers to the disciplinary action taken by the Bishop of Winchester against the Rev. Mr. Thompson on account of his book Miracles in the New Testament, and argues from it that Christianity of the present day imposes church-made creeds and man-made articles of faith on its followers and suppresses all freedom of thought.

He expresses the opinion that, if in the words of the Bishop of Oxford "there be a fresh presentation of the old creed in more intellectual terms," all that will be left will be the sermon on the Mount and some universal principles of science, and that the new theology will so completely resemble the Vedic religion that there will be no need for the existence of a separate Christian church.

The editor uses the title of "Christian intolerance and the Arya Samaj" in order to reprove the Christian missionary in India. He says that the latter is in the habit of reminding Arya Samajists that when Dayanand was a young boy he escaped from his parents and played the truant, and he argues that Christians were not in a position to throw stones at Dayanand when "Luther, the Apostle and reformer," advised Phillip of Hesse to commit bigamy and to lie about it.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

The Musáfir and Islam.

109. In continuation of the article entitled "A review of hadises" the Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), again publishes translations of hadises without any comments.

MUSAFIR, 2nd February 1912.

A religious controversy between the Musáfir (Agra) and the Curzon Gazette (Delhi).

110. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), publishes another instalment of the article entitled "A religious controversy between the Musáfir (Agra) and the Curzon Gazette (Delhi)." The editor refutes the criticisms made by the Curzon Gazette of the theory of the transmigration of souls and of the theory that God, is present in every man. He explains that the term "Deva" is a synonym for God, and refutes the statement of the Curzon Gazette that the God of the Aryas possessed the attribute of lustfulness on the ground that the words mad and mod used in the Vedas do not mean lustful.

KAISER-I-HIND, 2nd February 1912.

The prohibition of cow-killing in Ajodhya.

111. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 2nd February 1912 (received on the 5th February), publishes a contributed article in which the writer takes exception to the prohibition of cow-killing in Ajodhya on the occasion of the last Bakr Id festival. He says that he refrains from making any comment became he hears that the subject is under enquiry by Government.

ABHYUDAYA, 4th February 1912.

Indian sadhus.

112. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 4th February 1912, publishes a letter from Mahant Baghambari on the subject of Indian sadhus and works of public good, in answer to the article entitled "The Indian sadhus" (vide Selections No. 4, paragraph 101). The writer takes exception to the sentiments expressed in the Abhyudaya, and expresses regret that an Indian should have passed such remarks on the subject. He states that this country owes a great deal to sadhus and sanyasis, and points how Bhagwan Shankaracharya, Bhagwan Ramanujacharya and Guru Govind Singh saved the country at different times. He remarks that it is no exaggeration to say that the devoted efforts of the sadhus for the welfare of the Hindus and for the preservation of the Hindu religion alive have been crowned with success, and he asks whether the Indians have repaid them for these acts of public good. He says that every math dhari thinks it his duty to protect the helpless, and that the bulk of the Sanskrit pathshalas are maintained by them, and he asks whether these are not works of public good. He points out that the sadhus and sanyasis are not behind hand in any way in supporting the proposed Hindu University, and asserts that if they led a procession to show their respect to their gods, it was no expression of ignorance but of refinement and gratitude.

HINDUSTANI, 5th February 1912.

Prevention of the conversion of minors as sadhus.

113. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 5th February 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer refers to the reply given on behalf of Government to the question put by the Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh in the Provincial Legislative Council regarding the advisability of framing some suitable legislation to stop the forced conversion of minors as sadhus. He observes that, as the question has a religious aspect, action by the people should be taken first, and that such action should be of a general character and not confined to the area under a particular Local Government. He suggests that the Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh should submit a memorial signed by a large number of Indians to the Viceroy's Council praying for the prevention of the conversion of minors as sadhus. He describes the various ways in which minors are converted as sadhus and emphatically asserts that sadhus are the chief cause of the degeneration of India. He asks the well-wishers of the country to help Lala Sukhbir Singh in preventing the conversion of minors as sadhus.

OUDH AKHBAR, 6th February 1912.

Prevention of early marriages.

114. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 6th February 1912, expresses great appreciation of the labours of Miss A. C. Tennant, the American lady, who has been working for some time past in India trying to impress upon the people the evil consequences of early marriages and urging them to stop such marriages.

AL BASHIR, 6th February 1912.

Bathing ghats and Muhammadan constables.

115. One Saiyid Muhammad contributes an article to Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 6th February 1912, in which he refers to the article contributed to the Prakash (Lahore) by Thakur Dat Sharma describing the condition of the pilgrims in Muttra and to the complaints of some other Arya journal about the posting of Muhammadan constables on duty on the bathing ghats in Hardwar. He says that the Muhammadans are enjoined by their religion not to visit the places where they can see naked bodies of other people, and he therefore suggests that Muhammadan constables should not be entrusted with the duty of keeping order on the bathing ghats.

ADVOCATE, 8th February 1912.

"The impressions of a traveller among non-Christian races."

116. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912, refers at some length to an article entitled "The impressions of a traveller among non-Christian races" contributed by the Right Hon'ble James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States, to the International Review of Missions. The following are some of the passages reproduced in full: "Wherever a white race has come in contact with a backward nation the work of bearing the white man's burden takes the form of filling the white man's pocket"; "Everywhere the native has suffered; everywhere the white adventurer or trader has attempted to treat him as if he had no rights, or has regarded him as an instrument by the use of which he can profit," and "The missionary comes preaching the gospel of peace and love, but when the natives see the rapacity and injustice of men professing the religion the missionary preaches, the preachings lose their power." Comment is avoided.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 10th February 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 7 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 17th February 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The situation in China 157
2. The situation in Persia 157
3. The situation in Persia 157
4. The situation in Persia 157
5. The situation in Persia and Tripoli ... 157
6. The Italian-Turkish war 158
7. The Italian-Turkish war 158
8. The Italian-Turkish war 158

(b)—Home:

9. The memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, to His Excellency the Governor General ... 158
10. The Indian Press Act 158
11. The Abor expedition 158
12. The causes of dissatisfaction among Indian Muhammadans 158
13. The journalists and government officers... 159
14. The change of Capital 159
15. The thrones used at the Delhi darbar ... 159
16. An open letter to the Nawab of Dacca ... 159
17. The condition of Muhammadans of the world 159
18. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 159
19. The annulment of the partition of Bengal 159
20. Lord Rosebery on the treatment of the coloured people of the Empire ... 160
21. India and the Empire 160
22. The forthcoming Viceregal visit ... 161
23. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 161
24. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 161
25. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 161
26. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 161
27. Mr. Churchill's speech at Belfast ... 162
28. Mr. Churchill's speech at Belfast ... 162
29. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 162

Page.

30. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 162
31. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 162
32. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 162
33. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 162
34. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 163
35. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 163
36. The Royal visit 163
37. The effects of His Majesty's visit to India 163
38. Executive councils in the United Provinces and the Punjab 163
39. The United Provinces Legislative Council 163
40. The United Provinces Legislative Council 163
41. The Madras Legislative Council ... 164
42. A suggestion to bestow the title of His Majesty on the Nizam of Hyderabad ... 164

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

43. Dakaitis in the North-West Frontier Province 164

III.—NATIVE STATES.

44. The condition of Muhammadans in the Hyderabad State 164
45. The commemoration of the coronation darbar by ruling chiefs 164
46. The commemoration of the coronation darbar in Jhind 165

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

47. The establishment of panchayats in villages 165
48. The appointment of Mr. A. Chaudhari and Mr. Hasan Imam as Judges of the Calcutta High Court 165

		Page.
49.	Equal distribution of government appointments between Hindus and Muhammadans	165
	(b)—Police :
50.	The malpractices of police	165
	(c)—Finance and Taxation :
51.	The budget discussion	165
	(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs :
52.	House tax in Moradabad	166
53.	Election of members for municipal boards	166
54.	Bench magistrates for the town of Ujhiani in the district of Budaun ...	166
55.	The publication of the proceedings of local boards in vernacular	166
56.	The publication of the proceedings of local boards in vernacular	166
57.	The insanitary condition of Allahabad city	166
58.	The Cawnpore Municipal Board ...	166
	(e)—Education :
59.	The present system of education ...	167
60.	Resignation of Lala Hansraj from the principalship of the Dayanand Anglo-Vedic College, Lahore	167
61.	Education among Hindus	167
62.	King George's Medical College ...	167
63.	The proposed Hindu University ...	168
64.	The proposed Hindu and Muslim Universities	168
65.	The education of women	168
66.	The need for imparting technical and industrial education to Muhammadans	168
67.	The education of the Muhammadans ...	168
68.	The Khwab-o-khiyal	169
69.	A suggestion for a technical and commercial college in the United Provinces	169
70.	The introduction of moral and religious education in schools and colleges ...	169
71.	Education in India	169
72.	Sir George Clarke on education ...	169
73.	The proposed Dacca University ...	169
74.	The four proposed universities in India	169
75.	The proposed Dacca University ...	169
76.	The proposed Dacca University ...	170
77.	The proposed Dacca University ...	170
78.	The proposed Dacca University ...	171
79.	The proposed Dacca University ...	171
80.	The proposed Dacca University ...	171
81.	The proposed Dacca University ...	171
82.	The proposed Dacca University ...	171
83.	The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ...	171
84.	The resignation of Nawab Mushtaq Husain from the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh	171
85.	A survey of the gurukul	171
86.	The Kangri gurukul	172
	(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land : Nil.
	(g)—General :
87.	A suggestion to effect an occasional transfer of patwaris from one circle to another	174
88.	The swadeshi movement	174
89.	Medicines prepared by quacks ...	174
90.	Corruption among government servants how to stop it?	175
91.	Indians in the public service ...	175
92.	Deputy Superintendents in the Veterinary Department	175
93.	Religious instruction to prisoners in jail	175
94.	Attendance at dispensaries	175
95.	Extra Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab	175
96.	The Husainabad endowment... ...	175
97.	Improper administration of waqf properties	176
98.	Rise in the price of foodstuffs ...	176
99.	The Hindi-Urdu controversy ...	176
100.	Sri Fateh Singh Rai Arya Anath Ashram	176

V.—LEGISLATION.

101.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	176
102.	The Government of India Bill ...	176
103.	The Agra Estates Bill	177
104.	The Agra Estates Bill	177
105.	Need for amending the law relating to debts...	177

VI.—RAILWAY.

106.	Railway complaints	177
107.	A suggestion for appointing Indians on the Railway Board	177
108.	A railway train incident	177
109.	Third class waiting rooms at railway stations	178

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

110.	The increase in the number of Muhammadans and Christians	178
111.	Degraded condition of Hindus ...	178
112.	The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ...	178
113.	The United Provinces gurukul at Muttra	178
114.	All-India Arya Kumar Association, Agra	178
115.	The Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal...	179
116.	The expulsion of Brahmachari Jai Chandra from the Kangri gurukul ...	179
117.	Islam in Japan	179
118.	The sanctity of the Qoran	179
119.	The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha and the neu-Muslims	179
120.	The tale of Islam	179
121.	The Afghan (Peshawar) and the Hindus	179
122.	Education and social reform ...	179
123.	The Holi festival and drinking ...	180
124.	The Holi festival and drinking ...	180
125.	The progress of Christianity in the Punjab	180
126.	Islam and the Christian missionaries ...	180
127.	The protection of cows	180
128.	The anti-cow-killing movement ...	180
129.	The cow-killing problem	180

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st February 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra ...	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Noméni; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ..	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 ,,
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 ,,
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
68	Darbar	Agra†	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40,...	500 ,,
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	300 ,,
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 35 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rosgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasim-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghasipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	300 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27... ...	5,000 „
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	30 „
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 „
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 40 ...	1,350 „
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; Brahman.	2,200 „
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	1,000 „
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	1,200 „
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla; 45	500 „
133	Swadesh Bándhavá ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 44	550 „
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 40	350 „
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 43.	1,000 „
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
142	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	775 „
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 40 ...	300 „
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 57 ...	1,500 „
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 34	1,500 „
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám; Khatri; 55 ...	3,000 „
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, traces the history of the national awakening in China, and ridicules the apprehension expressed in the Army Review (?) (London) regarding the danger likely to arise from the boundaries of China and India being coterminous from the penetration of railways up to the shoulders of India owing to foreign railway enterprise. The editor ascribes such alarmist reports to motives of political expediency on the part of the unionist party in order to cause alarm to the British public and obtain its approval to increased armaments, thus discrediting the Liberal party. He says that China will for many years to come be engaged in internal reforms and her only dealings with foreign Powers are likely to be in the nature of resisting aggression. He observes that the editor of the military journal must know that the Indians are no longer simpletons, that they will not tolerate any foreign Government other than that of the Britons, and that they will protect the British Empire by all means in their power against other Powers of the world. He says that it is their aim to gradually acquire their rights under the British Government, and then to obtain autonomy within the British Empire on colonial lines. He expresses the opinion that in these circumstances the fear regarding China is altogether unfounded. He admits that there is a strong probability of China coming into collision with Russia in view of her intention to establish her predominance in Mongolia.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th February 1912.

The situation in China.

2. The Ittihád (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), reproduces the article entitled "Persia and Morocco" from the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 16th January 1912, and adds the following comment :—

ITTIHAD, 8th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

"It is indeed a matter of great regret to see the aggressive attitude of some of the European Powers towards Muhammadan countries. Persia has fallen a victim to the tyranny of Russia and presents a sorry figure to her sympathisers. May God bring ruin to these tyrants, and protect the Islamic kingdoms from every evil."

3. One Abdul Wadud of Bareilly contributes an article to the Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), in which he denounces Russian aggression in Persia, and expresses regret that the British Foreign Office are able to do nothing in the matter.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

He, however, notes with pleasure the interest shown by the British public in the Persian situation, and expresses the hope that at the reopening of Parliament a strong and far-sighted statesman will be appointed Foreign Secretary who will be able to safeguard Persian independence, and provide against any possible future danger to India from Russia.

4. One Muhammad Ikram Alam, a vakil of Shahjahanpur, contributes, an article to the Sar Panch (Shahjahanpur), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), in which he expresses regret at the atrocities alleged to be committed by Russia in Persia, and asks his co-religionists to help their suffering brethren in Persia by subscribing to the Persian relief fund started by the Red Crescent Society of Calcutta.

SAR PANCH, 9th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

5. One Shaukat Ali of Hallor, in the Basti district, contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 13th February 1912, in which he denounces Russian and Italian aggression in Persia and Tripoli respectively, and appeals to the British Government to stop the slaughter of innocent Muhammadans.

MASHRIQ, 13th February 1912.

The situation in Persia and Tripoli.

The writer says that recent incidents in Persia and Tripoli have sorely afflicted the hearts of the Muhammadan subjects of His Majesty, and observes that if Government does not take early steps to remove the cause of their dissatisfaction, there is great probability of some danger to Government.

UNION GAZETTE, 7th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

6. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), refers to Reuter's telegram about an attack on a Christian monastry by a band of Turks, and expresses doubt at the truth of the report. The editor says that those who call themselves civilized protest against an unjust action only when it concerns the interests of a Christian, and that when the interests of Muhammadans are at stake they never raise any remonstrance.

AL MUSHIR, 11th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

7. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th February 1912, refers to the rumour about the negotiation for peace between Italy and Turkey, and remarks that European Powers will not allow Turkey to gain any advantage from the war, and that the conclusion of peace at present will prove only detrimental to the interests of the Turkish Government.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

8. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th February 1912, says that even if Italy come out victorious in the Italian-Turkish war she will find it very hard to keep a permanent hold on Tripoli, seeing that the Arabs will never be conciliated to Italian rule, and that the Government of Italy cannot afford to keep a sufficient army in her newly subjugated country to ensure against a native rebellion.

(b)—Home.

MASHRIQ, 6th February 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, to His Excellency the Governor General.

9. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 6th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses approval of the memorial submitted by the Central Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, to His Excellency the Governor General, and characterizes the requests made in the memorial as most sound and reasonable. The editor entertains the hope that the requests of the association will be granted by the Governor General.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 7th February 1912.

The Indian Press Act.

10. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), says that since the passing of the Indian Press Act the newspapers, whose duty is to serve both Government and the people by bringing into light the faults of the Government officials and the secret doings of the people, are unable to discharge their duties for fear of incurring the displeasure of the officials in whose hands their destinies have been placed.

The editor invites the attention of His Excellency the Governor General to the matter, and expresses the hope that the freedom of the Indian press will be restored.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

The Abor expedition.

11. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses approval of the objection raised by the Bharat Mitra (Calcutta) to the Abor expedition on the ground that it involved an expenditure of a large sum of money which, in face of the repeated assurances of Government, ought not to have been spent outside India. The editor observes that the Parliament will give a reply as to the advisability of the Abor expedition similar to what it gave on the occasion of the Tibet expedition. He remarks that nothing better can be expected when there is no Indian representative on the Parliament.

HINDUSTANI, 12th February 1912.

The causes of dissatisfaction among Indian Muhammadans.

12. One Abul Rahman of Saharanpur contributes a lengthy article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, in which the writer remarks that the Italian-Turkish war, the situation in Persia and the annulment of the partition of Bengal are the causes of the dissatisfaction obtaining among Indian Muhammadans. He observes that Indian Muhammadans are not justified in asking the British Government to interfere in the Italian-Turkish war. He goes on to assure the Muhammadans of India that the British Government will sooner or later prevent the occupation of Persia by Russia, and with regard to the annulment of the partition of Bengal he says that Muhammadans should rest assured that Government must have taken steps to safeguard the interests of Muhammadans before deciding to reunite the two Bengals.

In conclusion he urges the need for a reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans.

13. The Cawnpore Gazette, of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), reports on the authority of the Jhang Sial that the editor of the Hindu (Madras) was recently invited to a dinner party by the Governor of Madras, and suggests that the administrators of other provinces should follow this excellent example, and should try to create confidence in the people by doing honour to journalists.

CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

The journalists and government officers.

14. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), commends the action of the Bengalis in not agitating over the transfer of the imperial Capital to Delhi, and expresses regret that the Anglo-Indians should always oppose Government measures which meet with the approval of Indians.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The change of Capital.

Referring to the letters of protest against the transfer addressed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Anglo-Indian Association to the Government of India, the editor remarks that the announcement made by His Majesty cannot be cancelled by such letters.

15. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th February 1912, has the following :—

LEADER, 10th February 1912.

The thrones used at the Delhi darbar.

"THEIR MAJESTIES' CHAIRS.—A correspondent writes :—The Raja Saheb of Manda has recently installed the two chairs used by Their Imperial Majesties in all the public functions at the last Delhi Darbar with due and solemn ceremonial, at which all zamindars, subjects and officials of the estate paid their proper homage to the throne chairs, and it is the earnest wish and desire of the Raja Saheb to continue this estate ceremonial annually for paying proper homage to the thrones, for want of an opportunity of paying his sincere and dutiful homage to the persons of Their Most Gracious Majesties the King-Emperor and Queen-Empress of India."

16. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, publishes a contributed article entitled "An open letter to the Nawab of Dacca", in which the writer refers to the reply made by His Excellency the Governor General to the address of the Muhammadan deputation that waited on him at Dacca on the 31st January last, and asks the Nawab Saheb to appoint capable men to lecture in the villages of Eastern Bengal explaining the benefits of English education, to start a fund for providing scholarships to poor students, to open primary schools in villages and to erect hostels in different places for students.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

An open letter to the Nawab of Dacca.

The writer observes that until these suggestions are acted upon no hope can be entertained of the advancement of the Muhammadans of Bengal, and he asks the Nawab Saheb to follow his advice.

17. One Nurul Hasan publishes a poem in the Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th February 1912, in which the following passage occurs: "Muhammadans throughout the world are in trouble. Russia has usurped Persia, and England does not care to safeguard Persian independence. The Muhammadans of India have no influence with the British Government, because it regards them with contempt on account of their sycophancy and flattery."

SAHIFA, 12th February 1912.

The condition of Muhammadans of the world.

18. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, expresses approval of the comments made by Al Bashir (Etawah), in the issue of the 30th January 1912, about the speech of His Highness the Agha Khan in reply to the address presented to him by the Sind Association at Karachi (vide Selections No. 5 of 1912, paragraph 23). The editor remarks that His Highness the Agha Khan may be the god of the Khojas but that he cannot be regarded as the god of the entire Muhammadan community, and that if he ever makes an announcement at variance with the sentiments and feelings of the Muhammadans he must plainly be told to mind his own business and not to interfere with the affairs of the Muhammadan community.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

19. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, refers to the article contributed to the Nineteenth Century and After, for the month of January 1912, by Sir Andrew Fraser on the recent administrative changes in Bengal and to a leading

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

The annulment of the partition of Bengal.

article in the Times of India on the same subject, and remarks that the suggestions made in those articles will, if acted upon, be beneficial to the interests of the Muhammadans. The editor suggests that a portion of every year should be fixed for the Governor of Bengal's stay at Dacca, and that Government should open in large number primary schools in those districts of Eastern Bengal where the Muhammadan population exceeds that of the Hindus in order to spread education equally among the two communities.

LEADER, 13th February 1912.

Lord Rosebery on the treatment of the coloured people of the Empire.

20. At the conclusion of a long article in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th February 1912, discussing the speech made by Lord Rosebery on the occasion of the opening of the officers' training corps connected with the Glasgow University, the editor remarks as follows:—

"Every factor of the imperial and international situation convinces us beyond a doubt that the unfailing means of preserving England's imperial position and England's liberties, political and economic, is the adoption of a policy of true liberalism—which is only another name for wisdom as well as righteousness—in dealing with the so-called coloured peoples of the Empire. Then will the latter be as warmly attached to the Empire as the white people themselves, and then will England, supported zealously and sincerely by all the hundreds of millions of all its citizens, be able to stand four square to the world, defying every menace and progressing still and prospering more."

ADVOCATE, 15th February 1912.

India and the Empire.

21. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 15th February 1912, has the following:—

"In the course of an article on the demonstrations held by the people on the 3rd instant at every important centre in India, to give expression to their sense of the beneficent result of the Royal visit and to put on record their profound attachment to the Royal House of England, the Times of India makes some very wise and statesmanlike observations which will be read with great interest by our countrymen. Referring to the assurance conveyed by the meetings to the people of Great Britain and Ireland of the warm attachment of the Indian people to the Empire, our Bombay contemporary points out that the event is without precedent in the history of the relations between India and England. The Sovereign has, of course, on many occasions expressed directly or through Ministers the policy of the Government towards the country, and the principles and sentiments underlying the policy, but this is the first time that India has sent a reciprocal message to the British people. The slightest reflection will show, adds the Times of India, how entirely apposite is the message. Even the most pronounced enemy of Imperialism will find nothing objectionable in Imperialism as defined by the Times of India. The Bombay paper says that by Imperiation it means 'the force that refuses to regard the components of the Empire as things apart, but as forming a splendid whole, one and indivisible, and in which every part shall find its future vivified and assured not only within the Empire, but because it is within the Empire.' The Times of India further adds that and to justify its existence 'the British connection must always be a progressive influence, never holding India back, but the greatest force in its rapid and sustained advancement.' The Times of India says:—

'There are, we believe, some who imagine that with the coming of the King unrest is dead and stagnation has settled on the land. We believe they are wrong. We hope they are wrong. Unrest, rightly considered is the sign of progress, and the finest evidence of the quickening influence of British rule: stagnation means death, and we have only to cast our eyes abroad in order to see that there is no place in the sun for the dead and dying nations. We look to see as the result of the King's visit not stagnation but a quickened life, a healthy discontent with everything that hampers the moral and material progress of the land, a livelier strife for its rapid and stable advancement . . . It is essential not only to maintain internal peace in India and protect this country with the incomparable and growing might of the British Empire; but to secure the permanent influence upon Indian life of those liberal principles which have been implanted and which may otherwise wither in the glare of Oriental reaction."

22. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 15th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "The forthcoming Viceregal visit," in which the editor expresses the hope that the visit will be the forerunner of more visits in the near future, and of a greater interest in the affairs of the United Provinces, especially as regards the expenditure on education and sanitary improvements. He says that as Lord Hardinge has been pleased to grant Behar an executive council, it would be doing the United Provinces the barest justice if he gave them one also. Apart from other considerations, which are in themselves weighty, the very prestige of these provinces requires that the grant of an executive council should not be long delayed.

ADVOCATE, 15th February 1912.

The forthcoming Viceregal visit.

The editor urges the allotment of more money for irrigation works and for urgent railway connections to make Bombay still nearer, but above all these provinces want what is due to them, a liberal allotment of a fair share of their income to be spent on education and sanitation, both of which have suffered for want of funds. The annual grant of five lakhs of rupees on sanitation by the Government of India cannot meet all the demands of the United Provinces. His Excellency will learn that at Benares schools had to be closed, not from want of scholars but from lack of funds to maintain them, and that at Lucknow more schools cannot be opened for the same reason.

He concludes with the following words: "Money and more money is the general cry from all sides; the whole administration of the province is starving, because it does not get what is due to it. If His Excellency the Viceroy who, we know, does not hesitate to take bold measures, sees that financial justice is done to the United Provinces, he will earn the blessings of millions of people."

23. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), refers to the comments of the Scotsman (Edinburgh), on the subject of the desirability of cordial relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, which His Highness the Agha Khan urged in his telegram announcing the donation of Rs. 5,000 to the proposed Hindu University. The editor expresses regret that even now there is a section of the people which looks askance at all attempts at a rapprochement between the Hindus and Muhammadans. He states that it is a great consolation that the King-Emperor pleads for unity for all of his subjects.

ARYA MITRA, 8th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

24. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 10th February 1912, expresses gratification at the wish expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, and remarks that the Muhammadans wisely refrained from joining the Congress in the beginning, seeing that it was looked upon with suspicion by Government. The editor says that if Muhammadans were to join the Congress now that the suspicions attaching to it have been removed, a great deal of friction between the two communities would disappear, and that it would become easy for Government to grant their rights to the people.

OUDH AKHBAR, 10th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

25. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 13th February 1912, refers to the letter from Rai Bahadur Lala Baij Nath of Agra, which appeared in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd February 1912 (vide Selections No. 5 of 1912, paragraph 28), and remarks that the strained feelings between Hindus and Muhammadans are not due to the latter killing cows, their demanding separate electorates or to their emphasizing the political importance of their community.

MASHRIQ, 13th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

The editor expresses regret that the Lala Saheb should have held only Muhammadans responsible for the strained relations betweens the two communities and that he should have asked them alone to court the friendship of the Hindus, and observes that he as a leader of the Hindu community should have asked his co-religionists to refrain from causing annoyance to the Muhammadans.

26. Referring to the Muhammadan Conference held at Calcutta and to the Muhammadan deputation that waited upon the Viceroy at Dacca, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 15th February 1912, remarks that the desire of Nawab Siraj-ul-Islam that Hindus and Muhammadans should now settle their differences and live in amity cannot be fulfilled until Muhammadans give up their attitude of duplicity.

ABHYUDAYA, 15th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th February 1912.

Mr. Churchill's speech at Belfast.

27. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, refers to Mr. Churchill's speech at Belfast, and remarks that a perusal of the speech inspires one with the greatest admiration for the statesmanship of that minister. The editor expresses the opinion that with the exception of three or four sentences all that Mr. Churchill said about the granting of autonomy to Ireland could be applied to India. He says that the Indians are waiting impatiently for the day when a member of the British Cabinet will utter similar words for India.

ABHYUDAYA, 15th February 1912.

Mr. Churchill's speech at Belfast.

28. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 15th February 1912, refers to Mr. Churchill's speech at Belfast and remarks that the speech will silence his opponents. The editor observes that the granting of Home Rule to Ireland will be productive of much good to England.

UNION GAZETTE, 7th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

29. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), takes exception to the comments made by Mr. Seraj-ud-din, Barrister-at-law of the Punjab, on the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain which appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13).

The editor says that the policy adopted by the late Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan now needs a little change, and that, though the existence of Muhammadans in India is dependent on the continuance of the British rule in the country, they should never rely on the policy of contentment, seeing that only those who ask for things are given what they want. He goes on to say that the Muhammadans can no longer tolerate the leaders who care for their own good instead of that of their community, and observes that it is possible for the Muhammadans to be loyal to the British Government and at the same time to make efforts to safeguard their interests.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 8th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

30. One Shafi of Kachaucha contributes an article to the Kaisar-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), in which he takes exception to the wish expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, and observes that the joining of the Congress by the Muhammadans before their educational condition is improved is calculated to cause injury to their interests.

ITTIHAD, 8th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

31. One Muhammad Ishaq-ul-Hussani Parvi contributes an article to the Ittihád (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), in which he takes exception to the wish expressed by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, and advises his co-religionists to keep themselves aloof from it. He says that the degeneration of the Muhammadans is due to their renouncing their religious obligations, and observes that if they follow strictly the principles of their religion they will never have need of announcing any change in their policy.

ITTIHAD, 8th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

32. One Ahsan, writing from Shahganj, in Agra, contributes an article to the Ittihád (Moradabad), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), in which he takes exception to the comments of the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th and 26th January 1912 (vide Selections No. 4 of 1912, paragraph 50, and No. 5 of 1912, paragraph 31) on the letter from Mr. Raza Ali which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January, and characterizes the comments as the outcome of a prejudiced mind. The writer dwells on the necessity of unity between the Hindus and Muhammadans, without which he says Muhammadans will find it impossible to make any progress, and expresses the opinion that, as Muhammadans make advancement in education, they will realise the advisability of joining the Indian National Congress.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

33. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th February 1912, discusses in a leading article the future policy of Indian Muhammadans and arrives at the conclusion that Government gives only to those who ask, and in support of his contention gives the instance of the annulment of the partition of Bengal, which, he says, was the result of the constitutional agitation of the Bengalis. The editor urges his co-religionists to shake off their lethargy, to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and he warns them of the danger of joining the Indian National Congress.

34. Shams-ul-Ulma Maulvi Shibli Nomani contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, in which he refers to the letter from Mr. Raza Ali which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, and expresses disapproval of his suggestion to join the Indian National Congress. He refers to the letter of Nawab Mushtaq Husain that appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th December 1911 (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13), and while agreeing with the advice given by the Nawab to his co-religionists about joining the Indian National Congress, expresses disagreement with his arguments. He charges the Muhammadans with having no ambition, says that their only desire is to become graduates and to get government employment, and observes that this desire has made them such cowards that they fear to take part even in educational conferencees and Muslim Leagues.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

35. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th February 1912, refers to the letter from Mr. Raza Ali which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January 1912, and takes exception to Mr. Raza Ali's advice to his co-religionists in India not to sympathise with their brethren in other parts of the world.

SAHIFA, 12th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

36. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 13th February 1912, refers to the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haq which he delivered at Bankipur in the Jubilee Club on the 2nd February, and remarks that the hon'ble gentleman did not waste his time in giving vent to unnecessary and flattering expressions on the effects of the visit to India of His Majesty the King-Emperor.

The editor expresses the hope that both civil and military officers will ever remember the words of His Majesty and that they will act according to his advice in their treatment of Indians.

MASHRIQ, 13th February 1912.

The Royal visit.

37. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 14th February 1912, in a leading article describes the effects of His Majesty's visit to India. The editor observes that His Majesty has won the hearts of the people, and raised the status of the country by paying a visit to it. The editor expresses gratification that the Bengalis, who it was feared would express their dissatisfaction at the transfer of the Imperial Capital, had accorded a cordial welcome to His Majesty in Calcutta. He remarks that the action of His Majesty in emphasizing the importance of education shows that he has the well-being of his Indian subjects at heart.

OUDH AKHBAR, 14th February 1912.

The effects of His Majesty's visit to India.

38. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses the hope that an executive council will soon be established in the United Provinces and in the Punjab, seeing that the new province of Behar is to get council government. The editor remarks that, though the executive and the legislative councils are not productive of much good to India, on account of the minority of non-official members in them, they are at any rate calculated to acquaint the public with administrative matters.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Executive councils in the United Provinces and the Punjab.

39. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), says that there are sixteen Hindu and ten Muhammadan members in the United Provinces Legislative Council, and expresses regret that the representation of Hindus should be so inadequate, when they form 86 per cent. of the population of these provinces.

ANAND, 8th February 1912.

The United Provinces Legislative Council.

40. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 13th February 1912, refers to the discussion on the Court of Wards Bill at the last meeting of the United Provinces Legislative Council and takes exception to the mention of the names of Chaudhri Fateh Chand and Shaikh Naushad Ali in the course of the discussion. The editor urges the need for avoiding personal references in such discussions, and he also makes the following criticisms of the council proceedings.

MASHRIQ, 13th February 1912.

The United Provinces Legislative Council.

Very long questions are put, sufficient time is not given for the consideration of important Acts, some members oppose a measure only for the sake of opposition and do not consider the benefit or injury likely to accrue from the measure, and the members do not take interest in matters relating to general improvement, and they only think of safeguarding the interests of talukdars, as if the council were meant for protecting the interests of raises only.

He also expresses regret that the Government should not have considered it advisable to open a school for instruction in the unani and vedic systems of medicine.

LEADER, 14th February 1912.

The Madras Legislative Council.

41. Referring to the nomination of Dewan Bahadur M. Adinarayan Iyah to the Legislative Council of Madras in the place of a member of the Board of Revenue who has gone on leave, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th February 1912, observes that Madras is sometimes fortunate in the character of the men nominated by the Governor to the Legislative Council, and asks whether such a nomination would have been made in the United Provinces. The Dewan Bahadur is described as having taken to a public life after retirement from government service, and as being a very capable man and fit for the presidentship of the National Congress or for a membership of the Viceroy's Council.

The editor says that thanks are due to the late Governor of Madras for this as well as for other recent nominations, as well as to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal for nominating Babu Bhupendra Nath to the Legislative Council.

AGRA AKHBAR, 14th February 1912.

A suggestion to bestow the title of His Majesty on the Nizam of Hyderabad.

42. One Mirza Inayat Beg of Bhopal contributes an article to the Agra Akhbar of the 14th February 1912, in which he expresses regret that Government has not yet bestowed the title of His Majesty on the Nizam of Hyderabad, and observes that the Nizam is a fitting person for such a title, seeing that his state is the most important of all the native states in India, and that the territory under him is equal in area to that of Germany.

He states that the Muhammadan public will be gratified if the title be conferred on the Nizam, and that, if Government does not take notice of the sentiments of its Muhammadan subjects, whose loyalty has been acknowledged, it will cause disappointment to them.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Dakaitis in the North-West Frontier Province.

43. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), refers to the recent dakaitis in Meerut, and suggests that the local police does not discharge its duty properly. The editor invites the attention of the Imperial Government to the prevalence of dakaitis in the North-West Frontier Province and asks it to check them.

III.—Native States.

TAJIR, 11th February 1912.

The condition of Muhammadans in the Hyderabad State.

44. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 11th February 1912, expresses regret that the Muhammadans in the Hyderabad State are gradually coming under the influence of Christian and Arya Samajist teachings, and invites the attention of His Highness the Nizam to the matter. The editor entertains the hope that the Nizam will adopt some measures to prevent the conversion of his Muhammadan subjects to other religions.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

The commemoration of the coronation darbar by ruling chiefs.

45. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses surprise that the Muhammadan native chiefs, unlike the Hindu ruling princes, did not in any way commemorate the last coronation darbar. The editor observes that His Majesty is the Emperor of Hindus and Muhammadans alike, and that the Muhammadan ruling princes also ought to have perpetuated the memory of the coronation darbar in a befitting manner. He remarks that they failed to do so probably because Muhammadans were at the time planning to secure the title of His Majesty for the Nizam of Hyderabad.

46. Referring to the commemoration of the coronation darbar in the Jhind State in the shape of permitting the Muhammadans of the State to recite the azan in their mosques, the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 13th February 1912, remarks that British rule has enlightened the views of the ruling chiefs. The editor asks the Muhammadans of the State to always remain grateful to His Highness the Maharaja of Jhind.

The commemoration of the coronation darbar in Jhind.

OUDH AKHBAR, 13th February 1912.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

47. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), referring to the memorial submitted by the people of Gaya to the Government of India, praying for the establishment of panchayats in villages, remarks that in other places people do not seem to realise the need for panchayats. The editor observes that no good can result to the country unless the people shake off their lethargy and have a knowledge of their requirements.

The establishment of panchayats in villages.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

48. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), referring to the appointment of Mr. A. Chaudhari and Mr. Hasan Iman as Judges of the Calcutta High Court for two years, remarks that, though Government has by this appointment secured the services of two very capable persons, the Indian National Congress will sustain a heavy loss.

The appointment of Mr. A. Chaudhari and Mr. Hasan Iman as Judges of the Calcutta High Court.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

49. Referring to the appointment of Mr. A. Chaudhari and Mr. Hasan Imam as Judges of the Calcutta High Court, and to the appointment of Mr. Shams-ul-Huda and the Maharaja of Darbhanga as members of the executive councils of Bengal and Behar respectively, the Saddharm a Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 14th February 1912, remarks that Government intends to divide responsible government appointments between Hindus and Muhammadans equally. The editor observes that now that Mr. Sankaran Nair has been appointed as a member of the Madras Executive Council it has to be seen where a Muhammadan is given a similar appointment.

Equal distribution of government appointments between Hindus and Muhammadans.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 14th February 1912.

(b)—Police.

50. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses regret that the Indian police should distrust the people, and in support of his contention the editor refers to the action of the Dacca police in compelling the owners of houses situated on the roads through which the Viceroy was to pass, to execute a bond not to allow any strangers in their houses on that day until His Excellency had passed.

The malpractices of police.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

The editor invites the attention of Government to the report that a naval officer insisted on accompanying his wife to the industrial exhibition at Khulna on a day fixed for women only in spite of the protests of the boys who were working as policemen.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

51. Referring to the report published in the Bangbasi (Calcutta), that a surplus would be shown in the budget to be discussed in the Legislative Council and that there would consequently be no need for the imposition of any new tax, the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), remarks that if the surplus be utilised in the carrying out of any new project, such as the construction of an Indian navy, it will not be productive of any good to India. The editor suggests that the surplus should be spent on some work likely to prove profitable to the people.

The budget discussion.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

House tax in Moradabad.

52. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), takes exception to the imposition of house tax in Moradabad, and suggests that some form of taxation should be resorted to which would affect the rich people only. The editor asks the people to vote for capable persons for municipal membership if they desire that their interests should be safeguarded.

INDEPENDENT, 12th February 1912.

Election of members for municipal boards.

53. The Independent (Allahabad), of the 12th February 1912, expresses regret that the masses in India have not yet realised that the municipal boards exist for their benefit.

The editor says that the persons who try to become members of the municipal board do so for their personal distinction and aggrandisement, and not with a view to do good to their countrymen.

He asks the voters to pay more regard to the personal merits of the candidates for membership than to the undue influence exercised on them by their friends and supporters.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th February 1912.

Bench magistrates for the town of Ujhiani in the district of Budaun.

54. One Mazhar Ali Khan of Ujhiani contributes an article to the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th February 1912, in which he expresses approval of the article contributed by one Hasan Afzal to the Zul Qarnain of the 28th January 1912 (vide Selections No. 5 of 1912, paragraph 73), and suggests that the number of Hindu and Muhammadan bench magistrates for Ujhiani should be equal, and that they should be chosen from the respectable families of the town.

OUDH AKHBAR, 14th February 1912.

The publication of the proceedings of local boards in vernacular.

55. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 14th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Madras Government in issuing an order that the proceedings of district boards should also be published in the local vernacular, and expresses the hope that other Local Governments will follow the lead of the Madras Government.

ABHYUDAYA, 15th February 1912.

The publication of the proceedings of local boards in vernacular.

56. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 15th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Madras Government in issuing an order that the proceedings of local board meetings should be published in the local vernacular as well as in English, and entertains the hope that in the United Provinces the proceedings of the Legislative Council at any rate will be published in Hindi.

ABHYUDAYA, 15th February 1912.

The insanitary condition of Allahabad city.

57. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 15th February 1912, complains that the municipality pays no attention to the insanitary condition of the city, in spite of the fact that plague is prevalent in Yahiyapur, Khuldabad, Pandariba and other muhallas of Allahabad. He invites the attention of the chairman to the matter and expresses the hope that arrangements will be made to improve the present state of affairs.

LEADER, 15th February 1912.

The Cawnpore Municipal Board.

58. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th February 1912, publishes a note drawing attention to a letter on Cawnpore municipal affairs which appears in the same issue. The editor says that the writer is a prominent citizen of Cawnpore, in touch with local municipal administration and one who knows what he writes about, and also that from all that has come to his notice from reliable sources he is inclined to the belief that the methods of the present chairman are much more open to blame than any act of the members of the board.

The letter itself discusses the gossip which has resulted from the recent dispute regarding the parade bazaar, and says that it is rumoured that, because the municipal board has been showing too much independence lately, it is intended to replace it under the orders of the District Magistrate as chairman, with a Joint Magistrate under him as assistant. The writer asserts that the disagreements on the board are due to the failure of the chairman to accept the opinion of the majority of the members of the board, and he refers to a number of instances of this happening.

(e)—Education.

59. The Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 14th and 22nd December 1911 (received on the 9th and 17th February 1912, respectively), publishes a contributed article on the present system of education over the signature of Panna Lal Chaudhri of Taindukhera, in which the writer urges that the Indian Government should devote progressively larger sums of money towards the spread of education in the country, and that it should make primary education free and compulsory. He finds fault with the contents and the literary style of the text-books prescribed for the primary schools, which, he complains, do not inculcate lessons of patriotism and morality, do not encourage a love of their mother-tongue in the children. He says that the text-books give them no knowledge of the history of their country while the teaching given in geography shakes their faith in their scriptures.

JAIN GAZETTE, 14th and 22nd December 1911.

The present system of education.

Referring to higher education he says that much time, energy and money is wasted, because the medium of instruction is English, and that what is imparted is not worth the time, money and energy spent in acquiring it. He says that it involves an unnecessary strain upon the health of the students, while it is not of a nature to equip them fully for effecting the regeneration of the country. In conclusion he urges Government to improve the system of education in the country.

60. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), contains a contributed article in which the writer remarks that there is no reason to fear that the Dayanand Anglo-Vedic College will sustain any irreparable loss on account of the resignation of its principal, Lala Hansraj, seeing that that gentleman would never have insisted on severing his connection with the college if there had been any likelihood of loss resulting to it from his resignation. The writer says that the Pritinidhi Sabha should accept his resignation, and give him time to take rest. He suggests that the students of the institution should raise subscriptions for a memorial, which should be some scheme for advancing the interests of the college, for the success of which Lala Hansraj has always laboured.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Resignation of Lala Hansraj from the principalship of the Dayanand Anglo-Vedic College, Lahore.

61. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), remarks that though Government has done so much for Muhammadans they still cry for more. The editor observes that the Hindus, who do not make unreasonable requests, will feel much gratified if Government will make adequate arrangements for their education.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Education among Hindus.

62. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th February 1912, publishes a contributed article entitled "King George's Medical College" in which the writer states that the opening of the King George's Medical College in Lucknow removes a long standing and sorely felt need of these provinces, as young men who aspire to join the medical profession will no longer be handicapped in obtaining the necessary education. He expresses the opinion that it is necessary to remind those in whose hands the administration and control of the institution have been placed that its utility, efficiency, reputation and popularity will depend almost entirely upon the qualifications, capabilities, experience and sympathetic disposition of its teachers, and hardly to any degree upon the splendour of the buildings or the completeness of its equipment.

LEADER, 9th February 1912.

King George's Medical College.

He expresses disappointment at the provisional scheme, indicating the lines on which the college will be staffed and administered, published in the October issue of the Indian Medical Gazette, which, he says, gives rise to misgivings that the education and training will not be on a par with that available in British and Continental medical institutions, and that, judging from the appointments already made and the replies given in the provincial council, it would appear to be the intention of Government to give effect to the scheme without any modification. The writer observes that it was hoped that specially qualified men would have been imported from England as professors, but now it would appear that it is intended to make the professorships a close preserve for the Indian Medical Service of these provinces, and submits that in selecting suitable incumbents for the appointments, provincial claims should on no account be permitted to subvert the principle of securing the best men available in the country. He suggests that professorships should have been offered to several well-known Indian Medical Service officers named by him, and says the objection might be raised that these officers would not have cared to accept professorships in the college, on account of the poor emoluments they carry, but he contends that ideal professors are indispensible and that these cannot be secured unless suitable emoluments are offered.

He is of opinion that the money lavished on the show and external adornment of the buildings, on the expensive sanitary fittings, marble floors, electric chandeliers and luxuriously built residences for the professors should have been saved in order to provide better emoluments for the professors and their assistants. The writer says that it is not gratifying to find that there will be no professors of materia medica or of medical jurisprudence in the college, and that the knowledge of these two important subjects will be imparted to the students by partially educated lecturers, whose claim to practise medicine is not recognized by the British Medical Council. The appointment of military assistant surgeons to these teacherships will not only damage the interests of the college, but will afford another cause of complaint to civil assistant surgeons, who, being admittedly superior to military assistant surgeons in many ways, have already a serious grievance in being often made to serve under military assistant surgeons, who are favoured with the civil surgeoncies of the smaller districts. From a professional point of view he says that the greatest anomaly is the amazing proposal to place the professor of pathology in charge of a certain number of beds in the surgical wards, and ridicules the idea. He concludes the article with expressing the hope that the authorities will modify the working scheme in such a way as to make the institution worthy of the name it bears.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

63. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses apprehension that differences of opinion may arise among the organizers of the Hindu University scheme, and suggests that the university should be established at Delhi. The editor asserts that much good will result to the university if it be established in the new capital of India.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 11th February 1912.

The proposed Hindu and Muslim Universities.

64. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 11th February 1912, asks the organizers of the schemes for the Hindu and Muslim Universities to give free education to students who cannot afford to pay their college fees, and observes that, if they fail to do so, the existence of the new universities will be useless.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 11th February 1912.

The education of women.

65. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 11th February 1912, refers to the fact of the recognition of Japan as a first-rate Power, and remarks that her greatness is due to her adoption of Western sciences and to the improvement of education of her women.

The editor deplores the condition of Indian women, condemning the system of early marriages in Bengal, and asks his countrymen to reform it and to educate their women.

AL MUSHIR, 11th February 1912.

The need for imparting technical and industrial education to Muhammadans.

66. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th February 1912, deplores the degraded condition of Muhammadans in India, and urges the need for imparting technical education to them, on the ground that ulmas of ancient times used to earn their living by means of commerce and industry. The editor suggests that the Arabic schools should make arrangements for imparting technical and industrial education to Muhammadans.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

The education of the Muhammadans.

67. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, expresses regret that the suggestion of Nawab Mushtaq Husain about sending a few Muhammadan students to Europe for education with the help of a year's income of the proposed Muslim University Fund should not have been met with the approval of the trustees, and urges his co-religionists to pay more regard to the education of the members of their community.

68. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, quotes a passage from page 145 of the book named Khwab-o-khiyal published by the Baptist Mission Press, Calcutta, and remarks that the passage is an attack on the chastity of Muhammadan women. The editor invites the attention of Government to the matter, and asks it to stop the publication of the book, and to discontinue its use as a text-book for the examination of civil and military officers.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-khiyal.

69. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 13th February 1912, refers to the proposal of the Bombay University to establish a commercial college, and suggests the establishment of a technical and commercial college at Cawnpore in the United Provinces.

AL BASHIR, 13th February 1912.

A suggestion for a technical and commercial college in the United Provinces.

70. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 14th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Madras Government in appointing a committee to consider the question of the introduction of religious and moral education in schools and colleges. The editor takes exception to the views expressed by the Leader (Allahabad) that the introduction of moral and religious education in colleges will be productive of no good results.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 14th February 1912.

The introduction of moral and religious education in schools and colleges.

71. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 14th February 1912, expresses gratification that Indians are devising means to improve their condition and are realising the need for the spread of education among them. The editor remarks that India like Europe will be counted among the civilized countries when its people will have acquired education.

OUDH AKHBAR, 14th February 1912.

Education in India.

72. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 15th February 1912, in an article entitled "Sir George Clarke on education," criticises His Excellency's recent speech at Ahmedabad. The editor remarks that His Excellency certainly deserves the sincerest gratitude of the people of Western India for his anxious care for the development of scientific, industrial and commercial education in the province under his charge, and that he took this opportunity to vindicate his policy.

ADVOCATE, 15th February 1912.

Sir George Clarke on education.

He contends, however, that the strictures on university education passed by His Excellency in the course of his speech are not at all fair, and expresses surprise that he should speak with such dogmatic assurance on such a subject.

In this connection the editor writes as follows: "We quite admit that as Governor of a province he had exceptional facilities to carry on his enquiries, but we do not think that he is justified in claiming infallibility of judgment because he gave four years of careful examination to the question, and that his conclusions are more correct than of those who have spent their lifetime in examining the question. We think His Excellency was unusually uncharitable and indulged in exaggeration when he repeated the complaint which we have heard so often 'that the output of our universities is composed of slenderly educated young men whose intellects have not been fully awakened, who have not learnt thoroughness, who have no idea of prosecuting their studies further, and who sometimes cherish an exaggerated estimate of their acquirements.'"

73. The Kaisar-i-Hind (Urdu), (Fyzabad), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), expresses approval of the proposed Dacca University, and takes exception to the opposition aroused by the Bengalis against the establishment of the university.

KAISAR-I-HIND, 8th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

74. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), referring to the Muhammadan deputation that waited upon the Viceroy at Dacca, expresses the hope that besides the existing universities four new universities will be established in India. The editor remarks that in case the new universities are established the cause of education will be much promoted in the country.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The four proposed universities in India.

75. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th February 1912, publishes a leading article discussing the proposed Dacca University, in which the editor expresses surprise that the scheme

LEADER, 10th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

has failed to gain public support either in Calcutta or in Dacca from Anglo-Indians, Hindus or Muhammadans. He remarks that he can understand the hostility of the Anglo-Indian press of Calcutta, as the change of capital to Delhi has been too much for it, and it is unable to accept with grace any decision of Lord Hardinge's Government, but he confesses that he was not prepared for the vehemence with which the Indian newspapers of Calcutta were resisting the foundation of the university. As regards the arguments that the university was not asked for and was not needed, the editor says that a good thing does not lose its property of goodness from the mere circumstance that it was not asked for, and that it might equally have been said when the Universities of the Punjab and Allahabad were established that there was no need for them. The third objection that the university would not be able to maintain itself he dismisses as ridiculous, because a Government which has thought fit to establish a university will provide the necessary funds for its existence, and he says that he fails to understand how a new university at Dacca will injure any conceivable interest. With the establishment of a university at Dacca, the people of Behar will be justified in pressing for the foundation of a university at Patna, the Central Provinces will make a request for a university at Nagpur, and Burma will repeat its demand for one at Rangoon. Similarly Sind will want a university at Karachi, and he cannot see how these demands can be resisted by the Government, nor does he think they will be, if they are persisted in with sufficient determination. The more progressive of the Indian states may establish universities of their own.

The editor trusts that the Government will not make the Dacca University an imitation of existing universities, and expresses the hope that from the start it will be a teaching university, and that it will not confine itself to examinations. He suggests to his countrymen of Bengal, both Hindus and Muhammadans, that they will be doing a much more useful service by pressing this view upon the Government, than by expending their energies on a futile and unwise opposition.

He concludes his article in the following words:—

"The recognition of the principle that there need not be only one university in a province is to our mind of the highest importance. By sanctioning the establishment of the universities of Aligarh and Benares the Government of India have indicated their willingness to allow non-official bodies to come into the field with projects of new universities, while by their own action in deciding to establish a university at Dacca they have shown that the Government themselves will not in the future stop with one university in each province. A combination of the forces of the Government and the people to bring into existence more such universities is the best that we can hope for in the interests of Indian education; in other words, in the interests of Indian progress."

ADVOCATE, 11th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

76. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th February 1912, publishes a note discussing the proceedings of the meeting of the Dacca People's Association held on the 5th February, at which resolutions were passed adversely criticising the action of Government in deciding to constitute a university at Dacca without first ascertaining the views of the public on the subject.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

77. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, condemns the opposition of the Calcutta press to the establishment of the proposed Dacca University. The editor says that the opposition on the part of the Anglo-Indian section of the press is intelligible in view of the fact that the announcement of the transfer of the Capital to Delhi was alto gether too much for the Anglo-Indian journalists, and in consequence they think it their duty to oppose Lord Hardinge in all matters. He expresses regret that the Indian editors of Calcutta, who ought to do their best for the spread of education, should oppose the proposal, and states that it will diminish the prestige of the Calcutta University. He urges that they should agitate for the establishment of at least four universities in the presidency of Bengal instead of taking objection to the establishment of a university at Dacca. He appeals to His Excellency Lord Hardinge that universities should be established in the course of time not only at Dacca but in Behar, Nagpur and Burma as well.

The proposed Dacca University.

78. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, has the following :— LEADER, 11th February 1912.

"I feel it my duty to refer to a matter which has made a painful impression on the people of Bengal. You have read in the newspapers this morning that there is a proposal to start a university at Dacca. I can only say that the announcement has created a sense of alarm and anxiety in the public mind. It will mean educational partition which will be fraught with the direst results to the province. Peace and conciliation, which formed part and parcel of the Royal boons, will be nullified. After the healing measures proclaimed by the Sovereign we do not really want any more agitation. I hope that His Excellency the Viceroy will reconsider the matter. The Hindus do not want it; the Muhammadans do not want it. Then who wants it? Let then peace reign, and let this apple of discord be withdrawn from our midst.—The Bengalee."

The proposed Dacca University.

79. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th February 1912, expresses approval of the proposal of His Excellency the Governor General to establish a university at Dacca, and asks the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal to derive full advantage from the educational facility afforded by the establishment of a university in the chief town of their province. SAHIFA, 12th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

80. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 14th February 1912, referring to the Muhammadan deputation that waited on the Viceroy at Dacca, expresses approval of the proposal regarding the establishment of a university at Dacca. The editor observes that the establishment of a university at Dacca will greatly facilitate the acquisition of education, which alone can improve the condition of India. SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 14th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

81. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 14th February 1912, remarks that the assurance given by the Viceroy regarding the establishment of a university will be some consolation to the Muhammadans of the Eastern Bengal who are dissatisfied at the annulment of the partition of Bengal. The editor observes that the Hindus should not oppose the establishment of a new university, as otherwise the relations between them and the Muhammadans will be much strained. OUDH AKHBAR, 14th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

82. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th February 1912, in a leading article entitled "The Dacca University," discusses recent contributions on the subject addressed to the Statesman by the Rev. Mr. Holmes and to the Indian Daily News by Mr. S. R. Das. The editor says he is glad to find that opposition to the establishment of the University at Dacca is by no means unanimous even in Bengal, and he expresses agreement with the writers defending the scheme and disposing the many objections raised against it. LEADER, 15th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

83. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, says that Nawab Ishaq Khan is not a fit person to take over the charge of the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and he asks Nawab Mushtaq Husain to continue in his post until the proposed Muslim University is established. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

The resignation of Nawab Mushtaq Husain from the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

84. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th February 1912, expresses regret that, though Nawab Mushtaq Husain has withdrawn his resignation from the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, he has decided to live at Amroha. ZUL QARNAIN, 14th February 1912.

The editor asks the Nawab to live at Aligarh at any rate until a new secretary is appointed.

A survey of the gurukul.

85. Maulana Abdul Kadir, professor of the Madrasa Illahiat, Cawnpore, in continuation of his article entitled "A survey of the gurukul," which appeared in the Kaisar-i-Hind (Urdu), (Fyzabad), of the 1st February 1912 (vide Selections No. 6 of 1912, paragraph 77), writes again in the Kaisar-i-Hind of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February 1912), that the students of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental KAISAR-I-HIND, 8th February 1912.

College, Aligarh, do not possess the same religious spirit as the students of the gurukul have, and that the old boys of the college have not proved themselves useful to their community as is expected from the gurukul students.

He also refers to the work done by the Nadwat-ul-ulma, Lucknow, and expresses regret that the training given by the institution is not on the lines of the gurukul and that the students in the former institution do not possess courage, religious zeal, courtesy and the spirit of self-abnegation.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 7th February 1912.

The Kangri gurukul.

86. In a supplement to the Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 7th February 1912, the editor compares the gurukul to a yajna and its opponents to rakshasas (demons) who used to interfere in the performance of yajnas. He expresses regret that Dharampal, who owes much to the gurukul, should oppose it. However, he endeavours to show that the articles published by Dharampal in the Indar (Lahore) did not mislead the public, and that large donations are still being made for the institution. He remarks that the number of the opponents of the gurukul is great because the institution is in a flourishing condition, and that the Sikhs, the Sanatan Dharmis, the Muhammadans, and the supporters of the Dayanand Anglo-Vedic College are opposed to the gurukul, because they are of the opinion that the gurukul will prove detrimental to the interests of their respective institutions. He observes that persons professing various religions have joined one another in opposing the gurukul in spite of their religious differences, and in reply to the criticisms of the institution made by them he publishes the case of Pandit Atma Ram besides some letters and resolutions passed at the executive committee of the Arya Pritinidhi Sabha. These publications, he says, will show that Dharampal has taken advantage of the weakness of Pandits Atma Ram and Bashi Ram to criticize the gurukul, and thereby disgrace them and their sons. Referring to Bashi Ram's letter published in the first issue of the Indar, complaining that the governor of the gurukul, actuated by selfish motives, placed obstacles in the way of Jai Chandra's devotion to study, he says that the report of the gurukul has already been published, which throws sufficient light on the circumstances of Jai Chandra's expulsion from the gurukul. It is said that Jai Chandra was a source of trouble to the gurukul authorities, that he on several occasions broke the gurukul rules, and that in spite of that the governor always espoused his cause. Jai Chandra is asked to consider whether his father was justified in making allegations against the governor, who was always kind to him and who had his well-being at heart. The editor states that the report of the gurukul also shows that Bashi Ram himself was responsible for the degraded condition of his second son, Krishna Chandra, too. About the reference made in Bashi Ram's letter to the fact that Vidyasagar was not sent away from the gurukul, in spite of the request made by Bashi Ram that this should be done, it is said that there was no obstacle put in the way of Vidyasagar being sent home, but that Pandit Ishwar Das, the guardian of the Brahmachari, did not come to take him away when he was asked by the gurukul authorities to do so. The editor says that there seems to be some truth in the report that the reason for Bashi Ram insisting upon Vidyasagar being sent home was that the gurukul authorities might be reluctant to part with Vidyasagar as he was a promising and capable Brahmachari, and so would certify without examining Jai Chandra that he had passed the Sanatak examination.

Referring to the objection said by Dharampal to have been raised by the Gurukul Samachhak Sabha (which the editor says does not exist) that the sons of the governor were allowed to sit for the Sanatak examination before the date fixed for it, he says that the explanation of the matter is contained in the report of the gurukul.

In reply to the allegation made by Pandit Atma Ram that the Arya Samaj and the gurukul have wrecked the lives of his sons, the editor publishes letters written by Atma Ram's sons, showing that the father himself was responsible for the failures.

With regard to the open letter published in the second issue of the Indar, giving the names of Brahmacharis whose lives are said to have been wrecked by the gurukul, the editor says that it appears from the report of the gurukul that Bashi Ram himself was to blame with regard to Krishna Chandra, that Gyan Chandra cannot be described as a failure, seeing that he had read up to the 10th class of the gurukul before he took to commerce, and can also successfully preach the mission of the samaj. He says that Brahmachari Bhim was much benefited by being admitted into the gurukul, seeing that he recovered his eyesight and regained his health. With regard to Brahmachari Kush he says that his brain was naturally very weak, and about Vishwajit he says that in the Saddharma Prachárak for June 1902 the parents of Brahmacharis who had no brains were advised to take them away.

He goes on to say that the fifth objection is that the tone of the letter written by Indra to Jai Chandra, and Indra having written the life of Bonaparte clearly show that, instead of performing religious work, he intends to lead an objectionably political life. In reply it has already been recorded that Brahmachari Indra denies having written "sinful government" and similar other expressions. The veracity of the letter is not vouched for. Pandit Bashi Ram denies that he gave the letter to Dharampal, but admits that the wording of the letter is the same as that published by Dharampal. With regard to the letter I repeat that no such letter was written by Indra. If Dharampal shows anybody any such letter it must be a forged one. If any letter written by Indra is in the possession of Pandit Bashi Ram, Dharampal or anybody else, he should publish its facsimile or produce it together with witnesses before the Arya Pritinidhi Sabha of the Punjab. The truth or falsity of the allegations will be ascertained by comparing the handwriting of that letter with that of other letters written by Indra, which are in the possession of the sabha.

In connection with this letter Dharampal has made a vain manifestation of bragging, which is the characteristic of a coward. The braggings of Dharampal and his colleagues cannot screen his acts of forgery. He should remember that apart from the severe correction of public opinion he will some day have to take his trial in heavenly and worldly courts also. Then it will be judged how bold a mean forgerer can be.

Brahmachari Indra has written the life of Napoleon, which is said to be a political work. It is a matter of regret that simple-minded men are deceived by this trick. Does the Vedic faith, which came into existence from the very beginning of the world, have no concern with history. The following example reveals how Indra dealt with the subject in the book. Referring to the second marriage of Napoleon after divorcing his first wife, he wrote : "It can no doubt be said that from a religious point of view the marriage was to be condemned. If Napoleon had been religiously inclined he would not have contracted the marriage (page 230)." Further on on the same page he wrote : "He believed only in one God and observed only the principles of morality. He did not believe in other religious principles. He often used to say that he would have accepted Christianity if it had been revealed from the beginning of the world. The faith which did not exist from the very beginning cannot be a revealed one. It is a matter of regret that he was not informed of the Vedas for there is no more ancient book than them."

There is no need to write about the false remarks wickedly made in connection with the speeches delivered by Brahmachari Harish Chandra in Calcutta. In the second issue of the Indar besides this case the facts related in the previous issue are enlarged upon, and an attempt is made to incite the Sikhs. Towards the close of the issue one Jai Gopal is described making remarks to which exception can be taken.

With reference to the letter addressed by Mehta Jaiminiji to Bashi Ram, which was published in the third issue of the Indar, the editor denies that the climate of the gurukul is bad. He asks Jaiminiji not to be ungrateful to the gurukul, seeing that his son recovered his health there, and suggests that he should challenge the authenticity of the letter in the interests of the institution. He publishes the opinions of Mr. Phelps, an American, as well of Mr. Hobart, the Joint Magistrate of Roorkee, as to the healthy condition of the gurukul Brahmacharis, and contends that the climate of the gurukul is not injurious to health.

He publishes a letter written by Gurudatta himself to prove that the allegation made by Dharampal against the gurukul that it had ruined Gurudatta's life was false.

Referring to the allegation made by Dharampal that the climate of the gurukul was not good and that Deodatta, the grandson of Jiwan Das, suffered from liver and spleen complaints in consequence of having stayed in the gurukul, he says that Jiwan Das, who was once the treasurer of the gurukul, is not on good terms with the governor, and that this accounts for his joining Dharampal in injuring the interests of the institution.

With regard to Kundan Lalji's letter, the editor says that his donation of Rs. 1,500 cannot be refunded, as it is still being utilised in awarding scholarships to Brahmacharis. He also points out the cause of unfriendly relations between him and Kundan Lal.

As to the letter published in the Indar and said to be written by a Brahmachari to a friend exposing the internal condition of the gurukul, he says that the letter is a fabricated one, and he challenges Dharampal to publish the names of the writer and of the addressee. He also asks Dharampal if he was authorized by Bashi Ram and Jai Chandra to publish the letters. He tells Dharampal to desist from misrepresenting the affairs of the gurukul as otherwise he shall have to suffer for it.

The editor publishes letters over the signatures of Gurudatta, Gyan Chandra Vedabbyas and Vishwajit to show that they think very highly of the gurukul, and that they do not hold that their health or career has been spoiled in the institution.

Commenting on Atma Ram Vedi's letter criticising the gurukul it is urged that Vediji was always kept informed of the progress which his sons made in their study, and that he knew quite well that his sons were sickly when they were admitted to the gurukul. The correspondence which passed between Vediji and the governor is also published in support of the contention that Vediji knew that his sons were dull and sickly.

The editor then goes on to describe the reasons for the expulsion of Jai Chandra from the gurukul, and to state that the examination results showed that Jai Chandra never stood first in the class, and that it could not be maintained that the governor placed obstacles in the way of the education of Jai Chandra, so that his sons, Harish Chandra and Indra might excel Jai Chandra.

In the concluding portion he contradicts the statement that the Sanatak examination was held before the time, and explains how Harish Chandra secured his Sanatak examination certificate. He says that permission was granted to Harish Chandra, Jai Chandra and Indra to sit for the Sanatak examination, and that it is unreasonable to urge that the permission granted to Harish Chandra and Indra should be withdrawn from them merely because Jai Chandra failed to avail himself of the permission.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

MASHRIQ, 6th February 1912.

87. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 6th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), publishes a contributed article in which the writer asks Government not to post a patwari permanently to one village, and suggests that he should be occasionally transferred from one place to another.

A suggestion to effect an occasional transfer of patwaris from one circle to another.

The writer observes that his suggestion, if acted upon, will prove beneficial to the interests of both the zamindars and the tenants, who are alleged to be put to much trouble by the patwaris.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

88. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses regret that Indians imitate only bad things from the foreigners, and remarks that this is the reason why the swadeshi movement has not succeeded in India. The editor observes that if Indians are actuated by patriotism and try to carry through the swadeshi movement to a successful issue, much good will result to the country.

The swadeshi movement.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

89. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses appreciation of the custom for the British Medical Association to have all patent medicines analysed and for the public to be apprised of the result, and the editor suggests that the All-India Tibbi Conference be asked to test the medicines prepared by quacks in India.

Medicines prepared by quacks.

90. Referring to the direction given by the Inspector General of Police, United Provinces, to Court Inspectors that they should not sit on the dais close to the presiding officer of the court at the time of prosecuting any case, the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), remarks that Government is always ready to check any evil provided it is brought to its notice. The editor suggests that, whenever any departmental arrangement is made for filling up a vacancy, preference should be given to a man who discharges his duty honestly, seeing that such a course will discourage corruption among government servants. He observes that as it is difficult to find out the man who works honestly only experienced officers conversant with the condition of Indians should hold responsible posts.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Corruption among government servant: how to stop it?

91. Referring to the case in which a boy was sentenced to a fine by the Joint Magistrate of Chingleput for saluting him improperly, the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), remarks that the number of such cases will decrease if Indians are admitted in larger numbers in the public service.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Indians in the public service.

92. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains of the action of the Superintendent of the Veterinary Department in filling one of the new created posts of Deputy Superintendent by an outsider.

He characterizes the action of the Superintendent as unjust, and asks him to fill such vacancies in future by the members of the department.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

Deputy Superintendents in the Veterinary Department.

93. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), refers to the question of religious instruction being imparted to Hindu and Muhammadan prisoners in jail, as is done in the case of Christian offenders.

The editor urges that religious instruction will decrease the number of offenders, and will be the best means of checking criminal tendencies among them. He expresses the hope that Government will give due consideration to this matter.

ARYA MITRA, 8th February 1912.

Religious instruction to prisoners in jail.

94. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th February 1912, publishes a letter from a correspondent entitled "Attendance at dispensaries," in which the writer states that the decrease in the attendance of patients at dispensaries during the past year has been attributed to the comparative healthiness of the year, but this, he says, is not altogether the case. The indigenous system of treatment is now very popular and this, together with the large practice and confidence enjoyed by private medical practitioners, is certainly responsible to some extent for the unpopularity of government dispensaries. Another cause for their unpopularity is that the government doctor is not quite as good a man as the independent doctor is. With his small pay and many worries he finds it impossible to be polite to his patients, while the private man has to train himself in manners in the interests of his business.

LEADER, 10th February 1912.

Attendance at dispensaries.

95. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 11th February 1912, refers to the complaint made by some journals at the appointment of a Hindu Extra Assistant Commissioner this year in the Punjab, and remarks that there was no occasion for any complaint, seeing that the appointment was made of a candidate who passed successfully the competitive examination for the post.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 11th February 1912.

Extra Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab.

96. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, in an article entitled "The Husainabad endowment" discusses the appointment of a third trustee to fill a vacancy. The editor says that, with one exception, the practice has been that a descendant of Muhammad Ali Shah has been appointed whenever such a vacancy has occurred, with the result that on the occurrence of a vacancy the descendants of

LEADER, 11th February 1912.

The Husainabad endowment.

Muhammad Ali Shah think themselves entitled to the post, and men who are not qualified for anything else become candidates. This time there are about thirty of them. Practices with which the public are familiar on such occasions are freely resorted to whenever a vacancy has to be filled up, the more so as a trustee is paid from Rs. 200 to Rs. 250 per month, and a trustee who is not strictly honest has also chances of earning something more. The editor trusts that Government will utilise the present occasion for the good of the Muhammadan community by choosing a really able and honest man, whose object will be to do good to the public rather than to himself, and that the candidate chosen will be a really public-spirited man with a reputation to lose.

AL MUSHIR, 11th February 1912.

Improper administration of waqf properties.

97. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th February 1912, expresses regret that the trustees of the waqf properties mismanage the estates put under their trust, and use their income for their own purposes, and invites the attention of Government to the matter.

OUDH AKHBAR, 13th February 1912.

Rise in the price of foodstuffs.

98. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 13th February 1912, complains of the hardship to the masses on account of the rise in the price of food. The editor deplores the scarcity of milk and ghi which he attributes to the lack of sufficient pasture land in India. He concludes by expressing the opinion that the masses cannot be expected to combat the effects of famine until they are sufficiently educated.

MASHRIQ, 13th February 1912.

The Hindi-Urdu controversy.

99. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 13th February 1912, expresses regret that Urdu, which has helped so much in spreading education and extending civilization in Behar, has been excluded from the courts of the province.

The editor invites the attention of the leading Muhammadans in Behar to the matter and urges them to revive the language in their province and to start Urdu newspapers.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 14th February 1912.

Sri Fateh Singh Rai Arya Anath Ashram.

100. A correspondent who signs himself as Mani Bhai Basanji Desai, secretary of the Sri Fateh Singh Rai Arya Anath Ashram, Baroda, contributes an article to the Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 14th February 1912, in which he describes the past greatness of India, and ascribes its present degraded condition to the fact that Indians do not render help to orphans and destitute people. He announces that an orphanage has been started at Baroda, which supports twenty-four orphans, and he asks for money for the institution.

V.—Legislation.

LEADER, 9th February 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

101. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th February 1912, in a leading article entitled "United Provinces officials against Mr. Gokhale's bill" adversely criticises the opinions expressed on the subject by a number of the members of the Civil Service of the United Provinces. The editor says that it is not a flattering testimonial to the British administration to advance the arguments that "not materially more than one in a hundred amongst the low caste people are educated, and in many cases less," or that "even for the population as a whole, ninety-seven persons out of a hundred are uneducated," and he observes that here was proof positive that the voluntary method has failed and that compulsion should be introduced.

As regards the statement that the people would resent the heavy financial burden which it would be necessary to impose on them, he asks why they should not be given a chance if they are willing to bear that burden for the sake of their own future.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 14th February 1912.

The Government of India Bill.

102. Referring to the Government of India Bill which will be shortly introduced in Parliament with the object of giving legal sanction to the announcements made on the occasion of the coronation darbar, the Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 14th February 1912, remarks that times have undergone a complete change, seeing that at the present day unlike the ancient times it is regarded as essential that the actions even of the King-Emperor should receive legal sanction.

The Agra Estates Bill.

108. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 6th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), takes strong exception to the Agra Estates Bill and characterizes it as a distinct interference with the Muhammadan religion.

MASHRIQ, 6th February 1912.

The editor invites the attention of Sir John Hewett to the previous leading articles that appeared in the Mashriq on the subject, and expresses the hope that His Honour will give due consideration to these articles and prevent the passing of the bill into law.

The Agra Estates Bill.

104. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), takes strong exception to the Agra Estates Bill and characterizes it as an encroachment on the provisions of the Muhammadan religion. The editor expresses the hope that Government will never wound the religious susceptibilities of the Muhammadans by passing the bill, and that it will put no confidence in the few Muhammadan supporters of the bill, who cannot be regarded as the representatives of the people.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

Need for amending the law relating to debts.

105. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th February 1912, discusses the provisions of the existing law empowering the creditor to have the property of a debtor sold or to have him sent in a civil jail, and states that such treatment is very severe. The editor asks Government to alter the law in some way so as to save the debtor from undue oppression at the hands of his creditors. He suggests that creditors should not be allowed to charge interest at a rate higher than that of the Bank of Bengal; nor to compel a debtor to execute a bond for a sum greater than that actually advanced to him, and also that the system of execution of decrees should be abolished and that civil warrants should not be issued.

TAFRIH, 14th February 1912.

VI.—Railway.

Railway complaints.

106. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), contains a contributed article in which the writer refers to an article that appeared in the Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th January, complaining against the Traffic Superintendent of the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway, and remarks that the article was not written in good faith and that the allegations are not true. He observes that it is the duty of a journalist to ascertain the truth of any report before publishing it.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

A suggestion for appointing Indians on the Railway Board.

107. The Cawnpore Gazette of the 8th February 1912 (received on the 10th February), suggests the appointment of two Indians as members of the Railway Board. The editor says that as Indians in the Provincial and Imperial Legislative Councils are of great help to Government on account of their wide experience, so they will prove of special advantage to Government as members of the Railway Board.

CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 8th February 1912.

A railway train incident.

108. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, publishes the following :—

LEADER, 11th February 1912.

"Sir,—Will you kindly take note of the following incident and make proper mention of it at an early date in your valuable paper?

"Babu Alakh Murari, B.A., LL.B., vakil of Saharanpur, was coming with about fifteen companions from Saharanpur to Muttra to take up the charge of the mela in connection with the anniversary of the Muttra gurukula. While he was passing Delhi sadr station (Great Indian Peninsula Railway) on the 23rd December 1911, he was asked by the Assistant District Traffic Superintendent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to take his two servants into the compartment. B. Alakh Murari refused to do so, as his compartment was more than full. Thereupon he was insulted, taken out of the compartment and his personal recognizance for Rs. 25 taken, He told me the whole thing on his arrival at the gurukula; but I advised him not to take any step but to watch further developments, as I thought at that time that the railway authorities would not be legally advised to probe the matter further.

But now B. Alakh Murari has been served with a summons under section 109 of the Railway Act to appear before a magistrate at Delhi on the 14th February 1912.

I have the honour to be,
SIR,
Your most obedient servant,
M. M. SEN. M.A., LL.B.,
Hony. Secretary."

NASIM-I-AGRA, 11th February 1912.

Third class waiting rooms at railway stations.

109. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 11th February 1912, complains that the third class waiting rooms at railway stations do not provide proper shelter to the passengers in the winter and rainy seasons.

The editor invites the attention of the railway authorities to the matter and expresses the hope that some arrangements will be made for the comfort of the third class passengers when waiting for the arrival of trains.

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The increase in the number of Muhammadans and Christians.

110. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses regret that the last census returns show that the population of Hindus is decreasing while that of Muhammadans and Christians is increasing.

The editor ascribes the increase in the number of Muhammadans and Christians to the differences of opinion among the Arya Samajists, and asks them to attach more importance to the work of preaching.

RAHBAR, 7th February 1912.

Degraded condition of Hindus.

111. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses regret that Hindus, in spite of the fact that they form the major portion of the population, do not achieve their objects and are in a degraded condition. The editor ascribes their deplorable condition to the fact that they are divided among themselves, and suggests that at the time of election of members for local bodies and councils they should vote only for capable candidates.

TRISHUL, 8th February 1912.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

112. The Trishul (Benares), of the 8th February 1912, publishes an article criticising the shortcomings of the Bharat Dharam Mahamandal, which institution, the editor says, has lately been showing unmistakeable signs of premature decay. In spite of its immense organization, embracing every class of Hindu society, coupled with the fact that between thirty and forty thousand rupees a year is spent on its upkeep, the Mahamandal has done very little to even justify its existence, and it is time that the well-wishers of the institution should come forward and save it from an ignoble death.

The editor expresses satisfaction at the action of the Raja of Tahirpur in moving a resolution at a meeting of the Mahamandal for recasting the rules and constitution of the society, and expresses the hope that the committee which has been appointed will do the work entrusted to them thoroughly and bring the Mahamandal to a healthy condition.

ARYA MITRA, 8th February 1912.

The United Provinces gurukul at Muttra.

113. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 8th February 1912, remarks that the health of Brahmacharis in the United Provinces gurukul at Muttra is satisfactory. The editor states that the spirit of opposition to the gurukul among the inhabitants of Muttra has now died away.

ARYA MITRA, 8th Februarf 1912.

All-India Arya Kumar Association, Agra.

114. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 8th February 1912, publishes a notice over the signature of Jwala Prasad in which it is reported that an All-India Arya Kumar Association has been established at Agra. The various Arya Kumar sabhas are asked to inform the All-India Arya Kumar Association of the place where they are located and of the number of their members.

115. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), remarks that the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal are not strictin their religious observances, and that they could be easily converted to other religions. The editor suggests that some Muhammadan anjuman should try to reform them.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

116. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses regret that the Arya Pritinidhi Sabha, Punjab, should have decided to expel Brahmachari Jai Chandra from the gurukul, Kangri, Bijnor, without hearing him and his father Bashi Ram in defence. The editor observes that if Brahmacharis be expelled in this way the gurukul cannot achieve any success. He asks the Ayra Samajists of the Punjab to insist upon the appointment of an unprejudiced commission to decide the case of Jai Chandra. He expresses the hope that the Arya Pritinidhi Sabha will reconsider its decision.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The expulsion of Brahmachari Jai Chandra from the Kangri gurukul.

117. Referring to the report published in the Muhammadan press that in December last three respectable Japanese accepted Islam, the Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), expresses regret that the Arya Samajists instead of propagating their faith, should be divided among themselves. The editor asks his co-religionists to learn the lesson of propagating their faith from the professors of other religions.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

Islam in Japan.

118. The editor of the Musáfir (Agra), in the issue of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), publishes another article on the sanctity of the Qoran in which he further criticises the argument advanced by Muhammadans in favour of their contention that the Qoran was a revealed book, seeing that its style was so eloquent and elegant that God himself challenged any person who did not believe it to be a revelation to write a book similar to it in style.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The sanctity of the Qoran.

119. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), remarks that the object of the establishment of the Bharat Shuddhi Sabha was to elevate the depressed classes and to convert the nau-Muslims to the Arya faith. The editor observes that the Anjuman Hidayat-ul-Islam, Delhi, and the Nadwat-ul-ulma, Lucknow, are trying their best to make the nau-Muslims staunch Muhammadans, and he exhorts the Arya Samajists to collect Rs. 1,000 for the Bharat Shuddhi Sabha so that it may be able to send preachers among the nau-Muslims before it is too late.

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha and the nau-Muslim.

120. In continuation of the article entitled "The tale of Islam," the Musáfir (Agra), of the 9th February 1912 (received on the 12th February), publishes without comment some more hadises with their translations under the heading "Recommendation will surely be made and the sinner and the drunkard will be acquitted."

MUSAFIR, 9th February 1912.

The tale of Islam.

121. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, complains that the Afghan (Peshawar), recently published indecent attacks couched in most objectionable language against the Hindus. The editor says that he cannot make any quotations as the attacks are so very indecent, but he expresses the hope that Government will bestow due attention on these articles.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th February 1912.

The Afghan (Peshawar) and the Hindus.

122. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "The two greatest needs," in which the editor asserts that the greatest needs of the country are education and social reform, and advises the present generation to devote all their energy and talents to the furtherance of those subjects. He states that even if paramount importance be attached to political emancipation or industrial development, it must be admitted that antecedent fitness in the people to attain either is essential. The editor admits that the people are at present unfit, and says that the average is much lower than the British average, and that, so long as it is not raised, the people must be content to remain in a position of subordination.

LEADER, 11th February 1912.

Education and social reform.

KAYASTH HITKARI, 8th February 1912.

123. The Kayasth Hitkári (Agra), of the 8th February 1912, publishes several poems advocating temperance, with particular reference to the next Holi festival, in which the writer describes the evils of drinking liquor, and warns the Indians to abstain from the evil habit.

The Holi festival and drinking.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th February 1912.

124. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th February 1912, suggests that the respectable leaders of every province should ask the local authorities to order the closing of liquor shops in all places for three days at least during the Holi festival. The editor also appeals to temperance councils to help the people in the matter, and points out that this drink habit, which is one of the greatest enemies of humanity, cannot be checked without official co-operation. He expresses the hope that his suggestions will attract the notice of Government and public men alike, and that the latter will try to have the liquor shops closed during the Holi festival.

The Holi festival and drinking.

AL MUSHIR, 11th February 1912.

125. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th February 1912, refers to the work done by the Christian missionaries in propagating their religion in the Punjab, and expresses regret that Muhammadans, who have lived in the country for hundreds of years, should not have a single missionary society to spread their religion. The editor expresses the apprehension that if the present state of affairs continue Islam will soon be absorbed in India by other religions.

The progress of Christianity in the Punjab.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 12th February 1912.

126. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, refers to a speech made at the Liverpool Students' Volunteer Missionary Union Conference, in which it was stated that Christianity could never overcome Islam. The editor remarks that the Muhammadans should not be convinced of the truth of this admission but they should make efforts to form missionary societies in every district for the propagation of their religion.

Islam and the Christian missionaries.

HITAISHI, 4th February 1912.

127. The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 4th February 1912 (received on the 14th February), remarks that though it is a deed of virtue to protect old and feeble cows, the main object of gaushalas cannot be achieved unless young cows are also admitted into them, seeing that the breed of cows can not be improved without young stock. The editor expresses regret that young cows, instead of being handed over to gaushalas, should be sold to Muhammadans for being sacrificed on the occasion of the Bakr-Id. He urges the Muhammadans to give up cow sacrifice, and says that the gaushalas cannot achieve their object unless Christians and Muhammadans also co-operate with the Hindus in the protection of cows.

The protection of cows.

AL BASHIR, 13th February 1912.

128. One Saiyid Muhammad contributes an article to Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 13th February 1912, in which he refers to the prohibition of cow-killing in the Cochin State and to the note that appeared in the Rajput Gazette (Lahore) about it, declaring that the Muhammadans kill cows to wound the feelings of Hindus, and remarks that the Muhammadans never slaughter cows to wound the religious susceptibilities of Hindus, but that they do so in order to perform one of their most important religious functions. The writer says that the Rajput Gazette, instead of blaming the Muhammadans, ought to have found fault with his own co-religionists who sell their old cows and oxen for a small profit to the butchers, and observes that Hindus, instead of condemning the Muhammadans for the slaughter of cows, should adopt measures such as the opening of gaushalas and the provision of free pastures for cows in order to ensure against their falling into the hands of butchers.

The anti-cow-killing movement.

MASHRIQ, 13th February 1912.

129. One Muhammad Ali contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 13th February 1912, in which he refers to an article on the subject of cow-killing which appeared in the Vakil (Amritsar), of the 16th December 1911, and remarks that cow-killing is not prohibited by the Muhammadan religion, and that it was resorted to not because there was a scarcity of mules but because of the high price of mules as compared with cows.

The cow-killing problem.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

Allahabad:
The 17*th February* 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] { [illegible] } No. 8 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 24th February 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The situation in Persia 189
2. The situation in Persia 189
3. The situation in Persia 189
4. The situation in Persia 189
5. The situation in China 189
6. The Italian-Turkish war 189
7. The Italian-Turkish war 190
8. The Italian-Turkish war 190
9. The Italian-Turkish war 190

(b)—Home:

10. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 190
11. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 191
12. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 191
13. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 191
14. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 191
15. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 191
16. The administrative changes in India ... 191
17. The administrative changes in India ... 191
18. The administrative changes in India ... 191
19. The administrative changes in India ... 192
20. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 192
21. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 192
22. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 192

Page.

23. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 193
24. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 193
25. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans and Sunnis and Shias ... 193
26. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 193
27. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans... 193
28. Reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans 194
29. Relations between Europeans and Indians 194
30. The condition of Muhammadans in India 194
31. The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, to His Excellency the Viceroy... 194
32. A suggestion to hold a public meeting to settle as to who should be the future representative of the Muhammadans of Oudh in the Provincial Legislative Council 194
33. The United Provinces Council ... 195
34. The proposed district advisory councils... 195
35. Indians in British colonies 195
36. The coloured races in South Africa ... 195
37. The Viceroy's visit to Lucknow ... 195
38. The Viceroy's visit to Lucknow ... 196
39. The King's visit to India 196
40. The Gaekwar incident 196
41. The Imperial Conference and India ... 197
42. The Hindustan (Lahore) and Babu Bipin Chandra Pal 197
43. Home Rule for India 197
44. Indians and military service... ... 197
45. The new Governor of Madras ... 198

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

Page.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

46. The postponement of the marriage of Princess Indra with the Maharaja Scindhia of Gwalior 198

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

47. Capital punishment 198
48. The Advocate General of Madras ... 199

(b)—Police:

49. The Police Administration Report ... 199

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

50. The abolition of octroi duty 199

(e)—Education:

51. The proposed Muslim University ... 199
52. The proposed Muslim University ... 199
53. The proposed Hindu University ... 199
54. The proposed Dacca University ... 200
55. The proposed Dacca University ... 200
56. The proposed Dacca University ... 200
57. The proposed Dacca University ... 200
58. The proposed Dacca University ... 201
59. The proposed Dacca University ... 201
60. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 201
61. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 202
62. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 202
63. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 202
64. The Government High School, Almora ... 202
65. The Muslim Hewett School, Moradabad... 202
66. A survey of the gurukul 202
67. The Indian Educational Service ... 202

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

68. Forest resettlement in the Almora district 203

(g)—General:

69. The Khwab-o-Khiyal 203
70. The Khwab-o-Khiyal 203
71. The Leader (Allahabad) and the Hindi Literary Conference 203
72. The Urdu-Hindi controversy ... 203
73. The vernacular journals 204
74. Friction in the Punjab vernacular press 204

Page.

75. Kayasths in government service ... 204
76. Indians and the medical service ... 204
77. Muhammadans and the swadeshi and boycott movements 204
78. Export of corn to Europe from India... 205
79. The decrease in the population of Hindus 205
80. The Khairabad fair 205
81. The Husainabad endowment ... 205
82. An open letter to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya 205

V.—LEGISLATION.

83. The Elementary Education Bill ... 206
84. The Elementary Education Bill ... 206
85. The Elementary Education Bill ... 206
86. The Special Marriage Bill 206
87. The Special Marriage Bill 206
88. An amendment in Act XX of 1856 ... 206
89. The United Provinces Court of Wards Act 206
90. The Medical Registration Bill of the Bombay Government 207

VI.—RAILWAY.

91. A complaint against the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway 207
92. The Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway ... 207

VII.—POST OFFICE.

93. A suggestion to nominate subordinate officials of the Postal Department for the telegraph training school ... 207

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

94. The sanctity of the Qoran 208
95. A review of hadises 208
96. The missionary work of the Arya Samaj 208
97. A religious controversy between the Musáfir (Agra) and the Curzon Gazette (Delhi) 208
98. The Arya Samaj and the Nau-Muslims ... 208
99. Indian women 208
100. Sadhus and Indian women 209
101. The advent of Imam Mehdi 209
102. The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ... 209
103. The Muharram at Agra 210
104. Mismanagement of waqf properties ... 210

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st February 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakim Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Árif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakim Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 ,,
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
50	Zia-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 ,,
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ásam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bhásakar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	800 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	600 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Narayan Pande; 27... ...	5,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	50 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Samádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	... ...	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 40 ...	1,350 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedí; Brahman.	2,200 ,,
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	1,000 ,,
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	1,200 ,,
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla; 45	500 ,,
133	Swadesh Bándhavé ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 44	550 ,,
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman
135	Vaishya	Allahabád ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 40	550 ,,
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 43.	1,000 ,,
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
142	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 48 ...	775 ,,
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 40 ...	200 ,,
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 34	1,500 ,,
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám; Khatri; 55 ...	3,000 ,,
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Basak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 15th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), refers to the recent discussion in the Times and other London papers about affairs in Persia, and expresses regret that the British Foreign Office should not have checked Russian aggression on Persia in its own interest, if not to safeguard the independence of a weak and oppressed country.

KAISER-I-HIND, 15th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

2. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), has a leading article discussing the causes which have contributed to the weakening of Persia, and remarks that it is not fair to blame the Persian Government for the degeneration of the country, seeing that it has made every possible effort to promote the welfare of the country, but has been hindered by foreign interference.

ITTIHAD, 16th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

3. One Hakim Muzaffar Hussain of Delhi contributes an article to the Tajir (Meerut), of the 18th February 1912, in which he denounces Russian aggression in Persia, and says that the increase of Russian influence in Persia is detrimental to the interest of the British Government in India.

TAJIR, 18th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

He expresses regret that the Muhammadan press and the Muhammadan public of India have not protested against the alleged Russian atrocities in Persia as strongly and vehemently as they should have done, and observes that the habit of sycophancy and the desire for personal reputation have made cowards of the Indian Muhammadans.

4. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 20th February 1912, refers to a cartoon recently published in Punch (London) in which Sir Edward Grey is represented as waiter at a restaurant serving Russia with three dishes marked Mongolia, Tibet and Persia, and then suggesting that the gentlemen might like another dish on the sideboard marked "India," and remarks as follows:—

AL BASHIR, 20th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

"Punch is only concerned with showing the humour of the situation, but there is no doubt that if India ever pass from the hands of the British Government to that of Russia, which God forbid, future historians will hold Sir Edward Grey responsible for it . . . In a word we as Muhammadans and as Indians do not in any way approve of the policy of Sir Edward Grey, and we accordingly are far from pleased at his decoration with the Order of the Garter. We trust that the English nation will never allow India, which has been rightly described as the most precious gem of the British Crown, to pass into the hands of another nation, and that it will take an early opportunity of dispensing with the services of Sir Edward Grey as Foreign Minister.

"Sir Edward in a recent speech has given expression to two strange sentiments. The one was that he had no time to read criticisms regarding his policy by the press, and the other was that he was very much annoyed when he happened to read some remarks made against him.

"These expressions of opinion challenge his claim to be called a statesman, and it is therefore incumbent on Government to relieve him of his office on the first available opportunity."

5. Discussing the situation in China the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th February 1912, expresses doubt as to whether a republican form of government established there will prove successful. The editor remarks that in case of failure her independence and integrity will be seriously endangered as she is then likely to come into collision with the European Powers.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th February 1912.

The situation in China.

6. The Urdu-i-Mualla (Aligarh), for January 1912 (received on the 14th February), denounces European aggression in Islamic countries, and remarks that the neutrality of the British Government has proved of greater advantage to Italy than if England had espoused her cause. The editor observes that Englishmen favour the Italian

URDU-I-MUALLA, January 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

seizure of Tripoli, because the continuance of Turkish dominion in Tripoli and Yemen is likely to interfere with their permanent occupation of Egypt. He describes the Italian-Turkish war as a war between Islam and Christianity, and observes that the Christian Powers have undoubtedly conspired to destroy the independence of Muhammadan kingdoms throughout the world.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

7. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th February 1912, expresses regret so little money should have been collected in India towards the fund for the relief of the widows and orphans of the Turks and Arabs killed in Tripoli, and complains of the apathy of the leaders of the Muhammadan community in the matter.

The editor says that events in Tripoli have made it clear that Italy will not be able to retain her hold on the country by mere force of arms, and expresses the hope that the European Powers will refrain from any intervention in the war now that circumstances are no longer in favour of the Italians, seeing that in the beginning the Powers did not pay any heed to the appeals of the Turks. He exhorts his co-religionists to keep the British Government informed of their sentiments, in order that the present foreign policy of Sir Edward Grey may be made to conform to the liberal policy of the English nation.

AL BASHIR, 20th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

8. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 20th February 1912, refers to the reference in the King's speech at the opening of Parliament to British intervention in the Italian-Turkish war, and remarks as follows :—

"But Indian Muhammadans will be most thankful if the British Government keep itself aloof up to the last from interfering in the Italian-Turkish war. The British Government through the policy of Sir Edward Grey has lost the golden opportunity of placing the entire Muhammadan world under obligation through not putting a stop to the war at its outset.

"Now when the Italians have resorted to a wholesale massacre of Muhammadans, without regard to age or sex, it is only proper for England to refrain from interference, and await the result whether it is the establishment of Italian dominion over Tripoli or the return of the Italian army after an unsuccessful campaign. In short the Arabs and the Italians should be allowed to fight it out to a finish."

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 21st February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

9. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 21st February 1912, publishes a letter from Nawab Mushtaq Husain, in which he refers to a rumour that it had been given out that if Turkey did not make peace with Italy the latter would demolish the kaba and the mausoleum of the prophet Muhammad by throwing bombs on them from their aeroplanes, and remarks that the Muhammadans of India should not ask their Government to interfere in the matter, but that they should bear with patience whatever atrocities Italy may inflict up on their co-religionists in other parts of the world.

He observes that the wholesale slaughter by the Italians of Muhammadans regardless of sex and age in Tripoli has merely served to establish the resolution of the Arabs and the Turks to fight to the end, and that if Italy now dared to wound the susceptibility of the Muhammadans by throwing bombs on the kaba and the mausoleum of the prophet, their action would only cause greater resentment among the Muhammadans throughout the world against the Italians and their sympathizers. He goes on to say that the Christian world should remember that such mischievous action on the part of Italy as the demolition of the kaba or the mausoleum damp the spirit of the Musalmans, as they could replace the demolished buildings with better ones.

(b)—Home.

LEADER, 16th February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

10. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the appointment of Sir James Meston as the next Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, and remarks that his experience as Financial Secretary both to the Local Government and the Government of India will stand him in good stead, while his sympathetic and genial manner ought to make him popular with the Indian community. The editor expresses gratitude to His Excellency the Viceroy for selecting Sir James Meston for the office in preference to any other civilian.

11. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 18th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the appointment of Sir James Meston as the next Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, and observes that Sir James in every way deserves the high honour conferred on him.

TAJIR, 18th February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

12. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th February 1912, congratulates the people of the United Provinces on the appointment of Sir James Meston to the Lieutenant Governorship of these provinces. The editor states that Indians and Europeans alike have a high opinion of his abilities, and that he had no equal as a speaker and debater among the civilian members of the Imperial Council. He offers a cordial welcome to the new Lieutenant Governor, and expresses the hope that an executive council with an Indian member will be established in these provinces under his régime. He says that if these provinces remain backward even under the liberal government of Sir James Meston, there will be no hope of any future progress.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

13. In expressing appreciation of the appointment of Sir James Meston as the next Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th February 1912, remarks that the news of the appointment has been received with feelings of deep satisfaction throughout the provinces. The editor says that it is the good fortune of the people of the province that in the Lieutenant Governor-elect they find a ruler after their own heart, one who knows the province, and who the people had long expected would come back to the province as its ruler.

ADVOCATE, 18th February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

14. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 20th February 1912, refers to the appreciative remarks of the Amrita Bazar Patrika (Calcutta) and the Leader (Allahabad) regarding the appointment of Sir James Meston as the next Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, and remarks that those journalists who are opposed to the interests of Muhammadans invariably express appreciation of the services of those European officers whom they believe to be wanting in sympathy with the aspirations of Muhammadans.

AL BASHIR, 20th February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

15. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 21st February 1912, expresses appreciation of the appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, and entertains the hope that he will give special attention to the educational needs of the province.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 21st February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

16. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 20th February 1912, referring to the creation of the province of Behar, Chota Nagpur and Orissa, urges the need for providing the new province with its own High Court and University, and says that without them considerable difficulties will arise in the internal administration of the province, and its progress will be hindered considerably. The editor remarks that it is probable that the Bengalis will oppose the establishment of a university as well as the creation of a High Court in Behar.

MASHRIQ, 20th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

17. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912, expresses gratification at the administrative changes in India announced by His Majesty the King-Emperor at Delhi. The editor says that the changes will conduce to the efficient administration of the different provinces affected by them, and will help to improve the social, moral and intellectual condition of the people. He observes that in the course of time, when the people have made sufficient progress to justify it, Government will grant autonomy to provincial governments, in which case there will be no need for Home Rule for India as is desired by some people.

OUDH AKHBAR, 22nd February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

18. Commenting on the article regarding the coronation concessions in India by Sir J. D. Rees that appeared in the Fortnightly Review, in which the writer remarked that

ADVOCATE, 22nd February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

the darbar announcements were received by Hindus with indifference, and that it was only the "anti-English party" in India which received them with "partial satisfaction," the editor of the Advocate (Lucknow), in the issue of the 22nd February 1912, remarks that they could not of course expect anything better from a gentleman who always wants to pose as an authority on India and Indian questions, in spite of the fact that he is not in touch with the present conditions in India, and that he is opposed to any application of liberal principles to the Government of this country.

LEADER, 24th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

19. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th February 1912, publishes a contributed article entitled "Lord Curzon, the great benefactor," in which the writer says that a person who creates material for "a settled fact" to be unsettled later on by others in the best interests of the country cannot but be called a benefactor. He asserts that Lord Curzon was the only person who deliberately created such a state of affairs as to render it necessary for his successors in office to do acts for the benefit of India, and that therefore His Lordship has deserved the title of benefactor.

He observes that the recognition of the Congress as a constitutional body claiming its rights and privileges in spite of the Surat fiasco, the awakened interest of the people of England in the affairs of India, and their sympathy with the aspirations of Indians, as well as the introduction of the legislative and other reforms are entirely due to Lord Curzon's partition of Bengal, and that on that account he is entitled to the gratitude of the Indian public. He says that the unity of the Hindu community in India which is so noticeable at the present time is the result of the partition, and that the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya took full advantage of it in advancing the scheme of his Hindu University. He further says that Lord Curzon is to be thanked for the happiness and contentment brought about by His Majesty's triumphantly successful visit to India, seeing that one of the objects of His Majesty's tour in India was to allay the widespread discontent caused by the partition.

He describes the modification of the partition as the greatest triumph of British justice, and says that it has firmly established the prestige of Great Britain in India in the minds of educated Indians, and asserts that had there been no Lord Curzon in India and no partition, Englishmen would not have had such a great opportunity to demonstrate to Indians the triumph of British justice and statesmanship.

The article closes with the following words :—

"In spite of all these benefits, Lord Curzon may well stand aghast at the ruin of his own reputation, and if a person, with his reputation ruined and laid low for his whole life, be considered as more than dead, I may well, in imitation of Mr. Mazumdar, exclaim : 'Lord Curzon is dead, long live Lord Curzon?"

KAISER-I-HIND, 15th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

20. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 15th February 1912 (received on the 17th February), in a leading article, discusses the future policy of Indian Muhammadans, and expresses approval of the suggestion of the Indian Daily Telegraph (Lucknow), that Muhammadans should make a political alliance with the Anglo-Indians.

The editor urges his co-religionists to give the suggestion careful consideration before they join the Indian National Congress or adopt any other policy.

HINDUSTANI, 16th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

21. One Ahmad Ali of Lucknow, contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 17th February), in which he contends that the Muhammadans, who are at present engaged in devising means for the protection of their rights and privileges, will not achieve their object either by starting an agitation against Government or by persisting in their old policy of requesting Government to safeguard their interests. He accordingly suggests that the Muhammadans should settle their differences with the Hindus, and join the Indian National Congress, and he expresses the opinion that the sooner they effect a reconciliation with the Hindus the better it will be for them.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

22. The editor of the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), in the issue of the 19th February 1912, in a leading article on the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans, urges his co-religionists to refrain from joining the Indian National Congress. He asks the members of his community to depend for their salvation on their own exertions, and observes that the Government of India, and especially the government of Lord Hardinge, does not approve of men sitting with folded hands and depending on the favours of Government.

SAHIFA, 19th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

23. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 19th February 1912, refers to the letter of Mr. Raza Ali that appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 4th January, and objects to his seeking the advice of the Pioneer as to what should be the future policy of the Indian Muhammadans. The editor refers to the criticism of the letter by the editor of the Pioneer and says :—

"We too say so much that Muhammadans should avoid both sycophancy and effrontery. They should make constitutional efforts (for the realisation of their demands), and should depend for their salvation on their own exertions. It is not advisable for them to change their policy at a time when they are feeling despondent."

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

24. Hakim Saiyid Muhammad Ilyas Parwi of Lucknow contributes an article to the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th February 1912, in which he advises the Muhammadans to place their confidence in, and to remain faithful to, Government, which has so far protected their interests. He suggests that Muhammadans should not abolish the All-India Muslim League, that they should support any Congress resolutions that are calculated to benefit them also, that they should establish Provincial Muslim Leagues, that the Sunnis and Shias should unite, that the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College should reform the theological faculty so as to meet the religious requirements of both Sunnis and Shias, and that the Nadwat-ul-ulma and the Shia Conference should make earnest endeavours to promote the cause of Indians. The article was continued in the issue of the 21st February, when the writer observed that if Muhammadans would only arouse themselves and show some energy they would have to stand back for no other nation, as they should know from recalling the history of their religion the achievements of their ancestors. He exhorts Muhammadans to respect their religious and spiritual leaders, and reminds them that the civilized nations have achieved success by showing respect for their religious and spiritual leaders. The writer concludes by advising Muhammadans not to waste their money in going to theatres and in other extravagances, reminds them of the need for a Muhammadan organ to keep Government informed regarding the needs of the community, as well as of the fact that the Muhammadan University project has not yet been accomplished.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans and Sunnis and Shias.

25. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th February 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret that the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans should be strained, seeing that formerly they used to live on good terms, and he urges the need for reconciliation between the two communities. He proceeds to describe the cause of disunion between the Sunnis and Shias, and asks them to settle their differences.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

26. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th February 1912, expresses surprise that the Muhammadans should be divided amongst themselves. The editor observes that there is some difference of opinion among Muhammadans as to the causes of estrangement between them and the Hindus. He urges the need for a rapprochement between the Hindus and Muhammadans, and remarks that if a reconciliation cannot be effected between the two communities, the Muhammadans should at any rate make up their own differences and live on terms of friendship with each other.

LEADER, 22nd February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

27. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, contains a contributed article entitled "Hindu-Muslim relations," in which the writer deprecates the attitude of many of the vernacular papers published in the Punjab with regard to the Hindu-Muhammadan question. He remarks that the tension of feeling between the two communities in the Punjab is so great that it is only necessary for a paper to adopt a violent tone for it to immediately receive great public support. He mentions a number of subjects which have been treated as Hindu-Muhammadan questions in the Punjab press, and suggests that it would be very helpful to an understanding if some competent and impartial judge were asked to decide whether it is the Hindus who are less intolerant of Muhammadans or the reverse. He points out that some of the Hindu states have appointed Muhammadans to some of the highest offices to show their attitude and liberality towards Muhammadans, and enquires whether Hindus have been similarly appointed to high offices in Muslim states.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th February 1912.

Reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans.

28. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th February 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer urges the need for reconciliation between the Hindus and Muhammadans. Commenting on the article entitled "The annulment of the partition of Bengal" that appeared in Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd January 1912, he complains of the attitude taken up by the Arya Samaj papers in expressing the opinion that the Muhammadans are now desirous of joining the Indian National Congress because they are aggrieved at the seizure of Tripoli by Italy, at the aggression of Russia in Persia and at the annulment of the partition of Bengal.

CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 23rd February 1912.

Relations between Europeans and Indians.

29. The Cawnpore Gazette of the 23rd February 1912, refers to that portion of the King's speech in England after his return from India in which His Majesty expressed that he would greatly rejoice if his visit should contribute to the welfare of India and strengthen the bonds of the Empire, and remarks that those Englishmen who wish to rule India by fear should take a lesson from the King's speech. The editor says that the desire to create love and sympathy between England and India cannot be accomplished by the use of force, and he asks the authorities in India to remove the distinction of colour and race, and to accord every one equal treatment, which, he says, would remove the existing tension between the rulers and the ruled, and restore confidence in the hearts of the Indians.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

The condition of Muhammadans in India.

30. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th February 1912, dwells at length on the four advantages on the important principles of the Muhammadan religion, viz. the offering of prayers, observing fasts, giving zakat (to give in charity the fortieth part of one's income) and the performance of the haj, and expresses regret that the leaders of the Muhammadan community do not follow strictly the principles enjoined by their religion, and thus set a bad example to the rising generation.

The editor asks the leaders of his community to reform themselves first before they try to reform others.

BHARAT JIWAN, 19th February 1912.

The memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, to His Excellency the Viceroy.

31. The Bharat Jewan (Benares), of the 19th February 1912, publishes the substance of the reply of the Viceroy to the memorial submitted by the Central National Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, to His Excellency on the subject of the preservation of their rights, and observes that the remark made by His Excellency that efficiency was the sole necessary qualification for employment in public service has given much satisfaction to a great number of the people. The editor expresses hearty approval of the remark, and observes that Muhammadans should take this invaluable advice to heart, seeing that efficiency conquers all obstacles.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 19th February 1912.

A suggestion to hold a public meeting to settle as to who should be the future representative of the Muhammadans of Oudh in the Provincial Legislative Council.

32. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 19th February 1912, says that the representatives of the Muhammadans in the Provincial Legislative Council have not proved themselves useful to their community, nor have they discharged their duties with courage and zeal.

The editor asks his co-religionists to elect, in place of the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Nasim of Lucknow, who has recently resigned, a person in whom they can put implicit confidence, and who has sufficient moral courage to express his opinion frankly when he finds the interests of his community at stake or in danger.

33. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th February 1912, contains the following passage: "In noticing the proceedings of the Provincial Council held on the 22nd January, the Tribune congratulates the Local Government on the fulness of the replies given by it to the interpellations put at the meeting of the Council. The Tribune says: 'We sincerely congratulate the United Provinces Government on the tone and spirit of the answers. Bombay and Madras have need to modify their hoary custom in this respect. They show an amount of impatience in dealing with questions and dispose of them briefly and even summarily, stating that they have no information to give. That is a spirit which is to be deplored and surely Provincial Governments would be fulfilling the purpose of reforms by declining to enquire from their officers if they themselves have no information to give.'"

ADVOCATE, 19th February 1912.

The United Provinces Council.

The editor acknowledges the improvement both in the tone and the fulness of the replies given in the Provincial Council.

With regard to Colonel Manifold's reply about the prospect of Indians employed in the Lucknow Medical College as assistant professors or demonstrators he expresses doubt as to whether members of the Provincial Medical Service will be attracted and agree to serve for seven years in the college on a salary of Rs. 100, with an allowance of Rs. 25 but without any provision of free quarters. He expresses apprehension that in these circumstances only third class men will be available.

34. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 23rd February 1912, expresses approval of the proposal to establish advisory councils in every district to help the district officers in the administration of local affairs. The editor entertains the hope that, when the question about the creation of advisory councils is brought before the Imperial Legislative Council, it will receive sympathetic treatment at the hands of the government of Lord Hardinge, and observes that, when the non-official members have proved themselves useful in the local and imperial councils, there is no reason to believe that they will not prove equally useful in the district advisory councils.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 23rd February 1912.

The proposed district advisory councils.

35. The Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for February 1912, has an article entitled "Imperial obligations" by Mr. Edward E. Long, in course of which the writer asserts that of the many great questions which face the statesmen of the Empire at the present time probably the most serious is that of the status within the Empire of the coloured citizens. He states that the vital question of the right of the coloured British citizens to dwell in British colonies has not been settled and that it threatens the future of the Empire, challenging its reputation for justice and fair play. The writer urges the need for doing away with race barriers, and states that British citizenship should give the holder similar rights to those conferred on citizens of the Roman Empire. He concludes with an appeal to the statesmen of the Empire to defend the weak against the strong and to make them strong.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, February 1912.

Indians in British colonies.

36. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), says that an article was recently contributed to the Transvaal Leader by a Dutchman pointing out that white men were degrading themselves by over indulging in liquor, while on the other hand the coloured races, owing to their abstinance from this vice, were progressing. The writer is described as having urged that the latter should be induced to drink as much liquor as possible. Regarding such apparent evidence of depravity the editor makes the following comment:—

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th February 1912.

The coloured races in South Africa.

"This is the white man's civilization in South Africa, and this is the outcome of Dutch civilization. May God protect us, black men, from such civilization."

37. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 20th February 1912, expresses gratification at the visit of His Excellency the Viceroy to some of the principal cities of the United Provinces, and invites the attention of His Excellency to certain matters:—

MASHRIQ, 20th February 1912.

The Viceroy's visit to Lucknow.

He says that very little progress has been made in the cause of primary education in these provinces, while the number of primary schools has decreased, and that the grant of fifty lakhs of rupees by the Government of India for sanitation is not sufficient for the requirements of the province, and that special officers should be appointed to investigate the causes of the virulent type of plague raging in the Azamgarh and Ballia districts.

He suggests that as in Lucknow, Allahabad, Benares and Cawnpore, something should be done for the improvement of the city of Gorakhpur.

He advocates the complete abolition of octroi duty, asks that the province should be given an executive council as is proposed for the newly-created province of Behar, that adequate grants should be made for the diffusion of primary education in the province, and that the unani and vedic systems of treatment should be included in the training imparted to the students of the Medical College, Lucknow.

ADVOCATE, 22nd February 1912.

The Viceroy's visit to Lucknow.

38. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912, referring to His Excellency's visit to Lucknow and to the compliments paid to Lord Hardinge in the addresses presented to him, remarks that the complete freedom of the country from all mischievous activities is the result of His Excellency's determination to bring about harmony in the land.

With regard to the observations made in the address presented by the British Indian Association about the freedom of Oudh from seditious political agitation, the editor points out that, in setting up the claim that it was also due to their efforts, the talukdars did not do justice to the mass of the people. He observes that the United Provinces generally and Oudh in particular had been free from seditious agitation not because of the special efforts on the part of anybody, but because the people had no cause of resentment against Government or its agents, and that they valued the benefits of settled and peaceful government, and knew that nothing was more likely to stand in the way of their peaceful progress than the existence of continued excitement in the country. He says that very great credit is due to the educated community in this connection who did nothing to encourage extremism in these provinces.

With regard to His Excellency's reply to the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh, the editor expresses the opinion that, if the advice given to the members be followed, it will result in the remnants of a once great family becoming useful members of society.

SUDHA NIDHI, Paush 1968 (December 1911).

The King's visit to India.

39. The Sudha Nidhi (Allahabad), for Paush 1968 (December 1911) (received on the 11th January 1912), in its leading article expresses gratification on behalf of the people at the visit of the King-Emperor to India. The editor says that for centuries the Indians had not seen their Emperor, and that now that the Emperor and the Empress personally came out to India, the devotion of the people knew no bounds. They could offer no suitable present to the King-Emperor but they have presented their most valuable jewel, that of loyalty, to His Majesty and they have asked him in all affection and sincerity to take up his abode in their hearts. He adds that it would be their heart-felt desire to have their Emperor to live in India. He prays that His Majesty may ever live in peace, that he will always retain his kindly regard for his Indian subjects, and that in his reign the vaids may prosper, and that Government may recognize their merits and rights.

He incidentally remarks that the King-Emperor won the hearts of the entire Hindu community by his careful handling of the delicate question regarding the attendance of the Maharana of Udaipur at the Delhi darbar and by his kingly courtesy towards all the other princes as well.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th February 1912.

The Gaekwar incident.

40. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th February 1912, referring to the views expressed by Mr. Keir Hardie regarding the Gaekwar incident, remarks that Mr. Keir Hardie's praise of the Gaekwar after the explanation given by His Highness that he felt nervous on the occasion of doing homage to His Majesty is improper and ill-advised. The editor observes that no ruling chief can in any way be disrespectful to the King-Emperor. He contends that loyalty proceeds from the heart and does not consist merely in making bows, and that it cannot be questioned that the Gaekwar of Baroda is loyal from the bottom of his heart.

41. The Muslim Review (Allahabad), in the combined issued for November and December 1911 (received on the 12th January 1912), has an article by Mr. Seraj-ul-Islam entitled "The Imperial Conference and India," in the course of which the writer says that the greatest Imperial question, which ought to have been given every consideration at the Conference, was the colour problem, and that the stability of the British Empire depended on the equitable solution of the problem of the status of the coloured race.

MUSLIM REVIEW, November and December 1911.

The Imperial Conference and India.

He continues in the following words :—

"The races that have committed the crime of being born near the line, though forming an integral part of the Empire, are debarred from participating in the citizenship under the very ægis of the 'free and just Empire.' What pride can we feel in the Empire when we are deprived of the privileges of citizenship? In Transvaal we have been denied the commonest rights of British citizenship. The Government of Transvaal have treated us as criminals and have trampled us under foot as if we were no member of the British Empire. They forget that India furnishes most of the grist for the British mills and supplies the readiest outlet for British products and British capital. They forget that India is the greatest asset of Imperial rule and the mainstay of its strength and dignity. In the works of Lord Curzon, 'India is the pivot of the Empire and the brightest jewel in the British Crown.'"

The writer states that the claims of Indians were not seriously considered by the Conference, and he characterizes the statement of Mr. Malan that the question of Indians in South Africa was one of self-preservation as imaginary.

He expressed the opinion that even if it were not imaginary it should not be permitted to carry weight with the Imperial Government.

42. The Edward (Cawnpore), for January 1912 (received on the 8th February), takes exception to the action of the Hindustan (Lahore) in calling Babu Bipin Chandra Pal a nominal patriot, because he did not attend the last Congress. The editor remarks that now that Mr. Pal, who is an earnest worker in the cause of the country, has realized that co-operation with Government alone can be productive of any good to India, he does not deserve to be called a nominal patriot.

EDWARD, January 1912.

The Hindustan (Lahore) and Babu Bipin Chandra Pal.

43. Haji Musa Khan contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), in which he refers to Mr. Keane's paper on Home Rule for India, which was read by Mr. J. B. Pennington at the East India Association, London, on the 1st February, and remarks that though the essayist appears to regard the establishment of self-government in India with complaisance, the country is not prepared for such a measure at present, nor will it be for a quarter of a century.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 14th February 1912.

Home Rule for India.

He suggests that primary education should be made free and compulsory in order to prepare the masses for self-government, and expresses the hope that the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill would soon be passed by Government.

He takes exception to the opposition of some of the Bengali leaders and congressmen to the establishment of a university at Dacca, and observes that their action is calculated to hinder the educational progress of Indians, as well as the realisation of the ideal of self-government in India.

44. Commenting on the article on the subject of "Indians and military service" by Major-General H. B. Jeffreys that appeared in the Contemporary Review for January, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th February 1912, remarks that the writer has dealt with the question in a thoroughly sympathetic spirit and taken a wise view of it from the Imperial standpoint. The editor observes that while no sane person will withhold from the British Government the credit that is rightly due to it for many an act of righteous statesmanship to which India owes her present condition, it will hardly be denied by any fair-minded Englishman that a great national injury has been done by the demartialising of the Indian people. He urges that the people should not be deprived of the privilege of bearing their part in the defence of their hearths and homes, and claims that it is oppressive to crush out any faculty. He states that at the present moment the position is unsatisfactory in every respect, in that there is no military college in India, in that Indians are debarred from all the superior offices of the army, and that they are not permitted to enlist as volunteers, nor even allowed the privilege accorded to even low class Europeans of carrying arms without a licence, while that in the grant of licences, too, a less liberal policy than in the past has come into favour. He expresses regret that even the opinion publicly expressed by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, who had Indian experience as Commander-in-Chief in Bombay, has not led to the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst. He expresses apprehension that, if ever the day should come when India might have to be defended against an invasion by a powerful foreign foe, the present strength of the army, though well trained, would inevitably be found to be inadequate for the double purpose of engaging in the campaign as well as garrisoning the country.

LEADER, 17th February 1912.

Indians and military service.

The editor suggests that the only possible solution of the difficulty will be found in the training of Indians as volunteers, and in the maintenance of reserves which can be drawn upon in the hour of need.

He remarks that a comparatively small regular army with a system of short service and a large reserve planned so as to increase automatically year by year are what the country really need and the Empire, and that such a state of affairs can only be brought about if the present policy of dealing with Indians, which is based on distrust, is radically altered. He affirms that Indians have done much to merit greater confidence in their fidelity to the British connection with India, as many a battle-field will prove.

He editor goes on to describe the British position and the very insignificant contribution of the self-governing dominions of the Empire to the burdens of Imperial defence, and asks British statesmen to consider the advisability of extending in larger and longer measure the rights of citizenship to loyal and intelligent and civilized subjects of the realm such as the Indians, and to make patriotism and loyalty interchangeable terms in their eyes.

He concludes by expressing the hope that the considerations advanced with such force of argument and considerable knowledge by Major-General Jeffreys in his article, which reinforce the editor's own conclusion, will receive attentive consideration from His Majesty's Government and the Government of India.

OUDH AKHBAR, 18th February 1912.

45. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 18th February 1912, expresses approval of the appointment of Lord Pentland as Governor of Madras, and remarks that His Excellency's appointment must have been made after due consideration by His Majesty's ministers. The editor entertains the hope that the new Governor will, by his wise and sympathetic administration of the presidency, afford no occasion to the people of Madras to regret the transfer of Lord Carmichael to Bengal.

The new Governor of Madras.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

RAHBAR, 14th February 1912.

46. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), remarks that the postponement of the marriage of Princess Indra with the Maharaja Scindhia of Gwalior is nothing short of a divine boon to the public, seeing that in case the proposed marriage had been celebrated, Indians would have been encouraged to practise poligamy. The editor refers to the report published in the Gujrati (Bombay) that the Government of India interfered in the marriage of Princess Indra with the Maharaja of Gwalior, on the ground that it did not consider an alliance by marriage desirable between two such important native states, and expresses gratitude to Government for having disapproved of the marriage.

The postponement of the marriage of Princess Indra with the Maharaja Scindhia of Gwalior.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

ALMORA AKHBAR, January 1912.

47. The Almora Akhbar for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), referring to the question of the Royal prerogative of mercy being exercised in cases of prisoners

Capital punishment.

demned to capital punishment, remarks that the petitions for mercy submitted to the Government of India are not so often successful as in England.

48. Referring to the appointment of Mr. Napier as the Advocate General of Madras, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th February 1912, remarks that no real grievance can be made out against Lord Carmichael's government regarding the appointment, seeing that there is no vakil of outstanding merit in Madras, though he points out that there are several vakils who are by no means inferior to Mr. Napier. The editor says that, since the Advocate Generalship has been given back to the English bar, it was desirable that the post of Government pleader and public prosecutor should be given to a vakil. He congratulates the Government of Madras, in case it be true that not Mr. Richmond but Dewan Bahadur L. A. Govindaraghava Aiyar has been appointed Government pleader, though it will cause a serious loss to the public life in Madras.

The Advocate General of Madras.

LEADER, 24th February 1912.

(b)—Police.

49. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th February 1912, in a brief review of the Police Administration Report points to the large increase in the police establishment as well as to the expenditure on it since 1900, and states that the largest portion of it was absorbed in these provinces. The editor remarks that as compared with several other provinces the expenditure on education is smaller in the United Provinces, and expresses the opinion that if Government should devote a larger amount to the education of the people of these provinces, expenditure on the police will decrease of itself, as education was the best means of making the people peace loving.

The Police Administration Report.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th February 1912.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

50. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 19th February 1912, takes exception to the abolition of octroi duty, on the ground that it will be detrimental to the interests of the public. The editor suggests that octroi duty should only be abolished in towns which are connected by railway lines, and that it should be allowed to continue in places which are at a distance from railway stations.

The abolition of octroi duty.

SAHIFA, 19th February 1912.

(e)—Education.

51. The Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for February 1912, contains an article on the proposed Muslim University by Mr. S. M. Rauf Ali, Barrister-at-law, in the course of which the writer refers to Sir Saiyid Ahmad's pronouncement that Hindus and Muhammadans should recognize that they are natives of Hindustan, and that they should act in unison. He goes on to suggest that His Highness the Agha Khan should ask the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale to join to collect the thirty lakhs which is required for the Hindu University, and then to join the Muhammadans in a combined petition to the Sovereign for one all-India institution to be called King George's University of Aligarh.

The proposed Muslim University.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, February 1912.

52. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th February 1912, expresses regret at the delay in the realisation of the amounts of subscription promised for the Muslim University, and invites the attention of the Muhammadans to the passage in the Qoran where God lays special stress on the fulfillment of promises.

The editor entertains the hope that his co-religionists will mantain the credit of their faith by paying up their respective subscriptions as early as possible.

The proposed Muslim University.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

53. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 20th February 1912, expresses appreciation of the efforts made by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in popularizing the proposed Hindu University scheme. The editor asks him not to be satisfied with promises of subscriptions for the University, but to make arrangements for the speedy realisation of them.

The proposed Hindu University.

MASHRIQ, 20th February 1912.

He draws attention to the letter published in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th February by "A DISGUSTED WORKER" and asks the Hon'ble Pandit to take a warning from it.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 14th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

54. Nawab Mushtaq Husain contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), in which he expresses approval of the proposed Dacca University, and remarks that the establishment of the University will remove the dissatisfaction caused to the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal owing to the annulment of the partition of Bengal. He says that a University at Dacca will in no way be detrimental to the interests of the proposed Muslim University, and observes that the existence of both the universities will prove equally beneficial to the educational advancement of Muhammadans. In concluding the article he invites the attention of the members of his community who wished to join the Indian National Congress to the opposition of the Bengali leaders to the proposal to establish a University at Dacca, and observes that the Bengalis do not wish to see even the slightest facility offered to Muhammadans in the matter of their educational progress.

ARYA MITRA, 16th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

55. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), while approving of the establishment of the proposed Dacca University, observes that it is likely to cut off the support of the Eastern Bengal Hindus from the Hindu University movement.

The editor remarks that, as Government has given equal liberty to all its subjects in religious and educational matters, it depends upon the people themselves to preserve or destroy that liberty. He says that the assistance afforded to them by Government in educational matters should serve them only as a stimulus to preserve their freedom.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

56. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 17th February), lends its support to the proposal regarding the establishment of a university at Dacca, on the ground that the creation of new universities will stimulate educational progress, and will be productive of much good to the people. The editor remarks that the Bengalis should not agitate over the proposed Dacca University, in the same way that they did over the partition of Bengal. He points out that now that the people themselves are endeavouring to establish denominational universities, no exception could be taken to the creation of a university at Dacca. He suggests that the opponents of the proposed Dacca University should submit their objections to the measure to the Viceroy, and should abide by his decision instead of wasting their time, money and energy in starting an agitation against the proposed university.

LEADER, 18th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

57. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 18th February 1912, says: "The vindication of the Government's decision to establish a University at Dacca by His Excellency Lord Hardinge in reply to the deputation that waited upon him on Friday, could not be more complete. It is a convincing case which His Excellency has been able to make out, and his speech, which appears in full in our telegram columns, will be read with deep interest and gratification. We hope we shall be pardoned for pointing out the striking similarity between the line taken by us in our article on the subject and the views expressed by His Excellency. Naturally this coincidence is deeply gratifying to us. His Excellency is not able to understand, any more than we are, the alarm due to an apprehension of what they have called an educational partition."

The editor adds that it was hardly respectful to the Viceroy for any responsible public man to have said that the proposal to establish a University at Dacca meant an internal partition of Bengal, in view of the abundant proof Lord Hardinge has given of his desire to conciliate the people and have opinion on his side as far as possible. He expresses approval of the policy to increase the number of universities in India, so that they may partake more and more of the character of teaching and residential institutions, instead of being content with conducting examinations. He points out that this is the justification urged for the Hindu and Muhammadan Universities, and that it holds good in equal measure in the case of the Dacca University. He adds that it cannot be seriously disputed that every new university should result in a greater stimulus to educational progress, and as an instance he cites the establishment of the Allahabad University which has been followed by increased educational expenditure and the wider spread of education.

He expresses gratification that the Dacca University will not be a replica of the Calcutta University, but that it will be a teaching and residential institution, and that this declaration should remove the last vestige of objection to its establishment.

He observes that Lord Hardinge's words that an examining university will not any longer satisfy the needs of advancing India, should act as an inspiration to Indian educational reformers.

In concluding the article the editor expresses gratitude to His Excellency for his memorable pronouncement of educational policy and respectfully endorses every word uttered by him.

58. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 20th February 1912, expresses approval of the proposal to establish a University at Dacca. — MASHRIQ, 20th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

The editor takes exception to the opposition of the Bengali leaders and remarks: —

"Every one knows the distance between Calcutta and Dacca, which has resulted in the backwardness of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal in education. Now that Muhammadans are beginning to realise their backwardness and Government has shown some sympathy towards them, the (so-called) patriots and enlightened men of the country cannot tolerate even a small concession given to Muhammadans. These are men of whose worth, capability, knowledge and political efforts the whole country feels proud, and when such is the honesty of the great leaders it is folly to consider them as representatives of the country."

59. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 21st February 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer takes exception to the establishment of a University at Dacca, which, he says, will not be able to remove the backwardness of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal in education, seeing that the Hindu Bengalis who are much advanced in education will have a dominating influence in the affairs of the University. — ZUL QARNAIN, 21st February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

He suggests that such measures as the opening of separate colleges, the building of hostels exclusively for Muhammadans, the appointment of special officers for the supervision of primary education, and the grant of scholarships to Muhammadan students so as to send them to Aligarh would have been of greater advantage to the Muhammadan community than the establishment of a University at Dacca. He takes exception to His Excellency's procedure in announcing a University at Dacca without inviting public opinion on it, and observes that disregard of public opinion and doing things "behind the curtain" is most dangerous in the existing condition of India. The editor expresses agreement with the opinion of the writer that the creation of a University at Dacca on the model of other existing universities in India will not be beneficial to Muhammadans, but he entertains the hope that the Dacca University will be different from other universities, and that special regard will be paid to the requirements of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal. He invites the attention of the leaders of the Muhammadan community to the matter, and asks them to urge Government to provide special facilities for Muhammadans in the proposed university scheme.

60. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 19th February 1912, expresses regret that Nawab Mushtaq Husain has made up his mind, much against the wishes of his community, to leave Aligarh and to settle in Amroha. The editor strongly objects to Nawab Muzammil-ullah Khan's holding charge of the office of secretary of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and observes that Muhammadans can only put confidence in a person who works — MUSLIM GAZETTE, 19th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

for the community disinterestedly and not for the sake of personal aggrandizement.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

61. One Seraj-ul-Arfin of Amroha contributes an article to the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th February 1912, in which he mentions the names of Nawab Muzammil-ullah Khan, the Hon'ble Sahebzada Aftab Ahmad Khan and Mr. Aziz Mirza in connection with the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and after discussing the situation and the relative position and merits of each, he expresses the opinion that Mr. Aziz Mirza is the best of the three, and that he can be safely entrusted with the duties of the secretary of the college.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

62. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th February 1912, expresses regret at the inability of Nawab Mushtaq Husain to perform the duties of the secretary of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, owing to his advancing years. The editor refers to the memorial presented by the students of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College to the Nawab requesting him to continue in his post, and expresses the hope that he will not resign the secretaryship of the college, at any rate until the proposed Muslim University is established.

AL BASHIR, 20th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

63. One Muhammad Husain contributes an article to Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 20th February 1912, in which he asks Nawab Mushtaq Husain to continue in his post as secretary to the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, till he can be spared, and to choose as his successor some one who may be able to follow in his footsteps. The writer observes that the secretary of the college should be capable of facing every difficulty boldly, and should possess character according to the teachings of the Qoran, having true and sincere love for his community.

ALMORA AKHBAR, January 1912.

The Government High School, Almora.

64. The Almora Akhbar for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), refers to the rumour regarding the abolition of the matriculation classes in the Almora Government High School from July next. The editor asks the citizens of the place to urge upon Government the necessity of maintaining the institution as a high school, seeing that the money and energy spent in establishing it years ago will otherwise be practically wasted.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 15th February 1912.

The Muslim Hewett School, Moradabad.

65. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 15th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), complains of the unsatisfactory condition of the Muslim Hewett School, Moradabad, which is alleged to be due to the conduct of its paid secretary, Ibrar Husain.

The editor accuses the secretary of having misappropriated the property of the Anjuman Akhwanussafa, of which he was an officiating secretary for some time, and observes that so long as he continues in the post, the Hewett School will not be able to make any progress.

He invites the attention of the district authorities and the trustees of the school to the matter, and asks them to appoint another secretary.

KAISER-I-HIND, 15th February 1912.

A survey of the gurukul.

66. Maulana Abdul Qadir, professor of the Madrassa Illahiat, Cawnpore, again contributes an article to the Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 15th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), in which he discusses the system of training given to students in the gurukul and in the Arabic school at Deoband, and expresses regret that the latter has not yet produced a single student who can claim to possess the same spirit of self-abnegation, courage and patriotism that is found in the students of the gurukul.

LEADER, 17th February 1912.

The Indian Educational Service.

67. Referring to the reply given on behalf of the Government to the Hon'ble Babu Brij Nandan Prasad about the quality of the staff and the education imparted in the government educational institutions, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th February 1912, expresses the hope that the public will be afforded an opportunity of expressing their opinion on the proposals for the improvement of the Indian educational service before final decisions are taken by Government, and that in any reorganization that may be effected the present injustice to the Indian community will be removed or at any rate mitigated.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

ALMORA AKHBAR, January 1912.

Forest resettlement in the Almora district.

68. The Almora Akhbar for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), refers to the various advantages which the cultivators used to enjoy formerly in the hill districts, and points out how they were recognized in the Assisala and Mr. Becket's (?) settlement. He respectfully urges that in the present settlement a portion of the forest should be reserved in the neighbourhood of each village for the common use of the villagers. He points out that among the various advantages of the preservation of forests there is also one great disadvantage, in that it increases the number of wild beasts, and suggests that for their destruction the number of licensed shikaris should be increased, and that they should be supplied more efficient weapons. He says that it is heard that the enquiry into the rights of the villagers in fixing the boundaries of the forests, in setting apart grazing grounds for their cattle, and in other matters is not being so liberally made as it ought to be, and suggests that the full rights of every village family irrespective of its social position and the number of its members, whether at home or abroad, should be preserved. He states that each landowner generally requires two oxen, three or four cows with their calves and, if possible, one or two buffaloes.

(g)—General.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 19th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

69. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 19th February 1912, publishes a letter from Muhammad Kazim Shirazi, Persian teacher and late editor of the Hablul Matin (Calcutta), in which the writer refers to the comments of the Muslim Gazette of the 5th February, on the book named the Khwab-o-Khiyal, and remarks that the book was written by an uneducated and orthodox Brahman, and that criticisms made by the author in the book on the loyalty of Muhammadans may possibly be interesting, but they will not be able to produce any impression on the minds of educated and civilized men of the modern time.

The editor criticises the letter in the following words :—

"The criticisms of Sitaram may however be interesting to Mirza Sahib and his friends, but they cannot be of any interest to Muhammadans; on the contrary they are extremely offensive to their tone."

DARBAR, 20th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

70. The Darbar (Agra), of the 20th February 1912, publishes a contributed article, in which the writer refers to the note in the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 12th February 1912, in which the editor took exception to the attack made on the chastity of the Muhammadan women in the book named Khwab-o-Khiyal, and endorses the opinion expressed therein.

The writer says that he has just returned from a journey in the frontier districts and in Kabul, and that he found the women of those places very discreet, and observes that if the inhabitants of the frontier come to know of the existence of the book in which such unjust attacks have been made on the chastity of their women they are sure to express strong resentment.

SUDHA NIDHI, Paush 1968 (December 1911).

The Leader (Allahabad) and the Hindi Literary Conference.

71. The Sudha Nidhi (Allahabad), for Paush 1968 (December 1911) (received on the 11th January 1912), condemns the Leader and its correspondent's attacks on the Hindi Literary Conference held last year, and points out that they were all based on the ignorance of the Hindi language on the part of the editor, and of the correspondents of the paper.

ITTIHAD, 16th February 1912.

The Urdu-Hindi controversy.

72. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), reproduces a contributed article from the Waqf (Lahore), in which the writer complained that subordinate officials entrusted with the service of summonses were instructed by some officials to hand over the copy of the summons written in the Nagri character to the person summoned and to return to the court the one written in Urdu, and invited the attention of Government to the matter in order that the inconvenience thus caused to the non-Hindi-knowing litigants be removed.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th February 1912.

The vernacular journals.

73. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th February 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer says :—

"Does the voice of the Urdu journals, whose articles are mostly intended to foster feelings of loyalty amongst the masses, reach Government ?"

"Questions are put and notice is taken of the writings of the English papers. But when any notice of an Urdu paper is taken, it is only with a view to do it some injury, as when the Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha took exception in the Imperial Council to the subsidy given to the Afghan (Peshawar)."

"After the passing of the Indian Press Act a number of Urdu newspapers were stopped, but no notice was taken of the writings of Anglo-Indian journals, and that Government would have resented the publication of the same articles in Urdu papers."

"When the Urdu papers are so strictly watched how is it that they carry no weight with Government, and that no notice is taken by Government to matters to which its attention is invited by the papers."

He asks the editor to inform him when any reply is received by the editor from Government on the subject.

KAISER-I-HIND, 15th February 1912.

Friction in the Punjab vernacular press.

74. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 15th February 1912 (received on the 17th February), expresses regret at the friction between the editors of the two Lahore papers, the Zamindar and the Watan.

The editor says that because the Zamindar has not disgraced itself by sycophancy, the Watan, for the sake of self-aggrandizement, has accused its local contemporary of spreading discontent and sedition amongst the masses.

AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 16th February 1912.

Kayasths in government service.

75. The Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), expresses regret that both Hindus and Muhammadans should have tried to oust Kayasths from government service. The editor remarks that the restrictions about the admission of Kayasths into government service should not be a matter of gratification to the Hindus, seeing that if Kayasths were to be excluded from government service there would remain a very small number of Hindus in the service.

LEADER, 17th February 1912.

Indians and the medical service.

76. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th February 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer discusses an article entitled "Western medicine in India: a problem of to-day : the I. M. S. vs. The civil practitioner," which recently appeared in the Statesman (Calcutta), and laments that the grievances of the medical profession in India should not be regarded when even the partition of Bengal has been undone.

The writer says that in case it be found impossible to create a separate civil medical service entirely independent of the military, the development of the indigeneous system should be encouraged, and provision made that except for the purposes of consultation Civil Surgeons should not ordinarily be allowed to practise being given some slight increase of pay to make up for this disability.

He expresses gratitude to Sir John Hewett for his keen interest in the matter of a public health service, and suggests that the elementary principles of hygiene should be taught in all village schools.

EDWARD, January 1912.

Muhammadans and the swadeshi and boycott movements.

77. The Edward (Cawnpore), for January 1912 (received on the 8th February), expresses surprise that the Muhammadans should now have felt the need for resorting to the swadeshi and boycott movements in spite of the fact thal they could not too strongly condemn the Bengalis for advocating them. The editor expresses the hope that both Hindus and Muhammadans will try to live on friendly terms and co-operate with each other.

AL BASHIR, 20th February 1912.

Export of corn to Europe from India.

78. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 20th February 1912, refers to the question put by the Hon'ble Rai Nathi Mal Bahadur in the Provincial Legislative Council asking for attention to the fact that thousands of bags of corn intended for despatch to Karachi and Bombay were lying at various railway stations, instead of being promptly despatched by the railway authorities and remarks as follows:—

"After reading the question one is surprised at the conflicting policies of the Hindu leaders. Sometimes they argue that famine in India is due to export of corn from India to England and Government is blamed for not stopping it, but to-day we see that Rai Nathi Mal Bahadur asks Government to make proper arrangements for the export of corn to Europe. From this we are led to infer that a person has above everything his own gain in view."

RAHBAR, 14th February 1912.

79. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), ascribes the decrease in the population of the Hindus to the fact that a large number of them renounce Hinduism and accept other religions. The editor expresses the opinion that the stringent rules regarding marriage obtaining among the Hindus, and the unequal treatment accorded to the depressed classes are to a great extent responsible for the conversion of a great number of the Hindus to other religions, and he suggests that widow-marriage and exogamy should be permitted among them. In order to prevent educated Hindus from accepting Christianity, he advises that arrangements should be made for imparting religious education to them.

The decrease in the population of Hindus.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th February 1912.

80. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses appreciation of the efforts made by the District Magistrate and other officers of Sitapur to make the recent Khairabad fair a success. The editor however complains that the secretary, Babu Hoti Lal, Deputy Collector, did not make proper arrangements for the protection of the goods of merchants and exhibitors in the fair from rain, and also that sufficient arrangement was not made in the fair for the comfort of the general public. He expresses the hope that the fair will continue to be held every year as a memorial to Mr. Hope, and that in future effort will be made to remedy these defects.

The Khairabad fair.

ADVOCATE, 18th February 1912.

81. Referring to the active canvassing among the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh for the nomination of a candidate for the trusteeship of the Husainabad endowment in the vacancy caused by the death of Nawab Faghfur Mirza, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th February 1912, asks Government to select as trustee a gentleman who has received the benefits of a good education and is likely to prove independent and to work in the interest of the trust, on the ground that a reliable board of trustees will serve the public more faithfully and the proper administration of the most famous endowment in the provinces.

The Husainabad endowment.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 21st February 1912.

82. One Kedar Nath Pathak contributes an open letter to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to the columns of the Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 21st February 1912, in which he attacks the Pandit for allowing letters to be published in the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), disparaging the work of the Nagri Pracharini Sabha and of Babu Shyam Sundar Das in connection with the preparation of a dictionary on the Hindi language. The writer asks whether Mr. Malaviya will sever his connection with the Hindu university movement now that the Maharaja of Darbhanga has joined it, and in view of the disclosures of a correspondent of the Leader about the irregularities existing in the university office at Allahabad. He also complains of the style and policy of the Abhyudaya as at present conducted, and says that it has published false statements regarding its financial position in order to secure a wide circulation. He asks the Hon'ble Pandit to discourage the campaign against the workers on the Hindi dictionary, which has been started by his friends, fellow-citizens, followers and the editor of the Abhyudaya, in order to maintain his reputation as a leader of the Hindus and a lover of the Hindi language.

An open letter to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.

V.—Legislation.

ALMORA AKHBAR, January 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

83. The Almora Akhbar for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), refers to the opinion of the Local Government on the Elementary Education Bill, and remarks that it will be more useful to impart instruction to children and boys in agriculture, arts and industries than to make primary education free and compulsory. The editor adds that the mass of the people are opposed to the principle of compulsion generally and in the case of girls in particular. He observes that the diffusion of education is a laudable object, provided that it does not induce the children to give up their hereditary professions and to seek after public service which is already over crowded.

SAHIFA, 19th February 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

84. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 19th February 1912, refers to the proceedings of the meeting held at Lahore on the 11th February 1912 to support the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, and remarks that the making of primary education free and compulsory in India can be beneficial to Indians only in case special provision be made for instruction in trades such as carpentry, tailoring and weaving, in primary schools. The editor suggests the provision of scholarships to the sons of poor men who require their children to work in order to earn their living and he observes that otherwise considerable hardship will result from the introduction of free and compulsory primary education in the country.

LEADER, 21st February 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

85. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st February 1912, quotes extracts from the opinions expressed on the Elementary Education Bill by a number of the members of the Civil Service of the United Provinces, also of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court at Allahabad who have either supported the bill, or, failing support, have expressed warm sympathy for the cause of education and urged other measures for its extension. The editor expresses gratitude to the officers, and remarks that his sense of the value of their opinions is the higher because of the spirit in which other officers, who unfortunately form the majority in these provinces, have dealt with the question.

ALMORA AKHBAR, January 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

86. The Almora Akhbar for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), strongly condemns the Special Marriage Bill, and urges that Government should not pass it into law. The editor says that inter-marriage among different castes is not countenanced by Hindu shastra s, and that it will lead to legal difficulties as well.

LEADER, 23rd February 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

87. In a leading article in the issue of the 23rd February 1912, the Leader (Allahabad), quotes extracts and passages from the opinions expressed by officials and non-officials in the United Provinces in favour of and against Mr. Basu's Bill, and remarks that it is superfluous to say that the United Provinces Government has reported against the Special Marriage Bill. The editor, after adversely criticising Sir Leslie Porter's opinion on the subject, observes that it will perhaps be news to the Hon'ble Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu that he desires that a member of a joint Hindu family "should be entitled to take his Muhammadan wife into the common home," and style himself "an orthodox Hindu". He adds that Sir Leslie Porter had possibly some means of ascertaining that these were the real opinions of Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu, which his much misunderstood bill certainly does not provide.

HINDUSTANI, 16th February 1912.

An amendment in Act XX of 1856.

88. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 17th February), contains a contributed article in which the writer urges the need for an amendment to Act XX of 1856. He suggests that the appointment of the panchas of towns should be made by election, and that the duties of bakshis should be defined, and that the grades of their salaries should be fixed.

ADVOCATE, 18th February 1912.

The United Provinces Court of Wards Act.

89. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th February 1912, says that the Court of Wards Bill which was made law on Thursday last was considerably improved in the Select Committee, but expresses regret that what had been gained in the committee was lost at the meeting of the Council, because the majority, which consisted of officials and zamindars, was formidable, and would not depart from the principles laid down in the first draft of the measure. The editor remarks that the passing of certain sections of the bill, notably of section 59, was a sad commentary on the present constitution of the Council. He observes that when a provision of law which is condemned by Judges of the High Court, by all well-known lawyers of the province and by lawyer members of the Provincial Council is passed by an overwhelming majority, or when a section which would lead to the disruption of Hindu joint families is accepted, it must be due to one of two things either the eminent Judges of the High Court and the lawyers of the United Provinces are indifferent to the fate of the landowning classes, or the expanded councils are so constituted that the voice of the aristocracy of intellect is feeble and weak and cannot make itself heard against the aristocracy of wealth. In these circumstances he urges the necessity of setting on foot a strong agitation to get the constitution of the Council reformed.

The editor exonerates the Government of Sir John Hewett from being a party to the introduction of section 59, which was introduced by the Government of India, and expresses appreciation of His Honour's action in distinctly telling the official members of the Council not to treat the section as a government proposal. He says that even this announcement did not affect the issue, and the most objectionable provisions of the bill to which Government itself did not attach great importance were made law.

He expresses the hope that the Court of Wards Act will be very sparingly enforced, and not worked in such a manner as to reduce the credit of the zamindars or to cause hardship to honest people having monetary dealings with the zamindars.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th February 1912.

The Medical Registration Bill of the Bombay Government.

90. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th February 1912, publishes, without any comments, the text of the memorial submitted by the Ayurveda Mahamandal to the Bombay Government regarding the Medical Registration Bill which has been introduced in its Legislative Council.

VI.—Railway.

RAHBAR, 14th February 1912.

A complaint against the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway.

91. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 20th February), referring to the article entitled "A complaint against the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway," that appeared in the Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st February 1912 (vide Selections No. 6 of 1912, paragraph 103), says that the complaint about the ill-treatment of subordinates by the Traffic Superintendent of the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway is groundless, and that persons who are dismissed from service can never be expected to speak favourably of him. The editor remarks that it cannot be maintained that leave is not granted to the employés whenever they require it. Regarding the allegations made against the Traffic Superintendent in connection with the death of Babu Lachhman Prasad, late station master of Ujhauli, he says that the editor of the Rohilkhand Gazette is probably unaware of the rules regarding sick leave, as otherwise he would not have made such allegations.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th February 1912.

The Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway.

92. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), complains of the dismissal of Babu Ram Lal, goods clerk, by Mr. Kelly, Traffic Superintendent, Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway, and asks the editor of the Rahbar (Moradabad), who supported the action of the Traffic Superintendent, when a complaint was made against him on some former occasion, to explain the desirability of the dismissal of the goods clerk who faithfully served the company for a period of eleven years.

VII.—Post Office.

POSTAL MAGAZINE, September and October 1911.

A suggestion to nominate subordinate officials of the Postal Department for the telegraph training school.

93. Udai Narayan Asthana, parcel clerk, Gorakhpur, contributes an article to the Postal Magazine (Agra), for the months of September and October 1911 (received on the 25th January 1912), in which he complains of the slow rate of promotion of the subordinate officials of the postal department, and suggests that some of them at any rate should be nominated every year for the telegraph training school.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

MUSAFIR, 16th February 1912.

The sanctity of the Qoran.

94. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), publishes another instalment of the article entitled "The sanctity of the Qoran," in which he observes that as the replies given in the Qoran to certain questions are irrelevant, the style of the book cannot be regarded as perfect or even excellent. The editor quotes the views of some of the ulmas of ancient times in support of the contention that the Qoran is neither elegant nor eloquent in style. He observes that Indian Muhammadans, who are not well versed in Arabic, may regard it otherwise but that it cannot be so regarded in Arabia where people can write books in a far better style than the Qoran.

MUSAFIR, 16th February 1912.

A review of hadises.

95. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), commenting on the article published in the Hakam (Qadian, Gurdaspur), in reply to a series of articles entitled "A review of the hadises" that appeared in the Musáfir, remarks that it cannot be denied that next to the Qoran come the hadises as forming the basis of Islam. The editor quotes a verse from the Qoran in support of his statement that most of the verses of the Qoran are equivocal and meaningless. He contends that the allegation made by the Hakam that the tone of the Musáfir is objectionable, is groundless, and promises to reply to its criticisms in very mild language, provided the Hakam will not use insulting and abusive expressions against him.

MUSAFIR, 16th February 1912.

The missionary work of the Arya Samaj.

96. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), while expressing gratification at the considerable increase in the number of the Arya Samajists during the last ten years, remarks that their progress in the matter of spreading the Vedic faith has been very slow in comparison with the Christians. The editor ascribes the slow progress made by the Arya Samajists to the differences obtaining among them, and to their having taken in hand works other than the diffusion of the Vedic faith.

MUSAFIR, 16th February 1912.

A religious controversy between the Musáfir (Agra) and the Curzon Gazette (Delhi).

97. In continuation of the article entitled "A religious controversy between the Musáfir and the Curzon Gazette (Delhi)," the Musáfir (Agra), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), takes the Curzon Gazette to task for alleging that Swami Dayanand was not a well-educated man. The editor endeavours to prove that Dayanand was a very capable man, and quotes the opinion expressed by Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan on the occasion of Dayanand's death regarding the latter's accomplishments in the matter of Sanskrit and Vedic literature.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 19th February 1912.

The Arya Samaj and the Nau-Muslims.

98. One Abdul Ghafur Khan of Malihabad contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 19th February 1912, in which he refers to the article of the Musáfir (Agra) in which the editor urged his co-religionists to help the Aryan missionaries in their work of converting the Nau-Muslims to the Arya faith, and asks the Nadwa to bestir itself, and to save the Muhammadans from falling into the hands of the Arya Samajists.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, February 1912.

Indian women.

99. Mr. R. C. Bonnerjee has contributed the first part of an article on Indian women to the Hindustan Review (Allahabad) for February 1912. The writer commences by pointing out that the position of women causes anxiety chiefly in the middle classes of society. He shows that the idea of pardah for women continues to be attractive to Hindus and Muhammadans, while their emancipation appeals to Western nations. At the same time he acknowledges that men were induced to keep their women carefully guarded in the old days for reasons of necessity, but that nowadays "men and women can go about the streets fearless of molestation (unless indeed the police are on the scent of a political crime)." The writer complains that the manners of certain Anglo-Indians restrain Indians from allowing their women to leave the pardah. In this connection he writes as follows:—

"The despised Babu has experienced such treatment often enough and he remembers it. The struggle for his daily bread forces him to come into contact with people whom he would much rather avoid. But if he cannot keep himself from this contact at least, so he reasons, he need not expose his women-kind to such insults or such indignities. He may be able to endure this treatment in silence when it affects him alone, but, if it touches those whom it is his duty to keep from ill, his task becomes more difficult. Galling though it may be to see himself treated thus it is doubly galling to have his women-kind witness his discomfiture. It may be confidently affirmed that many Indians who have very liberal ideas with regard to the position of women shrink from putting them into execution for fear of exposing their women-kind to insult. Unfortunately, the matter does not stop there. Indians themselves are still more to blame. Until quite recently, a certain class used to display towards women who have left the zanana the worst possible manners. It was hard some time ago for Indian women to be seen in open carriages without bringing upon themselves insult and abuse from their own ignorant countrymen. Matters have gradually changed in this respect with the spread of education, but they have changed neither quickly nor completely."

RAHBAR, 14th February 1912.

Sadhus and Indian women.

100. One Umrao Singh of Umballa contributes a lengthy article to the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), in which he deplores the evil nature of the influence exercised by some sadhus over Indian women, and urges the Hindu leaders to take steps to protect Hindu women from the demoralising influence of sadhus of bad character. He suggests that public-spirited persons should move Government to pass a law to restrict the number of sadhus and put some restraint on them.

SAHIFA, 12th February 1912.

The advent of Imam Mehdi.

101. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th February 1912 (received on the 14th February), reproduces a contributed article from the Zamindar (Lahore), in which the writer, Khwaja Hasan Nizami Dabir, of Delhi, refers to the situation in Tripoli, Morocco and Persia, and remarks that the very existence of Islam is now in danger. He observes that the advent of the last Imam alone can save Islam, seeing that by his advent the Muhammadans will be infused with religious enthusiasm and sincerity. He remarks that, if only Muhammadans be informed that the time of the advent of Imam Mehdi is at hand, they will shake off their lethargy, and will begin to take an interest in the problems of life. He states that his pamphlet entitled Shaikh Sanausi wa Zahur Imam relating to the advent of Imam Mehdi enjoyed an extensive sale, especially in Bombay, where the people seemed to be very religiously inclined. He says that the pamphlet particularly interested the poor people, which showed that the rich are indifferent towards religion. He goes on to say that, being encouraged by the good effects which the pamphlet produced on the minds of the public, he began to search for any reference to Imam Mehdi in books of other religions. He tries to show that the Kalanki Puran prophesies the advent of Imam Mehdi, and that the circumstances described in the Puran, under which the Kalanki avatar is foretold to appear point to the advent of Mehdi in the near future.

TRISHUL, 15th February 1912.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

102. In a leading article entitled "The drifting Mahamandal: Where is it going to? How (are we) to check its perilous course?" the editor of the Trishul (Benares), in the issue of the 15th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), deplores the present condition of the Bharat Dharam Mahamandal, and asks the entire Hindu community for assistance to save the institution from collapse. He complains of the lack of proper control on the part of its responsible head and of his assistants in office, which is said to have brought all work to a stands till point of dislocation. He holds Swami Gayanandji responsible for the mismanagement of the mahamandal and says that he is sadly wanting in practical business knowledge.

MUSAFIR, 16th February 1912.

The Muharram at Agra.

103. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 16th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), referring to the article entitled "The Muharram at Agra," that appeared in the issue of the 2nd February, says that a report has been received from Lahore that the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), in the issue of the 9th February, has offered an unqualified apology to Messrs. Satya Narayan and Company. The editor remarks that it is better to offer an apology than to deliberately conceal a fault, and asks the Paisa Akhbar to note that a wise man should not do an act of which he may have to repent afterwards.

AL MUSHIR, 18th February 1912.

Mismanagement of waqf properties.

104. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th February 1912, complains of the mismanagement of the waqf properties by the trustees, and observes that they generally spend the income derived from them on objects for which they were not intended by the creator of the waqf.

The editor says that waqfs are consecrated properties, and that their sale or use for purposes not consistent with the wish of the creator of the waqf is forbidden by religion.

He invites the attention of Government to the matter, and suggests that if Government were to administer the waqf properties, the income derived from them would be properly utilised.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 24th February 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 9 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 2nd March 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The situation in Persia and Tripoli ... 217
2. The situation in Persia 217
3. The situation in China 217
4. The situation in China 217
5. The Italian-Turkish war 217
6. The Italian-Turkish war 218
7. The Italian-Turkish war 218

(b)—Home:

8. The administrative changes in India ... 218
9. The administrative changes in India ... 218
10. The administrative changes in India ... 219
11. The administrative changes in India ... 219
12. The administrative changes in India ... 219
13. The administrative changes in India ... 220
14. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 220
15. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 220
16. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 220
17. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 220
18. The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces 221
19. The All-India Muslim League ... 221
20. The late Maulvi Aziz Mirza, the Secretary of the All-India Muslim League ... 221
21. His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to the United Provinces 221
22. The Viceroy's visit to Lucknow ... 221
23. The Viceroy's reply to the address of the Oudh ex-Royal family 221
24. The Royal visit to India 221
25. The King-Emperor's return to England 222
26. Indians in State service 222
27. Indians in the Army 223
28. The rights and duties of the kings in olden times in India 223
29. Democracy in India 223

Page.

30. The rumoured release of Mr. Tilak ... 224
31. Indians in British colonies 224
32. The Tinnevelly murder case 224
33. The new province of Behar 224
34. Sir William Nicholson's Committee ... 225
35. District advisory councils 225
36. Sir T. W. Holderness on the peoples and problems of India 225

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

37. Free and compulsory education in the Jhind State 226
38. The Maharaja of Durbhanga and the Leader (Allahabad) 226

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

39. The Mahamandal and the Gurudham case 226
40. The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan ... 226

(b)—Police:

41. Police reform 226

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

42. The income tax 227
43. The income tax 227
44. The Imperial budget 227

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

45. Repairs of roads in Lucknow ... 228
46. Separate representation on local boards... 228
47. The abolition of octroi duty 228
48. The forthcoming municipal election at Allahabad 228
49. Health camp at Allahabad 228

(e)—Education:

50. The proposed Muslim University ... 228
51. The proposed Dacca University ... 229
52. The proposed Dacca University ... 229
53. The proposed Dacca University ... 229
54. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 229
55. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 229

Page.

56. A survey of the gurukul 229
57. The system of education in the gurukul 230
58. The gurukul Bhiksha Mandli in Calcutta 230
59. The imparting of education to prisoners in Madras 230
60. The Jains and education 230
61. The need for education in India 230
62. The Indian Educational Service ... 230
63. Muhammadan teachers in the Patwari schools in the United Provinces ... 231
64. A suggestion to open forest schools in the chief cities of every province ... 231
65. Professorships of medical colleges ... 231
66. The Delhi Hindu College 231
67. The need for a Hindu Educational Conference in the United Provinces ... 231
68. Industrial education in Germany ... 231

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

69. The Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal Dharamshala 232
70. The Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal Dharamshala and the Sarai Act 232
71. The revival of Indian industries ... 232
72. Provincial Industrial Conference ... 232
73. The improvement of cattle 232
74. Coolie Emigration Dépôt, Allahabad ... 232
75. A comment on the open letter to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya addressed by Kedar Nath Pathak ... 233
76. The Khowab-o-Khiyal 233
77. The bestowal of titles 233
78. Mr. Pike's scheme 233
79. Anti-vaccination and anti-vivisection movement 233

Page.

V.—LEGISLATION.

80. The Special Marriage Bill 234
81. The Special Marriage Bill 234
82. The Special Marriage Bill 234
83. The Elementary Education Bill ... 234
84. The Elementary Education Bill ... 235
85. The need for restricting the activities of astrologers 235

VI.—RAILWAY.

86. A suggestion for the construction of three new railway lines in India ... 235
87. Enquiry into railway matters ... 235
88. The Bengal and North-Western Railway 235
89. The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ... 236

VII.—POST OFFICE.

90. Holidays for the Postal Department ... 236

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

91. The Holi festival 236
92. The Holi festival 236
93. The protection of cows 236
94. The protection of cows 236
95. A slaughter house at Ajodhya ... 237
96. The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ... 237
97. The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ... 237
98. The future of Islam 237
99. Islam in Japan 237
100. Commemoration of the death of Pandit Lekh Ram 238
101. The translation of the Veda Mantras ... 238
102. The depressed classes in Almora ... 238
103. Dedication of minor girls 238

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st March 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 „
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 „
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 „
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 „
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 „
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 „
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 „
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 „
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 „
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 „
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 „
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 „
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 „
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 „
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 „
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 „
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 „
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	800 „
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 „
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	* 1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27... ...	5,000 „
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 „
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 „
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 „
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 „
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 „
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 „
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 „
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 „
133	Swadesh Bándhavé ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 „
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 „
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 „
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
142	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 „
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 „
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 „
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 „
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 „
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), reproduces an article referring to the aggressive and barbarous attitude of the European Powers, from the Moslem (Poona), and remarks as follows:— UNION GAZETTE, 14th February 1912.

The situation in Persia and Tripoli.

"Russian and Italian atrocities in Persia and Tripoli respectively show in plain words that European civilization is another name for barbarity and cruelty, from which it is evident that Europe is a den of wild and ferocious animals."

2. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), refers to the speeches made at the meeting of the Persian Society in London, which was held to protest against Russian aggression in Persia, and remarks that the policy of the British Foreign Minister with regard to Persia is calculated to lower the reputation of the British nation. The editor urges Sir Edward Grey to give up his present objectionable policy for the honour of his country. ITTIHAD, 24th February 1912.

The situation in Persia.

3. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), expresses doubts as to the ultimate prosperity of the republican form of government in China. The editor says that he apprehends that China may become involved in war with other countries even in the event of the new form of government achieving success, as China is likely to desire to extend her territory. ABHYUDAYA, 18th February 1912.

The situation in China.

He observes that it is difficult to predict what turn affairs may take in Tibet and Afghanistan, in case China succeeds in improving her condition.

With regard to the proposed Trans-Persian Railway he expresses apprehension that the enterprise may result in another Mahabharat.

Continuing the article in the issue of the 22nd February, he remarks that the Mahabharat is not likely to take place in Europe, not because the various Peace Conferences have made war among European Powers an impossibility, as the latter disregard all treaties and conventions when they have their own ends to serve, but because European statesmen are of the opinion that war among European Powers will be productive of no good.

4. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), expresses appreciation of the action of the Chinese republic in giving assurance to the people of religious freedom under the new government and in announcing its intention to establish conscription which the editor commends as being calculated to enable the people of China to protect their country from the European Powers, which are always watching for the opportunity to take under their protection any country which becomes weak. SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

The situation in China.

5. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, referring to the Italian-Turkish war, remarks that it is difficult to predict the result of the war from the reports that have so far been received. After observing that it is not likely that Turkey will concede the possession of Tripoli to Italy, the editor makes the following observations:— NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

"The mujahids (warriors for the faith) are in every way capable of protecting Tripoli. Moreover, besides human foes, the Italians will have to meet with a more formidable enemy in the form of the summer season, which will inflict great hardships on them, in addition to the guerilla warfare carried on by the Arabs and occasional attacks from them, which by themselves are enough to exasperate the Italian army. It is to be regretted that the ill-disposed inhabitants of Macedonia have, with singular lack of foresight, tried to take advantage of the Turkish Government being involved in Tripoli, and it is advisable that they should be duly punished. Macedonia is a Turkish province, and any Power which wants to interfere in the matter, in accordance with the objectionable practice of foreign Powers, should be frankly told not to interfere in the matter, as Turkey was quite capable of establishing peace and order within her borders. When the Italians and Russians committed atrocities in Tripoli and Persia respectively, and when a complaint was made to Sir Edward Gray by the Turks and the Persians, he said that the action of both the Powers was justifiable. Now we shall see which Power condemns as aggressive the action of Turkey, in spite of her Government being the embodiment of mercifulness.

Turkey should not be afraid of any Power nor should she conclude peace. She should not depend upon any Power except on the Almighty God. Otherwise the result of a policy of supplication will be that other Powers will occupy other Turkish possessions as has been done with Tripoli. Not only in Europe but in the whole world, the existence of the Turks will continue only so long as they regard their honour as their existence. As soon as they begin to love their lives apart from honour, and desire to live honourably or disgracefully (they may be sure that) God will deprive them of their kingdom."

MASHRIQ, 27th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

6. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 27th February 1912, takes exception to the tone of the article that appeared in the Times (London), on the Italian-Turkish war in which the writer is said to have remarked that if Turkey does not make peace with Italy, the Italians will throw bombs on the mausoleum of the prophet Muhammad and on the kaba from their aeroplanes, and observes that such writing is calculated to cause resentment throughout the Muhammadan world. The editor asks Government to compel the Italians to limit the scene of their military operations to Tripoli and not to bombard the coast towns of Arabia.

AL BASHIR, 27th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

7. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 27th February 1912, expresses disapproval of the action of the All-India Muslim League in asking the Government of India to prevent Italy from blockading Jeddah and Yemboo which lie on the way to Mecca and Medina respectively, on the ground that experience has shown that Government pays no consideration to such requests. The editor observes that the haj is not obligatory on Muhammadans when the way to Mecca and Medina is not safe, and he expresses the opinion that the Muhammadans will actually benefit by the action of Italy in blockading Jeddah and Yemboo, seeing that it would be calculated to alieniate the sympathy of Muhammadans from Italy and to bring about the boycott of Italian goods by them.

(b)—Home.

UNION GAZETTE, 14th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

8. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 14th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), reproduces from the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), His Highness the Aga Khan's letter on the administrative changes in India, and makes the following remark :—

"We cannot help observing in conclusion that we ought to be grateful to Government only when it fulfils its promises and safeguards our rights and interests. But when Government, after injuring the interests of the Muhammadan community, has adopted no measures for compensating the wrongs done to them, their expression of gratitude is a proof of their cowardice, and shows that the Musalman leaders are always prepared to sacrifice the interests of their community for their own advantage."

LEADER, 25th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

9. Commenting on the debate in the House of Lords on the administrative changes in India, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, remarks that the feeling of the Indian community generally and of a good number of Anglo-Indians also is that Lord Curzon has been treated as he deserved, seeing that except for a little feeble support from Lord Minto, there was not a sentence uttered in support of his contention. The editor says that Lord Morley never expressed the opinion that no statesman should at any time modify the partition of Bengal, and that it was the excesses of the agitation, and the cunning way in which the Muhammadans of East Bengal were impressed into a stubborn defence of the partition, which made it difficult for Lord Morley to go back upon his declaration, but that he always took care to say that the partition was a settled fact only so far as he and Lord Minto were concerned.

The editor concludes the article with the following words :—

"If Lord Curzon were ever again to have his way in dealing with India's affairs, he would very likely bring the country to the verge of rebellion. Thank God, he is out of mischief's way, for the time being at all events."

10. A correspondent named Qamar Ahmad contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 27th February 1912, in which he discusses Mr. Stead's article in the Review of Reviews (London), on the administrative changes in India. He agrees that the announcement of the administrative changes cannot be regarded as a Royal concession, seeing that they formed the subject of discussion between the Viceroy and the Secretary of State.

MASHRIQ, 27th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

He expresses agreement with Mr. Stead that, now that the partition of Bengal has been annulled, which was apparently the chief cause of the discontent in the country, the disadvantages which have accrued to other communities in consequence of the partition of Bengal should also be removed. He suggests that the Indian Press Act should be repealed, and he says that it now serves no useful purpose beyond weakening the Indian press.

Referring to the condition of Indian Muhammadans, he says that it cannot be denied that Muhammadan public opinion has been greatly perturbed, but he suggests that the leaders of the Muhammadan community should themselves direct the policy of their followers instead of consulting the Times (London), or the Pioneer (Allahabad). He asks Government to safeguard the interests of all important Indian communities, particularly as the recent announcements have lent colour to the theory that agitation can effect a change in Government policy.

In conclusion he refers to the need for an executive council in the United Provinces, and, with regard to the introduction of the Agra Estates Bill in the Provincial Legislative Council, he remarks that Sir John Hewett should not allow the bill to be passed so as not to leave anything behind him but admiration for his good administration of the province.

11. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, referring to the debate in the House of Lords on the administrative changes in India, characterizes Lord Curzon's objections to the changes as unreasonable, and contends that as Lord Curzon himself had effected the partition of Bengal he could not be consulted in the matter of its annulment.

ABHYUDAYA, 25th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

The editor goes on to say that Lord Curzon, who disregarded public opinion at the time of partitioning Bengal, cannot object to the present administrative changes in India, on the ground that the public was not consulted. He expresses appreciation of the reply given by Lord Crewe that the opinion of Indians was really what mattered, and entertains the hope that it was said not only to silence the opposition, but to assure the Indians that they would be consulted about all matters that concern them.

12. Referring to the debate in the House of Lords on the administrative changes in India and Lord Curzon's condemnation of them, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 29th February 1912, enquires with regard to his grievance that he was not consulted by the Government, whether it would have been in the fitness of things to invite the judgment of a person whose work it was proposed to unsettle, and whether it would have been courteous to solicit his opinion and then to ignore it. The editor, in referring to Lord Curzon's resentment of the autocratic methods of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State in not submitting the administrative changes to public criticism, remarks that aversion for autocracy and regard for public opinion were not the outstanding features of Lord Curzon's viceroyalty, seeing that in the matter of the partition of Bengal he invited public opinion only to trample it under foot, and carried his scheme in the teeth of all opposition.

ADVOCATE, 29th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

As regards the removal of the Capital to Delhi the editor says that in selecting Delhi for the location of the Imperial Government Indian sentiments had been consulted and that the result has justified secrecy in this connection. He goes on to say that if everybody knew and discussed the nature of the boons which the King-Emperor was to announce, it would scarcely have befitted the unique occasion of an English Monarch announcing in person his gifts to the people of India.

He concludes the article with the remark that happily His Majesty's visit to India has allayed discontent and discord, different communities of India are seeking to cultivate more friendly relations, that the King's Message of Hope and Unity has cheered the hearts of the nation, and that it would have been a great pity if the vote of censure in the House of Lords had not been a failure.

LEADER, 1st March 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

13. Commenting on the Hon'ble Mr. Bevis's speech delivered as President of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce on the 27th February at Cawnpore, in which he spoke in terms of approval of the transfer to Delhi of the seat of the Government of India, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st March 1912, observes that this is the opinion of the whole country and not of a few in Bengal itself, and that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce is bound to view the question in a different light. The editor characterizes as absurd and selfish the suggestion made by the Bengal Chamber that the Government of India should leave the Commerce and Industry Department at Calcutta. He expresses regret at the inability of the Government of India to comply with the request of the Upper India Chamber to be allowed a representative on the Supreme Legislative Council either jointly or alternately with the Punjab Chamber of Commerce. He expresses agreement with Mr. Bevis's views that the commercial needs of the Bengal and Bombay presidencies cannot always be at one with those of the United Provinces and the Punjab, seeing that the Bombay and Calcutta merchants' chief interest is the import trade, while that of the Upper India and Punjab mercantile community is inland and export trade and the manufactures and industries of the country. Moreover in matters of railway administration and in questions of railway rates a representative of either the Bengal or Bombay Chamber of Commerce on the Imperial Legislative Council is not expected to do adequate justice to the interests of these provinces, and in these circumstances every province is entitled to be given the opportunity of having its own aspirations fairly represented. The editor also urges the fact that the interests of the Indian mercantile community are not always in accord with those of the European merchants even of Upper India, and it is therefore desirable that the former should also have independent representation in the Supreme Council.

As regards Mr. Bevis's observation on the sugar industry the editor says that it must be confessed that much has not been done either by Government or by the people to save it from impending ruin.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

14. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), expresses regret that neither Hindus nor Muhammadans have any definite goal in view to which they can direct their political activities, and observes that so long as they have no definite aim the participation of the Hindus or the Muhammadans in the Muslim League or the Indian National Congress respectively can serve no useful purpose. The editor says that unless the Hindus and Muhammadans unite for a common cause they cannot attain political salvation.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

15. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses disapproval of the proposal made by some Muhammadans to join the Indian National Congress, and observes that there is no need for Muhammadans to change their policy at all. He, however, suggests to his co-religionists that they should not be so reticent, that they should express their opinions boldly on matters of public interest, and that they should carry on agitation on constitutional lines in order to secure the introduction of any useful measure which they require.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

16. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, expresses regret at the present strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, and observes that when they have learnt to be more independent the spirit of jealousy and the causes of friction between them will disappear and give place to the feelings of friendship and goodwill.

ANAND. 22nd February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

17. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), expresses gratification at the appointment of Sir James Meston as the next Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, and observes that Sir James Meston, who has worked for a long time in these provinces in different capacities, is a very capable officer. The editor expresses the hope that an executive council, with an Indian member, will be established in these provinces on his assuming office, and he says that the provinces, if they fail to make progress during the administration of Sir James Meston, are never likely to see any improvement.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th February 1912.

The appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces.

18. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), expresses approval of the appointment of Sir James Meston as Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces, and entertains the hope that the administration of Sir James will prove a blessing to the agricultural classes of the province.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 26th February 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

19. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 26th February 1912, expresses disapproval of the present constitution of the Muslim League, and remarks that the title-holders and rich zamindars, who are its prominent members, cannot be expected to give expression to their views boldly. The editor strongly urges that the present League should be dissolved, and that another league be formed consisting of Muhammadans of liberal views and advanced ideas, who can serve their community without motive of personal aggrandizement or fear of reproach.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 28th February 1912

The late Maulvi Aziz Mirza, the Secretary of the All-India Muslim League.

20. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), in an extraordinary issue of the 28th February 1912, expresses regret at the untimely death of Maulvi Aziz Mirza, the Secretary of the All-India Muslim League, and says that the selection and appointment of the next secretary should be decided by the Muhammadan public and not by any particular person, and that the person selected should have no desire for personal gain but should be prepared to advance the cause of his co-religionists courageously, ably and disinterestedly.

ANAND, 22nd February 1912.

His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to the United Provinces.

21. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), referring to His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to the United Provinces invites his attention to the unsatisfactory financial condition of the municipalities in these provinces, to the need for an executive council, and urges that a grant be made for the construction of wells and canals. The editor also urges the need for the completion of the construction of the direct railway lines from the ports of Bombay and Karachi to the United Provinces, in order to better its commercial prospects, he asks for the abolition of the octroi duty, for making primary education general and for the passing of a law governing charitable endowments, which are not at present properly managed. He expresses the hope that Lord Hardinge will give some regard to the needs of the province.

ANAND, 22nd February 1912.

The Viceroy's visit to Lucknow.

22. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), publishes an account of the Viceroy's visit to Lucknow, and remarks that it would have been better if the address presented to His Excellency on behalf of the Lucknow Municipal Board had dwelt on the need for better lighting arrangements in the city, and if it had referred to the miserable condition of the western portion of the town.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

The Viceroy's reply to the address of the Oudh ex-Royal family.

23. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, refers to the observation made by the Viceroy in the course of his reply to the address presented by the members of the Oudh ex-Royal family that these are not times in which it will suffice for a man to sit with folded hands and boast of ancient lineage. The editor reminds his countrymen that this advice applies to them as well as to the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh, and he expresses regret that Indians are in the habit of boasting of their lineage instead of endeavouring to follow in the footsteps of their ancestors.

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, February 1912.

The Royal visit to India.

24. The editor of the Hindustan Review (Allahabad), in "The topics of the day" for February 1912, refers to the result of the Royal visit to India, and expresses the opinion that it has raised the status of India in the British Empire to that which was rightfully and constitutionally hers, namely that of an integral unit and joint partner, entitled to share in all the advantages and responsibilities which are the birthright of all subjects of the Crown, wholly irrespective of their caste, creed or colour. He expresses satisfaction at the appreciation by the British public of the message cabled through His Excellency the Viceroy to the British people, and describes it as a signal proof of the indissoluble bond which now unites the two countries, and of the fact that India now holds the status of a co-ordinate State instead of that of a servient State.

Discussing the proposal for the appointment of a successor to the late Mr. Krishnaswami Iyer on the executive council of Madras the editor refers to the opinion expressed by the Madras Mail that this third membership is not necessarily earmarked for an Indian. The editor of the Hindustan Review expresses his disagreement with the opinion expressed by the same paper as to the need for administrative experience on the part of the third member, and points out that if this were correct it would exclude all Indians except Indian officials either of the Indian or the Provincial Civil Service. He states that it is most undesirable that all three members should be "sun-dried bureaucrats." He agrees with the opinion expressed by the Leader (Allahabad) that the member should be a public man thoroughly alive to the needs of new India and fully in touch with the sentiments of the Indian people, and not a territorial magnate whose only recommendation was his wealth and his reactionary sympathy.

In the course of a short reference to the treatment of the press representatives at the Delhi darbar, the editor expresses disappointment at both the Anglo-Indian and the Indian press having been completely passed over in the matter of titles and decorations bestowed in connection with the darbar. He notes that Mr. Lawson, the editor of the Madras Mail, was decorated with a C.I.E. merely in his capacity as Sheriff of Madras.

ADVOCATE, 29th February 1912.

The King-Emperor's return to England.

25. The London correspondent of the Advocate (Lucknow), writing in the issue of the 29th February 1912, gives a brief account of the King-Emperor's return to England, and refers to the thanksgiving service at St. Paul's in the following terms:—

"It was a fitting conclusion to a truly Imperial episode. Forms of worship may differ as between East and West, but this acknowledgement of the divine protection and the divine blessing, the first official act of Their Majesties after their return, was thoroughly in accord with Indian feeling. With us it is to be feared such state observances of religion are more or less formal but there are, I doubt, not millions of people in India who will recognize the real significance of this public thanksgiving upon the conclusion of such a fruitful undertaking as that upon which Their Majesties have been lately enga ged."

In the same letter referring to India's message to England, the correspondent says that, if it were in accordance with Parliamentary practice, both the House of Lords and the House of Commons would have surely adopted unanimously an address to the Princes and Peoples of India setting forth the appreciation felt by all classes in England of the remarkable expressions of goodwill and fellowship which were evinced at every point of the Royal progress. He points out that the tour of Their Imperial Majesties could never have been so happily consummated had it not been for the spontaneous manner in which the people of India demonstrated their attachment to the Throne and their friendly feelings towards their fellow subjects in England. He also makes the following observation :—"Those of us who know India never entertained the least doubt that the traditional loyalty and devotion to the person of the Sovereign which has always been a prominent characteristic in Indian life would completely submerge every isolated token of unrest and disaffection as soon as the beneficence of His Majesty's rule was plainly manifested to the people."

HINDUSTAN REVIEW, February 1912.

Indians in State service.

26. The Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for February 1912, contains an article by Mr. Jotey Lal Sarma entitled "Indians in State service" which strongly represents the rights of Indians to ministerial offices in India as being seriously overlooked. The writer commences by referring generally to the unequal treatment of Indians by the British Government. In this connection the following passage occurs :—

"The assault cases, the unwritten social laws, the avowed and unavowed political heresies, the fetish of prestige and the service rules, all illustrate silently yet eloquently, in a manner which cannot be misread or misunderstood, how the superiority of the Britisher and the inferiority of the Indian are preserved and maintained by the zealous, watchful, uncompromising Government."

The writer traces the measures taken by Government at various times since 1833 with the ostensible intention of conceding to Indians more opportunity for government service. He refers generally to the "reorganizations" as leaving the Indians worse off than before, and as providing reservations in favour of Anglo-Indians in preference to Indians. The Public Service Commission is described as having given a death blow to the prospects of the Indian servants of the Government. He quotes statistics regarding the employment of Indians on the various railways in India, refers to the Civil List for Bengal and to the Indian Educational Service. He endorses the case made out by the Hon'ble Mr. Subba Rao, and suggests that reforms are needed in order to check the monopolization of the higher posts by one class of people, to restrict the use of nomination, to ensure a better distribution of officers over the different provinces, the raising of the Provincial Service, and the provision for promotion from one service to another. He considers also that Rs. 50 is not enough for an Indian clerk.

Indians in the Army.

27. Referring to the statement in the Statesman (Calcutta) that, if the people of India come forward in sufficient numbers and show that they are in earnest, that they are prepared to take the profession of arms seriously, with all the duties and the sacrifices that it involves, the paper will not be slow to support their demand, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th February 1912, enquires why its contemporary should presume that Indians are not serious, seeing that they have been praying to be allowed their legitimate share in the defence of their country for the last quarter of a century. LEADER, 29th February 1912.

Referring to another remark in the Statesman that the editor did not think it wise to be perpetually seeking to thrust upon the people artificial reforms which they do not really want and which therefore they are not prepared to profit by, the editor of the Leader remarks that it is notorious that the Government of India is one of the most conservative in the world, and that almost every reform is unduly or even indefinitely delayed, as is shown particularly in the case of the admission of Indians into the higher ranks of the Army.

The rights and duties of the kings in olden times in India.

28. One Tirath Ram contributes an article to the Adeeb (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 9th February), in which he has endeavoured to prove that in ancient times the Hindu kings were not autocrats, but acted in accordance with the wishes of the people. The writer quotes several passages from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata in support of his contention, and expresses the opinion that if Indians work honestly they can improve their condition, live happily and prosper under the protection of His Majesty King George V, in the same way as their ancestors did in olden times. ADEEB, January 1912.

Democracy in India.

29. The Hindustan Review (Allahabad), for February 1912, has an article entitled "The spirit of democracy in India," by Mr. Kanailal M. Munshi, in which the writer shows how the spirit of democracy has developed in India, and refers to the visible progress from the India of the East India Company to the restless aspiring mother India of George V. He reminds his readers that in all progress there arrives a critical period when semi-consciousness is reached and when a decision must be made to take the right or the wrong path. He asserts that full living democracy, like heroic manhood, can only be attained by passing through a critical struggle which tests its strength and developes the necessary powers. He points out that one of the most serious drawbacks to Indian progress is the social system, that caste engenders a spirit of narrow contentment, cramps the instinct of progressive change, breeds discord and isolation and strikes at the root of any real co-operation. He states that any measures that have been taken to reform the system have only been half-hearted and therefore have failed. HINDUSTAN REVIEW, February 1912.

The writer asserts that the greatest force in the formation of national character should have been education. He condemns the educational system obtaining in India and describes it as merely "clerk-manufacturing." Regret is expressed that Indians have done nothing to remedy this defective system, that the average educated Indian regards political matters with careless indifference, and that he has become a soulless automaton owing to rigidity of custom and to servitude. He describes the lack of enthusiasm as the chief reason for the tardy progress of social reform, he urges the creation of real enthusiasm, and states that it is better to err energetically than to move snail-like in the safe path of correctness, and better to stumble in creating than to walk up quietly to destruction. He quotes Mr. Roosevelt's opinion about the harmless and inefficient citizen. He is described as having said as follows:—

"There is nothing to be done with that type of citizen of whom all that could be said is that he is harmless . . . There is little place in active life for the timid good man."

In concluding the article the writer draws attention to the tendency in India to forget that the personality of a leader should be looked upon in no other light than as the personification of the principle he represents, and that the excellence of a perfect citizen consists in his capacity for either ruling or being ruled equally well.

RAHBAR, 21st February 1912.

The rumoured release of Mr. Tilak.

30. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 26th February), has the following:—

"The sacrifice which Mr. Tilak, who is respected all over the world, has made for the regeneration of the Hindu community is perhaps unparallelled in India. Mr. Tilak is undergoing great hardship in imprisonment not for the sake of any personal gain, but for the good of his countrymen. There will be hardly any person who would not try his best to be relieved (of the hardship), but Mr. Tilak does not shrink in the least from doing his duty. On the occasion of the coronation (darbar) the news was received that Mr. Tilak would be released but it turned out to be false. Later on it was rumoured that he would be released immediately after the departure of the King-Emperor, but this also proved false. Now it is said that Mr. Tilak was not set free on the occasion of the coronation darbar because, when he was asked to promise that he would not associate himself in future with political matters, he refused to do so. If this be a fact, it should be considered as a fresh instance of sacrifice on the part of Mr. Tilak. It is true that those who not only say but also feel that the country is theirs think that it is their duty to protect it in spite of the thousands of difficulties which they may have to face. Others also should take a lesson from the example set by Mr. Tilak."

HITAISHI, 20th February 1912.

The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 20th February 1912 (received on the 27th February), refers to a contributed article which appeared in the Madras Mail saying that Mr. Tilak was not released because he refused to execute an agreement not to associate himself with political matters, and says that if the report is true undoubtedly Mr. Tilak acted in a very courageous way. The editor, however, urges the need for the leaders to be moderate, so that they may be respected both by Government and the people.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

Indians in British colonies.

31. Referring to the debate raised in the House of Lords by Lord Ampthill on the question of Indians in British colonies, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, remarks that the question cannot be settled until the Government of India is empowered to decide it.

LEADER, 25th February 1912.

The Tinnevelly murder case.

32. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, refers to the answer given by the Home Member in the Supreme Council to the Hon'ble Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu regarding the action taken on the letter that appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), about the Ashe murder case that the Government of India did not think it necessary to take any action in the matter, and says that all it wishes to say is to express the hope that Government will be equally liberal and indulgent in judging the Indian section of the press.

ADVOCATE, 25th February 1912.

The new province of Behar.

33. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 25th February 1912, contains a full account of the proceedings of the extraordinary session of the Behar Provincial Conference, in which both Hindus and Muhammadans are said to have taken an active part.

The editor particularly refers to the demands of the people of Behar for a separate High Court as well as for a University in their province, and observes that if Government desires to remove the congestion in the Calcutta University, it should give the new province its own teaching and examining University before one is established at Dacca.

Regarding the proposal for a separate High Court at Patna, the editor expresses the opinion that, when in view of the fact that the Eastern Bengal provinec was found Government would not disturb the High Court, it would better to have one strong High Court at Calcutta than to have two weak tribunals, one in Calcutta and the other at Patna. He states that there is nothing to prevent the people of Behar from continuing their connection with the existing High Court, and adds that the establishment of a new High Court at Patna would cause great hardship to the people of Orissa if they had to go all the way to Patna in order to obtain justice. In view of the unanimous demand for a High Court by the people of Behar, he would suggest that the opinion of those who are affected by the administrative changes should be consulted, seeing that there is a good deal of sentiment in these matters, as there was, for instance, in connection with the controversy about the amalgamation of the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Lucknow with the Allahabad High Court.

He supports the suggestion of the conference about the constitution of the Legislative Council of the new province, and remarks that if the Government of India accept it, it will lead to reforms in the Councils of the older provinces, which are supposed to possess a non-official majority but which has never proved itself effective.

Sir William Nicholson's committee.

34. Referring to the reply of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in the Supreme Legislative Council to the effect that the Military Committee, presided over by General Sir William Nicholson would deal with the three most important questions of policy, administration and finance, and that the Government of India did not think it necessary to appoint an Indian on the committee, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, remarks that the military policy, administration and finance are not merely technical matters and he asserts that lay minds too can and ought to be applied to these considerations. The editor says that the interest of the people of India in these problems is of a vital character, and expresses regret that the Government of Lord Hardinge should have taken a different view.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

District advisory councils.

35. Commenting on the debate in the Supreme Legislative Council on the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's resolution that steps should be taken to bring the district administration into closer touch with the people by the creation of district advisory councils, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th February 1912, quotes extracts from the writings and statements of the late Mr. R. C. Dutt and the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale to show that the establishment of district advisory councils is no new idea with Mr. Gokhale or with Indian publisists generally, and that the Home Member's statement about the relations subsisting between the district officer and the people was not convincing, seeing that important questions affecting the interests of the people are considered and decided behind their backs on the mere reports of officials. With regard to the Home Member's reference to municipal and district boards, the editor observes that they are constituted and designed to do a different kind of work, and are not fit bodies to advise the Collector on matters of general administration.

LEADER, 29th February 1912.

Sir T. W. Holderness on the peoples and problems of India.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th February 1912, publishes a brief review of Sir T. W. Holderness's book entitled Peoples and problems of India, in which the editor says that there is no other book in India which supplies the reader in the brief space of 251 pages with so much accurate information and so many suggestive and thoughtful reflections on the various problems engaging the public attention in this country. He says that he finds it difficult to accord the same high praise to those chapters of the book in which the author deals superficially with economic life, the government of British India, the Indian States, administrative problems and political and racial movements, remarking that Sir Thomas Holderness has failed to show the same profundity of thought or the same liberal spirit as in the earlier chapters. He expresses the opinion that in dealing with political questions the author has evidently taken without question Sir Valentine Chirol for his guide and authority, while Sir Theodore Morison is pressed into service in like capacity in dealing with economic questions. He says that so far as the first five chapters are concerned he can recommend them to his countrymen with confidence that a study of them will make them better reformers and better patriots.

LEADER, 29th February 1912.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

Free and compulsory education in the Jhind State.

37. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, expresses appreciation of the action of the Maharaja of Jhind in introducing free education in his State, and suggests that it should also be made compulsory. The editor expresses the hope that other ruling chiefs too will follow the lead of the Maharaja of Jhind.

LEADER, 1st March 1912.

The Maharaja of Durbhanga and the Leader (Allahabad).

38. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st March 1912, has the following :—

"Just a piece of amusing news. The Maharaja Bahadur of Durbhanga has been pleased to stop the Leader, as we did not extend unqualified support to his appointment as a member of the coming Behar Executive Council. We humbly pray to God that it may live yet."

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

TRISHUL, 22nd February 1912.

The Mahamandal and the Gurudham case.

39. To remove an erroneous impression which is said to be gaining ground in the mind of the Hindu public of Benares that the Bharat Dharam Mahamandal is wrongfully occupying the Gurudham house of Ghoshal Raja of Bhukailash, and that it is trying to dispossess the lawful owners of the said property from their rightful possession, the Trishul (Benares), of the 22nd February 1912, quotes extracts from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Benares to show that the property in question was leased by a registered document to the Mahamandal by three of the Kumars of Bhukailash Rajbari. The editor expresses the opinion that it would appear from the judgment that some one connected with the Mahamandal had exceeded the limits of legitimate zeal in creating a false impression in the mind of the Kumars, and that he had in this way brought the Mahamandal into disrepute over the transaction. He asks the leading members of the various institutions to discover the culprit, and to deal with him as his impudent conduct deserves.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan.

40. Referring to the acquittal of the Khan of Hoti Mardan, who was accused of abetting the abduction of two European girls, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, enquires who is to be held responsible for the inconvenience caused to the Khan, and expresses the hope that Government will institute an enquiry into the matter, and inflict exemplary punishment upon the party at fault.

(b)—Police.

LEADER, 1st March 1912.

Police reform.

41. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st March 1912, says that the Hon'ble Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu has rendered a public service by bringing up the subject of the police in the Viceroy's Council. The editor says that Mr. Basu's demands for the appointment of a committee of officials and non-officials to enquire into the police administration in India, and into the necessity for amending the law relating to confessions in criminal cases, were quite justified, seeing that the reforms introduced on the recommendations of Sir Andrew Fraser's commission have not resulted in so much improvement as to render further investigation unnecessary, and that the law about the admissibility of confessions is so defective as to render it possible, if not easy, for subordinate officers and policemen who are so inclined, to abuse the powers with which they are vested. He adds that the decisions of the Calcutta High Court alone constitute such a condemnation of police methods in Bengal that non-official testimony can add little to its force, and that the same can be said of the police in other provinces.

Referring to the work of the Criminal Investigation Department, which was said to be a comparatively new feature of police administration in India, the editor notes that the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale laid particular stress on the indiscriminate surveillance over Indian politicians. He expresses satisfaction at the Home Member's statement that the continuance of the Criminal Investigation Department on its present footing was under the consideration of the Government of India.

With regard to confessions he observes that the Law Member's remarks give ground for hope in that direction also.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

42. Referring to the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy for raising the taxable minimum from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,500, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, remarks that Mr. Dadabhoy's motion was bound to be rejected, seeing that the present was hardly the time for such a remission of taxation to be seriously contemplated. The editor further observes that with the loss of the opium revenue and with an insistent demand for increased expenditure on several branches of domestic administration, notably education and sanitation, the utmost that could be expected was that there would be no fresh taxation. He adds that no responsible Government could contemplate without serious misgiving the surrender of any revenue in present circumstances.

LEADER, 25th February and 29th February 1912.

The income tax.

Reverting to the subject again in the issue of the 29th February 1912 the editor remarks that he is unable to comprehend exactly what the Hon'ble member hoped to achieve by bringing forward his ill-timed resolution, and he takes exception to his unwarranted remark that there was a lurking suspicion in the minds of the Congressmen that the income tax was the only tax which the Europeans contributed to the State. He goes on to say that, even if this malicious intent could be fully brought home to the National Congress and the Muslim League, there could be no motive for these bodies not to have raised these questions at all in order to hit the European community, for whose interest Mr. Dadabhoy seems to have such a great solicitude. He asks whether Mr. Dadabhoy was not himself present at the last Congress as a delegate.

43. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 29th February 1912, refers to the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy in the Imperial Legislative Council regarding the raising of the taxable minimum from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,500, and expresses regret that the proposal should not have met with the approval of the Hon'ble members of the Council.

OUDH AKHBAR 29th February 1912.

The income tax.

The editor suggests that the resolution should again be brought up for consideration when a favourable opportunity presents itself, and he entertains the hope that Government will abolish the tax.

44. Commenting on the Finance Member's speech re-presenting Financial Statement for 1912-13 in the Imperial Legislative Council which he characterized as a "no change" budget, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd March 1912, remarks that the description is a perfectly apt one, and that, consistently with the promise made last year to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, an honest attempt seems to have been made to make retrenchments, and, though the result is by no means striking, it is apparent that expenditure has been kept well in hand, and that every temptation has been resisted to increase outlay where it was not unavoidable. Referring to the need for caution in forecast and economy in expenditure urged by the Finance Member in connection with the calamity of famine which threatened at one time to overwhelm the country, the editor says that an important lesson should be drawn from the situation that the condition of India's teeming millions will remain precarious so long as the bulk of them continue to rely upon the single industry of agriculture which is so dependent on the year's monsoon. He says that the salvation of the people lies in diversity of occupations and in the growth of man ufacturing industries, and that no effort can be more praiseworthy or patriotic or beneficial than constant, well thought out endeavours for industrial advancement and commercial expansion.

LEADER, 2nd March 1912.

The Imperial Budget.

After reviewing the main features of the financial year and the budget figures he concludes with the remark that Indians are indeed deeply beholden to Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson for his financial policy, and that it is a matter of pleasure for the people of these provinces to associate the name of Sir James Meston with the Finance Member.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

ANAND, 22nd February 1912.

Repairs of roads in Lucknow.

45. A correspondent, signing himself "A VYAPARI," contributes an article to the Anand (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), in which he complains that in Lucknow the road leading from Gol darwaza to Tarkari Mundi has been totally closed for repairs which causes great inconvenience to the public, and he suggests that ekkas and hand carts should be allowed to pass through the Victoria Park so long as the road is under repair. He also suggests that when the repairs of the road leading from Tarkari Mundi to Shah Mina is undertaken, only half the road should be repaired at a time, in order that ekkas and hand carts may pass along the other half, seeing that there is always very heavy traffic on this road which is on the way to the chauk from the railway station.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th February 1912.

Separate representation on local boards.

46. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), expresses regret that His Excellency the Viceroy has disapproved of the principle of communal representation, and observes that, in order to safeguard the interests of the Muhammadans, they should be allowed separate representation on local boards too.

The editor says that, when the partition of Bengal has been annulled in order to satisfy the persistent demand of the Bengalis, the refusal to grant to the Muhammadans their just claims owing to the opposition of the Hindus will lead the former to believe that Government did not attach any worth to their loyalty, and rewarded the seditionists who had caused material loss to the loyalists.

ITTIHAD, 24th February 1912.

The abolition of octroi duty.

47. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), takes exception to the proposal to abolish octroi duty, and to the imposition of house tax instead in the cities and towns of the Rohilkhand division. The editor says that house tax will cause great hardship to the poor, and he asks Government to give the proposal careful consideration.

ABHYUDAYA, 25th February 1912.

The forthcoming municipal election at Allahabad.

48. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, refers to the forthcoming municipal election at Allahabad, and asks the voters to take into consideration the past attitude of the candidate towards the public, the works of public utility which he may have so far done or which he may be expected to do in future, and the motive which has actuated him to seek for election, before deciding to give their votes to him.

LEADER, 1st March 1912.

The health camp at Allahabad.

49. A correspondent writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st March 1912 about the plague health camp, to complain that not a single hut erected by the Municipal Board for plague refugees has not been occupied. He says that the huts have been made without regard for the inclemencies of the weather, that the walls being so thin as to be almost transparent, that the accommodation in them is insufficient, that they have been too much crowded together, so much as to run great risk of fire, that no pipe water is available and no police guard has been provided. He enquires whether these reasons are not sufficient to deter people from seeking shelter in such a place, and with regard to the last reason he adds that when the place where the health camp has been erected is situated in an out-of-the-way quarter of the city, which is said to be a rallying point for thieves, a demand for a police guard is not an unreasonable one.

(e)—Education.

AL BASHIR, 27th February 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

50. Referring to the resolution passed by the Central Committee of the proposed Muslim University that small deputations should visit various places for the purpose of realizing subscriptions promised for the Muslim University, Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 27th February 1912, remarks that the Muhammadan community cannot make any progress so long as its leaders are untruthful and false to their promises.

The editor remarks that, when the body of the trustees of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College is so weak that it will not disclose the names of the trustees who have not yet fulfilled their promises to pay their subscriptions, it cannot be expected to conduct the business of the proposed university.

KAISER-I-HIND, 22nd February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

51. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 22nd February 1912, expresses appreciation of the reply given by His Excellency the Viceroy to the address of the deputation of the Bengali leaders, and observes that the establishment of a University at Dacca will prove beneficial to the interests of the Muhammadan community of Eastern Bengal and Assam.

The editor exhorts the leaders of the Muhammadan community to build a hostel at Dacca for Muhammadan students like those at the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 26th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

52. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 26th February 1912, referring to the article entitled "The proposed Dacca University" contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 14th February (vide Selections No. 8, paragraph 54), concedes that the progress of the Muhammadans depends upon education, but contends that Government has so far offered no special facilities for the improvement of their educational condition. The editor observes that the establishment of a University at Dacca and the appointment of a spceial educational officer will not improve the condition of Muhammadans alone. He says that the Muhammadans have no reason to be grateful to Government, seeing that no special privileges have been granted to them, and that gratefulness to Government without any sufficient cause will be looked down upon by Government, and will prove detrimental to the national existence of Muhammadans. In conclusion he says that, as no special concessions are proposed to be made for Muhammadans in the proposed Dacca University, the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal should raise a fund to found a large number of scholarships for Muhammadans if they desire to be benefited by the proposed University.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

53. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, refers to the resolution passed at a meeting held in the Dacca library to protest against the establishment of a University at Dacca, on the ground that it would be detrimental to the interests of education in the country. The editor characterizes the resolution as a piece of absurd logic, and remarks that the Hindus of Bengal are opposed to the Dacca University scheme, because they do not like that any facility, however small, should be afforded to Muhammadans to improve their educational condition.

ITTIHAD, 24th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

54. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), expresses approval of the action of Nawab Mushtaq Husain in withdrawing his resignation, and suggests that in future some member of the Shia community should be selected for the secretaryship of the college.

AL MUSHIR, 28th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

55. Al Mashir (Moradabad), of the 28th February 1912, expresses approval of Nawab Mushtaq Husain's action in withdrawing his resignation, and asks him to continue in his post as long as he is spared.

The editor, however, suggests the name of Nawab Ishaq Khan for the secretaryship of the college, and observes that he is the only person fitted for the post, seeing that he holds orthodox views, is experienced and will be trusted equally both by Government and his own community.

KAISER-I-HIND, 19th February 1912.

A survey of the gurukul.

56. Maulana Abdul Qadir, professor of the Madrasa Illahiat, Cawnpore, in continuation of his article entitled "A survey of the gurukul," again writes in the Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 19th February 1912 (received on the 24th February), in which he advises the authorities of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, to impart instruction to their students on the model of the Hindu College, Benares, and the Dayanand Anglo-Vedic College, Lahore, and asks the managers of the Nadwa and the Madrassa, Deoband, to introduce the gurukul system there. He observes that the gurukul is a sort of "magazine," where military stores are collected (in the shape of young Arya Samaj preachers) to be used against the Muhammadans in future, and he urges his co-religionists to take note of the fact and to adopt measures for their self-defence.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

57. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), remarks that people have now begun to appreciate the system of education imparted in the gurukul, which aims chiefly at keeping students at a safe distance from the temptation of cities, and affords them every opportunity to improve themselves morally, physically and intellectually, and to create healthy and intimate relations between teachers and students. The editor points out that the Viceroy also, in the course of his reply to the deputation that waited upon him in connection with the proposed Dacca University, supported the system of education which obtains in the gurukul. He observes that the two great defects in the system of education followed in schools and colleges in India is that the educational institutions are located in the heart of cities, and that there is a lack of sympathetic relations between teachers and students. He observes that it is the duty of Indians to co-operate with Government in removing the defects obtaining in the present educational system.

The system of education in the gurukul.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

58. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), expresses satisfaction at the success of the Gurukul Bhiksha Mandali in Calcutta in the matter of realising subscriptions for the institution, at the time when money for several other projects was also being collected in Calcutta. The editor expresses the hope that in future Calcutta, which is a rich city, will render greater monetary assistance to the gurukul.

The Gurukul Bhiksha Mandali in Calcutta.

ZAMINDAR-WA-KASHTKAR, January 1912.

59. The Zamindar-wa-Kashtkar (Bijnor) for January 1912 (received on the 22nd February) expresses appreciation of the action of the Madras Government which has allowed experiments made in giving education to the prisoners in the Cananore and Rajmandri jails, and says that it is likely to check crime by improving the morals of the prisoners.

The imparting of education to prisoners in Madras.

JAIN PRACHARAK, February 1912.

60. The Jain Prachárak (Deoband, Saharanpur), for February 1912 (received on the 4th February), remarks that the progress of a country and a nation depends upon education, and he exhorts the Jains to found a denominational college just as other Indian communities have done.

The Jains and education.

RAHBAR, 21st February 1912.

61. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 26th February), expresses regret that some of the Provincial Governments should have opposed the Elementary Education Bill, on the ground that the diffusion of education among the masses will prove injurious to the interests of Indians. The editor contends that education, for the spread of which a large sum of money is spent in England, cannot prove detrimental to Indians. He expresses regret that the Government of India should spend on education only one-fifth of the amount spent on the police and the army in India, and suggests that Indians should pay more attention to education, seeing that it effects a decrease in the amount of crime, and so necessitate a considerable reduction in the police force.

The need for education in India.

LEADER, 25th February 1912.

62. Referring to the Hon'ble Sir Harcourt Butler's reply regarding the number of Indians in the Indian Educational Service, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, says that the share of the Indian community in appointments of the Indian Educational Service throws a flood of fierce light on the much-talked-of liberality of the Government of India in employing Indians in the highly-paid offices of the public service. The editor observes that, while thoroughly alive to the need of English professors to instruct the youth of India in the literature and science of the West, he is not prepared to believe that there is such a phenomenal and lamentable lack of learning and ability among his countrymen as is represented by the figures cited by the Member for Education. The editor protests against the injustice to his countrymen in the Educational Departments of the several provinces, and expresses the hope that the conditions of employment will be revised before any agitation is set on foot in the matter.

The Indian Educational Service.

63. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer gives the names of Hindu and Muhammadan teachers in the patwari schools in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, and remarks that it is worth noting that in the United Provinces out of a total number of forty-three teachers in the patwari schools only six are Muhammadans and the rest are Hindus, which shows that, instead of half or one-third of the total appointments, only one-seventh has been given to Muhammadans. He says that this is evidently the work of some Hindu official of the department, and the Director of Land Records and Agriculture cannot be held responsible for it.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

Muhammadan teachers in the Patwari schools in the United Provinces.

64. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 27th February 1912, refers to the proposed abolition of the post of Inspector General of Forests in India, and dwells on the importance of the Forest Department and the need for a high officer who can make the department useful. The editor suggests that forest schools with museums containing all kinds of forest productions should be opened in the big cities of every province, and that Indians should be accorded opportunities to visit the schools and the museums in order that the people of these provinces may appreciate the utility of the department. He also suggests that facilities be given to the public for procuring good timber through the commercial department of the institution.

MASHRIQ, 27th February 1912.

A suggestion to open forest schools in the chief cities of every province.

65. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, refers to the Home Member's statement that it was in the interests of efficiency that professorships of medical colleges had been conferred exclusively on the members of the Indian Medical Service, and enquires whether the claim of superior ability and learning on behalf of the Indian Medical Service will be admitted without many qualifications by non-official medical practitioners or even by medical men in government employ not belonging to the charmed circle of the Indian Medical Service. The editor remarks that it is not also an accurate statement of fact.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

Professorships of medical colleges.

With regard to the proposal to create an independent civil medical service in India about which correspondence is said to be still going on, the editor observes that it exemplifies the delay and tardiness with which schemes for the more liberal treatment of the Indian community mature in India.

66. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, expresses gratitude to the Vice-Chancellor and the Syndicate of the Punjab University for their lenient decision regarding the Hindu College at Delhi. The editor expresses the hope that the time allowed by the university authorities to the new board of trustees of the institution to improve the science department of the college will be properly utilised, and he asks the Hindu community, for whose benefit the institution has been working, to accord its active support to the trustees, seeing that the whole of India is now directly interested in the fortunes of Delhi.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

The Delhi Hindu college.

67. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 29th February 1912, referring to the proceedings of the All-Bengal Hindu Educational Conference held at Calcutta, expresses the hope that the Hindus of the United Provinces also will follow the lead of the Bengali Hindus, and establish a similar conference in these provinces.

ABHYUDAYA, 29th February 1912.

The need for a Hindu Educational Conference in the United Provinces.

68. The Hindi Vyapari and Karigar (Benares), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 8th February), refers to the proposal of the German Government to legislate with a view to restricting the education of foreigners in Germany, and the opening of factories by them, and suggests that Indians should lose no time in going to Germany to obtain instruction in industries there before the restrictions are applied.

VYAPARI AND KARIGAR, 1st February 1912.

Industrial education in Germany.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

INDEPENDENT, 26th February 1912.

The Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal Dharamshala.

69. The Independent (Allahabad), of the 26th February 1912, has the following :—

"Some raises and other inhabitants of pargana Salempur Majhauli, in the district of Gorakhpur, have submitted a memorial to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces praying that the order of the District Magistrate, Gorakhpur, issued on the 17th November 1910, for closing the Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal Dharamshala be cancelled, and that the dharamshala be exempted from the Sarai Act.

We hope that our just Lieutenant Governor will be pleased to give due consideration to the memorial, and will exempt the dharamshala from the Sarai Act."

SHUBH CHINTAK, 28th February 1912.

The Lachhmi Chand Lalji Mal Dharamshala and the Sarai Act.

70. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, referring to the petition of Suraj Mal and Bajrang Lal, owners of a dharamshala in the village of Bharouli bazaar in the Gorakhpur district to the Lieutenant Governor of the United Provinces praying for the cancellation of the order of the District Magistrate and Collector of Gorakhpur, issued on the 17th November 1910, points out the difference between a dharamshala and a sarai, and expresses the opinion that dharamshalas should not be governed by the Sarai Act.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 18th February 1912.

The revival of Indian industries.

71. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 18th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), remarks that Indian industries cannot produce articles of as good quality as those manufactured in foreign countries, because of the lack of education and skill in Indians. The editor observes that Indians hesitate to start industries because they know that they will have to suffer a heavy loss by selling indigeneous articles at an equal price with foreign goods. He contends that England, Germany and other commercial countries have all resorted to the expedient of protection for the improvement of their indigeneous industries, and that eminent Englishmen have expressed the opinion that the Indian industries cannot be revived unless the import of foreign goods into India is considerably reduced. He therefore suggests that the principle of protection should be introduced in India also, that industrial education should be imparted to Indians, that the Indian public also cultivate a liking for indigeneous goods, and that arrangements should also be made for the extensive sale of Indian-made goods in foreign countries.

VYAPARI AND KARIGAR, 1st February 1912.

Provincial Industrial Conference.

72. The Hindi Vyapari and Karigar (Benares), of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 8th February), observes that industrial conferences can render considerable help to the public in the matter of starting new industries in the country. The editor says that, with the development of industries, social and political advancement can also be achieved, and he suggests that, in order to facilitate the improvement of the industrial condition of India, speeches should be delivered in the language spoken by the people, and that reports and magazines should also be published in vernacular instead of in English which is not understood by the masses. He proposes that the conference should start a newspaper in vernacular or render assistance to any existing industrial paper with money and literary contributions on industrial subjects, and that it should encourage the public to read it.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 18th February 1912.

The improvement of cattle.

73. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 18th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), expresses appreciation of the proposal of the Director of the Department of Agriculture in the Punjab to form committees to initiate measures for the improvement of the breed of cattle in India. The editor expresses the hope that similar committees will be formed also in the United Provinces to devise means for the improvement of cattle.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

Coolie Emigration Dépôt, Allahabad.

74. Debi Dat Dwivedi contributes another article to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, in which he complains that a boy named Mahabir Singh, resident of village Shah, in the Fatehpur district, has been enticed away by the recruiting agents of the Allahabad Coolie Emigration Dépôt. He suggests that an Indian deputy collector should be appointed to enquire from the recruits whether they have willingly agreed to go abroad, and that a doctor should be appointed to look after their health in the dépôt.

ABHYUDAYA, 25th February 1912.

A comment on the open letter to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya addressed by Kedar Nath Pathak.

75. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, discusses an open letter to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, that appeared in the Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 21st February 1912, and expresses regret that the proprietor of a paper cannot control the actions of its editors. The editor suggests that it was open to Kedar Nath Pathak to criticise the articles published in the Abhyudaya deprecating the work of the Nagri Pracharni Sabha in connection with the preparation of a lexicon on the Hindi language without making a complaint against the paper to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, and he points out that Shiva Prasad Gupta has nothing to do with the articles that have been appearing on the subject under criticism.

He says that a criticism of the style and policy of the Abhyudaya by Kedar Nath Pathak cannot be considered as a refutation of the opinions expressed on the paper.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

76. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, reproduces the article entitled "The Khwab-o-Khiyal" from the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 5th February (vide Selections No. 6 of 1912, paragraph 79), and takes exception to the book being prescribed for the examination of military and civil officers. The editor says that the unjust aspersions made by the author in his book on the loyalty of Muhammadans are calculated to produce very undesirable effect on the minds of young officers, and he asks Government to exclude it from the text-books prescribed for the examination of officers.

He also invites the attention of the Muslim League to the matter.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th February 1912.

The bestowal of titles.

77. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th February 1912, refers to the article by Mr. James Douglas on the sale of titles, that appeared in Pearson's Magazine (London) for December 1911, which suggested that in England there was a price fixed for every title. The editor expresses gratification that in India titles are not sold. He, however, takes exception to the present system of conferring the titles of Khan Bahadur, Khan Saheb, Rai Bahadur and Rai Saheb in large numbers on undeserving persons as being detrimental to the political advancement of India, and suggests that more discrimination should be exercised in the grant of such titles.

LEADER, 29th February 1912.

Mr. Pike's scheme.

78. A correspondent writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th February 1912, to enquire at what stage the discussion of Mr. Pike's scheme for the revision of the salaries of ministerial officers in the United Provinces has reached, and when it may be expected to be given effect to. He suggests that some non-official member of the Legislative Council should put a question on the subject at the next meeting of the Council.

LEADER, 1st March 1912.

Anti-vaccination and anti-vivisection movement.

79. The following is from the Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st March 1912 :—

"SIR,—I beg to draw your attention to the following extracts from "Fallacies and Failures of Serum-Therapy" by L. Sind-Af-Hageby, published by the Animal Defence and Anti-Vivisection Society, 170, Piccadilly, London, W :—

'The following account from 'Serums, Vaccines and Toxines' by Drs. W. C. Bosanquet and John W. H. Eyre (1909 edition), a recognized and up-to-date text-book on serum treatment, is highly instructive :—

'It cannot be denied that in a certain number of instances the injection of diphtherial anti-toxin has been followed by death directly attributable to the action of the serum. A melancholy instance was afforded by the sudden death of Professor Langerhan's infant son soon after a prophylactic dose of the serum was administered . . . A similar case of sudden death is recorded by Boone in a boy aged ten years . . . Most of the fatal cases recorded have been of the same sudden character.'

'Through some horrible blunder the Health department of St. Louis has been distributing the bacilli of lock-jaw in place of the diptheria anti-toxin. The result is that eleven diptheritic patients have died of lock-jaw after injection of the material furnished by the city, and eleven others are near death.

'The so-called Mulkowal disaster should not be forgotten in this connection. In 1902 nineteen natives who had been inoculated with Haffkine's prophylactic plague vaccine all developed tetanus, and died from it.

Beware of serums.

JUNAGAD. LABHSHANKAR LAXMIDAS."

V.—LEGISLATION.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 18th February 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

80. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 18th February 1912 (received on the 19th February), in the course of a leading article on social reform, remarks that many anti-Sanatan Dharam Samajes have recently sprung up, whose members visit various cities and deliver speeches against the Sanatan Dharam and that some of the members of these samajes preach in favour of the Special Marriage Bill at Benares. The editor expresses the hope that it will not be passed into law, on the ground that Government is aware of the attitude of the orthodox Hindus towards it. He enquires from the opponents of the Sanatan Dharam whether they have ever given their daughters in marriage to a man of low caste, and asks them not to oppose the Sanatan Dharam, seeing that their opposition can do no harm to it.

LEADER, 25th February 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

81. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, refers to the opinions expressed in favour of and against the Hon'ble Mr. Basu's Special Marriage Bill by the officials and public bodies in Eastern Bengal and Assam, quotes Sir Charles Bayley's opinion against the measure, and enquires whether the sense of political safety of these nervous officers will be satisfied if Government remain neutral, leaving full freedom to official and non-official members alike to vote according to their independent judgment.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

82. In a leading article entitled "The end of the Special Marriage Bill," the Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, takes exception to the way in which the Special Marriage Bill was rejected. The editor expresses agreement with the opinion of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale that the objections to the amendments that were proposed could only be examined in detail by a committee, and it was unfair that that chance should have been refused, which does not speak well either of the liberality of Government or of the fairmindedness of the non-official opponents. He observes that if Government felt that in view of the division of opinion in the community it could not lend countenance to the bill, it should have felt equally that it could not with any semblance of impartiality, either take sides actively against it. He expresses regret that Local Governments should have opposed the bill instead of counselling neutrality on the part of the Supreme Government.

He refers to the opinions expressed by some of the non-official members, and says that a keen sense of disappointment will be felt by friends of reform all over the country at the attitude of the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. Government's attitude towards social legislation must, he says, produce grave anxiety in the minds of all true friends of India, and its opposition to Mr. Basu's Bill is the latest instance.

He concludes with the remark that the position is very unsatisfactory if the fusion of castes and sects which is one of the greatest needs of India has to remain unaccomplished because Government would not lend a helping hand to the reformers.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th February 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

83. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 26th February), discusses the need for making primary education free and compulsory in India, and, referring to the opposition of the provincial governments to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, remarks that the British Government, which attaches so much importance to public opinion, should pass the Elementary Education Bill into law, and that it should not pay any regard to the opposition of the provincial governments.

ABHYUDAYA, 25th February 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

84. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, expresses surprise at the opposition of the local governments to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill which has been approved and supported by the Indian community.

The editor says that the principle of free and compulsory education should be accepted by Government, and that it should allow experiments to be made in one or two places.

He discusses the principal objections of different Governments, and remarks that it is quite unjustifiable to urge that the masses do not want the bill, seeing that no friend of India has opposed the bill. He states that the educated community, which is the representative of the people, has already expressed its views on the subject, and that, if Government does not acknowledge the educated community to represent the masses, it is all the more necessary on the face of it to educate the masses in order to enable them to choose their own representatives, and thereby save trouble and money which Government has to incur in finding out representatives for them.

He expresses the opinion that it is not a wise policy to care more for the dissatisfaction of the uneducated than for that of the educated.

He remarks that Government did not think of the interference with the liberty of the people when passing the Press Act or the Seditious Meetings Act which were opposed from all quarters, and he expresses surprise that this aspect should be considered in the case of this bill which admits of no such apprehension.

The editor says that if compulsory education can be adopted by other countries of the world without any disturbance it would probably suit the Indians who are naturally a quiet and orderly people.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

The need for restricting the activities of astologers.

85. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, remarks that the reasons which induced the passing of the Indian Press Act and the Seditious Meetings Act also necessitate the passing of a law restraining the liberty of astrologers who, by making false prophesies, encourage atheism and excite hatred against God. The editor observes that if a law be passed requiring astrologers to deposit a security of five thousand rupees before making prophesies, the interests of capable astrologers will not be injured, in the same way as the provisions of the Indian Press Act are said to have caused no harm to honest journalism.

In conclusion he asks the editors of the Hindi newspapers to realise their sense of responsibility in the matter, and to abstain from misleading the public by publishing false prophesies in their papers.

VI.—Railway.

ABHYUDAYA, 22nd February 1912.

A suggestion for the construction of three new railway lines in India.

86. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 22nd February 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer urges the need for the construction of three new railway lines in India. He suggests that the construction of the Bharatpur-Kosi Railway, the Agra-Allahabad Railway and the Muttra-Alwar Railway will be of much use to the people.

LEADER, 25th February 1912.

Enquiry into railway matters.

87. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, complains of the manner in which the Hon'ble Mr. Clarke disposed of Mr. Gokhale's objections to Lord Inchcape's enquiry into railway matters. The editor enquires whether Mr. Clarke correctly represented the feelings of all the high officers associated with the Government of India, and suggests that due regard was not paid to its dignity by the Secretary of State in entrusting the mission to Lord Inchcape in the irregular manner described by Mr. Gokhale.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

The Bengal and North-Western Railway.

88. With regard to the interpellation in the Supreme Council about the working of the Bengal and North-Western Railway, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, says :—

"It is notorious that the public are utterly dissatisfied with the management of the Bengal and North-Western Railway, though possibly no formal representations have been addressed to the Government or the Railway Board. The company has been earning dividends of 7⅛ per cent. and still grudges the necessary outlay on passengers' conveniences. That the Government have rendered no financial assistance to the company will not, we hope, be considered an argument against this intervention on behalf the people."

ADVOCATE, 29th February 1912.

The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

89. Referring to the rumour about the transfer of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway to some other railway company, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 29th February 1912, enquires whether there is any truth in the statement that the proposal of the transfer is on the ground that the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway is not profitable, that its management is costly and that it does not pay its way. The editor expresses surprise that this should be the case, with a system of railway which has all the important places of Hindu pilgrimage in Upper India on its line. He also refers to the allegation that the Bengal and North-Western Railway is depriving the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway of its profits, and in this connection observes that, if this be true that the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway administration should be improved rather than that its management should be handed over to some system of railway, without regard to the effect of the change on the people of the United Provinces.

The editor points out that it has of course been a long-standing complaint that in making the alignment of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway line near the largest towns of these provinces little regard was paid to the convenience of the trade of the towns, which may account for its not being profitable, and he instances the location of Lucknow, Shahjahanpur and Bareilly Stations which are a long way off from the towns, and remarks that the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway line can be made more paying if it shows greater regard for the needs and requirements of the travelling public. He suggests that men with commercial training should be engaged in the management to remedy the defects, and expresses the hope that the Railway Board will not decide the question of transfer without showing regard to the interests of those who are likely to be affected by it.

VII.—Post Office.

POSTAL MAGAZINE, December 1911.

Holidays for the Postal Department.

90. One Sheikh Zamir-ud-din Ahmad. of Bulandshahr, contributes a peom to the Postal Magazine (Agra), for December 1911 (received on the 25th January), in which he appeals to His Majesty the King-Emperor praying for a few more holidays to the employés of the Postal Department saying that they are much over-worked and very poorly paid.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

ABHYUDAYA. 25th February 1912.

The Holi festival.

91. Pandit Suraj Prasad Bajpai contributes an article to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th February 1912, on the Holi festival, in which he urges the Hindus to abstain from the use of intoxicants, and to contribute the sum which they would have spent on the occasion to the proposed Hindu University Fund.

ABHYUDAYA, 29th February 1912.

The Holi festival.

92. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 29th February 1912, expresses the hope that the educated community will move Government in time to put a stop to the sale of intoxicants in liquor shops on the day of the Holi festival, and the three preceding days. The editor asks Government to accede to the request of the public in this connection.

JAIN GAZETTE, 29th December 1911.

The protection of cows.

93. Babu Lal Jain, joint secretary of the Jain Dharam Sabha, Firozpur (Punjab), contributes an article to the Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 29th December 1911 (received on the 26th February 1912), in which he emphasizes the usefulness of cows. He assests that if cows be protected there will be no scarcity of milk and ghi, and he urges Hindus generally and Jains in particular to take a vow not to sell cows to butchers, and says that they should regard them as mothers.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 28th February 1912.

The protection of cows.

94. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 28th February 1912, publishes a poem entitled "An appeal by mother India" in which mother India is represented as bewailing her lot before the King-Emperor, and urging the need for the prohibition of the slaughter of cows, on the ground that it will materially improve her condition.

RAHBAR, 21st February 1912.

A slaughter house at Ajodhya.

95. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 26th February), remarks that the endeavours made by Muhammadans for the construction of a slaughter house at Ajodhya in the Fyzabad district are calculated to wound the religious susceptibilities of the Hindus, who regard Ajodhya as a sacred place of pilgrimage. The editor expresses regret that the Muhammadans, not being content with the fact that beef unlike pork is offered for sale publicly, desire that Government should also order the sale of beef in sacred places like Ajodhya. He says that the sale of beef at Ajodhya, which is the birth place of Ram Chandra, is as objectionable as that of pork in Mecca or Medina. He asks the Hindu press to take steps in the matter.

TRISHUL, 22nd February 1912.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

96. The Trishul (Benares), of the 22nd February 1912, makes a few suggestions for the better management of the Mahamandal on the basis of a note prepared by a member of the institution with which the editor expresses his full agreement. He points out that the defect of the present arrangement is that full liberty of action is denied to Swami Gyananandji, who is said to be not only the guiding spirit but probably the only working hand in the Mahamandal, and that his exertions are somewhat hampered in consequence. On the other hand, the Swamiji's inexperience of the modern constitutional ways and his interference in matters where his knowledge has no practical value is considered another drawback to the efficient working of the society.

The editor therefore suggests that the functions of the Mahamandal should be divided into education and propaganda sections, that the former branch be left entirely in charge of a sanyasi, whose spiritual training is likely to be most suited to that work, suit it best, and for the successful working of the latter the general secretary should be prevailed upon to always stay at the headquarters of the Mahamandal and to take an active interest in the work. The president should be kept intimately connected with both these sections, acting as the adviser in the first and as a constitutional controller in the second.

SHUBH CHINTAK 28th February 1912.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

97. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret that the organs of the Bharat Dharam Mahamandal should have been stopped by the order of the Maharaja of Durbhanga, and asks the members of the Mahamandal either to have the order of the Maharaja rescinded, or to resign, on the ground that the success of the Mahamandal depends on the publication of journals setting forth its aims and objects. The editor says that the little life remaining in this religious association can only be saved by this means, and he appeals to the Maharaja to withdraw his order.

In conclusion he says that in case the report that the Raja of Tahirpur has expressed his willingness to manage the magazine and to meet the deficit be true, the president of the Mahamandal should delegate his authority to the Raja.

AL MUSHIR, 28th February 1912,

The future of Islam.

98. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 28th February 1912, takes exception to the article entitled "The future of Islam," which appeared in the Pioneer (Allahabad), of the 3rd February, and characterizes it as the outcome of a prejudiced and biassed mind. The editor remarks that the article in the Pioneer, which appears to have been written with the intention of creating differences amongst the Muhammadans, is very harmful and he therefore asks his co-religionists to refrain from reading such articles, as they can do no good.

OUDH AKHBAR, 29th February 1912.

Islam in Japan.

99. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 29th February 1912, refers to the report published in Muhammadan papers about the conversion of some Japanese to Islam, and observes that Japan does not care much for any religion, and that a few converts to Muhammadanism in other countries will not help the Muhammadans in their present unsatisfactory and backward condition.

The editor says that the progress of any community is not judged by the increase in its numbers but by the improvements made by its members in acquiring knowledge of science and art, and in gaining wealth.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

Commemoration of the death of Pandit Lekh Ram.

100. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), publishes a eulogy on the late Pandit Lekh Ram, who is described as the faithful disciple of Swami Dayanand, and suggests that the tenth day of Phalgun (February), the date on which he died, should be commemorated every year by the Arya Samajists by reading accounts of his pious and unselfish life, and that they should learn a lesson from it.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

The translation of the Veda Mantras.

101. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), remarks that the translations of the Veda Mantras by Swami Dayanand show that the Vedas are the source of all knowledge. The editor expresses regret that Swami Dayanand did not live long to translate all the Veda Mantras, and urges that it is absolutely necessary that the Arya Samajists should translate the remaining Veda Mantras, and make known to the world the true and spiritual significance of them all.

ANAND, 22nd February 1912.

The depressed classes in Almora.

102. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), expresses regret that the depressed classes were not invited to the local darbar held at Almora on the occasion of His Majesty's coronation darbar at Delhi. Referring to the threat held out by the depressed classes of Almora that in case the high caste Hindus will not treat them fairly they will accept Christianity, the editor asks the Arya Samajists to reclaim them by means of purificatory rites, and to accord better treatment to them.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

Dedication of minor girls.

103. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, refers to the Home Member's statement that the question of legislation to deal with the dedication of minor girls for being brought up in disreputable ways was the subject of correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State, and that accordingly no statement could be made in the present stage, and remarks that the matter is a social one in which the community's interest is deep and vital, and it would surely not be inconvenient if Government decided to publish for general information the proposals under discussion.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 2nd March 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 10 OF 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 9th March 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
I.—POLITICS.
(a)—Foreign:
1.	Religion in Japan	245
2.	The revolution in China	245
3.	The situation in Persia	245
4.	The situation in Persia	245
5.	The situation in Persia and Tripoli ...	245
6.	The Italian-Turkish war	245
7.	The Italian-Turkish war	245
8.	The Italian-Turkish war	246
9.	The Italian-Turkish war	246
10.	The Italian-Turkish war	247
11.	The Italian-Turkish war	247
(b)—Home:
12.	Advice to the Kshattriyas	247
13.	Religion and politics	247
14.	The King's love for his subjects ...	247
15.	The degenerate state of India ...	247
16.	The degenerate state of India ...	247
17.	The degenerate state of India ...	248
18.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	248
19.	His Excellency the Viceroy and the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh	248
20.	His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to Lucknow	248
21.	The future policy of Indian Muhammadans	248
22.	Pan-Islamism	249
23.	The All-India Muslim League ...	249
24.	The Indian National Congress ...	249
25.	The problem of indentured labour ...	249
26.	Indians in the Transvaal	250
27.	Ulmas in legislative councils ...	250
28.	Ulmas in legislative councils ...	250
29.	The future representative of the Muhammadans of Oudh in the Provincial Legislative Council	251
30.	A suggestion to increase the number of members of the district and municipal boards and the Legislative Council ...	251
31.	The administrative changes in India ...	251
32.	The administrative changes in India ...	251
33.	The coronation darbar	251
34.	The coronation darbar	251
35.	The coronation darbar	251
36.	The State entry into Delhi	252
37.	The Royal boons	252
38.	The Royal boons	252
39.	The King-Emperor's return to England	252
II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.
	Nil.
III.—NATIVE STATES.
40.	Muhammadans in the Udaipur State ...	252
IV.—ADMINISTRATION.
(a)—Judicial and Revenue:
41.	The panchayat system	252
42.	The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan ...	253
43.	The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan ...	253
(b)—Police:
44.	Police reform	253
(c)—Finance and Taxation:
45.	The United Provinces share of land revenue	253
46.	The United Provinces share of land revenue	253
47.	The financing of new Delhi	254
48.	Assessment of income tax	254
(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:
49.	The Bijnor Municipality	254
50.	Prostitutes in Chauk and Nazirabad, Lucknow	254
51.	Bad condition of the streets of Lucknow	254
52.	Muhammadan representation on local bodies	255
53.	The Cawnpore Municipality... ...	255
54.	The chairmanship of the Cawnpore Municipality	255

The editor says that the progress of any community is not judged by the increase in its numbers but by the improvements made by its members in acquiring knowledge of science and art, and in gaining wealth.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

Commemoration of the death of Pandit Lekh Ram.

100. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), publishes a eulogy on the late Pandit Lekh Ram, who is described as the faithful disciple of Swami Dayanand, and suggests that the tenth day of Phalgun (February), the date on which he died, should be commemorated every year by the Arya Samajists by reading accounts of his pious and unselfish life, and that they should learn a lesson from it.

SADDHARMA PRACHARAK, 21st February 1912.

The translation of the Veda Mantras.

101. The Saddharma Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), remarks that the translations of the Veda Mantras by Swami Dayanand show that the Vedas are the source of all knowledge. The editor expresses regret that Swami Dayanand did not live long to translate all the Veda Mantras, and urges that it is absolutely necessary that the Arya Samajists should translate the remaining Veda Mantras, and make known to the world the true and spiritual significance of them all.

ANAND, 22nd February 1912.

The depressed classes in Almora.

102. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 22nd February 1912 (received on the 23rd February), expresses regret that the depressed classes were not invited to the local darbar held at Almora on the occasion of His Majesty's coronation darbar at Delhi. Referring to the threat held out by the depressed classes of Almora that in case the high caste Hindus will not treat them fairly they will accept Christianity, the editor asks the Arya Samajists to reclaim them by means of purificatory rites, and to accord better treatment to them.

LEADER, 28th February 1912.

Dedication of minor girls.

103. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th February 1912, refers to the Home Member's statement that the question of legislation to deal with the dedication of minor girls for being brought up in disreputable ways was the subject of correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State, and that accordingly no statement could be made in the present stage, and remarks that the matter is a social one in which the community's interest is deep and vital, and it would surely not be inconvenient if Government decided to publish for general information the proposals under discussion.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 2nd March 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 10 OF 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 9th March 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. Religion in Japan 245
2. The revolution in China 245
3. The situation in Persia 245
4. The situation in Persia 245
5. The situation in Persia and Tripoli ... 245
6. The Italian-Turkish war 245
7. The Italian-Turkish war 245
8. The Italian-Turkish war 246
9. The Italian-Turkish war 246
10. The Italian-Turkish war 247
11. The Italian-Turkish war 247

(b)—Home:

12. Advice to the Kshattriyas 247
13. Religion and politics 247
14. The King's love for his subjects ... 247
15. The degenerate state of India ... 247
16. The degenerate state of India ... 247
17. The degenerate state of India ... 248
18. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 248
19. His Excellency the Viceroy and the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh 248
20. His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to Lucknow 248
21. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans 248
22. Pan-Islamism 249
23. The All-India Muslim League ... 249
24. The Indian National Congress ... 249
25. The problem of indentured labour ... 249
26. Indians in the Transvaal 250
27. Ulmas in legislative councils ... 250
28. Ulmas in legislative councils ... 250
29. The future representative of the Muhammadans of Oudh in the Provincial Legislative Council 251
30. A suggestion to increase the number of members of the district and municipal boards and the Legislative Council ... 251

Page.

31. The administrative changes in India ... 251
32. The administrative changes in India ... 251
33. The coronation darbar 251
34. The coronation darbar 251
35. The coronation darbar 251
36. The State entry into Delhi 252
37. The Royal boons 252
38. The Royal boons 252
39. The King-Emperor's return to England 252

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

40. Muhammadans in the Udaipur State ... 252

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

41. The panchayat system 252
42. The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan ... 253
43. The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan ... 253

(b)—Police:

44. Police reform 253

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

45. The United Provinces share of land revenue 253
46. The United Provinces share of land revenue 253
47. The financing of new Delhi 254
48. Assessment of income tax 254

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

49. The Bijnor Municipality 254
50. Prostitutes in Chauk and Nazirabad, Lucknow 254
51. Bad condition of the streets of Lucknow 254
52. Muhammadan representation on local bodies 255
53. The Cawnpore Municipality... ... 255
54. The chairmanship of the Cawnpore Municipality 255

Page.

(e)—Education:

55. The Indian Educational Service ... 255
56. Popular education 255
57. Religious instruction in India ... 256
58. The need for education 256
59. Technical and industrial education ... 256
60. Female education... 257
61. Female education... 257
62. Female education... 257
63. Female education... 257
64. Female education... 257
65. The proposed Dacca University ... 257
66. The proposed Dacca University ... 258
67. The proposed Muslim University ... 258
68. Muhammadans and education ... 258
69. The educational condition of the Muhammadans in the United Provinces... 258
70. The proposed Hindu University ... 259
71. The school-leaving certificate examination 259
72. Need for the establishment of denominational boarding-houses 259
73. The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ... 259

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

74. The United Provinces press ... 259
75. The Musáfir (Agra) 259
76. The Co-operative Credit Societies ... 260
77. The begar system 260

Page.

78. The paucity of agricultural labour in India... 260
79. Cotton growing in India 260
80. The Khwab-o-Khiyal 261
81. The Khwab-o-Khiyal 261
82. The new coinage 261
83. The new coinage 261

V.—LEGISLATION.

84. Need for amending the law relating to debts... 261

VI.—RAILWAY.

85. Indian railways and public interests ... 261

VII.—POST OFFICE.

86. A complaint against the Postal Department... 262

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

87. Hinduism and the Brahman... ... 262
88. Women in the West 263
89. Appeal to followers of the Sanatan Dharm 263
90. The ideals of the Arya Samaj ... 263
91. The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ... 263
92. The use of intoxicants among the Kshattriyas 263
93. The Holi 263

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st March 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra ...	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 „
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 „
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 „
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 „
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 „
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 „
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 „
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 „
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Kalam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 „
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 „
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 „
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 „
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 „
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 „
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 „
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 „
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 „
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	800 „
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 „
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued):

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ásam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	Arabic-Urdu.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	Hindi.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 35 ...	300 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27... ...	5,000 ,,
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	80 ,,
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 ,,
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 ,,
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 40 ...	1,850 ,,
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; Brahman.	2,200 ,,
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	1,000 ,,
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	1,200 ,,
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla; 45	500 ,,
133	Swadesh Bándhavá ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 44	650 ,,
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman.
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 40	550 ,,
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 43.	1,000 ,,
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 ,,
142	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 48 ...	775 ,,
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 40 ...	300 ,,
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 57 ...	1,500 ,,
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 34	1,500 ,,
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám; Khatri; 55 ...	3,000 ,,
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Byzak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. One Lala Narayan Sinha contributes an article to the Indu (Benares), for October 1911 (received on the 17th January 1912), in which he discusses Buddhism and Shintoism, the religions followed in Japan. INDU, October 1911.

Religion in Japan.

He remarks that the followers of these religions are divided into different parties, but that their relations are friendly unlike the different sects in India, which are constantly at variance with one another.

2. The Nava Jiwan (Benares), for the month of November 1911 (received on the 4th January 1912), discusses the revolution in China and, referring to the deposition of the Emperor of the Manchu dynasty, observes that it is very difficult in the twentieth century to govern a country against the wishes of the people. NAVA JIWAN, November 1911.

The revolution in China.

3. The Lucknow Gazette of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th March), discusses the conditions made by the British and Russian Governments for the grant of a loan to Persia, and expresses regret at the incapacity of the Muhammadans and Islamic kingdoms to manage their own affairs. LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 1st March 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor expresses the hope that the Persian ulmas and mujtahids will devise some means of raising a loan in their own country and so avoid borrowing from foreign powers, which impose very strict conditions on the Persian Government.

4. One Saiyid Munir Husain of Delhi contributes an article to the Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th March), in which Persia is represented as lamenting the Russian aggression in the following terms :— ITTIHAD, 1st March 1912.

The situation in Persia.

"Respected Foreign Minister! Even as your feet are on my chest, in the same way my respect should be in your eyes, and you should always think of your promises to help me. Otherwise you must remember that a conflagration of war will break out in all the parts of the world which will affect alike the snow-covered hills and the plains. Many lives will be sacrificed and blood will flow like rain, and the world, with all in it, will accompany me to a premature end."

5. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th March 1912, denounces the Russian and Italian aggression in Persia and Tripoli respectively, and ascribes it to the weakness and lack of self-respect amongst the Muhammadans. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th March 1912.

The situation in Persia and Tripoli.

The editor says that Muhammadans talk a great deal but do very little practical work. He urges them to vigorously boycott Italian goods, to give up their lethargy, to form themselves into a united community and to acquire self-respect, as otherwise they will be put to even greater shame and disgrace.

6. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), reproduces Nawab Mushtaq Husain's letter about the communication in the Times threatening outrages on the holy places of Islam, that appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 21st February 1912 (vide Selections No. 8, paragraph 9) and comments on it, congratulating the writer for having so boldly voiced public opinion on the subject. ZUL QARNAIN, 28th February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

7. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th March 1912, refers to the rumour that the Italians intend to throw bombs on the mausoleum of the prophet Muhammad and on the kaaba from their aeroplanes if Turkey does not make peace with Italy, and discusses it in the following terms :— AL MUSHIR, 4th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

"However docile and contented the Muhammadans may be, however weak and resourceless and however wanting in self-respect they may be, Italy and her sympathizers must remember that, in case the Italians even look with disrespect at the mausoleum of the prophet or the kaaba, it will result in completely removing the feeling of confidence and unity between Islam and Christianity which they were beginning to acquire after a long struggle, and make every Muhammadan individual an enemy not only of Italy but of the entire Christian world, with the result that the desire of the Eastern statesmen to see unity between Christians and Muhammadans will not be realised before the day of judgment."

The editor remarks that any defilement or injury done by the Italians to the holy places of the Muhammadans will cause no injury to Islam, but that it will so widen the gulf between Christianity and Islam, as to put it beyond the power of Europe to bridge it over.

SAHIFA, 5th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

8. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th March 1912, reproduces Nawab Mushtaq Husain's letter that appeared in the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 21st February 1912 (vide Selections No. 8, paragraph 9), about the rumoured intention of the Italians to demolish the kaaba and the mausoleum of the prophet Muhammad by throwing bombs from their aeroplanes, and remarks that such threats on the part of Italy will have no effect on the minds of the Muhammadans.

The editor asks the Italians to remember that if they commit any desecration of the kaaba or the mausoleum of the prophet a conflagration of war will break out throughout the world which no European nor Christian Power will be able to stop.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

9. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th March 1912, says that a number of European papers have expressed the view that the European Powers were to a certain extent in league with Italy in regard to her attack on Tripoli, and that they had assured her before the ultimatum was presented to Turkey that they would not intervene in the war against her interests.

The editor says that in this connection the names of Great Britain and of France have been especially mentioned, but that it is difficult to ascertain how far these two Powers actually supported the intention of Italy.

He says that, judging from the unsatisfactory reply given by Sir Edward Grey in the House of Commons and from the reports in the French newspapers, it is evident that England and France knew the intentions of Italy before any other Power in the world.

He expresses the hope that it may turn out to be wrong, but that it is suspecious that the French newspapers announced that Italy had promised to give France a portion of her conquered territories.

He strongly condemns the policy of Sir Edward Grey in connection with the Italian-Turkish war and says that his statements are characterized by want of truth, that virtue for which the British nation is famous.

He refers to the services rendered by Lieutenant Montague to the Turks in Tripoli, and remarks that Englishmen of the type of Mr. Montague demonstrate the fact that though they may be not pro-Muhammadans they love truth and justice.

He reproduces the translation of an article which a correspondent from the Turkish camp has sent to the Express (London) and expresses disappointment at the disregard of the teaching of Christ, at the backwardness of civilization in Europe, displayed in the behaviour of the Italians and at the absence of all sense of justice on the part of the European Powers.

The editor concludes with the remark that it is difficult to predict as to when the war will come to an end, but that any interference on the part of the European Powers at the present moment is contrary to their declaration of neutrality.

In the same issue the paper publishes a contributed article, in which the writer expresses regret at the small amount of subscription raised in India for the relief of the widows and orphans of the Turkish soldiers killed and wounded in the Italian-Turkish war, and exhorts his co-religionists to subscribe liberally towards the Turkish relief fund.

He suggests that in every town and village committees should be formed to raise subscriptions for the fund, and that every zamindar of a temporarily settled district should be asked to pay one per cent. of his income monthly, while those holding land in the districts where the settlement is permanent should pay three per cent. of their income every month.

10. One Karamat-ullah Shaida of Utrauli contributes an article to the Agra Akhbar of the 7th March 1912, in which he condemns the rumoured intention of the Italians to demolish the kaaba and the mausoleum of the prophet Muhammad, and characterizes it as an insult directed against the Muhammadans throughout the world. AGRA AKHBAR, 7th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The writer says that any such outrage on the part of the Italians would have very disastrous results for them.

11. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 8th March 1912, expresses regret at the deplorable condition of the Islamic kingdoms in different parts of the world, and says that Turkey has to face difficulties from every side. OUDH AKHBAR, 8th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor refers to the comparatively recent annexation of Herzegovina and Bosnia by Austria as having emboldened Italy to commit aggression in Tripoli and to prosecute a blockade of the Arabian ports on the Red Sea.

He refers to the recent bombardment of Beyreut by the Italians, and remarks that if a similar act had been committed by any Asiatic Power, the European Powers would have raised their voices against it, while they now look on complacently at a breach of international laws by Italy.

(b)—Home.

12. The Vaidic Sarvaswa (Allahabad), for Paus (December 1911) (received on the 2nd March 1912), after enumerating the qualities which should appertain to a true Kshattriya, deplores that the present generation of the Kshattriya community have overlooked the need for preserving brotherly relations within their community which, the writer says, would be a help to the Government of the country as well as to themselves. He asks the Kshattriyas to comport themselves in accordance with the glorious traditions of their community and though not independent, to try to encourage feelings of brotherhood under the protection of the present Government, which is just and benign, and which has given them every opportunity to preserve their good name, and regain the ascendancy over other communities which they used to enjoy. VAIDIC SARVASWA, Paus (December 1911).

Advice to the Kshattriyas.

13. The Sanatan Dharm Pataka (Moradabad), for January 1912 (received on the 5th March), contains a contributed article entitled "Santvarta" (discourse of sages) in which the writer expresses regret at the religious controversies carried on by sectarian newspapers. He discusses the difference between religion and politics, and remarks that though the same ideals may be held in view both in religion and in politics, the ways to achieve them are different, and he asks people to refrain from unfriendly controversies, and to respect the religion of others. SANATAN DHARM PATAKA, January 1912.

Religion and politics.

He concludes the article with the remark that it cannot be expected that others will be impressed with the sanctity of their religion or with the greatness of their country unless they create around them an atmosphere of love and sympathy.

14. The Swadesh Bandhava (Agra), for January 1912 (received on the 1st February), has an article entitled "The King's love for his subjects," in which the writer asks Hindus, Muhammadans and Christians, to try to maintain the sympathy and affection which united them on the occasion of paying homage to Their Imperial Majesties, and he expresses the hope that the King's love for his subjects will always remain unshaken, and that Indians will ever maintain the devotion and loyalty to the King which they exhibited on the occasion of Their Majesties' visit to India. SWADESH BANDHAVA, January 1912.

The King's love for his subjects.

15. One Mahesh Prasad Shastri, head pandit of the Hardoi High school, contributes a poem to the Brahman Sarvaswa (Etawah), for January 1912 (received on the 21st February), in which he deplores the degenerate condition of India, and prays to God to relieve the country from its present difficulties. BRAHMAN SARVASWA, January 1912.

The degenerate state of India.

16. One Onkar Nath contributes an article entitled "Perseverance" to the Nava Jiwan for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), in which he inculcates the need for NAVA JIWAN, January 1912.

The degenerate state of India.

perseverance, and exhorts his fellow-countrymen to work earnestly and willingly, face any hardship that may be necessary in order to effect the regeneration of the motherland, and not to be content till they have achieved their object.

TRISHUL, 29th February 1912.

The degenerate state of India.

17. In a leading article entitled "Self-improvement," the editor of the Trishul (Benares), in the issue of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 5th March), ascribes the present degenerate condition of India to the absence of education among the people and to the indifference of the rich towards the need for it. He observes that the ignorance of the poor and the imposition of heavy taxes on them are the root causes of poverty, which has enfeebled the Indians both mentally and physically. He asks the well-to-do classes to interest themselves in spreading education on technical and agricultural subjects among the poor, and by these means effect the revival of the decadent industries of India. He advises them to bestir themselves and take up the matter earnestly instead of depending upon Government, and he tells them that the revival of the dying industries of India will bring back her lost wealth.

In conclusion the editor urges the leaders of the denominational universities not to restrict their sphere of usefulness to a few schools and colleges only, but to make their influence widely felt by establishing new primary schools as well as colleges. He says that all efforts for the regeneration of a country must commence by improving the condition of the poor.

SAHIFA, 26th February 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

18. The editor of the Sahifa (Bijnor), in the issue of the 26th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), deplores the existing tension of feeling between the Hindus and Muhammadans of India, and discussing its cause, says that it was after 1857 that the relations between the two communities became strained. He suggests that it was partly due to the advent of a new system of education and of Western civilization, as well as to the introduction into schools and colleges of books on history and other subjects, which tended to excite animosity. He expresses the opinion that the institution of the Arya Samaj with its hostility to Islam, and the prejudice and partiality of government officials of both communities have perhaps been the chief causes, and he observes that if people will only refrain from undesirable religious controversies, there is still every hope of effecting a reconciliation between them.

TAFRIH, 28th February 1912.

His Excellency the Viceroy and the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh.

19. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses regret that His Excellency Lord Hardinge did not make any mention of the memorial submitted to His Majesty the King-Emperor through the Viceroy by the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh in his reply to the address presented by them.

The editor expresses the hope that as no formal reply has as yet been received from the Government of India regarding the memorial, Lord Hardinge will make himself more popular by granting jagirs to the members of the ex-Royal family.

TAFRIH, 28th February 1912.

His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to Lucknow.

20. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), refers to His Excellency the Viceroy's recent visit to Lucknow and expresses regret that on such occasions the majority of the people, who collect on the public roads in order to see a high official visiting the place, fail to recognize him for want of any distinguishing mark, and he says that this causes great disappointment.

The editor suggests that high officials should either ride on horse back or on an elephant or drive alone in a distinctive carriage.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 4th March 1912.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

21. Shamsul Ulma Maulvi Shibli Nomani contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 4th March 1912, in which he explains the meaning of the word politics, and emphasizes the necessity of the Indian Muhammadans taking part in the political life of the country. He asserts that the present means adopted by Muhammadans for keeping in touch with political questions are inadequate and are calculated to incapacitate them from acquiring any political training. He takes exception to the late Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan's advice to his co-religionists to refrain from discussing politics, though he admits that such an attitude was necessary to a certain extent at the time when the advice was given. He expresses approval of Sir Saiyid's action in keeping himself aloof from the Indian National Congress, and exhorts his co-religionists to establish a separate political institution for themselves. He says that the Muslim League is neither a political body nor an anti-Congress institution but that it is a sort of imitation of the House of Lords.

22. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th March 1912, expresses surprise at the apprehension entertained by the European Powers with regard to the Pan-Islamic movement, which aims at social and religious union amongst the Muhammadans living in different parts of the world. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th March 1912.

Pan-Islamism.

The editor says that the movement has alarmed the European Powers to such an extent that they are making every effort to destroy the few remaining independent Muhammadan kingdoms.

He points out that Russia interfered in the internal administration of Persia on the ground that Russian trade was in danger, though when the Italians blockaded the Turkish ports on the Red Sea, and so considerably affected Turkish trade, no European Power took any notice of it.

23. Commenting on the Nawab of Dacca's speech at the annual conference of the All-India Muslim League held at Calcutta, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th March 1912, characterizes it as mischievous balderdash, and asks when Government gave any pledge to the Muhammadans not to ever consider the modification of the partition. The editor questions the Nawab's right to describe the anti-partition agitation as seditious, when neither Government nor any court of law declared it so, and he suggests that, in view of what has been written and spoken by many Muhammadans in connection with Persia and Tripoli and about the annulment of the partition, the pretentions of Muhammadans to greater loyalty are far from justified. He remarks that the speech of the Nawab is bound to produce resentment among the Hindus. LEADER, 6th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

24. The Nagri Pracharak (Lucknow), for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), expresses appreciation of Pandit Bishan Narayan Dar's presidential address at the last Congress, and of the successful termination of the Congress proceedings under his presidentship. NAGRI PRACHARAK, January 1912.

The Indian National Congress.

The editor agrees with the proposal to hold the next sitting of the Indian National Congress at Bankipur.

25. Referring to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's resolution against the continuance of the indentured labour system, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th March 1912, remarks that Mr. Gokhale had made out a very strong case against the system, and that his arguments were never seriously assailed by the Hon'ble Mr. Clarke in his defence of the system. The editor says that one can read between the lines of Mr. Clarke's official deliverance that it is the interests of the colonies which have influenced the Government of India. He urges that, in view of the fact that the colonies are a part of the Empire to which India belongs, the governments and people of the colonies should remember that the obligations imposed by this fact are reciprocal and not merely one-sided. He remarks that when the colonial governments have imposed galling restrictions on the immigration of Indians into their territories, and have in many instances accorded scandalous treatment to them, it is hardly to be expected that the educated and self-respecting people of India will regard from only the colonial point of view a question vitally affecting the honour and status of the Indian nation. With regard to Mr. Clarke's statement that there was nothing degrading in the agricultural labour which was required of Indians, and that they did similar work at home, the editor enquires why white labourers are not employed if there is nothing degrading about the conditions of the work, and whether Indian labourers, engaged in agriculture in India, are required to work under a system of indenture. LEADER, 6th March 1912.

The problem of indentured labour.

He characterizes the indentured labour system as a negation of freedom and dignity due to man, as oppressive to the individual men, and as subversive of the honour and self-respect of their race and their country, and concludes with the following words:—

"The system stands self-condemned. The whole people of India object to its continuance with one voice. The Government of India, if one may judge from Mr. Clarke's speech, are not enamoured of it, and are hard put to it to defend it. All this points to but one conclusion, the system ought to go, it must go, it will go. But if this is to be in the near future, our countrymen must speak out against it not once or twice but persistently till success has been achieved."

LEADER, 7th March 1912.

Indians in the Transvaal.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th March 1912, publishes a letter from Mr. Polak in which he makes a few remarks in connection with the debate raised by Lord Ampthill in the House of Lords on the Transvaal Indian question. He holds the Colonial Office responsible for the deportation of British Indians to India without lawful grounds, and observes that the action of the Portuguese in waylaying British Indian subjects of the Crown and depriving them of their rights is due to the apathy on the part of His Majesty's Government. He says that any measures of relief that have been granted by the Union Government have been granted not because of any real improvement of the situation but because of the potency of passive resistance, and because the Union Government realised that the Indian opposition in the Transvaal was unbreakable. He suggests that possibly Lord Emmott was misled by Mr. Malan's statement at the Imperial Conference that an understanding had been arrived at between the Union and Imperial Governments "as regards the Indians within the Union," and that all that remained to be done was to give legislative effect to that agreement. Nothing, he says, is further from the truth than this, and all that was settled was that a humiliating but defunct statute should be repealed, and that Asiatic immigration into the province be restricted by means of a statute of general application and not excluded by reason of a statutary racial bar. He refers to a few outstanding grievances, and says that the real questions that have arisen are the manner in which that restriction is to be arrived at and the settlement to be effected with the Indians lawfully resident in the country. He expresses the hope that Lord Selborne does not propose to condone the legalized robbery of the licensing laws of the Cape and Natal, the Township Act, the Vrededorp Stands Act, and the law of the Transvaal, nor to excuse the tax upon female virtue and communal honour imposed under the Natal indenture laws.

Mr. Polak closes his letter with the following words:—

"Unless Lord Crewe, whose criticism of the race and colour prejudice and the trade jealousy underlying the allegation of unfair competition are eminently to the point, can imbibe (sic) the Colonial Office with some of his optimism and goodwill, he has to make up a good deal of time and opportunity lost when he himself presided over its destinies. The future of the South African Indians is undoubtedly a dark one."

SAHIFA, 26th February 1912.

Ulmas in legislative councils.

27. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses approval of the suggestion made by the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore) that ulmas should also be elected as representatives of the people in the legislative councils, on the ground that they will be able to give authoritative opinions on all religious and social questions. The editor expresses the hope that Government will give its careful consideration to the suggestion, seeing that it is very desirable to have them both in the Provincial and Imperial Legislative Councils.

AL MUSHIR, 4th March 1912.

Ulmas in legislative councils.

28. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th March 1912, refers to the suggestion made by Nawab Haji Ismail Khan that Muhammadan ulmas and sufis should also be made eligible for election as members of the legislative councils, and remarks that no useful purpose can be served by electing ulmas and sufis as members of councils, seeing that they are generally ignorant of politics, and can only express their opinions on religious questions, while they will not be able to follow the discussions which are carried on in English.

29. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), reproduces the article from the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) about the election of a representative of the Muhammadans of Oudh (vide Selections No. 8, paragraph 32), in place of the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Nasim of Lucknow, and expresses agreement with the opinion of the editor of the Muslim Gazette. The editor says that the Muhammadans of Rohilkhand have also been disappointed in their present representative in the local council, and urges that only those persons who have sufficient moral courage to express their opinions frankly should be returned at the next election.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th February 1912.

The future representative of the Muhammadans of Oudh in the Provincial Legislative Council.

30. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th March 1912 urges the necessity for increasing the number of the members of district and municipal boards in order to secure the efficient discharge of public duties, and suggests that one representative should be elected for every thousand persons for the municipal boards, and for every five and ten thousand for the local and district boards respectively. The editor also suggests that there should be a separate representative in the legislative council for every local, district and municipal board.

SAHIFA, 5th March 1912.

A suggestion to increase the number of members of the district and municipal boards and the legislative council.

31. The Zamana (Cawnpore), for January 1912 (received on the 27th February), expresses appreciation of the administrative changes in India, and remarks that the despatches of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State constitute very important documents, seeing that they recognize the principle of provincial autonomy. The editor says that they will also convince the people that Government does not consider it derogatory to admit and to rectify its errors, and that it holds that its greatness lies in winning the hearts of the people and in gratifying them.

ZAMANA, January 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

32. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), refers to the condemnation by Lord Curzon of the administrative changes in India and to the replies of Lord Crewe and Lord Morley, and says that Lord Curzon's attempted impeachment of the Government has failed.

ANAND, 29th February 1912.

The administrative changes in India.

A poem is also published showing the many benefits to the country resulting from His Majesty's visit to India. It describes the gratification of the Bengalis, and says that with the transfer of the Capital to Delhi her former splendour will return to the imperial city.

33. The Gurukul Samáchár (Budaun), for January 1912 (received on the 2nd February), expresses gratification at the darbar boons, and suggests that His Majesty the King-Emperor should spend six months in India and six months in England, and says that such an arrangement would be greatly beneficial to the interests of his Indian subjects. The editor concludes with an appeal to the latter to pray for the permanency of British rule in India.

GURUKUL SAMACHAR, January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

34. The Educational Magazine (Ghazipur), for January 1912 (received on the 10th February), says that the Indians will derive many benefits from the visit of His Majesty the King-Emperor to India and from the coronation darbar, and observes that the feeling of unity among the subjects and the removal of caste and colour distinctions will be regarded as the greatest boon. The editor expresses appreciation of the annulment of the partition of Bengal, which, he says, has restored peace to the country. He also approves of the distribution of coronation medals to school students, and remarks that the medals will make the students remember the visit of His Majesty to India, and tend to make them peaceful citizens, which will add to the stability of British rule in India.

EDUCATIONAL MAGAZINE, January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

35. The Nagri Prachárak (Lucknow), for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), expresses gratification at the Darbar boons conferred upon Indians by His Majesty the King-Emperor, and, referring to the creation of a separate province of Behar, Chota Nagpur and Orissa, suggests that it would have been more reasonable if NAGRI PRACHARAK, January 1912.

The coronation darbar.

Behar and the Central Provinces, where people speak Hindi, had been amalgamated and placed under one Governor.

In conclusion he appeals to those of the public who have any affection for Hindi to promote the cause of Nagri if they desire to make it a national language and he reminds them that it was not acknowledged as such by Government, seeing that the translation of the Royal proclamation was read at the Delhi darbar in Urdu and not in Hindi.

SARASWATI, January 1912.

The State entry into Delhi.

36. The Saraswati (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 1st February), publishes an account of His Majesty's State entry into Delhi, in which the editor expresses disapproval of the action of the Political Agent in seating himself at the side of the Begam of Bhopal in Her Highness's carriage in the procession. He remarks that in case it was necessary that the Political Agent should accompany the Begam he should have occupied the front seat in the carriage.

ZAMANA, January 1912.

The Royal boons.

37. The Zamana (Cawnpore), for January 1912 (received on the 27th February), after expressing appreciation of the Royal boons, observes that it would have been more appreciated if the coronation darbar had been commemorated by the grant of some unique boon, such as the appointment of Indians as Governors and Lieutenant Governors, the enactment of the Elementary Education Bill, the grant to Indians of eligibility for high military appointments, and the conferring of the title of His Majesty on some of the native chiefs. The editor suggests that possibly the King-Emperor and his ministers did not grant any such concession, because they desired that the Viceroy should confer these concessions.

SARASWATI, January 1912.

The Royal boons.

38. One Girdhar Sharma contributes a poem to the Saraswati (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 1st February), in which he says that the Royal boons announced on the occasion of the coronation darbar at Delhi have been received with gratification by the Indians, and that the concession regarding the eligibility of native military officers for the grant of the Victoria Cross for valour demonstrates the fact that His Majesty the King-Emperor regards all his subjects as equal.

UNION GAZETTE, 21st February 1912.

The King-Emperor's return to England.

39. Referring to the King-Emperor's speech in London after his return from India, in which His Majesty expressed his gratification at the loyalty and devotion of his Indian subjects, the Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 21st February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses satisfaction at the good effect of the manifestation of their loyalty by Indians, and entertains the hope that it will strengthen the bonds of the Empire.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

SAHIFA, 26th February 1912.

Muhammadans in the Udaipur State.

40. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), reports that some Muhammadans of Mandgarh in the Udaipur State have been sent to jail for calling the azan (call for prayers) and for offering prayers in their mosques, and that they have been ordered to furnish security that they will not pronounce the azan, before they are released. The editor asks the British Government to take notice of the grave injustice done to the Muhammadans, and urges the Muhammadan members of the Imperial Council to take up the matter, and put questions about it in the Council.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

GURUKUL SAMACHAR, January 1912.

The panchayat system.

41. The Gurukul Samachar (Budaun), for January 1912 (received on the 2nd February), asks the people to revive the old system of panchayat for settling their disputes instead of going to law courts, seeing that in the latter event both parties have to incur heavy expenditure.

The editor observes that the poverty of the people is likely to continue until the panchayat system is regularly established in India, and he notes that Government has never expressed disapproval of it.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th February 1912.

42. Commenting on the result of the trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan, the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses regret that even under British government it should be possible for such a respectable man to be accused of an offence and subjected to so much indignity without sufficient cause.

The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan.

Referring to the remark of the Indian Daily News (Calcutta) that the prosecution was actuated owing to the displeasure of the local authorities because of the Khan's refusal to contribute to the Islamia College fund, the editor asks Government to have an enquiry instituted into the matter, and to punish the party at fault in the interests of British justice.

TAFRIH, 28th February 1912.

43. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses regret that according to the existing law no one will be held responsible for the hardship and humiliation caused to the Khan of Hoti Mardan. The editor suggests that in case Government does not consider it desirable to pay any compensation to accused persons after they are honourably acquitted, it should, at any rate before proceeding with a case, consult its legal advisers so as to ascertain whether the charge is a reasonable one. He says that this course will also prevent the police from setting up weak cases.

The trial of the Khan of Hoti Mardan.

(b)—Police.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 6th March 1912.

44. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 6th March 1912, referring to the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale in the Imperial Legislative Council on the resolution about the police reform, remarks that it was not proper on the part of Government to oppose the proposal for police reform. The editor observes that it is true that Government is taking steps to reform the police, but that corruption in the department requires that more attention should be paid to reform it.

The police reform.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

LEADER, 7th March 1912.

45. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th March 1912, discusses the importance of the resolution put forward by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya for an increased share of the provincial revenues to be allotted to the United Provinces Government for expenditure in these provinces. The editor complains that every other province except the United Provinces is treated favourably, and is allowed to spend one-half of its land revenue on objects of local utility. He urges that the needs of the United Provinces are greater than those of Bengal, Bombay and Madras, and that the lack of education among the masses is more remarkable here than elsewhere, which accounts for the backwardness of the provinces. The editor expresses the hope that the combined influence of the present Financial Secretary and his successor, who both have personal knowledge of the straitened resources of the United Provinces Government, will induce the Government of India to do justice to these provinces, seeing that an inadequate financial allotment renders schemes for internal development impossible. The editor urges the pressing need for larger expenditure on medical relief and sanitation, particularly in view of the fact that the population of these provinces has gone down during the last twenty-five years, and that the mortality is very high.

The United Provinces share of land revenue.

LEADER, 9th March 1912.

46. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th March 1912, refers again to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's resolution in the Imperial Council for an increase of the provincial revenues allotted to the Local Government for expenditure in these provinces, and remarks that no blame can be attached to the Hon'ble Pandit for the result. The editor expresses the opinion that when Sir James Meston assumes the responsibility for the good and progressive government of these provinces, he will find that there is a great deal of truth in the contention put forward by the Local Government and by Pandit Madan Mohan. In the meantime he urges the Indian community of these provinces to press insistently for the concession. He characterizes the Finance Member's arguments against the resolution as weak and insufficient and asks the people not to drop the matter till they have secured a just and liberal share of revenue from the Government of India.

The United Provinces share of land revenue.

LEADER, 9th March 1912.

The financing of new Delhi.

47. Referring to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's speech on the financing of new Delhi, in which he made certain important observations as to the proper methods of disposing of surpluses, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th March 1912, remarks that the proposals explained by the Finance Member for meeting the cost of building the new Capital are unjust to the tax-payers and unsound in themselves. The editor observes that it is neither the duty nor the right of the State to sweep away into its coffers every penny that the people may not require for their immediate physical needs. He states that, whether there is an urgent need for the immediate introduction of any particular tax or not, it will hardly be denied by any serious-minded man that the people are very poor, and could with advantage spend a little more on their food and clothing and houses, on the education of their children, and the relief of sickness in their families, if they could only afford it.

He expresses surprise at the manner in which Sir Fleetwood Wilson dealt with the question, and remarks that it only shows how great need is for the services of a patriotic statesman of the calibre of Mr. Gokhale in the Imperial Legislative Council, who is also a financial expert.

OUDH AKHBAR, 7th March 1912.

Assessment of income tax.

48. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 7th March 1912, expresses regret that the resolution for raising the taxable minimum from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,500 moved in the Viceroy's Council by the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy should have been opposed and rejected.

The editor, agreeing with the suggestion made in the Englishman (Calcutta), observes that instead of trying to get the taxable minimum raised, the representatives in the Imperial Council should urge that the system followed in England for levying income tax should also be introduced in India, and remarks that the people will not then feel it burdensome even if it be fixed permanently in accordance with that system.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

ZAMINDAR-WA-KASHTKAR, February 1912.

The Bijnor Municipality.

49. The Zamindar-wa-Kashtkar (Bijnor), for February 1912 (received on the 5th March), complains of mismanagement on the part of the Municipal Board of Bijnor, and says that the fault does not lie with the members of the board but with those who elected them as their representatives.

The editor asks the voters to refrain from giving their votes to undeserving candidates for membership on the occasion of the next election.

TAFRIH, 28th February 1912.

Prostitutes in Chauk and Nazirabad, Lucknow.

50. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), complains that the upper rooms of the houses in Chauk and Nazirabad muhallas, which are close to Aminabad, and which are frequented by all sorts of people including government servants and schoolboys, should be occupied by prostitutes.

He invites the attention of the municipal board, and asks it to take steps, by means of legislation, if necessary, to have these women removed from these muhallas.

ANAND, 29th February 1912.

Bad condition of the streets of Lucknow.

51. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), refers to the bad condition of the streets in Lucknow to the west of the Chauk, and invites the attention of the members of the municipal board to the complaint. The writer remarks that if the members remain indifferent to public complaints they will find it difficult to secure re-election.

52. The Agra Akhbar of the 7th March 1912, expresses regret that in the forthcoming municipal election at Agra the Hindus should be trying to oust the Muhammadan representatives out of the board. AGRA AKHBAR, 7th March 1912.

Muhammadan representation on local bodies.

The editor invites the attention of Government to the matter, and says that if the number of Muhammadan representatives is not fixed on municipal and district boards, their legitimate rights will continue to be usurped, and the present tension between them and the Hindus will increase every day.

53. Referring to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Mr. Bevis in his presidential speech at the annual meeting of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce about filling up the place of the Hon'ble Mr. Campbell, Chairman, Cawnpore Municipal Board, in consequence of his transfer to Kheri, that the old system of the Collector-chairman should be reverted to in Cawnpore, on the ground that the present whole-time chairman had not sufficient independent power, and had therefore to refer matters constantly to higher authorities, and that the board constantly appealed against his rulings, a correspondent writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th March 1912, to enquire whether the chairman should be the absolute and final authority in the board and whether the members are bound to always abide by his decisions. The writer admits that there have been frequent ruptures between the Cawnpore Board and its whole-time chairman, but he contends that they were due to the overbearing manner of the latter towards the members. He opposes any reversion to the old system and remarks that the uncalled for and retrogressive proposal of Mr. Bevis has caused great disappointment and discontent amongst the Cawnpore public. He asks Government to consult the Cawnpore Tax-payers' Association and other public bodies before taking any final step in deciding the matter, and suggests that the remedy lies not in over-officializing the board and thus practically depriving it of the little independence it possesses, but in giving it a freer hand by allowing it to choose a non-official chairman assisted by a whole-time and competent paid official if necessary. LEADER, 7th March 1912.

The Cawnpore Municipality.

54. With regard to the question of the chairmanship of the Cawnpore Municipal Board the Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th March 1912, remarks that it would be a retrograde step if the old system of Collector-chairman be reverted to as suggested by Mr. Bevis in his speech, and urges that the only practicable arrangement in a city like Cawnpore would be for the chairman to be a non-official elected by the board, who should be assisted by a whole-time executive officer as secretary. LEADER, 8th March 1912.

The chairmanship of the Cawnpore Municipality.

The editor mentions the names of several European and Indian gentlemen fit for election as chairman of the Cawnpore Municipality, and asks His Honour Sir John Hewett to earn the abiding gratitude of the Indian reform party by giving effect to the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission when the Hon'ble Mr. Campbell relinquishes the office.

(e)—Education.

55. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th March 1912, has the following:— LEADER, 7th March 1912.

The Indian Educational Service.

"It will be remembered that Sir Harcourt Butler said in reply to a question by the Hon'ble Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu in the Imperial Council that since 1897 only two members of the Provincial Educational Service have been promoted to the Indian Educational Service. We were under the impression that these were Indians. But we notice from the official report of the proceedings that a supplementary question by Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu elicited the reply that both were Europeans. Comment on this is needless."

56. The Nagri Prachárak (Lucknow), for December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), discusses at some length the system of education said to have been prevalent in ancient times in India, and deplores the present ignorance of the people. The editor observes that it is the duty of Indians to improve the condition of their country by extending elementary education in India. NAGRI PRACHARAK, December 1911.

Popular education.

He remarks that, while it is necessary to spread elementary education, the need for religious education to be given at the same time must not be overlooked.

SANATAN DHARM PATAKA, November and December 1911.

Religious instruction in India.

57. The Sanatan Dharm Pataka (Moradabad), for November and December 1911 (received on the 9th January 1912), deplores the present degraded state of the Hindu community, and remarks that want of religious education is the chief cause of it. The editor suggests that want of spirituality and neglect of their ancient literature and sciences are accelerating the downfall of the Hindus, and points out that both in Europe and America religious instruction is considered to be one of the most important factors of mass education. He ascribes the progress of European countries to their assimilation of the ancient literature and sciences of Rome and Greece, and then proceeds to describe the evil effects of the modern system of education destitute of all religious instruction and of Western civilization in India, which, he says, has made the Hindus indifferent towards their religion and community. He states that self-indulgence instead of renunciation has become their ideal, and he urges the necessity for the introduction of residential schools and colleges, and he asserts that men who have done any good to their country were trained either in residential colleges in the West or at the preceptor's house in the East.

In conclusion he exhorts the Hindus to help the Hindu University movement which will revive ancient philosophy, science and arts, effect the progress of the Hindu community and improve the condition of the country.

NAVA JIWAN, January 1912.

The need for education.

58. The Nava Jiwan (Benares), for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), deplores the absence of popular education in India.

The editor urges the necessity for opening schools throughout the country to impart secular and religious education to Indians, and observes that Government will be blamed if the masses remain ignorant.

He asserts that a country, of which the people are not educated, is likely to be the home of criminals and evemies of society.

LEADER, 8th March 1912.

Technical and industrial education.

59. Referring to the Hon'ble Mr. Bevis's remarks on education, the editor of the Leader (Allahabad), in the issue of the 8th March 1912, expresses agreement with him that until men are offered greater inducements than are represented by salaries in many cases as low as Rs. 8 a month it is futile to expect that men of proper capacity and character will be tempted to undergo training for the work of school master. He expresses satisfaction that the difficult problem of instituting factory schools for the instruction of boys employed in mills and factories shows some prospect of being solved. With regard to the question of the foreign technical scholarships awarded by Government to Indian students, he says that Mr. Bevis spoke strongly on the subject, but that he doubts the correctness of the allegation that they show no interest in the mechanical part of the industry they are sent to study, and devote their time entirely to college work. The editor suggests that the inhospitable atmosphere of British factories and workshops towards them, which Mr. Bevis recognizes, may interfere with their getting full opportunities to acquire practical knowledge.

He remarks that Mr. Bevis insists too much on the unfitness of Indian apprentices, and overlooks the avowed disinclination of European factory owners to employ Indians in any lucrative and responsible position, and concludes with the following words:—

"We are prepared to sustain this allegation. Will Mr. Bevis be so good as to look up the records of his own Chamber for the years 1903 and 1904 where he will find almost an admission to this effect in a letter addressed to Sir James LaTouche's Government? The Upper India Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Bevis want nothing less than the abolition of the Government foreign technical scholarships. We should be decidedly opposed to such a step. By all means let the Government enquire how the system can profitably be improved, and do what may be feasible to bring about a better state of affairs, but to give up what little is being done is not the best means of encouraging the youth of India to qualify themselves for and take to industrial and commercial pursuits."

60. The Griha Lakshmi (Allahabad), for the month of Ashwin (September 1911) (received on the 15th February 1912), contains a contributed article in which the writer refers to the degraded condition of India, and urges that no country has made any progress without female education. The writer remarks that India will effect progress only when its women have acquired education and are ready to co-operate with men, and he notes with regret that at present Indian women seem to have forgotten all sense of duty. He exhorts the people to lose no time in effecting this reform which is necessary in order to save their religion and country.

Female education.

GRIHA LAKSHMI, Ashwin (September 1911).

61. The Maryada (Allahabad), for November 1911 (received on the 18th December 1911), contains a contributed article in which the writer discusses at length the means of regenerating the country, and urges that the education and the training of women is the only way to restore happiness and prosperity to a country, seeing that women have always taken an important part in the building up of a nation.

Female education.

MARYADA, November 1911.

62. A correspondent who signs herself as Mrs. Faiyaz contributes an article to the Parda Nashin (Agra), for December 1911 (received on the 14th February 1912), in which she urges the cause of female education by means of a dialogue between two women, and argues that the chief aim of education is not to enable men to procure some kind of employment but to work for the benefit of mankind at large.

She contends that trade, agriculture and industry are all preferable as careers to government service, and she says that in the latter a man, in addition to encountering other disadvantages, has to sacrifice his conscience also, and that the risk of loss is greater than in any other profession.

Female education.

PARDA NASHIN, December 1911.

63. The Maryada (Allahabad), for the months of December 1911 and January 1912 (received on the 1st February), publishes a short story contributed by one Ishwari Prasad Sharma illustrating the defects of the marriage of an educated man with an uneducated girl. The writer observes that true happiness can never result from such unions.

Female education.

MARYADA, December 1911 and January 1912.

64. The Rajput (Agra), for 15th February 1912 (received on the 22nd February), has an article entitled "The need for female education," in which the writer asks the Indians and particularly the Hindus, to pay equal attention to the education of their sons and daughters, seeing that both contribute equally towards the advancement of the nation. He criticises the popular opinion about women that their chief duty is to attend the kitchen, and tries to prove that the duties of women are in many respects more important than those of men. He points out that great men owe their greatness to the instruction they received in their childhood from their mothers, and that the manners and disposition of mothers exercise the greatest influence on the character of their childern. He urges women to cultivate the qualities of modesty, cheerfulness, patience and economy in domestic matters. He disagrees with those who, after receiving an English education, desire their wives to have the same freedom as is enjoyed by European ladies, and draws their attention to Lala Hardayal's article that appeared in the Modern Review (Calcutta) for January 1912, in which the writer drew a lurid picture of the weaknesses and vices of ladies in the West, and said that Indian women were far better off than they were.

Female education.

RAJPUT, 15th February 1912.

65. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th March), expresses approval of the proposal to establish a university at Dacca, and deprecates the opposition of the Bengali leaders to the scheme. The editor expresses the opinion that the Muhammadans are justified in ascribing the opposition of the Bengalis to the apprehension that the Muhammadans will have a large share in the management and control of the proposed university, and that it will remove to a certain extent the backwardness of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal in education.

The proposed Dacca University.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st March 1912.

He expresses the hope that the Government of India will also establish a chartered High Court at Dacca.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 28th February 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

66. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), has an article contributed by Nawab Mushtaq Husain in which he refers to the opposition of the Bengali leaders to the proposed Dacca University, and ascribes it to their jealousy. He suggests that, in order to safeguard the educational interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, a certain number of Fellowships be reserved for the Muhammadans of the province in the new university, and that every facility be afforded to the Muhammadan graduates of East Bengal in the rules and regulations relating to the constitution and management of the university. He says that if the requisite number of qualified Muhammadans be not available, the vacancies in the Fellowships should be temporarily filled up by Europeans. He advocates the adoption of the same procedure for the appointment of teachers and professors, and says that, if necessary, Muhammadan educationists may be taken from other provinces. He also suggests that separate funds should be allotted for the education of Muhammadan boys and girls respectively, and urges the establishment of free advisory committees, one of which should be composed of both Hindus and Muhammadans and the other two of Hindus and Muhammadans separately, to assist the special educational officer at Dacca. He also recommends the constitution of similar bodies in every district to advise the central committees and to help in the work of education in the district.

SURMA-I-ROZGAR, 24th February 1912.

The proposed Mulsim University.

67. The Surma-i-Rozgar (Agra), of the 24th February 1912 (received on the 5th March), expresses approval of the suggestion made by Nawab Mushtaq Husain that one year's income from the interest on the subscriptions realised for the proposed Muslim University should be utilised in sending students to Europe to study various subjects, in order that they may be employed as professors on their return in the proposed university, and takes exception to the action of the Agha Khan in disapproving of the suggestion. The editor remarks that, when men of the type of the Agha Khan take the management of the university in to their hands, the interests of Muhammadans are likely to be injured, and he expresses the opinion that it is owing to the lack of moral courage in Muhammadans that men who are traitors to the community like the Agha Khan have been able to give themselves out to be reformers.

TAFRIH, 28th February 1912.

Muhammadans and education.

68. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses appreciation of the reply given by His Excellency the Viceroy to the address presented to him by the members of the ex-Royal family of Oudh, and remarks that His Excellency's statesmanlike advice clearly shows that education and not government favours can raise the status of a fallen people. The editor refers with appreciation to a similar reply given by the Governor of Bombay to the deputation of the Muhammadans of Gujrat, and urges the necessity of education on a large scale among the Muhammadans. The editor deprecates the idea of asking favours from Government, seeing that they are of no real worth to the community at large, and asks them to demand their rights and privileges and not mere favours.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th March 1912.

The educational condition of the Muhammadans in the United Provinces.

69. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th March 1912, refers to the reply given by the Director of Public Instruction to the question put by the Hon'ble Sahebzada Aftab Ahmad Khan in the local Legislative Council about the inadequacy of the information furnished in the annual report of the department of Public Instruction regarding the educational, progress made by the Muhammadans of the United Provinces, and observes that even this reply by the Hon'ble Mr. de la Fosse did not clearly show how the Muhammadans stood with regard to education.

The editor invites the attention of the Local Government to the fact, and suggests that in future the Director of Public Instruction should discuss the educational condition of the Muhammadans in a separate chapter of his report.

70. The Nava Jiwan (Benares), for January 1912 (received on the 19th February), suggests that the proposed Hindu University should impart general education only up to the matriculation standard, and that it should lay special stress on technical education.

NAVA JIWAN, January 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

The editor expresses the hope that the promoters of the proposed university scheme will acquaint the public with their views.

71. One Dan Singh of Benares contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 2nd March), in which he complains of the hours fixed for the school-leaving certificate examination, and says that it is a severe strain to sit for an examination from 7 to 10 a.m. and again from 4 to 6 p.m. on the same day particularly during the hot weather. He asks the editor of the paper to move the authorities to change the hour of examination.

HINDUSTANI, 1st March 1912.

The school-leaving certificate examination.

72. The Rajput (Agra), of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 8th March), referring to the resolution passed at the anniversary of the Kshattriya sabha at Fyzabad, about the establishment of a Kshattriya boarding-house there, urges the desirability of founding denominational boarding-houses in every division or district according to local requirements.

RAJPUT, 29th February 1912.

Need for the establishment of denominational boarding-houses.

The editor reproduces the appeal read on the occasion of the anniversary, and asks the Kshattriyas to contribute liberally to the fund.

73. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 28th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), deprecates the tone of the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) in criticising the views of the Agha Khan about the partition of Bengal and the proposed Dacca University, and the remarks contained in the Lucknow paper about Nawab Muzmin-ullah Khan in connection with the secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College. The editor asks the Muslim Gazette to make suggestions for the post of the secretary of the college without indulging in personalities, as such action is calculated to injure the work of the college.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 28th February 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

74. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 3rd March 1912, referring to the note on the Indian press in the Administration Report of 1910-11 for the United Provinces, observes that the remark that throughout the year the mouth-pieces of the various sections assailed their opponents with the utmost virulence on religious questions is not an unfair description of a section of the vernacular press of these provinces. The editor expresses the opinion that the bitterness would cease to exist if steps were taken to prevent the further tendency to separatism which, within the last two years, has done great mischief in Northern India.

ADVOCATE, 3rd March 1912.

The United Provinces press.

With regard to the remark about the nature of the Adib, he says that it is a strange coincidence that in a province where educated Hindus are accused of making concerted efforts to replace Urdu by Hindi, the two best periodicals in Urdu and those with the largest circulation should be the result of the enterprise of Hindus.

75. The editor of the Musáfir (Agra), devotes the issue of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th March), to recounting the circumstances which led to the assassination of the late Pandit Lekh Ram. After reviewing the services rendered by the Musáfir to the public during its seven years' existence, he states that the paper was not started for any personal gain, but with the object of carrying through the mission of the late Pandit Lekh Ram to a successful issue.

MUSAFIR, 1st March 1912.

The Musáfir (Agra).

He expresses satisfaction that it has succeeded in silencing the opponents of the Arya Samaj, and in furthering the cause of the shuddhi movement started by Lekh Ram.

He, however, records with regret that, in spite of the useful work done by the Musáfir, the number of its subscribers is still below 3,500, and exhorts its well-wishers to raise the number to 5,000 in order to effect some improvement in its printing and get-up.

He goes on to say that the murder of Lekh Ram by a Muhammadan on the 6th March 1897 furnished an unparalleled instance of sacrifice in the cause of religion in the nineteenth century, and he asks the Arya Samajists to perpetuate the memory of Lekh Ram by endeavouring to successfully accomplish the shuddhi movement.

He publishes two cartoons, one of which illustrates how Pandit Lekh Ram wanted to carry on the shuddhi movement in accordance with the instructions of Swami Dayanand, how he was persecuted by Christians and Muhammadans for doing it, and how he was stabbed as soon as he took up the movement. The second cartoon shows how under the guidance and protection of Pandit Lekh Ram's spirit the editor of the Musáfir has been performing his duties fearlessly, in spite of the threatening attitude adopted towards him by the Christians and Muhammadans, as well as by suspicious Hindus and envious Arya Samajists, and in spite of the dread of the Indian Press Act.

He appeals for the collection of Rs. 10,000 in aid of the shuddhi movement, and publishes four poems one on the shuddhi movement and the other three in praise of Pandit Lekh Ram.

In conclusion he reproduces the biography of Pandit Lekh Ram, written by his uncle, Pandit Ganda Ram, retired deputy inspector of schools.

ZAMANA, January 1912.

The Co-operative Credit Societies.

76. A correspondent named Aziz-ur-Rahman contributes an article to the Zamana (Cawnpore), for January 1912 (received on the 27th February), in which he lays great stress upon the usefulness of Co-operative Credit Societies, and remarks that in view of the present deplorable condition of the Indian agriculturists, these societies will prove of much help to Indians. He points out that it has resulted in the increase of the wages of labourers. He suggests that Co-operative Credit Societies should not advance to any person a sum which he may not be capable of repaying, and urges that they should advance money immediately when it is urgently required. He also suggests that Government should render substantial help to the Co-operative Credit Societies, and that a central bank should be established in each province to help the district banks.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st March 1912.

The begar system.

77. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th March), complains of the prevalence of the begar system in India, and observes that it is a source of trouble both to the poor and the rich. The editor says that the continuance of the begar system does not reflect credit on the British Government which abolished slavery and suppressed the sutti system in India.

OUDH AKHBAR, 3rd March 1912.

The paucity of agricultural labour in India.

78. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 3rd March 1912, expresses satisfaction at the good prospects of the rabi crops this year, but regrets that there is a scarcity of agricultural labour, which is ascribed to the annual outbreak of plague and to the emigration of Indians to foreign countries.

The editor says that as the prosperity of the country depends on successful harvests Government should make proper arrangements for the supply of agricultural labour as is done in the colonies (sic), and he suggests that part of labour required for European factories in India should be imported from foreign countries, and that a law should be passed to stop the emigration of Indian labourers to the colonies.

LEADER, 8th March 1912.

Cotton growing in India.

79. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th March 1912, has a leading article in which it dicusses the report made by Mr. S. M. Johnson at the annual meeting of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce on the subject of cotton cultivation. The editor expresses agreement with Mr. Johnson that there is need for more expert advice and assistance to be given to cotton growers in the United Provinces, and that government should have a properly equipped experimental farm in each of the great cotton growing districts.

80. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), expresses surprise that the book named the Khwab-o-Khiyal, which contains passages which are calculated to impeach the loyalty of Muhammadans, has been prescribed for the examination of civil and military officers. The editor expresses the opinion that if the book is allowed to remain in the course, it is likely to cause dissatisfaction, and he asks the public to express their resentment in public meetings in order that Government may take notice of it.

SAHIFA, 26th February 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

81. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th March 1912, takes exception to the publication of the book entitled the Khwab-a-Khiyal, and to its being prescribed as a text-book for the examination of civil and military officers.

AL MUSHIR, 4th March 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

The editor quotes several passages from the book to show that unjust aspersions have been made on the loyalty of Muhammadans.

He invites the attention of Government to the matter, and suggests that the book should be proscribed by Government, and that it should not be accepted as a text-book for the examination of officers.

82. The Tajir (Meerut), of the 25th February 1912 (received on the 8th March), expresses appreciation of the action of Government in withdrawing the new coins be cause they contained the likeness of a figure to which the Muhammadans took exception, and objects to the suggestion of the Hindu papers that the new coin should have an inscription in Nagri also. The editor contends that Urdu is the most popular language in India, and that there is no reason to depart from the time-honoured custom.

TAZIR, 25th February 1912.

The new coinage.

83. One Iqbal Ali contributes an article to the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 9th March 1912, in which he refers to the likeness of an elephant in the rupee of the new coinage, and complains of the objection of the Muhammadans to it on the ground that it has the appearance of a pig. He ridicules the idea of the coin giving offence to Muhammadans and remarks that if the rupee of the new coinage be withdrawn considerable loss will result to Government.

OUDH AKHBAR, 9th March 1912.

The new coinage.

V.—Legislation.

84. The editor of the Tafrih (Lucknow), in the issue of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 2nd March), refers to the suggestion made by him in his paper for the 14th February (vide Selections No. 7, paragraph 105), regarding the existing law empowering the creditor to have the property of a debtor sold or to have him sent to a civil jail, and asks Government to save the public from the clutches of the exorbitant money-lender by means of special legislation. He refers to similar legislation effected in the Punjab and Central Provinces to safeguard the interests of the zamindars, and observes that in civil law greater regard has been paid to the rights of money-lenders than to the poverty and helplessness of the people. He remarks that if the law be amended, the money-lender will invest large sums of money in the opening of new industries, and the people will be relieved from the payment of exorbitant rates of interest. He asks his co-temporaries to take up the matter, and to move Government to take action.

TAFRIH, 29th February 1912.

Need for amending the law relating to debts.

VI.—Railway.

85. In a leading article the Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd March 1912, discusses the criticism pronounced by the Hon'ble Sir Vithaldas Thackersey in the Viceroy's Legislative Council in connection with the subject of railway rates on goods.

LEADER, 3rd March 1912.

Indian railways and public interests.

The editor says that there was a time when the educated Indian community cared little for the effect which railway rates had on Indian industries and inter-provincial trade, but the position had changed now and the people are in no mood to allow the public interest to be subordinated to that of individual commercial bodies. He observes that it would be another matter if the State had no financial interest in the working of the railways and no moral or legal right to press the view of the country on their managing boards, but the position is different in India, as most of its railways are owned by Government, from which it should follow that, while no sacrifice of the legitimate interests of the shareholders of railway companies is demanded, the still more important interests of the industries of this country are safeguarded. He expresses agreement with Sir Vithaldas's opinion that public interests are allowed to suffer at present, and he points out that neither the President of the Railway Board nor the Member for Commerce and Industry has been able to give him an effective reply.

He urges that whatever view Government may ultimately take of the subject it cannot decline to admit the existence of widespread complaints in a matter that vitally affects Indian industries, which should be encouraged by every possible means in the power of Government and people alike. He refers to Sir George Clarke's views that railways are for India and that India is not for the railways, and goes on to say that the companies are not absolutely independent private corporations, in the determination of whose affairs the Indian Government can claim no voice, for the facts narrated by Sir Vithaldas in his speech, which remain uncontroverted, are extremely damaging.

The editor says that if at present the legal powers of Government are not wide enough such powers should be secured by it, seeing that there is no problem more important to India than economic questions, and there is no economic question more urgent than the development of industries, which depends on various factors, and can only be accomplished by joint action on the part of Government and the people. He adds that the present position is unfair to the people at large and injurious to the country, and that the actual measures adopted and assistance given to people cannot be contended to be an adequate practical expression of the policy of the Government of India in connection with the encouragement of industrial development. He says that he has no desire to withhold from Government the credit that is legitimately due to it for what it has done during the last few years, but he urges that what has been accomplished is little by the side of what remains to be achieved.

He expresses the opinion that what is being done for the people by the Indian Government in this most important sphere is less than what even the governments of industrially advanced peoples have found it necessary to do, and he asks Government to translate into action its sympathy and good intentions in the direction of the incidence of railway rates on goods, and with regard to the other two railway questions submitted by Sir Vithaldas.

In conclusion the editor expresses regret that such a reasonable proposition as the one moved by Sir Vithaldas should have been disapproved by Government and rejected by the Council. He points out that the strength of the minority shows the extent of the grievance felt by the community, and expresses the hope that the Railway Board and Government will do all they can to redress it.

VII.—Post Office.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st March 1912.

A complaint against the Postal Department.

86. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th March), complains that postal peons do not deliver paid letters and newspapers to the addressees in proper time, and that no satisfactory arrangement is made even on a complaint being made to the Postmaster General of the fact. The editor invites the attention of the Director General of Post Offices in India to the matter.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

VAIDIC SARVASWA, October 1911.

Hinduism and the Brahman.

87. The Vaidic Sarvaswa (Allahabad), for October 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), has an article entitled "Dharmavichar," in which the writer describes the Brahmans as practically kings over the remaining three castes, and says it is they who are chiefly responsible for the prevalence of irreligiousness in the Hindu community. The editor justifies the revolt of the other castes from their authority and he suggests that if the Brahmans want to reassert their lost supremacy, they should remedy the grievances of the other castes, educate the masses, cease to extort money in the name of religion, and should endeavour to propagate the true faith.

GRIHA LAKSHMI, Magh (January 1912).

88. The Griha Lakshmi (Allahabad), for Magh (January 1912) (received on the 1st March), publishes a translation of the article contributed by one Girija Kumar Ghosh entitled "Women in the West" that appeared in the Modern Review (Calcutta) for January 1912, and remarks that the condition of women in the West is as bad as that in India if not worse.

Women in the West.

BRAHMAN SARVASWA, January 1912.

89. The Brahman Sarvaswa (Etawah), for January 1912 (received on the 21st February), expresses regret that the followers of the Sanatan Dharam should remain idle while the followers of other religions are trying earnestly to propagate their faith. The editor remarks that there are many disputed points in the Sanatan Dharam, and he therefore suggests that an association of learned pandits should be formed to settle them.

Appeal to followers of the Sanatan Dharam.

He says that if his proposal be approved, the matter should first be discussed through newspapers.

NAVA JIWAN, January 1912.

90. One Sukhdayal contributes an article to the Nava Jiwan (Benares), for the month of January 1912 (received on the 19th February), in which he expresses regret that even the followers of the Arya Samaj do not understand its ideals, and create misunderstandings every day. He complains that the Arya Samaj, in spite of its noble ideals, should be considered a political body and that it should he described not only as a political body but as a seditious society in the new edition of Nelson's Encyclopedia for 1911.

The ideals of the Arya Samaj.

He advises the student community to try to understand thoroughly the ideals and position of the Arya Samaj when they come in touch with it.

TRISHUL, 29th February 1912.

91. The Trishal (Benares), of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 5th March), quotes a passage from the speech of Raja Sashisekhareswar Roy, which he delivered in the capacity of president at the great religious congregation of the Hindus held at Delhi during the last week of the year 1891, and, referring to the present condition of the mahamandal, enquires whether the institution is going to do for the Hindus all that was promised by the Raja or to merely lead them into greater chaos, confusion and disorder. The editor appeals to every Hindu in the name of the sacred Hindu religion, society and country to extend a helping hand to save the institution.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

KSHATTRIYA MITRA, 16th January 1912.

92. The Kshattriya Mitra (Benares), of the 16th January 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret that the majority of the Kshattriyas are addicted to intoxicants. He suggests that Government should stop the sale of all intoxicating drugs, and that it should particularly discourage the use of intoxicants among the Kshattriya community.

The use of intoxicants among the Kshattriyas.

LEADER, 8th March 1912.

93. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th March 1912, publishes a letter about the Holi which purports to have been contributed by a representative of the Shudra community, in which the writer points out that the Holi is the only day on which they can enjoy themselves to their hearts' content. He urges that they have been permitted this short and innocent merriment from time immemorial, and enquires why when it has not been thought criminal by the rulers, their superiors should have decided that it is shameful and barbarous. They refuse to exchange their mode of amusing themselves for European ways and they contend that whether it be vicious and barbarous or no, the Holi is their national festival.

The Holi.

The writer refers to the debased position in which they are held by their superiors, and enquires what steps their friends are taking to effect their enlightenment and advancement. Resentment is expressed of the anxiety of the educated classes to curtail their liberty to enjoy a festival in their own crude and careless way.

In the matter of social and moral reform it is contended that some of the things, for the introduction of which their friends cry and clamour, have already been effected by them. "Have not we panchayats which decide our petty and social disputes? Do we not marry our widows? Do we not boycott nautch and nautch girls? We have our own professional singers . . . Is not the devil of drink leaving us from its dreadful clutches? And, as time marches on, we shall, we trust, get rid of the darkness of ignorance and stand with our friends face to face, though we may be Ram Bakhsh, Chamar; Kundanwa, Kori; Mahipal, Pasi; Dukhiwa, Dom; Hulasi, Dusadh and company."

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

Allahabad:
The 9th March 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 11 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 16th March 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
	I.—POLITICS.
	(a)—Foreign:
1.	The Italian-Turkish war	271
2.	The Italian-Turkish war	271
3.	The situation in China	271
4.	The situation in Persia and Tripoli ...	271
5.	The trans-Persian Railway	272
6.	Islam in Japan	272
	(b)—Home:
7.	Indians in the colonies	272
8.	Indians in the colonies	273
9.	The All-India Muslim League ...	273
10.	The All-India Muslim League ...	274
11.	The All-India Muslim League ...	274
12.	The All-India Muslim League ...	274
13.	The Times (London) and the Muhammadans	274
14.	How to create political spirit in Muhammadans	274
15.	The Hindu and Muhammadan leaders ...	275
16.	The Muhammadan leaders	276
17.	The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) and the Agha Khan	276
18.	Home Rule for India and the Muhammadans	276
19.	Home Rule for India	276
20.	Self-government for India	276
21.	Ulmas in legislative councils ...	277
22.	The membership of the Provincial Legislative Council	277
23.	The Imperial Crown	277
	II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.
24.	The Pioneer (Allahabad) and Afghanistan	277
	III.—NATIVE STATES.
25.	The progress of Christianity in Hyderabad (Deccan)	277
	IV.—ADMINISTRATION.
	(a)—Judicial and Revenue:
26.	Touts	277
27.	The Judicial Commissionership of Oudh	278
28.	Holding of courts by judicial and revenue officers on tour	278
29.	The appointment of munsifs in the Punjab	278
30.	The restriction as to the number of pleaders in the Punjab	278
	(b)—Police:
	Nil.
	(c)—Finance and Taxation:
31.	The Financial Statement	278
32.	The United Provinces Budget ...	279
	(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:
33.	The local boards	279
34.	Separate representation on local bodies	279
35.	Duties and resources of local bodies ...	279
36.	The Lucknow municipal election ...	280
37.	The Benares Municipality	280
38.	The Agra Municipality	280
39.	Non-official chairmen	280
	(e)—Education:
40.	The proposed Muslim University ...	280
41.	The proposed Dacca University ...	281
42.	The proposed Hindu University ...	281
43.	A survey of the gurukul	281
44.	Education in ancient India	281
45.	Educational progress in India ...	281
46.	Government education in the Philippines and in India	282
47.	The postponement of the Allahabad University examinations	282
48.	The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh ...	282
49.	Religious education in schools ...	282
	(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:
	Nil.
	(g)—General:
50.	The Khwab-o-Khiyal	282
51.	The Khwab-o-Khiyal	283
52.	Coolie agencies	283

Page.

53. Hindu and Muhammadan relations ... 283
54. The trusteeship of the Husainabad Endowment 283
55. The Allahabad Emigration dépôt ... 283
56. Reform in jails 283
57. Chaprasis in registration offices ... 284
58. The last census 284

V.—LEGISLATION.

59. The Special Marriage Bill 284
60. The Special Marriage Bill 284
61. The Special Marriage Bill 284
62. The Elementary Education Bill ... 284

VI.—RAILWAY.

63. The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ... 285

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

Page.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

64. The Ram Lila of Dehra Dun ... 285
65. The Parasnath hill 285
66. The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ... 286
67. A slaughter house at Ajodhya ... 286
68. The cow-protection movement ... 286
69. The Arya Samaj anniversary at Benares 286
70. An open letter to Muhammadans ... 286
71. An appeal to Muhammadans to save the Nau-Muslims from being reclaimed by Hindus 287
72. The Gaucharan fair at Agra 287

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st March 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,300 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adíb	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	300 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nazir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	900 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 „
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 „
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 „
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 „
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
50	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 „
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 „
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 „
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 „
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 „
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 „
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 „
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 „
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 „
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 „
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 „
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 „
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 „
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	800 „
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 „
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ásam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Panch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Panch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Diváker	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	300 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27... ...	5,000 „
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 „
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál ; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 „
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 „
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 „
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 „
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 „
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 „
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 „
133	Swadesh Bándhavá ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 „
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 „
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 „
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
142	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 „
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 „
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 „
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 „
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 „
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The editor of the Aligarh Institute Gazette in the issue of the 6th March 1912 (received on the 9th March), refers to the proposal that some of the European Powers should now intervene in the Italian-Turkish war, and reminds his readers that when at the beginning of the war, Turkey appealed to the Powers for intervention no heed was paid to the appeal, probably because they thought that, her navy being weak, Turkey would find it difficult to maintain an army in Tripoli, and would be obliged to quickly come to terms with Italy.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 6th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

He suggests that it was for such reasons that the European Powers decided to preserve neutrality, and that it is only now when they have seen the Arabs and Turks making common cause in protecting their country, and have seen the Italians sustaining reverses, that they have expressed their desire to bring about a settlement between the two countries.

2. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 12th March 1912, refers to the press communiqué issued by the Foreign department of the Government of India to the effect that the rumours about the intention of the Italian government to blockade the ports of Jeddah and Yambu are untrue, and that His Majesty's government has represented to the Italian government that any such action, if seriously contemplated, would create deep resentment in India, and enquires what steps will be taken by Government in the event of Italy not paying any attention to the representation of the British government.

AL BASHIR, 12th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor says that even if Indian pilgrims be allowed to land at Jeddah and Yambu they will still be put to great inconvenience owing to the interference by the Italian government with the grain trade in Arabia.

He invites the attention of Government to the matter, and expresses the hope that it will arrange to protect the interests of its Indian subjects.

He refers to a recent meeting held at Bareilly to protest against a report said to have been published in the Times (London) that if Turkey did not conclude peace with Italy the latter would demolish the kaaba and the mausoleum of the prophet Muhammad by throwing bombs from their aeroplanes, and suggests that the statement of the Times should have been challenged through the press instead of holding protest meetings.

3. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 11th March), discusses the establishment of the republican form of government in China, and observes that Russia has been chastened by her defeat by the Japanese and will not be likely to do anything to prejudice its success. As regards Japan the editor says that other Powers will not allow her to interfere in the internal affairs of China, particularly owing to her recent seizure of Korea, and that as long as the Liberals are in power, England too will not be inclined to extend its power in Tibet or on the frontier of Burma. In these circumstances the editor expresses the hope that the republican form of government in China is likely to achieve success.

ANAND, 7th March 1912.

The situation in China.

He observes that a prosperous China under the Manchu Emperors would have been a greater menace to the peace of the neighbouring Powers, owing to the likelihood of the Chinese government desiring to extend its territory, while a republic would not favour the idea of territorial expansion.

4. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 12th March 1912, remarks that, when the war broke out, the European Powers did not allow Turkey to attack any of the Italian dependencies or ports, while now they do not make the smallest protest against the bombardment and blockade of Arabian ports by the Italians. The editor expresses satisfaction that the latest war news sent by Reuter shows that the Arabs and Turks are fighting with great zeal and success against the Italians.

MASHRIQ, 12th March 1912.

The situation in Persia and Tripoli.

With regard to affairs in Persia he says that the conditions on which the Russian and British governments have agreed to give a loan to Persia are such that if Persia agree to them Russia will monopolise the revenue and customs of Persia, and that ultimately the country will be divided between Russia and England.

He suggests that the Muhammadans should raise a loan of four million pounds and so save Persia from foreign domination.

He condemns the policy of Sir Edward Grey with regard to Persian affairs, and suggests that he should retire from office and give place to some capable statesman who may be able to remedy the mistakes committed by him.

LEADER, 10th March 1912.

The trans-Persian Railway.

5. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th March 1912, refers to the prospect of the scheme of the trans-Persian Railway being carried into execution and says that it is likely to affect the autonomy of Persia. The editor recognizes that advantages will result from the linking of India and Persia, and that it will afford facilities to travellers and merchants. He says that telegraphic and postal facilities will follow in the wake of the railway, and there will be greater safety of person and property and greater chances of peaceful progress for the people of Persia, but he doubts whether all these advantages will compensate Persia for the loss of her political independence. He suggests that if Persia had been left to herself she might have adopted a Western standard of civilization, seeing that she was really trying to reform her system of government.

He concludes by saying that Persia, after the reconstitution of her Government, had not had sufficient time to manage and develop her resources, and that foreign interference in her affairs was too premature to be justified on the ground that it was essential to the spread of efficient civilization.

MUSAFIR, 8th March 1912.

Islam in Japan.

6. Pandit Bhoj Dat writes in the Musáfir (Agra), of the 8th March 1912 (received on the 11th March), that in ancient times Islam and Christianity, unlike the Vedic faith, were spread with the help of the sword, though he concedes that when Aurangzeb began to convert Hindus to Islam by force, Guru Gobind Singh defended his religion by sword. He expresses gratification that with the advent of British rule in India the propagation of religion by means of the sword came to an end, and the method of spreading religion by means of delivering religious speeches or writing religious articles was adopted. He asks the Arya Samajists to try to propagate their faith, seeing that the propagation of religion by means of lectures is not opposed to their religion.

He says that a Muhammadan meeting was held in Lahore on the 25th February to consider the question of spreading Islam in Japan, and he asks his co-religionists to raise funds for sending capable Aryas to Japan for the purpose of propagating the Arya faith, before the Muhammadan preachers convert the people of Japan to Islam by showing them only the bright side of their religion.

(b)—Home.

GURUKUL SAMACHAR, 1st February 1912.

Indians in the colonies.

7. The editor of the Gurukul Samáchár (Budaun), in the issue of the 1st February 1912 (received on the 11th March), deplores the condition of Indians in the Transvaal and Canada, and observes that beggars are never respected in any country, and that it is the chief cause of the scant courtesy meted out to Indians in the colonies. The editor states that India is a country rich in its vast natural resources, which, if properly developed, can feed millions of people of other countries, and he therefore urges his countrymen not to go abroad to earn their daily bread. He goes on to say that another reason why Indians are not respected is that they go in order to learn.

He asks his countrymen not to go in order to learn but in order to impart knowledge. They should supply some real want either economic, educational or spiritual, such as for instance to supply some special demand in industry or to satisfy some spiritual craving of the people they visit, and thus command respect for their work. He refers to the examples of Swamis Abhedanand, Permanand and Ram Tirath who went to America, in order to spread the teachings of the Vedas, and obtained for themselves universal honour and respect. He strongly denies the charge of racial prejudice made against the colonists, and says that it is human nature to hate an inferior race.

He finally appeals to Indians to show their real worth, and concludes with the assurance that when they go to foreign countries with something to give and not to take, then only they will be respected.

ADVOCATE, 14th March 1912.

Indians in the colonies.

8. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 14th March 1912, has a leading article entitled "Imperialism on trial," in which the social, political and economic disabilities imposed upon Indians in South Africa are discussed at great length. The editor remarks that not only in South Africa but almost all over the vast British Empire Indians are subjected to a treatment which sooner or later is bound to make the position of English rulers in India more embarrassing and delicate. He refers to the appeal on behalf of the Indians in British East Africa by Mr. A. M. Jeevanjee, which gives a deplorable account of the methods of the administration of the colony. He describes Mr. Jeevanjee's position and influence and all that he had done, and remarks that if he had possessed a white skin he would have been honoured as an empire builder, and that he might with justice have claimed that he made British East Africa. He states that the acquisition of East Africa by Britain was the result of purely Indian effort and enterprise, that it was through the influence of Indian traders that England succeeded in obtaining the lease of the country from the Sultan of Zanzibar, and that it was Indians of all classes who made the country prosperous and a valuable asset of the Empire. He complains of the selfishness and arrogance of the colonists, and of the way in which Indians are treated there whether in soial matters or in matters affecting politics, commerce or even justice.

The editor quotes some passages from the United Methodist and from the book which Mr. Churchill wrote describing his impressions of the country, and contrasts the views and the sentiments expressed in them with the statement made by Lord Elgin, as one of the responsible ministers of His Majesty in March 1908, with regard to the granting of land to Indians and the imposition of statutory restrictions against the acquisition of property by Indians in South Africa, which were described as based on administrative convenience. He expresses agreement with the observation of the Secretary of the London committee of the Muslim League in his representation to the Colonial Under Secretary that the contentment and the well-being of His Majesty's Indian subjects ought not to be subordinated to mere administrative convenience.

He concludes the article in the following words :—

"This dog-in-the-manger policy is such a caricature of imperialism that we trust better counsels will prevail with those who countenance it. At any rate, it is the duty of every self-respecting Indian to make a ready response to Mr. Jeevanjee's appeal, and press the matter upon the conscience of the British democracy, and make it clear to our rulers that Indians cannot contemplate such silly and unjust treatment of their countrymen without feeling intensely hurt and aggrieved. The attempt to throw all the blame on the local authorities in East Africa cannot succeed, because the Imperial Government is not as helpless in regulating the policy of a Crown colony like East Africa as it is with a self-governing colony like Australia or South Africa."

ADVOCATE, 10th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

9. Commenting on the presidential speech of the Nawab of Dacca at the annual meeting of the All-India Muslim League at Calcutta, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 10th March 1912, expresses the opinion that if the Government of India were to accept the suggestion of the Nawab of Dacca to compensate the Muhammadans of East Bengal for the annulment of the partition by placing all the colleges in Eastern and Northern Bengal under the jurisdiction of the proposed university of Dacca, it would be a signal for further agitation in the press and on the platform. The editor entertains the hope that the Government of India will be no party to the carrying out of proposals which are calculated to intensify the feeling of disappointment created in Bengal, where the people are not at all keen about the establishment of the proposed university.

He expresses surprise that the mover, the seconder and the supporters of the resolution protesting against the partition of Bengal belonged to Rohilkhand and Oudh in these provinces, and that there was no Bengali Muhammadan to give expression to the feeling of East or West Bengal on the subject.

The editor expresses gratification at the improvement in the tone of some of the speeches and in the wording of some of the resolutions adopted by the conference, but questions the advantage of keeping the resolution for the extension of the principle of separate electorates to the municipal and district boards on the programme, when the Muhammadan community are not unanimous in the matter and the Hindus have condemned it. He remarks that the discussion of the question has introduced greater bitterness between the Hindus and Muhammadans than any other measure, and in these circumstances to ask Lord Hardinge to extend the "hated" principle to local bodies is to invite him to undo the work of creating harmony in which he has engaged himself.

He compliments the Muslim League regarding the support given by it to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's resolution on indentured emigration and the Elementary Education Bill.

AL BASHIR, 12th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

10. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 12th March 1912, deplores the poor attendance of the members of the Muslim League at the annual conference held at Calcutta, and expresses regret that the speeches delivered at the conference were not impressive. The editor observes that no resolution was passed asking for the allotment of an adequate amount for the benefit of Muhammadans out of the sum of Rs. 50 lakhs granted for primary education in India. He deplores that Muhammadans are wanting in ability in political matters, and remarks that, until some of them devote themselves to the exclusive study of politics there is no hope of their political institutions achieving any success.

OUDH AKHBAR, 13th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

11. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 13th March 1912, commenting on the presidential speech of the Nawab of Dacca at the annual Conference of the League held at Calcutta, expresses regret that the Nawab should have discussed the annulment of the partition of Bengal at such length and to the neglect of other important topics. The editor suggests that in order to accomplish the objects of the League it is desirable that the Muhammadan leaders of the different provinces should evince interest in the political affairs of the country and keep themselves in touch with current topics throughout the year, and bring them up for discussion at the annual meeting of the League. He reminds the members of the League that the best way to impress upon Government the necessity and importance of their demands is to see that the affairs of the League are conducted on sound lines.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

12. Commenting on the speech delivered by the Nawab of Dacca as the president of the All-India Muslim League, the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th March 1912, remarks that the Nawab cannot be congratulated on the manner in which he criticised the annulment of the partition of Bengal. The editor suggests that the Nawab should have tried to exonerate himself from the allegation made about him by Lord Curzon that he had described the ribbon of the decoration conferred upon him on the occasion of the coronation as a halter with which he was to hang himself.

TAFRIH, 7th and 14th March 1912.

The Times (London) and the Muhammadans.

13. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th and 14th March 1912, takes exception to the report said to have been published in the Times (London) to the effect that in case Turkey did not conclude peace with Italy the latter would desecrate the sacred places of Muhammadan pilgrimage, and remarks that the Times has already fallen in the estimation of the Hindus and Muhammadans of India by having defamed His Highness the Maharaja of Baroda, and that it will be regarded by the Muhammadans of the whole world as being opposed to their interests in case it continues its present objectionable policy.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 11th March 1912.

How to create political spirit in Muhammadans.

14. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 11th March 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer begins by quoting a passage from the writings of an Egyptian politician of the name of Farid Bey, to the effect that unless Muhammadans are in spired with high ideals they will not be able to safeguard their existence as a nation, and he says that at present Indian Muhammadans show no enthusiasm for the advancement of their national interests.

He expresses appreciation of the patriotism and independent spirit of the Hindu leaders, and urges his co-religionists to regard their patriotic efforts with emulation and not with jealousy, and to learn to follow their examples.

He says that the ideal which the Hindus hold before themselves is self-government within the British Empire, and that it has produced a feeling of restlessness in them and has made them work cheerfully to accomplish that end.

He complains that the Muhammadan leaders check the growth of any independent spirit on the part of their co-religionists, and remarks that it is absurd to expect that the readers of Burke and Macaulay will acquiesce in an attitude of servitude and cowardice.

He maintains that, if the leaders of the Muhammadans present before their community the ideal of self-government within the British Empire, it will arouse a sense of responsibility, with the result that Muhammadans will give up their present attitude of selfishness and sycophancy, and take interest in politics, and that they will begin to subordinate their personal gains to those of their community. He reminds them that if the leaders do not adopt the ideal of self-government and do not prepare their co-religionists to take part in the administration of the country, Muhammadans will not be able to discharge their functions efficiently when self-government is granted by Government. He recognizes that, when both the Hindus and Muhammadans have one and the same object in view, it would be well to have a common political institution, but he advises the Muhammadans to maintain a separate political association for the present owing to their backwardness in education and political knowledge.

In conclusion he invites the attention of his co-religionists to that portion of Nawab Mushtaq Husain's letter on the annulment of the partition of Bengal in which he advised the Muhammadans not to depend on the favours of Government but to trust to their own exertions (vide Selections No. 52 of 1911, paragraph 13), and expresses the hope that they will keep the advice of the Nawab before them, and that they will make known their views through the agency of their separate political institutions.

The Hindu and Muhammadan leaders.

15. In the course of an article entitled "Hindu and Muhammadan leaders," the editor of the Rahbar (Moradabad), in the issue of the 7th March 1912, referring to the remark of the Bharat Mitra (Calcutta) in its Holi number that Indians would be granted the power to levy import duties on foreign commodities in two years, and that they would get self-government within five years, observes that it is not an improbable prospect, seeing that many of the cherished ambitions of the Congress have been realised.

RAHBAR, 7th March 1912.

He then refers to the attacks made on the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya for dissenting from the Court of Wards Bill, when the talukdars themselves were in favour, which was made by a correspondent of the Pisa Akhbar (Lahore) in the course of an article denouncing the Congress, and states that Mr. Malaviya was fully justified in expressing his opinion on points of law, which he knew much more about than the talukdars.

The editor says that this shows that the Hindu leaders are criticised even when they advocate the public good with the best of intentions, and he points out that Muhammadan leaders also are subjected to similar attacks when they side with Hindus. In support of his contention he refers to the case of the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi, who was taken to task by the Vakil (Amritsar) for the declaration that he would represent both the Hindus and Muhammadans in the Imperial Council, and he says that it is the result of the policy of exciting racial prejudice which has been followed by certain Muhammadan papers. He refers to the scathing criticism of Al Bashir (Etawah) on the Agha Khan for having expressed gratification at the proposal to establish a University at Dacca, and for having approved of the administrative changes, and he asserts that the Muhammadans are not competent to criticise the Hindu leaders who are better than their own leaders, because they represent not only the Hindus but Muhammadans as well. In support of his opinion about the ability of Hindu leaders, the editor quotes the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) which commends their worth, and deplores the incapability of the Muhammadan leaders.

The editor concludes by asking his contemporaries to think before hastily criticising the leaders.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th March 1912.

The Muhammadan leaders.

16. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th March 1912, complains that the Muhammadan leaders do not work disinterestedly on behalf of their community, and suggests that they should be required to declare on oath that they would be prepared to sacrifice everything they hold dear in the interests of their community. The editor expresses appreciation of the advice given by Nawab Mushtaq Husain to his co-religionists that they should depend for their salvation on their own exertions. He expresses regret that a man of the calibre and independence of Nawab Mushtaq Husain should have been compelled by circumstances to leave Aligarh, and to make over the affairs of the college into the hands of people who are not capable of discharging their duties properly.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 11th March 1912.

The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) and the Agha Khan.

17. Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 11th March 1912, in which he takes exception to the remarks of the Muslim Gazette on the conduct of the Agha Khan in its previous issues, and remarks that the criticisms of the paper can in no way lower the respect in which His Highness the Agha Khan is held and can only injure the interests of the Muhammadan community. The editor of the Muslim Gazette, in reply to Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain's observations, says that he is not prepared to acknowledge the claims of His Highness the Agha Khan to be the leader of the Muhammadans until such time as he himself declares that he has had no personal motive in anything that he has done for the community and that he will continue to work disinterestedly in future. He contends that the Agha Khan has not rendered any signal service to the Muhammadan community, beyond subscribing to the funds of the proposed Muslim University, and the editor remarks that the latter cannot be considered to be a national university, seeing that Government will have the power to interfere in its affairs and management. He also objects to the Agha Khan's attitude towards the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and to his statement that the measure will be productive of considerable advantage to the Muhammadan community.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 6th March 1912.

Home Rule for India and the Muhammadans.

18. Haji Musa Khan of Aligarh contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 6th March 1912 (received on the 9th March), in which he refers to the intention of the present Government to grant Home Rule to Ireland, and says that one day Home Rule will also be granted to India. He asks his co-religionists to prepare themselves for that event in order to take part in the administration of their country. He exhorts the Muhammadans to devote themselves wholeheartedly to the improvement of their educational condition, and to the propagation of their religion which will alone help them to solve their difficulties.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 6th March 1912.

Home Rule for India.

19. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 6th March 1912 (received on the 9th March), refers to the intention of the present Government to grant Home Rule to Ireland and Scotland, and remarks that India stands more in need of Home Rule, seeing that its religion and customs are quite different from those of England, and that moreover it is situated at a great distance from it.

The editor says that if Home Rule be granted to India it will be necessary to pass some special laws to safeguard the interests of the minorities in the country, and that only in these circumstances will India benefit from Home Rule.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th March 1912.

Self-government for India.

20. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th March 1912, says that the demand for self-government for India is a very noble ideal which should be held in view by every self-respecting man. The editor remarks that those who do not show any desire to acquire self-government have either no ambition, or realise that the expression of such a desire on their part will not be looked upon with favour by the ruling power.

21. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 12th March 1912, describes the suggestion of Nawab Haji Ismail Khan regarding the election of ulmas and sufis as members of legislative councils as an extraordinary one and endorses the view expressed by Maulana Shah Zuberi of Budaun that such procedure was in advisable, as well as being demoralising for the ulmas and sufis. The editor states that those sufis who are regarded as authorities in religious matters would never accept a membership of Council, and if they did they would not be able to do any good to the country.

OUDH AKHBAR, 12th March 1912.

Ulmas in legislative councils.

22. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th March 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer suggests that the Muhammadans of Rohilkhand should try to elect a really representative candidate at the next election for the Provincial Legislative Council. The editor asks the Muhammadans to consider the claims of Maulvis Saiyid Mahfuz Ali and Muhammad Abul Hasan of Budaun.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th March 1912.

The membership of the Provincial Legislative Council.

23. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th March 1912, says that no one will grudge the provision of the nine lakhs of rupees from the Indian revenue to pay for the Crown worn by His Majesty at the darbar, but he asserts that there will be a general feeling of disappointment at the decision to keep it in the Tower in London instead of in this country. The editor states that the Indian Crown is the most appropriate memento of the great and solemn function at Delhi and that it will remind generation after generation in India of the unique event. He expresses approval of the suggestion of the Times of India that the Delhi Crown should find place in the Indian Museum and later in the hall of the Victoria Memorial in Calcutta.

LEADER, 16th March 1912.

The Imperial Crown.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

24. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th March 1912, refers to a contributed article, which is said to have been published in the Pioneer (Allahabad), in which the writer stated that there were at present two parties in Afghanistan, one in favour of and the other against the Amir, and that the party in opposition did not like the introduction of new methods for the improvement of the country. The editor reproduces a passage from the Serajul Akhbar (Kabul), a semi-official organ of Afghanistan, denying the existence of any such parties in Kabul. He suggests that the Pioneer probably intended by publishing such baseless reports to create friction and cause civil war in Afghanistan, in order to effect the loss of its independence, as has been the fate of Persia and Morocco.

AL MUSHIR, 11th March 1912.

The Pioneer (Allahabad) and Afghanistan.

III.—Native States.

25. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th March 1912, expresses regret at the increasng defection from their religion of the people of Hyderabad (Deccan), and at their attraction towards the Christian teaching. The editor invites the attention of the Nizam to the matter, and expresses the hope that as a Muhammadan ruler he will defend the religion of his prophet, and prevent his Muhammadan subjects from embracing other religions.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th March 1912.

The progress of Christianity in Hyderabad (Deccan).

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th March 1912, publishes a contributed article complaining that the practice of obtaining professional work through the employment of touts, to which attention was drawn some time ago by the Allahabad Law Journal, still continues unabated and shows no signs of diminution, because no serious and systematic efforts are being made either by the bench or by the bar to check it. He expresses regret that the Bar Library and the Vakils' Association are unable to make a combined effort to uproot this evil, and he invites the attention of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and other learned Judges of the High

LEADER, 12th March 1912.

Touts.

Court, and asks them to remove this scandal, on the ground that the administration of justice is seriously affected owing to the prevalence of the system of touting.

MASHRIQ, 12th March 1912.

The Judicial Commissionership of Oudh.

27. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 12th March 1912, says that in case the Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Rafiq, Additional Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, be promoted to the Allahabad High Court Judgeship on the retirement of the Hon'ble Saiyid Karamat Husain, the vacancy in the Oudh court should be filled by Mr. Muhammad Ali. The editor invites the attention of the Local Government to the matter, and expresses the hope that Mr. Muhammad Ali's claims will not be overlooked again, seeing that he is one of the best district judges of these provinces.

HINDUSTANI, 15th March 1912.

Holding of courts by judicial and revenue officers on tour.

28. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th March 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer remarks that the holding of courts by revenue and judicial officers while on tour causes great inconvenience to the litigants, seeing that in revenue cases the parties are sometimes required to journey long distances in inclement weather, while in criminal cases the accused have difficulty in securing legal advice. He suggests that criminal cases should be tried only at head quarters, and that cases relating to revenue matters should not be heard at a place situated at a considerable distance from where the parties live.

He also suggests that when the courts are held in camp an extra tent should be provided for the litigants.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 15th March 1912.

The appointment of munsifs in the Punjab.

29. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 15th March 1912 refers to the recent appointment of six Muhammadans, one Sikh and one Christian as munsifs in the Punjab, and expresses surprise that the claims of the Hindus have been ignored.

The editor says that it is not only an injustice to the community but an administrative defect to allow any consideration of creed and colour in the matter of appointments in the public service, and observes that only capable and efficient men should be employed to posts of responsibility.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th March 1912.

The restriction as to the number of pleaders in the Punjab.

30. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th March 1912, says that the students of the first year class of the Law College, Lahore, are dissatisfied with the recent orders of the Punjab Chief Court limiting the number of pleaders to be enrolled every year, and observes that the dissatisfaction of the students is not unreasonable.

The editor asks the students to exercise self-restraint and not to adopt any objectionable course in the matter, and at the same time he remarks that while it is necessary for dissatisfied people not to be led away by their sentiments, it is also essential to remove the real grievances.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

ADVOCATE, 10th March 1912.

The Financial Statement.

31. Referring to the discussions on the several resolutions and bills, and to the presentation of the Financial Statement in the Imperial Legislative Council, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 10th March 1912, expresses agreement with the suggestion of "an Anglo-Indian contemporary" that the educative effect of the deliberations of the Legislative Councils would be greater if it were possible to distribute the activities of those bodies more evenly over the year.

The editor remarks that the Financial Statement clearly shows that the protests of those who complain against the method and the practice of underestimating revenue and over-estimating expenditure, are quite reasonable and just. He congratulates the Government on the increased attention it has given to the subject of sanitation and on its appreciation of the importance of investigating the causes of disease, and expresses satisfaction that Lord Hardinge is determined to signalize his Viceroyalty by properly attending to the pressing claims of education and sanitation, the two most important needs of India at the present moment.

32. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th March 1912, says that the small margin in the United Provinces Budget, which is not so assured that it could be safely utilized for recurring expenditure, is the best answer to the Hon'ble Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson, who firmly opposed the grant of a larger share of revenue to the Local Government. The editor remarks that in these circumstances the foremost duty of the people and the Local Government is to press the Government of India to give the United Provinces an increased grant.

LEADER, 14th March 1912.

The United Provinces Budget.

With regard to the item of Rs. 6,000 in the receipts for the closing year on account of the sale proceeds of elephants presented to His Excellency the Vice roy by the Nepal Darbar he enquires as to whether such presents are made only to be disposed of. He expresses regret and disappointment that Rs. 1,50,000 was saved out of the small allotment made for plague expenditure during the current year. He suggests that large sums could be usefully spent on the rebuilding of cities, and adds that if he had a voice in the financial arrangements of Government he would not hesitate to counsel borrowing for large sanitary undertakings in the same way that money was freely borrowed for railways and irrigation works.

As regards economy in public expenditure by Local Governments, the editor enquires whether the amounts allotted for the residence of the Director of Industries at Cawnpore and for that of the Commissioner of Jhansi could not be dispensed with, and whether they cannot spend more than Rs. 6,000 next year in giving help to industry.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

33. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th March 1912 (received on the 12th March), expresses appreciation of the reply given on behalf of Government in the Provincial Legislative Council that, like the members of the Legislative Councils, the members of the local boards will also be entitled to put questions, and remarks this may have the result of reducing the number of questions in the Legislative Council. The editor, however, suggests that the powers of the district and municipal boards should be increased in the matter of administration.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th March 1912.

The local boards.

34. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 12th March 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains of the gradual elimination of the Muhammadan representatives from the municipal and district boards of Ghazipur.

AL BASHIR, 12th March 1912.

Separate representation on local bodies.

He invites the attention of Government to the state of affairs in Ghazipur and expresses the hope that it will help the Muhammadans in the matter.

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th March 1912, refers to the comments of "an Anglo-Indian contemporary" about the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's resolution on the finances of local bodies, and remarks that it has apparently misapprehended the meaning and intention of the mover. The editor says that Mr. Gokhale only urged that as the funds placed at the disposal of local bodies for the efficient performance of the duties entrusted to them did not appear to be adequate, an enquiry should be made into the matter and steps be taken, where necessary, to increase their resources, and that there was no question of greater powers being allowed or more duties entrusted to them. He fails to understand his contemporary's objection that more funds should not be allotted until more public spirit was created in the community. With regard to the Finance Member's objection that one such committee for the whole country would not do, he remarks that on this analogy there should have been no Universities Commission, no Excise Committee, no Irrigation Commission and no Police Commission. He suggests that the recommendations of such a committee could have been easily referred to the Local Governments before final action was taken upon them by the Government of India, as is being done in the case of the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission.

LEADER, 15th March 1912.

Duties and resources of local bodies.

Discussing the question as to whether the present resources of local bodies will ever suffice for their needs, he says that the very fact that Government has so often to supplement by grants the taxation revenue of local bodies is an answer to the question. That even the grants from the government revenues are inadequate is shown by the few enterprises which the local bodies are able to engage in for want of funds, especially with regard to sanitation and education, which are the two most important and pressing needs of the country. He urges that in the circumstances it is incumbent on Government to devise some way of increasing the resources available to local bodies.

He says that educated Indians are often reproached for not taking a real interest in public affairs, but he suggests that it is because they can do so little with the financial means at their disposal. He commends a remark made by a retired Anglo-Indian officer in the House of Commons a few years ago that it was a wonder to him that anybody did take any interest at all in the work of local bodies in India in view of their almost bankrupt condition.

TAFRIH, 7th and 14th March 1912.

The Lucknow municipal elections.

36. In the course of an article on the Lucknow municipal elections, the Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th and 14th March 1912, gives a brief description of the services rendered to the public by Munshi Prag Narayan and Pandit Jagpal Krishna, the retiring candidates of the Ganeshganj ward. The editor observes that Munshi Prag Narayan has supported every movement calculated to benefit the public, and expresses the hope that the voters will return him at the ensuing election, seeing that he really deserves to be their representative.

BHARAT JIWAN, 11th March 1912.

The Benares Municipality.

37. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 11th March 1912, complains of the bad condition of the road which leads to Kashipura through Siptasagar and Karnghanta mahals and invites the attention of the board. The editor urges that it should be metalled, and enquires as to why the municipality should borrow Rs. 75,000 for water works when there has been a considerable increase in water and house tax receipts.

AGRA AKHBAR, 14th March 1912.

The Agra Municipality.

38. The Agra Akhbar of the 14th March 1912 complains that the roads of the Agra city have not been repaired, though the attention of the municipal board has been repeatedly invited to their bad condition. The editor refers to the case recently decided against the Allahabad municipality, in which it had to pay Rs. 1,000 as compensation to a clergyman whose pony was injured on account of the bad condition of the municipal road.

He expresses the hope that the Agra municipal authorities will soon undertake the repairs of roads.

LEADER, 15th March 1912.

Non-official chairmen.

39. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th March 1912, contains the following passage:—"The general terms of the statement of government policy in regard to the appointment of non-official chairmen, made by the Hon'ble Mr. Burn in reply to a question put by the Hon'ble Saiyid Al-i-Nabi, are no doubt sympathetic, but we gather from it that the policy adopted will be one of great, and as we think, excessive, caution. The policy which His Honour has adopted, after due consideration, we are told, 'is to allow the substitution of a non-official for an official chairman, where some one is qualified to undertake the duty and there are no special circumstances pointing to the probability of failure.' He attaches, it is added, 'great importance to the extension of the policy, and, while he is prepared for failure in some of the experiments, he will have no hesitation in making them wherever there is a fair promise of success.' So far so good, and we are thankful; but this pronouncement rather makes it clear that the Government as yet does not intend to allow to municipal boards freedom to choose their own presiding officers. This is disappointing. We should much prefer such a concession being made, and while prepared for failures here and there we do believe that generally the concession will be used by boards with a becoming sense of responsibility."

(e)—Education.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 6th March 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

40. Nawab Mushtaq Husain contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 6th March 1912 (received on the 9th March), in which he refers to the rumour published in the daily issue of the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore) of the 6th instant that Government will not allow the Muslim University to affiliate colleges outside these provinces, and remarks that no such condition has been imposed by Government, and that the subject is still under the consideration of the Muslim University constitution committee.

KAISER-I-HIND, 7th March 1912.

The proposed Dacca University.

41. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 11th March), though referring in appreciative terms the establishment of a University at Dacca, remarks that the University will not be an adequate compensation for the harm done to the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal by the annulment of the partition of Bengal, and that it will prove of no advantage to the Muhammadans if their interests be not properly safeguarded and if facilities be not provided to them for their education.

He suggests that the number of Muhammadan Fellows in the University should be fixed, and that as long as qualified Muhammadans be not available in the province, Europeans should be appointed Fellows of the University in their stead, and that a number of posts of professors, inspectors, deputy inspector and sub-deputy inspector of schools should be reserved for Muhammadans, and that in case capable Muhammadans be not found for these posts in the province, Muhammadans from other provinces be appointed in them. He also suggests that a portion of the annual grant for education should be set apart exclusively for the education of Muhammadan boys and girls.

He advises the formation of a joint Hindu and Muhammadan committee in addition to separate ones for each community to safeguard the interests of their respective communities in the University, and to help the special educational officer at Dacca.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th March 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

42. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th March 1912, refers to the criticism contained in the Round Table (London) that the proposed Hindu University has been devised by the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya in order to create a political centre at Benares or at Allahabad, and remarks that some people are so peculiarly constituted that they smell sedition and anarchism in every Hindu movement.

KAISER-I-HIND, 7th March 1912.

A survey of the gurukul.

43. One Dr. Khadim Husaim of Fyzabad contributes an article to the Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 11th March), in which he expresses appreciation of the articles which were contributed by Maulana Abdul Qadir, professor of the Madrasa-i-Illahiat, Cawnpore, to the Kaiser-i-Hind (vide Selections Nos. 6, 7, 8 and 9 of 1912, paragraphs 56, 66, 77 and 85 respectively), and expresses regret that the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, has not yet produced any man of the type of Ram Mohan Roy, Tilak, Mr. Gokhale, Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan, Maulvi Zakaullah or Maulvi Muhammad Husain Azad. He complains that the students of the Aligarh College have no love for their community, that they do not regard the need for self-denial, and care only for personal honour and distinction.

He says that it is essential for the welfare of their community that Muhammadans should educate their sons on the lines of that given in the gurukul.

MARYADA, February 1912.

Education in ancient India.

44. The Maryada (Allahabad), for February 1912 (received on the 7th March), contains a contributed article in which the writer describes the system of education which was said to have been imparted in ancient times, and remarks that Western education makes students physically and morally weak. He says that the lack of religious education and the absence of living ideals are the chief causes of the present degenerate condition of Indian students, who in ancient times were free from the evil effects of wordly surroundings as they were required to live in a forest with their gurus who gave them constant examples of a life renunciation.

LEADER, 10th March 1912.

Educational progress in India.

45. Referring to the statement showing the educational progress in India and in the several provinces, published in the Gazette of India the Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th March 1912, says that while much remains to be done for the wider spread of education generally, the figures cited demonstrate forcibly how much more has to be accomplished in the direction of female education. The editor asks what hope there can be of progress in a society in which not five out of a hundred of the girls of school-going age are sent to school.

In discussing the total contribution from public funds in 1910-11, and the total receipts from fees and other sources, he makes the following remarks:—"Can it be said in the face of these figures that Government are spending too much or private agencies too little on education, or that the fee income is relatively too small? Where, then, is the case for that increase of fees upon which every Local Government has been bent? Once again the official figures are the best argument in favour of the non-official contention and against the official view."

ADVOCATE, 10th March 1912.

Government education in the Philippines and in India.

46. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 10th March 1912, refers to the comparison recently made by Dr. Henry M. MacCracken, late Chancellor of the New York University, between the educational facilities furnished by the British government in India and that furnished by the American government in the Philippines and to his statement that, taking into account the social and intellectual condition of the two countries, the educational task of the British government in India is comparatively light. The editor says that a comparison of the amounts spent on education by the two governments presents a striking contrast, and shows the spirit in which they have each approached the subject of mass education.

TAFRIH, 7th and 14th March 1912.

The postponement of the Allahabad University examinations.

47. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th and 14th March 1912, suggests that, in view of the fact that almost the whole of the Allahabad city is infected, the University examinations should either be postponed or that arrangements should be made to hold the examinations at various centres as was done in the year 1903.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th March 1912.

The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th March 1912, has a similar article on the subject.

KAISER-I-HIND, 7th March 1912.

The secretaryship of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh.

48. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 11th March), expresses appreciation of the disinterested service done to the Muhammadan community by Nawab Mushtaq Husain, and expresses regret that there are so few capable and disinterested persons amongst the Muhammadan community from whom to choose a successor to the Nawab as secretary of the college. The editor does not consider Nawab Muzammil-ullah Khan as suited for the post, particularly as owing to ill-health he will not be able to stay at Aligarh for the greater part of the year, which is necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of secretary. As regards the appointment of Nawab Ishaq Khan, he says that, though the Nawab is a very pious and orthodox Muhammadan he never evinced any interest in any national work nor spent any part of his wealth to advance the cause of his co-religionists, and he therefore lacks the most essential qualities required for the secretary of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College.

In conclusion he asks his co-religionists not to decide the question without very careful consideration.

LEADER, 15th March 1912.

Religious education in schools.

49. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th March 1912, refers to the Hon'ble Mr. Stuart's reply to the question of the Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh at the local Legislative Council that committees of Muhammadan and Hindu gentleman had been appointed and would meet at Lucknow to consider the question as to the best method of imparting religious instructions in schools, and remarks that it is difficult to imagine that any Hindu committee will be able to propound a satisfactory solution of the question.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 11th March 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

50. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 11th March 1912, publishes a letter written by Muhammad Fateh Muhammad Khan, editor of the Urdu (Jullundur), from Calcutta in which he says that Colonel D. C. Phillott has ordered the exclusion of the objectionable passages from the Khwab-o-Khiyal. The editor expresses satisfaction at the news, and remarks that the entire Muhammadan community should feel grateful to Colonel Phillott and Government for it.

51. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th March 1912, takes exception to the book named the Khwab-o-Khiyal being prescribed for the examination of civil and military officers, and invites the attention of Government to the objectionable passages in it, which are calculated to create hatred in the minds of its readers against the Muhammadans. SAHIFA, 12th March 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

The editor quotes several passages from the book in which the author has made unjust aspersions on the loyalty of the Muhammadans, and contradicts them saying that the Muhammadans are enjoined by their religion to remain ever faithful to their Sovereign, and that it was the Hindus and not the Muhammadans who conceived the idea of swaraj and who recently preached sedition in Bengal and in the Punjab.

52. The Garhwali (Dehra Dun), for February 1912 (received on the 5th March), refers to the coolie agencies recently established at Srinagar (Garhwal) and Banghat, and expresses regret that the subordinate officials are discouraging them by their intolerant behaviour. The editor observes that the only reason why the native subordinates object to the coolie agency system is that it has deprived them of the opportunity for getting illegal gratifications. GARHWALI, February 1912.

Coolie agencies.

53. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th March 1912 (received on the 12th March), refers to the action of the Fyzabad municipality, in which the Hindu members predominate, in preventing the sale of meat and the slaughter of cows at Ajodhya, and to the inclusion of the book Khwab-o-Khiyal, in which Muhammadans are described as a militant race likely to measure arms with Government, in the course prescribed for military schools, and remarks that the Hindus seem to be trying to excite Muhammadans against Government and to make Government suspicious of their loyalty, in order that they may be able to attain swaraj by setting the Muhammadans against Government. He asks Government to protect the interests of the Hindus and Muhammadans alike, and not to rely on the loyalty of the Hindus on the ground that they cannot be loyal to the British government when they proved ungrateful to the Muhammadan rulers. ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th March 1912.

Hindu and Muhammadan relations.

54. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 10th March 1912, says that there is considerable excitement over the nomination of four persons from among the descendants of the late King Muhammad Ali Shah of Oudh, from whom selection will be made by the Local Government for the trusteeship of the Husainabad Endowment, made vacant by the death of Nawab Faghfur Mirza, and observes that the Lucknow public will be keenly disappointed if new blood is not introduced into the Husainabad Trust. The editor expresses the opinion that it is absolutely essential that the pecuniary position of the person to be appointed trustee should be such that the emoluments of the office, and its powers and privileges, should be no temptation to him, and proposes the appointment of Nawab Sadiq Ali Khan to the vacant trusteeship and, failing him, that of Nawab Murtaza Husain Khan. ADVOCATE, 10th March 1912.

The trusteeship of the Husainabad Endowment.

55. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th March 1912, publishes a letter of one Gajadhar Singh of Fatehpur, in which he says that his son, Mahabir Singh, aged fifteen years and nine months, was enticed away by the Allahabad Emigration dépôt recruiters and sent to Trinidad, and asks the authorities to have his son restored to him. ABHYUDAYA, 14th March 1912.

The Allahabad Emigration dépôt.

The editor remarks that the action of the recruiters was quite illegal, seeing that the consent of a minor is invalid. He draws the attention of Government to the matter.

56. Referring to the reply given by Sir Reginald Craddock to the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy's question regarding the advisability of paying a portion of the profit accruing to Government from their prison labour to the prisoners on their release, the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th March 1912, remarks that though there is much room for reform in jails Government does not seem to be prepared to accept any suggestion which is calculated to result in a pecuniary loss to Government. ZUL QARNAIN, 14th March 1912.

Reform in jails.

HINDUSTANI, 15th March 1912.

Chaprasis in registration offices.

57. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th March 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer remarks that it is a disgrace to the Registration Department that it does not allow chaprasis for the offices of sub-registrars. He points out that the work of the department suffers in consequence of the registration clerks being required to do the work of chaprasis in addition to their own duties, and suggests that chaprasis should be appointed in the registration offices also.

HINDUSTANI, 15th March 1912.

The last census.

58. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th March 1912, contains another contributed article in which the writer suggests that suitable concessions should be granted to the permanent government servants in recognition of their services in connection with the last census, seeing that they discharged the duties entrusted to them, with great deligence, in addition to their legitimate work, and regardless of personal inconvenience.

V.—Legislation.

TAFRIH, 7th and 14th March 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

59. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th and 14th March 1912, expresses gratification at the rejection of the Special Marriage Bill, which is said to have been introduced by Mr. Basu in the Imperial Legislative Council against the wishes of the majority of the Hindus.

TRISHUL, 7th March 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

60. The Trishul (Benares), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 13th March), expresses gratification at the rejection of the Special Marriage Bill. The editor condemns the action of the Hon'ble Babu Bhupendra Nath Basu in introducing the Bill, and expresses appreciation of the conduct of the Maharaja of Burdwan in having taken a foremost part in protesting against it.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th March 1912.

The Special Marriage Bill.

61. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th March 1912 (received on the 12th March), expresses gratification at the rejection of the Special Marriage Bill in the Imperial Council.

Referring to the Agra Estates Bill introduced in the Provincial Legislative Council by the Hon'ble Dr. Sundar Lal, the editor expresses the hope that it will also be thrown out, seeing that it is calculated to prove detrimental to the interests of both the Hindu and Muhammadan communities. With regard to the Elementary Education Bill, he says that it is likely to be productive of much good to the country, and he asks Government to pass it into law, as otherwise people will be led to think that Government is opposed to popular education.

LEADER, 12th March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

62. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th March 1912, again refers to the opposition of the Government of Sir Leslie Porter to the Elementary Education Bill (vide Selections No. 1, paragraph 52), on the ground that the methods proposed in the bill are not suited in any way to the social and economic conditions of these provinces, and remarks that when such a protest is made in the interests of the people, there must have been something seriously defective in the government of these provinces, in that during thirty-five years, as observed by Sir Leslie Porter, the people have not yet developed sufficiently to justify the Local Government in applying the principles of such a bill to a single division, or portion of a division, in this province. The editor expresses surprise that the Director of Public Instruction more than once said "that the hungry children looked up but were not fed," and yet Sir Leslie Porter wrote that it would first be necessary "to create a desire in the majority of parents that their children should obtain some form of elementary education." He characterizes Sir Leslie Porter's condemnation not only of the past and the present but of the future too as superb faith in Englishmen and Indians alike. He holds that Sir Leslie Porter's despatch, if it lacked argument or power of conviction, did not suffer from want of assertion and emphasis, seeing that hardly one objection was demonstrating. He remarks that it is so easy for opponents of reform to magnify difficulties and make very insufficient allowance for favouring circumstances, and concludes with the following observations:—

"The truth is, it is difficult for a Government of India friendly to reform to get support from Local Governments on matters of policy and principle. These should be settled by those whose higher minds have not been affected by the cramping influence of Indian official life, otherwise the progress of reform would be extremely tardy. Would the administrative changes announced at the darbar have had a chance if the opinions of the Local Governments had been taken before hand?"

VI.—Railway.

The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

63. Referring to the proposal for the amalgamation of the Oudh and Rohilkhand with the East Indian Railway on the ground that owing to the diversion of traffic by the Bengal and North-Western Railway, the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway has proved unprofitable, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th March 1912, remarks that one would be inclined to believe that it was the real cause of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway not being a paying concern, but that on examining the rates on traffic and the conditions prevailing on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway the main reasons for its not being a profitable concern would appear to be that it is entirely deprived of the important traffic in coal to the Punjab, in spite of its being the shortest route, and that the Oudh and Rohilkhand proportion of the railway rate on traffic to Calcutta has been quoted at an unduly low figure in competition with Bombay port. The editor suggests that the Railway Board and the Department of Commerce and Industry should enquire as to how far these reductions were justified in the interests of the railway revenue and of the Indian ryots. He remarks that the section of the metre gauge line from Lucknow to Bareilly belongs to the State and of which a portion was at one time worked as an integral part of the Oudh and Rohilkhand, is now used in competition with the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

LEADER, 13th March 1912.

He says that owing to the opening of the Kasganj-Soron line the diversion of the Bombay traffic from the Rohilkhand and Kumaun areas, which used previously to be carried over the Oudh and Rohilkhand from Bareilly to Aligarh, has also resulted in a serious loss to the State.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

The Ram Lila of Dehra Dun.

64. The Garhwali (Dehra Dun), for February 1912 (received on the 5th March), refers to the notice of the Secretary of the Garhwal Union, served on to the Ram Lila Committee, Dehra Dun, through its Secretary, in which the former said that, in spite of repeated warnings, there was a mimic representation of the Raja of Garhwal on the Siya Swayember day (the day on which Sita chose Ram publicly), and asks the Secretary of the Ram Lila Committee to show cause why legal action should not be taken against the Committee. The editor expresses regret at the silence of the Committee, and observes that the action of Anand Narayan, President of the Ram Lila Committee, is quite opposed to what he wrote in the Voice of the Dun on the 10th November 1905 and again on 8th November 1906. He suggests that the Garhwal Union should teach a lesson to the committee by taking action against Anand Narayan.

GARHWALI, February 1912.

In conclusion he draws the attention of the Superintendent of Police, Dehra Dun, to the articles written in this connection in the Garhwali.

The Parasnath hill.

65. The Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 6th January 1912 (received on the 12th March), contains a contributed article in which the writer, referring to the rumour that the summer capital of the new province of Behar would be located on the Parasnath hills, observes that the hill is considered by the Jains as a great place of pilgrimage, and that, in case the rumour be true, it will cause a severe shock to the Jains, seeing that drinking, flesh-eating, hunting, and such other things which are strictly forbidden by the Jain religion, will be resorted to there.

JAIN GAZETTE, 6th January 1912.

The writer says that it is directly opposed to the Proclamation of Queen Victoria which has been upheld by Edward VII and His Majesty the King-Emperor George V.

He observes that the Jains will never permit Government to erect buildings at their chief holy place, and remarks that it is a matter of surprise that Government should wound the religious feelings of the Jains who have always refrained from political agitation and are loyal to Government.

He concludes the article with the hope that Government will earn the gratitude of its Jain subjects by giving up the idea of having a summer capital at the Parasnath hills.

TRISHUL, 7th March 1912.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

66. The Trishul (Benares), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 12th March), has an article under the heading "Gananandji's defence," in which the editor quotes a few extracts from the letter of Mr. K. P. Chatterjee, who signs himself late editor of the Amrita Bazar Patrika and is said to be one of the devoted disciples of Swami Gananandji, and says that Mr. Chatterjee tries to defend the Swami in his letter by saying that the Raja (Sashishekhareshwar Roy) is bitterly opposed to Gananandji because the latter stands in the way of the Raja's aspirations.

The paper also publishes another letter contributed by "A BRAHMAN OF BENARES," in which the writer ridicules Mr. Chatterjee's contentions, and says that Gananandji has by his own acts in connection with the law suits, been self-condemned for the parts he took in each one of them, and that he has not yet been able to clear his conduct.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th March 1912.

A slaughter house in Ajodhya.

67. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th March 1912 (received on the 12th March), contains a contributed article in which the writer takes exception to the action of the Hindus in opposing the construction of a slaughter house at Ajodhya. He contends that the mere fact that Ajodhya is a place of Hindu pilgrimage is no reason why a slaughter house should not be constructed there, and endeavours to show that the place is considered sacred by Muhammadans also. He remarks that Muhammadans should not be prevented from doing at Ajodhya what is enjoined upon them by religion, and that Government should either accede to their request for the construction of a slaughter house there, or, convince them that it is unreasonable, in order that there may be no heart-burning or resentment among the Muhammadans.

AL BASHIR, 12th March 1912.

The cow-protection movement.

68. One Saiyid Muhammad contributes an article to Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 12th March 1912, in which he refers to the deputation headed by Mr. Jassawalla which went to England to educate the English public on the question of cow-slaughter in India, and remarks that Mr. Jassawalla is actuated by selfish motives in making efforts for the prohibition of killing of cows in India, and in suggesting the importation of tinned beef from Australia for British troops, seeing that he is connected with a large firm in Australia for the supply of tinned beef.

He says that the Hindus have started the cow-protection movement not from any religious motive but because they have a political object in the movement whereby they intend to create hatred amongst the Hindu public against the Muhammadans and Christians who are beef-eaters. He says that the prohibition of cow-slaughter in India would deprive hundreds of Muhammadans of their food and would be considered an interference in the performance of one of their religious obligations. He asks his co-religionists to bestir themselves to protect their rights and religion, and warns them that if they sit idle their opponents will achieve success, and then it will be too late for them to do anything in the matter.

BHARAT JIWAN, 11th March 1912.

The Arya Samaj anniversary at Benares.

69. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 11th March 1912, referring to the alleged objectionable tone of the speeches delivered on the occasion of the anniversary of the Arya Samaj at Benares, observes that such speeches tend to create a breach of peace, and invites the attention of Government to the matter.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 11th March 1912.

An open letter to Muhammadans.

70. Saiyid Zafar Husain Alvi, an employé of the Muhammadan Educational Conference, contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 11th March 1912, in which he takes strong exception to the sale of printed pictures of the prophet Muhammad and considers it as highly insulting to the religious susceptibilities of the Muhammadans.

He asks Maulvi Shuja-ullah Khan, editor of the Millat (Lahore), to publish full particulars of "H.S.B.A. of Anarkali, Lahore," who has advertised for the sale of the pictures, and has exhorted his co-religionists either to buy up all the pictures from the seller or to take legal steps to stop the sale.

71. Maulana Shibli Nomani of Lucknow contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 11th March 1912, in which he appeals to the Muhammadans to save the Nau-Muslims from being reclaimed by the Hindus. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 11th March 1912.

An appeal to Muhammadans to save the Nau-Muslims from being reclaimed by Hindus.

He says that the anniversary meeting of the Nadwah, which is to take place at Lucknow on the 6th April, when the members will consider suggestions and proposals made.

72. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th March 1912, publishes a memorial submitted to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor by Jagan Nath Pujari and about eight hundred other residents of Agra praying that the order of the district authorities forbidding the Pujari and the memorialists from holding the Gaucharan fair, be set aside, and that they should not be required to take out a license under the Police Act, on the ground that the Gaucharan festival is a religious observance amongst the Hindus and has been held since time immemorial. LEADER, 13th March 1912.

The Gaucharan fair at Agra.

They urge that the stoppage of the festival has caused much dissatisfaction amongst the Hindus of Agra.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 16th March 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 12 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 23rd March 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The Italian-Turkish war 295
2. The Italian-Turkish war 295
3. The Italian-Turkish war 295
4. The Italian-Turkish war 295
5. The Italian-Turkish war 295
6. The Italian-Turkish war 296
7. The Italian-Turkish war 296
8. The Italian-Turkish war 296
9. The attempted murder of the King of Italy 296
10. The situation in Persia 296
11. The situation in Persia 297
12. The situation in Persia 297
13. An appeal for the Persian Relief Fund... 297
14. The attitude of the European Powers towards Islam 297

(b)—Home:

15. The All-India Muslim League ... 297
16. The All-India Muslim League ... 297
17. The All-India Muslim League ... 298
18. The All-India Muslim League ... 298
19. The All-India Muslim League ... 298
20. The Royal boons 299
21. The Royal boons 299
22. District advisory councils 299
23. District advisory councils 299
24. The Imperial Legislative Council ... 299
25. Ulmas in legislative councils ... 300
26. The Muhammadan members of the Council 300
27. The Imperial Crown 300
28. A Royal Viceroy for India 300
29. Indian reformers and the need for persistent agitation 300
30. The working of the Press Act ... 300
31. Lord Crewe and provincial autonomy ... 301
32. The ensuing Provincial Conference ... 301
33. Mrs. Besant on the effect of the King-Emperor's visit to India 301

Page.

34. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 301
35. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 301

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

36. The establishment of panchayats in villages 302
37. The system of recruitment of Judges ... 302
38. Holding of courts by judicial and revenue officers on tour 302
39. The Hoti Mardan case 303
40. The Hoti Mardan case 303

(b)—Police:

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

41. The Imperial Budget 303
42. Financial justice to the United Provinces 303
43. Ecclesiastical expenditure of British India... 303

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

44. Water-supply at Allahabad 304
45. The Allahabad Municipality... ... 304
46. Undesirable Municipal Commissioners in Rohilkhand 304
47. Municipal lighting 304
48. Non-official chairman of the Benares Municipality 304
49. Local self-government 304
50. Municipal elections 304

(e)—Education:

51. The proposed Hindu University ... 305
52. The proposed Muslim University ... 305
53. The proposed Muslim University ... 306
54. The proposed Muslim University ... 306

		Page.
55.	The postponement of the University examinations	306
56.	The postponement of the University examinations	307
57.	The postponement of the University examinations	307
58.	Female education...	307
59.	Popular education	307
60.	Mass education	307
61.	Raising of fees in colleges in the United Provinces and the Punjab	307
62.	A Muhammadan girl teacher in a missionary school at Amritsar	308
63.	The Shibpur Engineering College ...	308
64.	A suggestion for an Islamia college at Delhi...	308
65.	The Nadwat-ul-Ulma	308
66.	The darbar educational grant ...	308

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

67.	The decrease of the female population in India	308
68.	The Jamalpur riot	309
69.	New Delhi and old Islamic buildings ...	309
70.	The Husainabad Endowment ...	309
71.	The new coin and Hindi	309
72.	Sanitary work in India	309

V.—LEGISLATION.

73.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	310
74.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	310
75.	The Medical Registration Bill ...	310
76.	Gambling in kite-flying and quail-fighting	310

VI.—RAILWAY.

77.	The Great Indian Peninsula Railway ...	311
78.	Platform and waiting room for Ram Chaura Road station	311

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

79.	Hindus and cow-killing	311
70.	The cow-protection movement ...	312
81.	The Kydganj gaushala	312
82.	A suggestion for the appointment of a Sheikh-ul-Islam	312
83.	Waqfs in Ghazipur	312
84.	The propagation of Islam	312
85.	The Kayasth Conference	312

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st March 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha. Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do.
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 copies.
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 copies.
29	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
30	Brahman Samáchár ...	Saharanpur ...	Do. ...	Chotey Lál Tagá	500 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 ,,
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Hussain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
53	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
54	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
55	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
56	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
57	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
58	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
*63	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakúr; Muhammadan; 34.	900 ,,
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
68	Darbar	Agra	Do.
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 copies.
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do.
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 copies.
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Asam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	ARABIC-URDU.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Guláb Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 copies.
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,
*121	Nágri Prabardhni Patriká ...	Allahabad ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
122	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
123	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	300 copies.
124	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27... ...	5,000 „
*125	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	30 „
126	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
127	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 „
128	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 40 ...	1,350 „
129	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; Brahman.	2,200 „
130	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	1,000 „
131	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	1,200 „
132	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla; 45	500 „
133	Swadesh Bándhava ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 44	550 „
134	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman
135	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal.
*136	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 37.	1,000 copies.
137	Veda Prakáśh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 40	850 „
138	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†139	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 45 ...	500 copies.
140	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 43.	1,000 „
141	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
142	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	775 „
143	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 40 ...	200 „
144	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 57 ...	1,500 „
145	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 34	1,500 „
146	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.
147	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do.
†148	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 copies.
149	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám; Khatri; 55 ...	3,000 „
150	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.
151	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 copies.
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
152	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), complains that the accounts of the Italian-Turkish war which are cabled to India by Reuter are misleading and untrue. ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor ridicules the action of the Italian Chamber of Deputies is passing the bill ratifying the annexation of Tripoli. He reminds his co-religionists that, if the advent of the Mehdi is, as is said, actually at hand, the Turks will surely be defeated and Tripoli placed under Italian control. In any case he makes an appeal for funds on behalf of the Turks, and he says that Italy is unlikely to be able to conquer even the coast lands of Tripoli.

2. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 17th March 1912, and the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 20th March 1912, refer to the enquiry said to have been made by the chief European Powers from Italy as to the terms on which the Government of Italy would be prepared to accept friendly intervention on the part of the European Powers and express surprise that the Powers should now be anxious to see the termination of hostilities between Turkey and Italy, while they would do nothing when repeated appeals were made to them by the Turkish government. OUDH AKHBAR, 17th March and ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 20th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor of the Aligarh Institute Gazette suggests that the Powers at the beginning of the war thought that Turkey was weak, and would find it difficult to maintain an army in Tripoli, so that she would be obliged to quickly come to terms with Italy, and it was for that reason that they paid no heed to the appeal made by the Turks. He goes on to say that now when the Powers have seen the Italians sustaining reverses they have expressed the desire to bring about a settlement between the two countries.

The editors express regret that the Turks have not been consulted by the Powers as to the terms on which they are willing to consider peace and remark that this is probably because the Powers are confident that they can compel Turkey to acquiesce in any terms which they wish to impose on her. The hope is expressed that the Turks will not rest until they have driven every Italian from the borders of Tripoli.

3. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th March1912, invites attention to the enquiry made by the European Powers as to the terms on which Italy would be prepared to accept their friendly intervention in the Italian-Turkish war, and suggests that Turkey should on no account make peace with Italy if one condition is to be that the latter be given sovereignty over Tripoli. The editor suggests that, in case Turkey be urged by the Powers to conclude peace with Italy, she should say that she is powerless in the matter, and refer them to the Arabs who are heroically defending their country against the aggressions of their enemies. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

4. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th March 1912, says that the Italian-Turkish war has created a feeling of unity amongst the Muhammadans throughout the world, and that it has made them more sympathetic towards one another. NAIYAR-I-AZAM. 19th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor says that he is anxiously awaiting the day when the Italians will carry out their threatened attack on Mecca and Medina, seeing that, in the event of such an attack, the indignation of the entire Muhammadan community of the world will be aroused against the Italians, and they will do everything in their power to destroy the Italian nation.

5. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th March 1912, refers to the conferment of the order of Al-i-Usman on His Majesty the King-Emperor by the Sultan of Turkey, and expresses surprise that, when the relations between the two Sovereigns are so cordial, the policy of Sir Edward Grey should have always been opposed to the interests of the Turkish government. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor expresses appreciation of the action of France in demanding the release of the members of the Turkish Red Crescent Society, and advises Sir Edward Grey to learn from the French the meaning of justice and fair play.

He condemns the inhuman treatment alleged to be given to the Arab and Turkish prisoners by the Italians and contrasts it with the kindness said to be shown by the Turks towards the Italian prisoners.

With regard to the rumour that Italy intended to demolish the kaaba and the mausoleum of the prophet by throwing bombs from aeroplanes, he observes that such action if contemplated would arouse uncontrollable resentment in every Muhammadan throughout the world.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

6. One Mirza Ahmadullah Beg of Hyderabad contributes an article to the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th March 1912, in which he expresses regret that no proper arrangements have been made by the Urdu newspapers to publish authentic and the latest accounts of the Italian-Turkish war, and suggests that the proprietors of the papers should form an agency and appoint reporters and correspondents in every part of the world who would send reliable reports concerning affairs in Muhammadan countries.

AL BASHIR, 19th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

7. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 19th March 1912, publishes the translation of a proclamation said to have been issued by the Muhammadans living in Germany regarding the Italian-Turkish war, in which they have counselled their co-religionists to prepare for a jehad against the Italians, because of the atrocities which they are said to be inflicting upon the Muhammadans in Tripoli.

AL BASHIR, 19th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

8. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 19th March 1912, says that one of the national results of the Italian-Turkish war is the boycott of Italian goods in Islamic countries.

The editor expresses regret that the Indian Muhammadans have not vigorously boycotted goods manufactured in Italy, and he urges his co-religionists to boycott articles made in Germany and Austria also, on the ground that these countries are in alliance with Italy.

He suggests that the Muhammadans should initiate trade relations with the Turks, with a view to the interchange of Indian and Turkish goods. He advises his co-religionists that the best form a jehad against the Italians can take would be the boycott of their goods, and remarks that it is better to die than to use articles made in Italy.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 20th March 1912.

The attemped murder of the King of Italy.

9. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 20th March 1912, referring to the recent attempt to murder the King of Italy, remarks that the King of Italy had as much right to attack Tripoli, as had the anarchist who fired at him. He asserts that both acts were morally indefensible.

UNION GAZETTE, 7th March 1912.

The situation in Persia.

10. The Union Gazette (Bareilly), of the 7th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), referring to the rumour that Russia had withdrawn her forces from Persia, remarks that the object of the Russian invasion of Persia has been achieved and that she has now gained a foothold in Persia, from which she can now advance on India any time she wishes.

The editor reproduces the translation of a passage from Al Lewa (Egypt) to the effect that the Bakhtiars in Persia have settled with the ex-Shah to grant him a handsome pension in exchange of his renouncing all claims to the Persian throne, and that Sardar Saad, the leader of the Bakhtiaris, will become the absolute monarch of Persia with the connivance and help of the Government of Russia.

He condemns the policy of Sir Edward Grey with regard to affairs in Persia, and describes it as being opposed to the conditions of the Anglo-Russian convention.

He advises the Persians to introduce mass education in their country, and to send in large numbers their young men to foreign countries to acquire scientific education, and observes that this is the only way to improve the condition of their country, and to save themselves from being overwhelmed by their enemies. He also advises them to form an alliance with the Amir of Kabul and with the Sultan of Turkey, and suggests that they might do worse than place their country under the protection of Turkey by accepting the position of a Turkish province.

11. Referring to the article that appeared in the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th March 1912 (vide Selections No. 10, paragraph 5), the Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 20th March), deprecates the tone of the Naiyar-i-Azam in imputing Persia's troubles to her own weakness and misdoings, and says that such a prejudiced and unfounded contention is unworthy of a Muhammadan paper and is calculated to wound the feelings of the Shias.

The situation in Persia.

ITTIHAD, 16th March 1912.

The editor contends that Persia has always tried to uphold her traditions, and that her political existence has constantly been in danger owing to the aggressive greed and selfishness of the European Powers.

He refers to the speech of Sir Thomas Berkeley, who presided at the meeting of the Persian Society held in London to protest against foreign interference in Persia, and endorsed the opinion expressed by him that Russia's main object is to obtain a seaport in the Persian Gulf. He describes the Siraj-ul-Akhbar (Kabul) also as having clearly demonstrated that Russia had fomented the internal feuds in Persia in order to gain her own ends, and he asserts that the downfall of Persia was due not to her own fault and weakness, but to the aggressiveness and breach of faith of Russia.

12. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, expresses surprise that some of the European Powers have undertaken to give a loan to Persia at a time when there is no settled government in the country, and observes that the Powers should have settled the conditions for the loan with the Mejlis and not with the Regent or with the minor Shah, seeing that the administration of the country is in the hands of the Mejlis, and the editor suggests that any treaty or agreement made with the Regent may be considered invalid.

The situation in Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 21st March 1912.

13. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 20th March), publishes an appeal for funds by one Saiyid Muhammad Ashiq Husain of Mahmudpur, Moradabad, President of the District Shia Committee, for the relief of wounded and suffering Persians, and says that contributions should be sent to the editor of the Asna Ashri (Delhi), who will acknowledge all sums, and remit them to the editor of the Hub-ul-Matin (Calcutta) for transmission to Persia to be employed as need may arise for the relief of widows, orphans and wounded.

An appeal for the Persian Relief Fund.

ITTIHAD, 16th March 1912.

14. The Muslim Review (Allahabad), for February 1912 (received on the 15th March 1912), has an article entitled "Stray reflections on the international situation," contributed by Mr. Seraj-ul-Islam, in the course of which the writer discusses the attitude of the European Powers towards Islam, as indicated by the Morocco crisis, the Italian-Turkish war and the Persian complications. After quoting from the accounts given by Mr. H. G. Montague and other war correspondents who testified to atrocities having been committed by the Italians in Tripoli, the writer makes the following appeal :—

The attitude of the European Powers towards Islam.

MUSLIM REVIEW, February 1912.

"O Milton, how badly does Europe want you to-day to arouse her drowsy, slumbering moral sense. It was your trumpet-call which drew thousands to the banner of English constitutionalism against the tyranny of Charles. Now 'raise Europe again and give her manners, virtue, freedom, power.' 'She is now a fen of stagnant water.' Return to her again and avenge, in thoughts that breathe and words that burn, the slaughtered women and children whose bones lie scattered on the Tripolitan coast, whose moans have shaken the very throne of God."

(b)—Home.

15. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), referring to the proceedings of the All-India Muslim League Conference held at Calcutta, expresses regret that the most important question about the selection of a permanent secretary to the League was not discussed at the Conference.

The All-India Muslim League.

KAISER-I-HIND, 14th March 1912.

16. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 20th March), discusses the presidential speech of the Nawab of Dacca, in which he expressed satisfaction

The All-India Muslim League.

ANAND, 14th March 1912.

at the transfer of the Capital from Calcutta to Delhi, on the ground that it would be close to Aligarh. With regard to the Nawab's suggestion that all schools and colleges in Eastern Bengal should be placed under the jurisdiction of the proposed Dacca University in order to compensate the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, the editor remarks that this proposal, if accepted by Government, would give a fresh cause for agitation in Bengal, while the Muhammadan community would get another opportunity for displaying their lip-loyalty.

The editor complains that the leaders of the Muslim League have failed to realise that no community can effect real progress by emphasizing and fostering any differences with other communities, and points out that this is the reason why His Highness the Agha Khan and other educated Muhammadans expressed their intention to keep themselves aloof from the Muslim League. He asks the Muhammadans to remember that unity is the secret of success, and that they cannot make any progress until they give up racial prejudice.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

17. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), expresses approval of the action of His Highness the Agha Khan in resigning the presidentship of the All-India Muslim League, and remarks that by his resignation His Highness meant to convey the idea to the Muhammadans that the existence of the League was unnecessary, and that they should all join the Indian National Congress.

The editor says that, though the Agha Khan has again accepted the presidentship of the League, he will take no real interest in its affairs, and that in these circumstances the League cannot last for any length of time.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 18th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

18. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses surprise that there was no discussion in the Conference of the All-India Muslim League held at Calcutta either on the future policy of Indian Muhammadans or on the constitution of the League. He remarks that the last Conference of the League was a failure, that the attendance was poor and the discussions on the various important subjects were uninteresting.

He deplores that while the League passed a resolution disapproving the annulment of the partition of Bengal, it did not suggest any means to safeguard the interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

He objects to the resolution regarding the Italian-Turkish war on the ground that it is not to the advantage of the Muhammadan public that the European Powers should intervene in the war, and that in the event of their intervention there would be every probability of only the Italians being benefited. He says that if the two belligerents are allowed to fight it out, the Turks will surely win in the end.

He refers to the resolution about the proposed Dacca University, and expresses regret that no demand was made for providing special facilities for the education of Muhammadans.

In conclusion he observes that the last session of the League failed to represent the views of the Muhammadan community, and that its present constitution will never be able to advance the cause of the Muhammadan community. He urges the need for reconstituting the League and suggests that the Muhammadans should undertake to organize another political institution, in case it be found impossible to adapt the League to their present needs and requirements.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th March 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

19. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th March 1912, refers to the proceedings of the All-India Muslim League Conference held at Calcutta, and expresses disapproval of the resolution passed in favour of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill.

The editor deplores that no resolution was passed in the Conference in support of the boycott of the Italian goods, and that no discussion took place about the policy of Sir Edward Grey with regard to the Persian affairs. He also expresses regret that no mention was made about the book named the Khwab-o-Khiyal, which had been prescribed for the examination of the civil and military officers, and in which unjust aspersions had been made on the loyalty of Indian Muhammadans. He asserts that the Muslim League can no longer be regarded as representing the entire Muslim community, seeing that it is composed only of a few leading men, and he asks his co-religionists to revise the constitution of the League.

HINDUSTANI, 18th March 1912.

The Royal boons.

20. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, contains three contributed articles in which the writers urge that the employés of the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway and of the Settlement department and also the teachers of District Board schools respectively, should be granted fifteen days' pay in commemoration of the coronation darbar.

MASHRIQ, 19th March 1912.

The Royal boons.

21. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 19th March 1912, takes exception to Mr. Stead's reference to the disastrous fires at Delhi on the eve of His Majesty's coronation and to his disparaging attacks on Indian astrology.

The editor expresses gratitude to Government for the boons conferred on Indians, but urges the need for the appointment of educated and promising Indian youths to higher posts in the Army.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 16th March 1912.

District advisory councils.

22. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), expresses regret that the Supreme Legislative Council did not consider it advisable to accept the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's proposal for establishing district advisory councils, and says that there is a general desire and need for advisory councils to help the district magistrates, who very often are without experience of the districts of which they hold charge.

LEADER, 22nd March 1912.

District advisory councils.

23. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 22nd March 1912, contains a contributed article on district advisory councils in which the writer discusses at length the recommendations made to Government with regard to the establishment of advisory councils to help district officers in matters of general administration, and remarks that the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's resolution was only a logical outcome of the series of reforms introduced in the higher ranks of the administration. He says that the proposal involved nothing in the nature of an innovation, and that its object was merely to complete the reform scheme, while the actual administration remained in the hands of the district officers. He contends that advisory boards properly worked would have proved a source of strength to district officers, and not of weakness, as urged by some of the members in the Council, and he points out that the work of administration in this country is becoming more complicated and heavy every day on account of the vast schemes of social reform and of the growth of knowledge, and he expresses apprehension that, unless district officers be supported by bodies of representative people from their districts they cannot effectually discharge their duties. He observes that the measure should not have been obstructed by imaginary fears about diminution of influence or prestige, and that it was calculated to induce real popularity to the administration.

ANAND, 14th March 1912.

The Imperial Legislative Council.

24. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), refers to the discussions on the several resolutions and bills in the Imperial Legislative Council during the session, and suggests that it would be better if the work of the Councils were distributed more evenly over the year, so that the members might have more time and leisure to discuss the financial statements and other matters.

The editor complains of the rejection of most of the resolutions brought forward by non-official members, and remarks that it reflects on the ability of the peoples' representatives, and he therefore suggests that some restriction should be imposed upon members with regard to moving of resolutions in the Council in order to maintain the faith of the public in the utility of legislative councils.

He complains about the method and the practice of under-estimating revenue and over-estimating expenditure which results in large surpluses at the close of the year, and he expresses the hope that these matters will receive the attention of Lord Hardinge's government.

ITTIHAD, 16th March 1912.

25. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 20th March), expresses disapproval of the suggestion of Haji Ismail Khan about the appointment of sufis and ulmas as members of the legislative councils, on the ground that their election will be detrimental to the political and religious interests of the Muslim community.

Ulmas in legislative councils.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 18th March 1912.

26. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, expresses appreciation of the question put by the Hon'ble Saiyid Al-i-Nabi in the Provincial Legislative Council on the subject of the appointment of non-official chairmen in municipal boards, and asks the Muhammadan representatives to remember that legislative councils have been established to discuss matters relating to all sects and creeds. The editor regrets the lack of interest shown by Muhammadan members in matters of general public interest, and suggests that they should, like the Hindu members, take more interest in financial and general questions.

The Muhammadan members of the Council.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 20th March 1912.

27. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 20th March 1912, expresses the opinion that the Crown worn by His Majesty at the darbar should not be kept in the Tower of London, particularly now that it is to be paid for with Indian money. The editor suggests that it should be kept at Delhi, where a building could be erected for its reception.

The Imperial Crown.

LEADER, 20th March 1912.

28. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 20th March 1912, has the following :—

A Royal Viceroy for India.

"Mrs. Besant told a Manchester Guardian representative that she wanted a Royal Viceroy for India. No doubt there are some of this opinion, but we are safe in saying that many would be opposed to a Royal Viceroy. The Viceroy of India is not merely the head of society. He is the Governor General and the head of the administration. Not unoften he inevitably becomes the centre of a controversy, and it is inexpedient in the last degree that a member of the Royal family should be placed in such a position of difficulty and delicacy."

LEADER, 20th March 1912.

29. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 20th March 1912, has the following :—

Indian reformers and the need for persistant agitation.

"Writing on the baronetcy conferred upon Sir Henniker Heaton, the Times delivered itself as follows :—

'He may often have been a thorn in the side of successive Postmasters-General, imbued, as most officials of the Post Office too often seem to be, with an engaging belief in the perfection of their department, notwithstanding many demonstrations of the fact that nearly every important reform which the Post Office has undergone, from the days of mail coaches onwards, has been imposed on it from without. He may sometimes have been voted a bore in the House of Commons and derided outside as a man afflicted with postal reform on the brain, who brought forward his schemes in season and out of season with scant respect for the complacency of the Post Office, and just as little for the financial convenience of the treasury. But it is men of his type, men who devote themselves solely and singly to a definite object and purpose, that generally succeed sooner or later in doing what they set out to do.'

'The above remarks are no less true of Indian officialdom and Indian reformers. Except rarely it is not to permanent officials that one should look for reforms in the system they administer. They indeed become a machine-like part of the system and are most honestly led to think that every innovation is bad and must be resisted. The momentum must come from outside. If officialdom stands for order, reformers must uphold the cause of progress, and then we shall have what is most needed—ordered progress.'"

TAFRIH, 21st March 1912.

30. Referring to the fact that security has been demanded from the Zamindar (Lahore), the Tafrih (Lucknow) of the 21st March 1912, deprecates the attempts of the editor of the Lahore paper to gain notoriety, and advises him to keep in view the Press Act when writing against the Hindus and Christians.

The working of the Press Act.

31. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, expresses disappointment at the interpretation put by the Secretary of State on the remarkable passage about provincial autonomy in the despatch of the Government of India on the recent administrative changes, and remarks that the attempt to explain away the passage was most unfortunate. The editor says that every one in India took the passage as a declaration of the intention of Government to facilitate the growth of real local self-government in India, but that Lord Crewe's statement shows that they have been under a misapprehension.

ADVOCATE, 21st March 1912.

Lord Crewe and provincial autonomy.

32. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, draws attention to the many questions of provincial importance which have to be taken up at the ensuing Provincial Conference at Cawnpore, and suggests that resolutions asking for a larger share of the revenues to these provinces and for an Executive Council should be put in the forefront of its programme. The editor says that the provinces are of course grateful to the Imperial Government for the grant of eight lakhs for sanitation, and the grant of four and a half lakhs for education, but he remarks that these are mere drops in the ocean, and that what the United Provinces want is the eighty lakhs which is really due to them. With regard to the proposal for an Executive Council for these provinces, he says that the Conference should not be content with merely passing a resolution, but that it should vote a petition to the Secretary of State to impress upon him and his Council that the whole province feel the humiliation of being deprived of the council system of government most keenly. He expresses regret that so tried a friend of the people as Lord MacDonnell should be opposed to the measure, but he expresses the hope that now that Behar has been given an Executive Council, he may withdraw his opposition and allow his own province the benefits of the council form of government.

ADVOCATE, 21st March 1912.

The ensuing Provincial Conference.

33. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, refers to the report of an interview which a representative of the Manchester Guardian had with Mrs. Annie Besant in the course of which the King-Emperor's visit to India was discussed, and says that Mrs. Besant was right in saying that His Majesty had made himself much beloved by his personal kindness. The editor expresses agreement with Mr. Besant that the grant of fifty lakhs for education was inadequate, but urges that it was however a definite recognition and would strengthen the hands of those who worked for the spread of education. He expresses regret that she should have again revived the impractical question of the appointment of a member of the Royal family as the Viceroy of India.

ADVOCATE, 21st March 1912.

Mrs. Besant on the effect of the King-Emperor's visit to India.

34. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 22nd March 1912, complains that the action of those Muhammadans who desire to effect a reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans is very often criticised by the members of their own community, and remarks that the differences between the two communities cannot be settled unless the authorities concert measures to remove them.

OUDH AKHBAR, 22nd March 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

The editor advises the Muhammadans and the peace-loving Hindus to be more polite and cautious in their utterances and writings, as otherwise the present tension of feeling between them is likely to become more aggravated.

He particularly asks the Muhammadans not to criticise the actions of their co-religionists in strong language, seeing that the use of unguarded and unbecoming language can serve no useful purpose, and only makes matters worse.

35. A correspondent, who signs himself "M. FIRDOUSI OF LUCKNOW," contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, in which he dwells on the necessity for mutual good-will between the Hindus and Muhammadans, and says that one of the ways to improve the existing relations between them is to revive indigenous industries. He expresses appreciation of the efforts made by the Hindus to spread the swadeshi spirit in the country, but regrets that the Muhammadans should have kept themselves aloof from the movement and so have given cause for resentment to their Hindu brethren. He exhorts his co-religionists to use as far as possible indigenous goods, and asks them to form societies to promote the revival of indigenous industries.

MUSLIM GAZETTE. 18th March 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

SURMA-I-ROZGAR, 16th March 1912.

The establishment of panchayats in villages.

36. The Surma-i-Rozgar (Agra), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 21st March), expresses gratification that Indians are becoming imbued with the spirit of self-help, but deplores its absence in the people of the United Provinces.

The editor asks his countrymen to form village panchayats to settle their disputes in order to keep out of the hands of the corrupt police, and to save the money which they spend in litigation, to take proper measures for extending the education of their young men and to discourage the tendency to seek only for government service. He states that the Marwaris of Calcutta and a number of people in Cawnpore have decided not to file suits for recovery of money in the law courts but to settle their differences by means of arbitration, and expresses the hope that the people of these provinces will also follow the example of the Marwaris to save the money they would otherwise lose in litigation.

LEADER, 17th March 1912.

The system of recruitment of Judges.

37. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th March 1912, has the following:—

"A Madras civilian, whose premature retirement is reported, is Mr.——, who has risen in service only to the grade of Collector and Magistrate. He was for some time Joint Magistrate at a place known to the present writer, and his ways then were curious and mischievous; if he had been an older man, then they would have had to be stigmatised as scandalous. He would throw rulers at the heads of clerks and set his dog at pleaders who, in his opinion, were over-argumentative. No doubt the expedient served its purpose. Mr.—— also managed to pick up enough vernacular to abuse his subordinates coarsely. No doubt since that time Mr.—— has learnt better ways, and a degradation on one occasion for a serious mistake was not also without its effect. But throughout he has remained more or less unsympathetic. There was another Joint Magistrate at the same place who simply would not permit pleaders to argue at all. His position was that the facts of the case he knew as well as the pleaders, and the evidence he followed even better for he had to record it with his own hand. As for law, he remarked, he read the sections of the code just as well as the pleaders, and his knowledge of English was better than what they possessed. No doubt High Court Judges gave rulings, but when it was all a question of interpretation of the wording of the sections he saw no reason why he should allow himself to be troubled by their gloss when he knew English just as they did. It may be of interest to those concerned in the good and efficient administration of justice to know that this particular officer has since blossomed into a District and Sessions Judge. We hope and believe however that he has changed his methods for the better, and that he does not now threaten to pick the eyes out of pleaders who have the temerity to argue cases in disregard of his wishes, as he did when he was a Joint Magistrate. But is not the system of recruitment of our Judges radically wrong?"

NASIM-I-AGRA, 19th March 1912.

Holding of courts by judicial and revenue officers on tour.

38. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 19th March 1912 contains a contributed article, in which the writer describes the inconvenience and trouble which litigants have to undergo in travelling long distances in the cold weather in order to attend the courts of judicial and revenue officers on tour. He says that in criminal cases the accused persons are required to undertake long journeys on foot, and that they cannot easily arrange for counsel to defend them. He states that in many cases the accused cannot file appeals immediately after their conviction, owing to the delay in getting copies of judgments because the records are not at head quarters but in the camps of judicial officers, and suggests that criminal cases should be tried at head quarters only.

39. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, says that though the authorities did not succeed in their attempt to get the Nawab of Hoti Mardan convicted, they have at any rate been able to banish him from his province. TAFRIH, 21st March 1912.

The Hoti Mardan case.

The editor points out that the Nawab has undergone so much trouble, and is so much afraid of the high-handed action of the authorities of the Frontier Province that he has finally decided to settle in the Punjab, and has accordingly advertized his property in Hoti Mardan as being for sale.

40. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, referring to the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock's reply to Mr. Bhurgri's question regarding the trial of the Chief of Hoti Mardan, expresses the hope that Government will make the fullest possible investigation into the very serious allegations made in a pamphlet about the case which has been recently published from Lahore. ADVOCATE, 21st March 1912.

The Hoti Mardan case.

The editor remarks that in disgracing the Khan Bahadur, who had been the guest of the Chief Commissioner at the Delhi darbar, and who is said to be one of the richest men in the Frontier districts, no attention was paid to either law or procedure, but he says that it is hard to believe that the arbitrary proceedings of the Peshawar police had the sanction of high officials.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

41. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), refers to the rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya's proposal for the grant of a larger share of imperial revenues to the United Provinces, and to the rejection of other resolutions moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, and suggests that Government should show greater sympathy towards Indians, and that it should not in future reject without due consideration proposals made for the good of the country. RAHBAR, 14th March 1912.

The Imperial Budget.

He asks the Indians to elect representatives who will not look to officials for their views, but who will conscientiously safeguard the public interest.

42. With reference to the Financial Member's remark in opposing the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's resolution for a larger share of the provincial revenues that it would be unfair to deprive other provinces of their share in order to allot an increased grant to the United Provinces, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 22nd March 1912, argues that it was not evidence of justice on the part of the Government of India to show generosity to other provinces and to swell the surpluses of the Imperial Government at the expense of the United Provinces. The editor says that if the provincial share of the land revenue be increased it will place the United Provinces on an equality with other provinces, and will give it a larger share of its own revenues to be spent in the province. He urges the Government of India to do justice to the pressing claims of these provinces before disposing of the surpluses, and questions the correctness of the statement that an increased grant to the United Provinces would involve a disturbance of the steady development of provincial finance. He assures the Government of India that the cry of financial injustice will not cease till the grievances be redressed. LEADER, 22nd March 1912.

Financial justice to the United Provinces.

43. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 22nd March 1912, has the following:— LEADER, 22nd March 1912.

Ecclesiastical expenditure of British India.

"In the year 1910-11 a total of Rs. 18,65,000 was spent in the whole of British India under Ecclesiastical. The amount may be considered large, or it may be considered small. In either case on what justification does this item of expenditure rest in a non-Christian country under a neutral government?"

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

LEADER, 19th March 1912.

Water-supply at Allahabad.

44. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th March 1912, says that much inconvenience is caused to the people owing to the restiction of the water-supply at Allahabad, and the editor asks the municipal authorities to restore the normal supply or at any rate to increase the present supply which is not sufficient with the least possible delay.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st March 1912.

The Allahabad Municipality.

45. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, complains of the insanitary condition of some muhallas in the city, and of the insufficiency of the water-supply, and asks the chairman of the municipality to remove the causes for these complaints as soon as possible.

HINDUSTANI, 18th March 1912.

Undesirable Municipal Commissioners in Rohilkhand.

46. A correspondent, signing himself "A LOVER OF JUSTICE," contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, in which he informs Government that there are some persons who are members of certain municipal boards of Rohilkhand who are not entitled to be members either because they have been convicted of some criminal offence or because they have no personal income or property, and suggests that an enquiry should be made and that such persons should be punished.

The writer suggests that a question on the subject should be asked in the Legislative Council.

LEADER, 19th March 1912.

Municipal lighting.

47. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th March 1912, quotes figures from the Government Resolution on the divisional reviews submitted by Commissioners upon the administration and finances of municipalities in the United Provinces during 1910-11 to show that in a large number of municipalities the expenditure on lighting is not only below the standard fixed by Government but is quite inadequate. The editor states that complaints about defective and insufficient lighting have not been infrequent, and he urges the need for a considerable increase in the allotment under this head in order to remove the public grievance. He suggests that the introduction of a system of automatic lighting would be found less costly and would provide more powerful lights.

LEADER, 21st March 1912.

Non-official chairman of the Benares Municipality.

48. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, has the following:—

"Babu Balram Das writes in another column to suggest that the privilege of having a non-official chairman should be conferred on the Benares Municipal Board, and mentions the name of Pandit Rama Shankar Misra in that connection. Certainly the pandit should satisfy every requirement of the Government, as he is a retired Collector and Magistrate possessing ample administrative experience as well as the necessary leisure. The government of Sir John Hewett will earn the gratitude of the Indian community by conferring the coveted privilege on Benares."

ABHYUDAYA, 21st March 1912.

Local self-government.

49. In a leading article about municipal membership of the editor of the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), in the issue of the 21st March 1912, observes that the municipal board is the first step towards self-government, and that its members can do a great deal to improve the condition of the city and the comfort of its inhabitants by making proper arrangements for the supply of water and light, by enforcing sanitary laws, by increasing the number of schools for spreading primary education, and by undertaking other reforms and improvements conducive to the well-being of the people. He reminds the members of the board that their chief duties are to protect their poor brethren from the imposition of new taxes, and from the selfish interests of the Anglo-Indians, and to represent their constituents as an Indian and not as a Hindu or a Muhammadan.

SUBH CHINTAK, 20th March 1912.

Municipal electors.

50. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 20th March 1912, refers to the Allahabad municipal elections, and remarks that it is detrimental to the interests of the people to excite racial prejudice in contesting for municipal memberships.

(c)—Education.

51. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), referring to the lack of zeal in the actual collection of funds for the Hindu University expresses regret that the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya, who has so many other pressing engagements to attend to, is the only active worker in the cause, and deplores that though fifty lakhs have been promised, the cash collections amount only to one lakh and a half. The editor asks some earnest workers to come forward to help in the work, as otherwise the Hindu university scheme will fail.

RAHBAR, 14th March 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

52. The Muslim Review (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 14th February), contains a review by Mr. S. M. Hanif, B.A., criticising a series of articles entitled "Ideals behind the Muslim University movement" lately published by the Dawn Magazine of Calcutta. The writer denies the correctness of the author's contention that the University movement inaugurated by the Musalmans of India was calculated and intended to foster and direct the spirit of Pan-Islamism, not in the mediæval fashion of aggressiveness and fanaticism, but on modern lines of progress and organization, and he asserts that the ideas which permeate the whole of the essay are based on a misconception of the underlying principles of Muslim policy in India, which policy is to improve their lot under the ægis of British rule.

MUSLIM REVIEW, January 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

In this connection the following passages occur:—

"The author positively asserts that the university movement is, in its ultimate objective, intended to be what he calls 'politico-Islamic,' a means whereby to regain political ascendency for the congeries of races and peoples that make up the great confraternity of Islam, by creating at Aligarh a 'radiating centre of civilization and culture' which alone would render possible the progress of Islam as a whole. And under the smooth guise of fine phrases he very mischievously appears to warn the British government of the dangerous potentialities hidden in the Muhammadan University movement. To the uncritical mind his observations and quotations may carry conviction, but we honestly confess that his talk of documentary evidence, his cullings of stray words and utterances made in a moment of genuine enthusiasm, have not been able to convince us, and, to our mind, rather display a deplorable lack of the sense of proportion. In spite of his loud professions to the contrary, his effusions are the result of a warped mind, and his attempts to disparage the university movement urgently call for a strong protest from the thinking portion of Muslim India, and to work upon the passions of a foreign bureaucracy, peculiarly amenable to sinister influences, and to impute aggressive political motives to a purely educational movement, is the fond pursuit of a diseased and perverted mind."

He disagrees with the author's proposal to found a network of Muslim-controlled schools and colleges to serve as feeders before establishing a University itself, and points out that there are many colleges in Germany which are conducted on a single college basis, and that such an idea peculiarly appealed to those who originated the University scheme, as being adapted to the needs of Indian Muslims. He said that the latter were of opinion that instead of dissipating their energies in local efforts their activities should be centered in the establishment of an institution which would serve as a fountain of learning, and be a "radiating centre of civilization and culture" for all Muslim India.

The writer refers to Sir Saiyid Ahmad's scheme for spreading education among his Indian fellow-subjects without distinction of creed, and to his change of opinion after a visit to Europe, when he advocated the establishment of denominational universities as being best suited to the conditions prevailing in this country, and says that this was probably because Sir Saiyid's experience of Cambridge life showed him that without the social side of University life education would be incomplete, and he said that this was wholly wanting under Indian conditions. He expresses the opinion that it was considerations such as these and no Pan-Islamic vision which led him to abandon his former ideals.

Mr. Hanif asserts that the author's strongest objection to the University scheme was its character as an intellectual centre of Pan-Islamic activity, and he

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

LEADER, 19th March 1912.

Water-supply at Allahabad.

44. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th March 1912, says that much inconvenience is caused to the people owing to the restiction of the water-supply at Allahabad, and the editor asks the municipal authorities to restore the normal supply or at any rate to increase the present supply which is not sufficient with the least possible delay.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st March 1912.

The Allahabad Municipality.

45. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, complains of the insanitary condition of some muhallas in the city, and of the insufficiency of the water-supply, and asks the chairman of the municipality to remove the causes for these complaints as soon as possible.

HINDUSTANI, 18th March 1912.

Undesirable Municipal Commissioners in Rohilkhand.

46. A correspondent, signing himself "A LOVER OF JUSTICE," contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, in which he informs Government that there are some persons who are members of certain municipal boards of Rohilkhand who are not entitled to be members either because they have been convicted of some criminal offence or because they have no personal income or property, and suggests that an enquiry should be made and that such persons should be punished.

The writer suggests that a question on the subject should be asked in the Legislative Council.

LEADER, 19th March 1912.

Municipal lighting.

47. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th March 1912, quotes figures from the Government Resolution on the divisional reviews submitted by Commissioners upon the administration and finances of municipalities in the United Provinces during 1910-11 to show that in a large number of municipalities the expenditure on lighting is not only below the standard fixed by Government but is quite inadequate. The editor states that complaints about defective and insufficient lighting have not been infrequent, and he urges the need for a considerable increase in the allotment under this head in order to remove the public grievance. He suggests that the introduction of a system of automatic lighting would be found less costly and would provide more powerful lights.

LEADER, 21st March 1912.

Non-official chairman of the Benares Municipality.

48. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, has the following:—

"Babu Balram Das writes in another column to suggest that the privilege of having a non-official chairman should be conferred on the Benares Municipal Board, and mentions the name of Pandit Rama Shankar Misra in that connection. Certainly the pandit should satisfy every requirement of the Government, as he is a retired Collector and Magistrate possessing ample administrative experience as well as the necessary leisure. The government of Sir John Hewett will earn the gratitude of the Indian community by conferring the coveted privilege on Benares."

ABHYUDAYA, 21st March 1912.

Local self-government.

49. In a leading article about municipal membership of the editor of the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), in the issue of the 21st March 1912, observes that the municipal board is the first step towards self-government, and that its members can do a great deal to improve the condition of the city and the comfort of its inhabitants by making proper arrangements for the supply of water and light, by enforcing sanitary laws, by increasing the number of schools for spreading primary education, and by undertaking other reforms and improvements conducive to the well-being of the people. He reminds the members of the board that their chief duties are to protect their poor brethren from the imposition of new taxes, and from the selfish interests of the Anglo-Indians, and to represent their constituents as an Indian and not as a Hindu or a Muhammadan.

SUBH CHINTAK, 20th March 1912.

Municipal electors.

50. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 20th March 1912, refers to the Allahabad municipal elections, and remarks that it is detrimental to the interests of the people to excite racial prejudice in contesting for municipal memberships.

(c)—Education.

51. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), referring to the lack of zeal in the actual collection of funds for the Hindu University expresses regret that the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya, who has so many other pressing engagements to attend to, is the only active worker in the cause, and deplores that though fifty lakhs have been promised, the cash collections amount only to one lakh and a half. The editor asks some earnest workers to come forward to help in the work, as otherwise the Hindu university scheme will fail.

RAHBAR, 14th March 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

52. The Muslim Review (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 14th February), contains a review by Mr. S. M. Hanif, B.A., criticising a series of articles entitled "Ideals behind the Muslim University movement" lately published by the Dawn Magazine of Calcutta. The writer denies the correctness of the author's contention that the University movement inaugurated by the Musalmans of India was calculated and intended to foster and direct the spirit of Pan-Islamism, not in the mediæval fashion of aggressiveness and fanaticism, but on modern lines of progress and organization, and he asserts that the ideas which permeate the whole of the essay are based on a misconception of the underlying principles of Muslim policy in India, which policy is to improve their lot under the ægis of British rule.

MUSLIM REVIEW, January 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

In this connection the following passages occur:—

"The author positively asserts that the university movement is, in its ultimate objective, intended to be what he calls 'politico-Islamic,' a means whereby to regain political ascendency for the congeries of races and peoples that make up the great confraternity of Islam, by creating at Aligarh a 'radiating centre of civilization and culture' which alone would render possible the progress of Islam as a whole. And under the smooth guise of fine phrases he very mischievously appears to warn the British government of the dangerous potentialities hidden in the Muhammadan University movement. To the uncritical mind his observations and quotations may carry conviction, but we honestly confess that his talk of documentary evidence, his cullings of stray words and utterances made in a moment of genuine enthusiasm, have not been able to convince us, and, to our mind, rather display a deplorable lack of the sense of proportion. In spite of his loud professions to the contrary, his effusions are the result of a warped mind, and his attempts to disparage the university movement urgently call for a strong protest from the thinking portion of Muslim India, and to work upon the passions of a foreign bureaucracy, peculiarly amenable to sinister influences, and to impute aggressive political motives to a purely educational movement, is the fond pursuit of a diseased and perverted mind."

He disagrees with the author's proposal to found a network of Muslim-controlled schools and colleges to serve as feeders before establishing a University itself, and points out that there are many colleges in Germany which are conducted on a single college basis, and that such an idea peculiarly appealed to those who originated the University scheme, as being adapted to the needs of Indian Muslims. He said that the latter were of opinion that instead of dissipating their energies in local efforts their activities should be centered in the establishment of an institution which would serve as a fountain of learning, and be a "radiating centre of civilization and culture" for all Muslim India.

The writer refers to Sir Saiyid Ahmad's scheme for spreading education among his Indian fellow-subjects without distinction of creed, and to his change of opinion after a visit to Europe, when he advocated the establishment of denominational universities as being best suited to the conditions prevailing in this country, and says that this was probably because Sir Saiyid's experience of Cambridge life showed him that without the social side of University life education would be incomplete, and he said that this was wholly wanting under Indian conditions. He expresses the opinion that it was considerations such as these and no Pan-Islamic vision which led him to abandon his former ideals.

Mr. Hanif asserts that the author's strongest objection to the University scheme was its character as an intellectual centre of Pan-Islamic activity, and he reminds his readers of Saiyid Amir Ali's message to the Muslim League at Delhi to the effect that the sympathies and interests of the Indian Musalmans lay far beyond the limits of the Indian continent.

He states that this conveys a true comprehension of the ultimate ideals of the Muhammadan University movement, and that their sympathies with their brethren in other lands do not in any way absolve them from their allegiance to their territorial Sovereign.

The writer concludes the article with the following remarks: "It will be interesting to add that the ideas of Sir Saiyid regarding denominational institutions are slowly gaining ground among the more thoughtful of his countrymen. And it is a curious irony that men who denounced the Aligarh University scheme as a separatist propaganda, inimical to 'national' ideals, are striving for a Hindu University for India on much the same lines. Really it is a triumph of the ideas of Sir Saiyid, and an eloquent, though perhaps unconscious, tribute to the genius of the great sage of Aligarh."

MUSLIM, GAZETTE, 18th March 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

53. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, refers to the views expressed by His Highness the Agha Khan on the Muslim University to a representative of the Times of India (Bombay) on the eve of his departure to England, and expresses disagreement with his opinion that the conditions on which Government has agreed to grant a charter are reasonable and fair, and that the extent to which it has considered it necessary to interfere in the management and control of the University affairs is advisable. The editor says that the Muhammadan public would prefer to only allow such general supervision on the part of Government as would ensure that nothing seditious or subversive of the principles of Government is taught in the University. He goes on to state that the majority of the Muhammadans are opposed to the clause in the constitution which grants the power of veto to the Chancellor, and remarks that Muhammadans generally would rather devote the funds in hand to other educational purposes than have a University under these conditions.

He concludes by saying that the Agha Khan has represented his personal views and not those of the Muhammadan community.

AL BASHIR, 19th March 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

54. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 19th March 1912, expresses regret that the amount required for the proposed Muslim University has not yet been realised.

The editor suggests that efforts should be made to realise something from every individual Muhammadan, and observes that unless this course be taken no hope can be entertained of success in collecting the full amount required for the proposed university.

He deplores that a number of the trustees of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, have not yet paid their subscriptions, and remarks that their negligence in fulfilling their promises is calculated to produce a very undesirable effect on the moral training of the young men of the Aligarh college. He expresses gratification at the second instalment of rupees one lakh and seventy-five thousands given by Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal to the Muslim University fund, and expresses the hope that other ruling chiefs and nobles will double the amount of their subscriptions.

The paper publishes a contributed article in the same issue in which the writer expresses regret that no efforts are being made in Hyderabad to raise funds for the proposed Muslim University, and suggests that a deputation including the Nawab of Rampur and His Highness the Agha Khan should wait on His Highness the Nizam and on the officials and nobles of the State to ask for liberal donations to the university funds.

LEADER, 19th March 1912.

The postponement of the University examinations.

55. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th March 1912, refers to the statement that appeared in the Pioneer that there was no likelihood of the postponement of the degree examinations and to the conviction expressed by the editor of that paper on the strength of the official figures published in the gazette that plague was not very severe in Allahabad. The editor of the Leader expresses doubt as to the accuracy of the official figures, and says that there is a real panic among the people, although plague is not so bad as it was in some previous years. He urges the University authorities to adopt the wiser course of postponing the examinations.

The postponement of the University examinations.

56. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, has the following :—

LEADER, 21st March 1912.

"A petition signed by the Hon'ble Pandit Motilal Nehru, Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, Dr. D. R. Ranjit Singh, Mr. Surendra Nath Sen, Babu Iswar Saran, Rai Braj Narayan Gurtu, Mr. Muhammad Ishaq Khan, Dr. Suresh Chandra Banerji, Dr. Avinash Chandra Banerji, Lala Misri Lal and Babu Kampta Nath Bhargava has been just submitted to the Hon'ble the Vice-Chancellor of the Allahabad University praying for the postponement of the degree examinations on account of the plague at Allahabad."

The postponement of the University examinations.

57. Referring to the rejection by the Vice-Chancellor of the Allahabad University of the petition and memorials presented by students and their guardians for the postponement of the degree examinations, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, says that if it was too late to change the dates of the examinations, several centres for the degree examinations could have been easily formed, and that it was not too late to consider the suggestion and make Lucknow and Agra two such centres. He also suggests that the viva voce part of the examinations could be given up in case proper arrangements could not be made and the students be given facilities to be examined at centres where plague is not believed to be very bad.

ADVOCATE, 21st March 1912.

Female education.

58. A correspondent, who signs himself as "AMINA BEGAM OF AGRA," contributes an article to the January number of the Parda Nashin (Agra) (received on the 18th March 1912), in which she reviews the report of the Department of Public Instruction for the year ending 31st March 1911, and congratulates the Government on the progress made in female education in State and aided schools. She invites the attention of the people to the absence of religious education and of instruction in domestic duties in girls' schools.

PARDA NASHIN, January 1912.

Popular education.

59. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 17th March 1912, observes that the only way to lessen the expense of education is to reduce the number of highly-paid European officers employed in the Education Department, and to replace them, as far as practicable, by Indians. The editor says that if the cost of education be reduced there will be an increase from the fee-income, and that in the event of more money being required owing to the spread of education, municipal boards, and the Local and Supreme Governments can arrange to provide it without much inconvenience.

ABHYUDAYA, 17th March 1912.

Mass education.

60. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 20th March 1912, observes that one of the strongest proofs of British rule being based on justice and integrity is that it has always tried to promote the cause of education. The editor expresses regret that the Pioneer (Allahabad) in its leading article entitled "The lifting of the masses," should suggest that in the particular case of India the improvement of the masses can be achieved by beginning with sanitation and then introducing education. He remarks that without education not only can there be no improvement in the material condition of the masses but they cannot be taught even the elementary rules of sanitation.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 20th March 1912.

Raising of fees in colleges in the United Provinces and the Punjab.

61. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), deprecates the action of Government in raising fees in the United Provinces and the Punjab, and observes that it will seriously retard the progress of education. The editor states that the public have been practically debarred from opening private colleges, by the provision that all affiliated institutions have to charge 75 per cent. of the fees levied in government colleges, and remarks that this is the outcome of that policy which has led to the allotment of three-eighths instead of one-half of its revenues to the United Provinces. He asks Government to reconsider the matter.

RAHBAR, 14th March 1912.

OUDH AKHBAR, 17th March 1912.

A Muhammadan girl teacher in a missionary school at Amritsar.

62. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 17th March 1912, reports that recently in Amritsar a Muhammadan girl teacher was forcibly detained by the missionary lady in charge of the school where she was working. The editor says that some of her friends rescued her, with the result that they were prosecuted and sentenced to undergo imprisonment for a period of six months, and he remarks that the incident has caused considerable excitement to the public.

The editor asks his countrymen to make their own arrangements for the education of their girls, and urges them not to send their girls to mission schools where the Christian faith and Christian manners are taught.

ABHYUDAYA, 17th March 1912.

The Shibpur Engineering College.

63. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 17th March 1912, says that the closing of the Shibpur Engineering College will entail great hardship on the Bengali students, and suggests that the direct appointment of Europeans from England should be temporarily stopped and the number of posts in the provincial service be increased, in order to allay dissatisfaction caused among the passed students of the Shibpur College. The editor asks the Government to resort to the old system of selecting those students, who headed the list in the Shibpur engineering examinations for appointment in the Imperial service. He observes that Indians have proved themselves to be in no way inferior to European engineers.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 18th March 1912.

A suggestion for an Islamia College at Delhi.

64. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, expresses regret that the Observer (Lahore), should have disapproved of the suggestion to establish an Islamia College at Delhi.

The editor takes exception to the suggestion of the Observer to establish a hostel for Muhammadan students to be attached to the Hindu College, and describes it as derogatory to the feelings of self-respecting Muhammadans.

He asks the leading Muhammadans of Delhi to realise their duties and responsibilities and to bistir themselves in the iuterests of their community.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 18th March 1912.

The Nadwat-ul-Ulma.

65. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 18th March 1912, reports that a deputation of the students of the Nadwat-ul-Ulma will visit some important districts of Upper India to induce the members of the Muhammadan community to take part in the deliberations at its forthcoming annual session at Lucknow, and asks Muhammadans to attend in large numbers, seeing that important questions of general interest will be discussed, and that they will be able to see for themselves the working of the Nadwah.

AL MUSHIR, 18th March 1912.

The darbar educational grant.

66. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 18th March 1912 (received on the 21st March), says that the allotment of thirty lakhs for primary education and five lakhs for female education from the grant of fifty lakhs announced at the darbar for elementary education, cannot be productive of beneficial results unless proper means be devised to utilise the money.

The editor complains of the inadequacy of the grants of five lakhs and two lakhs respectively for hostels and industrial education, and urges the allotment of more funds for the study of agriculture which is the mainstay of the country. He invites attention to the disproportionately high grant of three lakhs made to European schools and asks for a special allotment for the education of the Muhammadan community, particularly for that of Eastern Bengal.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

PARDA NASHIN, January 1912.

The decrease of the female population in India.

67. One Mirza Karamatullah Beg of Hyderabad contributes an article to the January number of the Parda Nashin (Agra) (received on the 18th March 1912), in which he discusses the causes of the decrease of the female population in India, and remarks that unhealthy surroundings, lack of proper medical treatment, and cruelty of husbands and mothers-in-law are to a very great extent responsible for it. The writer adds that the restriction of the re-marriage of young widows is a frequent cause of suicide.

68. The Trishul (Benares), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), refers to the recent riot at Jamalpur on the part of the coolies employed in the railway workshop, and remarks that the disturbance was due to the indifference of the authorities to the grievances of the workmen.

TRISHUL, 14th March 1912.

The Jamalpur riot.

The editor suggests that the employés in the workshop should be treated properly, in order that they may not be led to follow the example set by the strikers in England.

69. The Mukhbir-i-Alam (Moradabad), of the 15th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), reports that there is a rumour that the area containing number of Muhammadan shrines and historical buildings is to be included within the proposed site for new Delhi, and remarks that the demolition of these buildings would be much resented by the Muhammadans, and the editor appeals to Government to preserve them in their original state.

MUKHBIR-I-ALAM, 15th March 1912.

New Delhi and old Islamic buildings.

70. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 17th March 1912, publishes a letter from a Shia Muhammadan in which he points out that the appointment to the Husainabad Trust of the candidate, who has secured the most votes, is open to objection, in that he secured only 54 out of 130 votes, which he says is not a majority of voters which the rules require. He states that there were certain irregularities in connection with the election, and he suggests that, if the Act be not suited to the changed circumstances, and Government cannot strictly follow it, it should be amended, and that females and the descendants of Muhammad Ali Shah should be excluded from the list of voters, on the ground that Muhammad Ali Shah never intended that his descendants as such should interfere in any way with the trust, and that, according to the old deed, they had no votes and were not eligible for the trusteeship. He states that with a few exceptions the descendants of Muhammad Ali are the most backward as a class in Lucknow. He proposes that the voting should be by ballot in order to put an end to the sale and purchase of votes, and that only those Shia Muhammadans who reside in Lucknow and who are entitled to vote for the election of a Muhammadan to represent them in the Legislative Council of these provinces should be allowed to vote.

ADVOCATE, 17th March 1912.

The Husainabad Endowment.

He concludes with the suggestion that, if for any reason it is not desirable to amend the Act, it should be repealed which will afford a wider field for selection.

71. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 19th March 1912 asks for the inscription of the value of the new coin in Hindi character, on the ground that, when Government has seen its way to withdraw the coin on the representation of a few Muhammadans, it is reasonable to expect it to accede to the wishes of twenty-two crores of Hindus.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 19th March 1912.

The new coin and Hindi.

72. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, deplores the backward condition of India in the matter of sanitary improvements, and points out that while for every thousand people fifteen persons die in the British Isles, no less than thirty-eight die in India. The editor observes that very few people stop to consider the very great injury to India resulting from this enormous loss of life, more than half of which might be prevented by the application of preventive measures. He states that the problem of sanitation is beset with many difficulties, and that its solution depends to a great extent on the spread of education in the country.

ADVOCATE, 21st March 1912.

Sanitary work in India.

He adversely criticises the opinion expressed by the Pioneer (Allahabad) that it is not so much education that is needed but that the spread of sanitation was the first step to be taken towards the lifting of the Indian masses, and remarks that the increased grants made by the Government of India both for education and sanitation show that it has begun to realise the supreme importance of the two most urgent requirements of India. He expresses agreement with the opinion of the Hon'ble Surgeon-General Sir C. P. Lukis that the money allotted for medical research in India is profitably spent, but complains that competent

Indian medical men are not afforded adequate opportunities in the matter of carrying on medical research in India.

V.—Legislation.

LEADER, 20th March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

73. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 20th March 1912, says that the rejection of the Elementary Education Bill in the Imperial Council should not cause any disappointment or surprise, as it had been anticipated for some time. The editor says that in spite of a careful consideration of the opinions of Local Governments and the speech by the Member for Education in the Council he is still of opinion that the Bill cannot be regarded as being such an objectionable measure than it could not have been accepted by Government with very little inconvenience. He remarks that the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's critics for the most part contented themselves with expressions of unnecessary fears and vague inanities. He fails to understand how religious instruction would become an impossibility in the case of Muhammadan boys, and expresses surprise at the opposition of the Hon'ble Sir G. M. Chitnavis and the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy, seeing that the Central Provinces were the most backward parts of the country in the matter of education.

With regard to Sir Harcourt Butler's reply he observes that in spite of what Government has done there yet remains a good deal to be accomplished, and expresses doubt as to whether progress will be much quicker in the future than it has been in the past, unless resort be had to compulsion.

He expresses regret at the decision of Government to prevent the further progress of the Bill, and concludes by saying that people should take consolation and encouragement from the sympathetic words of the Member for Education, from the declaration of policy on the part of Lord Hardinge and from Mr. Gokhale's own avowed determination to proceed with his labours until he had achieved success.

The editor concludes the article by urging the educated community to keep the agitation alive and to show their gratitude to Mr. Gokhale for what he has done by persistent endeavours to spread education and to popularize compulsion, till at last Government is compelled to accede to a great national demand.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

74. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, referring to the rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, observes that the educated community as a whole have an imperative duty, which is to keep the agitation alive and to do everything they can to accomplish success sooner or later.

TAFRIH, 21st March 1912.

The Medical Registration Bill.

75. A correspondent who describes himself as Pandit Thakur Dat Sharma Vaid, editor, of the Deshupkarak (Lahore), contributes an article to the Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 21st March 1912, in which he refers to a letter circulated by the president and secretary of the Tibbi Conference held at Delhi urging the need for submitting joint representations to the Government of Bombay about the Medical Registration Bill, and making timely efforts to safeguard the interests of the hakims and vaids.

The writer expresses disagreement with the suggestion approved by the conference that four hakims and vaids from certain specified unani and ayurvedic institutions should be allowed seats on the Medical Council, and that the practice of the profession should be restricted to the graduates of those unani and ayurvedic schools only.

He states that four members in the Medical Council could not serve any real purpose, seeing that they would be outnumbered by the doctors who would always vote against them, and he points out that the present circumstances of the country do not permit of the restriction of the practice of the profession to the graduates of a limited number of ayurvedic and unani institutions.

He contends that the bill does not seem to affect hakims and vaids, and suggests that the Bombay government should be asked to state clearly to which extent its provisions will apply to hakims and vaids.

HINDUSTANI, 22nd March 1912.

Gambling in kite-flying and quail-fighting.

76. One Saiyid Mohamed Baqar of Lucknow contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 22nd March 1912, in which he invites attention to the practice of gambling in kite-flying and quail-fighting in Lucknow, and suggests that special legislation should be resorted to on the lines followed by the Bombay Government in providing against gambling on race courses.

The writer asks the Lucknow member to move a resolution on the subject in the Provincial Legislative Council.

VI.—Railway.

77. In a leading article the Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th March 1912, discusses the financial condition of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway system, which is said to have been a burden to the finances of the Government of India, and remarks that, in spite of the fact that the net earnings of the railway amounted to two crores and fifty-eight lakhs of rupees in 1910, which worked out to 6·67 per cent. of the capital, there was a net loss of eleven lakhs of rupees to the Government in that year on account of this railway alone, and the editor expresses surprise that the company, which has profited at the expense of the Indian tax-payer, should have the entire voice in the matter of the management of the railway and in the spending of a very large sum of revenue.

The Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

LEADER, 17th March 1912.

With regard to the earnings the editor complains that the Great Indian Peninsula Railway indulges in unprofitable competition, which not only has an adverse effect on its own earnings but affects other railways as well. He points out that, notwithstanding that coal is not an important source of revenue on this railway, it has combined with the Bengal-Nagpur Railway in carrying coal from the coal fields to the United Provinces and the Punjab, which causes, in most cases, unnecessary haulage of seven hundred extra miles for wagons and which brings no profit to the railway. Again, in regard to grain and seeds he shows that on its local traffic the railway does its best to keep as high rates as it possibly can, but the moment it has something to gain from another railway it at once goes down to the absolute minimum, with the result that it directly restricts the development of inter-provincial trade.

The editor says that it cannot be argued that it is in the interests of expansion of cultivation and of export trade that such a method of rates has been adopted, for in that case the railway rates would have been lowered all round and not from any particular places only. He gives a few illustrations to show that in the competition between State lines, in the capital liability of all of which the Government of India is most directly concerned, they are cutting down rates at competitive points regardless of the interests of the Indian population, and to pay for this unprofitable competition the local traffic is made to pay a relatively much higher rate of freight.

78. A correspondent named Raghubar Dayal contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 22nd March 1912, in which he invites the attention of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway authorities to the absence of any proper raised platform and to the need for a zenana waiting room at Ram Chaura Road station on the newly-opened Allahabad-Rae Bareli-Cawnpore section.

Platform and waiting room for Ram Chaura Road station.

HINDUSTANI, 22nd March 1912.

He says that as the locality is inhabited by respectable people and as a number of fairs are held in the vicinity the construction of a platform and of a waiting room for Indian ladies is absolutely necessary.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

79. One Umrao Singh of Umballa contributes an article describing the responsibility of Hindus for cow-killing to the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th March 1912 (received on the 18th March), in which he says that the Hindus themselves are to blame to a large extent for the slaughter of cows, seeing that they sell cows to butchers and finance them, and that they bring under cultivation every piece of pasture land. The writer says that the gaushalas, where only old and decrepit animals are kept, are useless, and suggests that gaushalas should be maintained for producing cattle of the finest breed.

Hindus and cow-killing.

RAHBAR, 14th March 1912.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 19th March 1912.

The cow-protection movement.

80. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 19th March 1912 contains an article on the protection of cattle, in which the editor lays stress on the need for the protection of cows on humanitarian and economic grounds.

ABHYUDAYA, 17th March 1912.

The Kydganj gaushala.

81. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 17th March 1912, deplores the financial condition of the Kydganj gaushala, Allahabad, and appeals for help.

MASHRIQ, 19th March 1912.

A suggestion for the appointment of a Sheikh-ul-Islam.

82. One Qamar Ahmad of Allahabad contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 19th March 1912, in which he discusses the subject of waqfs and other Muhammadan religious and socio-religious questions, and suggests the appointment of a Sheikh-ul-Islam for India to watch their religious interests, instead of asking Government to legislate on matters relating to religious reforms.

He suggests that in divorce, marriage and other such cases the jury should be composed of learned Muhammadans and religious leaders.

With regard to waqfs to children, the writer says that such waqfs either fall under hebba (gift) or under wasiat (will), and that there is no necessity for raising any discussion about them.

MASHRIQ, 19th March 1912.

Waqfs in Ghazipur.

83. One Abul Kalam Saiyid Zakir Husain Hunar of Ghazipur contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 19th March 1912, in which he complains of the misappropriation of the waqf funds of Ghazipur by the mutawallis and contractors. He says that the papers regarding the waqfs, which were at first freely accessible to all at all times, can now be seen only after a fortnight's notice and on payment of a fee of one rupee.

He further complains that they have not only misappropriated the profits of the wakf property, but have also utilised the money realised from the sale of parts of the property itself in their own private affairs.

OUDH AKHBAR, 20th March 1912.

The propagation of Islam.

84. One Saiyid Zawar Husain Tarrar, contributes an article to the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 20th March 1912, in which he refers to the editorial note of the Oudh Akhbar about the propagation of Islam in Japan (vide Selections No. 9 of 1912, paragraph 99), and observes that the progress of Islam was retarded by the despotic rule of some of the Muhammadan kings, who cared only for their own luxuries and comforts and remained quite indifferent to the propagation of their religion as well as by the neglect of religious principles by the present-day Muhammadan.

He says that the Muhammadan law relating to succession, marriage, gift and waqfs for charitable purposes, has always been admired by the learned men of every religion, and he expresses the opinion that, if their laws be compared with those of other religions, and shown to the civilized people of Japan and America, there is every hope that Islam will make more converts in these two countries than it has done among the negros of Africa.

LEADER, 21st March 1912.

The Kayasth Conference.

85. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st March 1912, publishes a lengthy article contributed by Lala Ishwar Saran on the subject of the ensuing Kayasth Conference, in which he expresses approval of the selection of Babu Sarda Charan Mittra as president of the Conference, and of the proposal of the Reception Committee to extend the right to take part in the deliberations of the Conference to Kayasths of all parts of the country. He commends the proposal to hold a combined dinner at Fyzabad on the occasion of the Conference, and wishes it every success. He describes the evils of the pardah system and suggests its gradual abolition.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 23rd March 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] (313) No. 13 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 30th March 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The international situation ... 319
2. The attempt on the life of the King of Italy 319
3. The Italian-Turkish war 319
4. Pan-Islamism 319
5. The situation in Persia 320

(b)—Home:

6. Lord Crewe and the Anglo-Indian papers at Calcutta 320
7. Lord Crewe and the Anglo-Indian papers at Calcutta 320
8. The working of the Press Act in the Punjab 320
9. The working of the Press Act in the Punjab 321
10. Ulmas in legislative councils... ... 321
11. The Provincial Legislative Council ... 321
12. The recent Provincial Council election 322
13. The Supreme Legislative Council ... 322
14. The Royal visit 323
15. The Royal boons 323
16. The change of Capital 324
17. The Imperial Crown 324
18. Sedition in religion 324
19. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 324
20. Liberalism and India 324
21. Public life in the country 325
22. A proposal to make Agra the head quarters of the United Provinces ... 325
23. The Provincial Conferences 325
24. Indians in the colonies 325

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

Page.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

Nil.

(b)—Police:

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

25. Ecclesiastical expenditure of British India... 326

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

26. The abolition of octroi duty... ... 326
27. Non-official chairman for the Mirzapur Municipality 326

(e)—Education:

28. The Government High School, Almora ... 326
29. The ancient and modern educational system of India... 327
30. Education in India 327
31. The educational policy of the Government of India 327
32. Education among Vaishyas 328
33. The postponement of University examinations 328
34. Remuneration to invigilators at the Allahabad University examinations ... 328
35. The matriculation examination ... 328
36. The School-leaving certificate and the Law School 328
37. The Calcutta University convocation ... 329

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

38. Forest re-settlement in the Almora district 329

(g)—General:

39. The appointment of Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India 329
40. Sanitary work in India 329
41. The duties of young men 329
42. Sale of meat by Muhammadan hawkers in Islamnagar 329

		Page.
43.	The need for the development of indigenous industries	330
44.	Supersession of a deserving Indian officer	330
45.	The coinage of 1835 and 1840 ...	330

V.—LEGISLATION.

46.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	330
47.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	330
48.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	331
49.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	331
50.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	331
51.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	332
52.	The Indian Companies Bill	332

VI.—RAILWAY.

53.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	332

VII.—POST OFFICE.

54.	A suggestion for the revival of the Mussoorie Postal Memorial Association ...	333

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

55.	The revival of Islam	333
56.	The vindication of the Arya Samaj ...	334
57.	The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha and the Nau-Muslims	335
58.	Pilgrimage to Mecca	335

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st March 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji ...	3,000 „
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	300 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-us-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Kwárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Abdus Shakur; 34	900 copies.
29	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 „
30	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

*Irregular.

†Temporarily stopped.

		Page.
43.	The need for the development of indigenous industries	330
44.	Supersession of a deserving Indian officer	330
45.	The coinage of 1835 and 1840 ...	330

V.—LEGISLATION.

46.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	330
47.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	330
48.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	331
49.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	331
50.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	331
51.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	332
52.	The Indian Companies Bill	332

VI.—RAILWAY.

53.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	332

VII.—POST OFFICE.

54.	A suggestion for the revival of the Mussoorie Postal Memorial Association ...	333

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

55.	The revival of Islam	333
56.	The vindication of the Arya Samaj ...	334
57.	The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha and the Nau-Muslims	335
58.	Pilgrimage to Mecca	335

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st March 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji ...	3,000 „
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Kwárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Abdus Shakur; 34	900 copies.
29	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 „
30	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshid-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

*Irregular.

†Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shah Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
47	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 copies.
48	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
49	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
50	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
51	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
52	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
53	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
54	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
55	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
56	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
57	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
58	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
59	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
60	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
61	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
62	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
63	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
68	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Khwaja Muhammad	223 ,,
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 ,,
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	650 copies.
82	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
83	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
84	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwárí Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
85	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
86	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	850 ,,
87	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	800 ,,
88	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
89	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	800 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	800 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasim-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	800 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	800 ,,
	Arabic-Urdu.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	800 copies.
	Hindi.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.	... ...
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	800 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 ,,
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 ,,
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
122	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
123	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27... ...	5,000 „
*124	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 „
125	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 „
126	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 „
127	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 „
128	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 „
129	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 „
130	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 „
131	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 „
132	Swadesh Bándhava ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 „
133	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman
134	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal	200 copies.
*135	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 „
136	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	850 „
137	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†138	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
139	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 „
140	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
141	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 „
142	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 „
143	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 „
144	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 „
145	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A. ...	1,000 „
146	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Sita Ram Dinkar ; 45	500 „
†147	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 „
148	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 „
149	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal ; Khatri ; 55 ...	1,000 „
150	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
151	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Muslim Review (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 14th February), publishes an article entitled "A retrospective view of the international situation," contributed by Mr. Siraj-ul-Islam, in which the writer says that recent international events have shown that the European Powers neglect all the ordinary standards of ethics and morality. He asserts that in theory much is heard of the right and justice of the weak, but that in practice it is not applied to weak Powers like Turkey. He says that if only Italy or France had been guilty of violating international laws it would not have been so bad, but that the whole of Europe maintains the same standard of international morality. He ridicules the proposition that the French occupied Fez in response to the urgent appeal of the Sultan of Morocco and that the Spaniards despatched five hundred troops on the following day for Allazar for the "maintenance of the Sultan's authority and the protection of the town," and expresses regret that these measures should have had the approval of the civilized world and the cordial sympathy of Russia and Great Britain. The writer denounces the Italian occupation of Tripoli as an act of brigandage, effected without regard for any consideration of justice or morality, but says that it is a consolation to know that the European, and especially the English press, have condemned the action of Italy. He thanks the journalists concerned for their sense of justice and fair play. Mr. Siraj-ul-Islam appeals to England as the greatest Muhammadan Power to show special consideration for Muhammadan feelings, and urges it to be sympathetic in all its dealings with Turkey.

MUSLIM REVIEW, January 1912.

The international situation.

2. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 22nd March 1912 (received on the 25th March), refers to the attempt on the life of the King of Italy by an anarchist, and remarks that the escape of the King of Italy is fortunate also from a religious point of view, seeing that if he had fallen a victim to the shot of the anarchist the Muhammadans would have been more impressed than ever with the misleading idea that Islam was a divine religion, and they would have asserted that God himself avenged the wrongs of the Muhammadans.

MUSAFIR, 22nd March 1912.

The attempt on the life of the King of Italy.

3. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th March 1912, refers to the proposal made by some of the European Powers to intervene in the Italian-Turkish war, and remarks that at the beginning of the war, when Turkey appealed to the Powers for intervention, no heed was paid to the appeal, probably because they thought that Tripoli would be easily conquered.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor suggests that it is only now when the European Powers have seen the Arabs and Turks making common cause in protecting their country, and that the Italians have been sustaining reverses, that they have expressed their desire to bring about a settlement between the two countries.

He remarks that the European Powers do not like to see Italy being defeated by a Muhammadan Power, and that is why they wish to give up their neutrality and to combine for the purpose of humiliating Turkey. He urges that Turkey should never consent to cede Tripoli, as such a step would probably be the first of a series of concessions of territory which would result in her eclipse as a nation.

In conclusion the editor expresses agreement with the view expressed in the Tanin (Constantinople) that Turkey should not dispose of Tripoli, no matter what inducement was offered, even if she be asked to do so by all the Powers, and also that now that the Italians have not been able to make any impression after such a prolonged compaign, the Powers should allow the war to be carried on to the bitter end.

4. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 26th March 1912, expresses regret at the lack of sympathy on the part of Indian Muhammadans with their co-religionists in other countries, and remarks that those persons who try to impress upon Government that they have no connection with the Muhammadans of Tripoli and Persia, and

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 26th March 1912.

Pan-Islamism.

who try to conceal the natural Pan-Islamic sympathies of Indian Muhammadans, are only attempting to mislead Government. The editor deplores the downfall of Muslim kingdoms all over the world, and concludes with the remark that their salvation lies in unity alone.

OUDH AKHBAR, 27th March 1912.

The situation in Persia.

5. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 27th March 1912, discusses the joint loan to Persia, and observes that the difficulty of spending it usefully is almost as great as that of devising means for its repayment. Referring to the proposal to devote the greater part of the loan to the organization of a new military police and the replacement of the irregulars by a body of trained soldiers, the editor expresses regret that Persia should have so long neglected to develop her military strength.

He deplores the existence of internal dissensions in Persia, and complains of the onerous conditions of the loan, which he recognizes must be accepted as a matter of necessity. He expresses doubt as to whether the foreign troops will evacuate Persia after the transaction of the loan, and says that it remains to be seen what policy the Powers will adopt after the loan is given.

Discussing the form of government suitable for Persia, the editor points out that the country has fared worse under constitutional government than under the old régime, and expresses the hope that the Persians, after what they have suffered, will realise that the new form of government has proved to be the bane of the country.

(b)—Home.

LEADER, 24th March 1912.

Lord Crewe and the Anglo-Indian papers at Calcutta.

6. Referring to the protest of the Calcutta Anglo-Indian papers against the Secretary of State's reference to the English newspapers in Calcutta in the House of Lords in connection with the debate on Indian affairs, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th March 1912, remarks that, if the Press Act had been applied only to those papers which were opposed to British rule itself, the number of such papers, if there be any at all, would have been quite insignificant, and the Government could easily have put an end to them without the Press Act. The editor observes that the Act has been a means of discouraging the free expression of opinion, or at any rate of making such expression somewhat dangerous to the publicists concerned, no matter how loyal they may be known to be. He says that the Anglo-Indian papers knew full well that in actual operation the Act would be as good as non-existent so far as they were concerned, and it was for this reason that they extended their support to it, but that they are now remonstrating when they find they have now to reckon with a fair-minded Secretary of State and with a strong Governor General who is not disposed to tolerate the excesses of the Anglo-Indian press.

ADVOCATE, 28th March 1912.

Lord Crewe and the Anglo-Indian papers at Calcutta.

7. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th March 1912, refers to the indignant protests of the Anglo-Indian journalists in Calcutta about Lord Crewe's remark as to the possibility of the application of the provisions of the Press Act to some of the English papers in Calcutta in consequence of their attitude with regard to the administrative changes, and remarks that the Anglo-Indian press were unanimous in their support of the Press Act, but that now when the Secretary of State has hinted at the application of the provisions of that very measure in the case of Anglo-Indian journals, they have lashed themselves into a state of fury, and have appealed for support to the Council of the Institute of Journalists in London. The editor observes that the Anglo-Indian journalists, who lost no opportunity to cast reckless and malicious aspersions on the loyalty and good faith of their Indian fellow-subjects, should be able now to realise why the latter protested against the passing of a measure which was calculated to interfere with the liberty of the press and to stifle honest expression of opinion.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 27th March 1912.

The working of the Press Act in the Punjab.

8. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 27th March 1912, refers to the fact that security has been demanded by the District Magistrate of Lahore under the Indian Press Act from the Zamindar (Lahore), and remarks that the authorities, being ignorant of the niceties of the Urdu language, are often led away by mischief-mongers to misinterpret the writings of Urdu journals.

The editor contends that the articles that have appeared in the Zamindar cannot be regarded in any way as seditious, or as opposed to Government, and that, on the contrary, the paper has always advocated loyalty to Government.

He expresses regret that the editor of the Zamindar should have been charged by one of his Lahore contemporaries with preaching sedition and with preparing a body of men antagonistic to the interests of British government in India, and observes that the charge is preferred not only against the editor of the Zamindar, but against the whole Muhammadan community.

He deplores that a Muhammadan paper of Lahore should have called the Muslim Gazette also a seditious journal, and he urges that both the Muslim Gazette and the Zamindar have always assured their readers that the British government in India was a blessing for the Muhammadans, and that at the same time they were convinced that Government was constituted of human beings who were not infallible.

He says that the Zamindar and the Muslim Gazette have endeavoured to lay before Government the real sentiments of their community in an independent and vigorous tone, and that their writings cannot be called by the Muhammadan public in any way as favouring the views of the extremists.

9. Referring to the fact that security has been demanded from the Zamindar (Lahore), the editor of the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), in the issues of the 21st and 28th March 1912 (received on the 29th March), remarks that the paper has always been straightforward and loyal in expressing its views. He points out that in other similar cases the security has been demanded by the Punjab government, and that the articles on account of which action has been taken were specified; while in the case of the Zamindar the security was demanded by the District Magistrate and no objectionable articles were specified.

The working of the Press Act in the Punjab.

ZUL QARNAIN, 21st and 28th March 1912.

He contends that under the Press Act a District Magistrate can only demand security on the institution of a paper, and argues that when once a paper has been started the Local Government alone is authorized to take action.

Referring to similar action taken with regard to the daily edition of the Zamindar, he suggests that the Punjab government should decide definitely whether a District Magistrate is entitled to demand security, when a weekly newspaper is converted into a bi-weekly or a daily. In conclusion he advises the editor of the Zamindar to discontinue the daily edition, and to revive the monthly Punjab Review instead.

The Agra Akhbar of the 28th March 1912, expresses agreement with the views of the editor of the Zul Qarnain on the subject.

AGRA AKHBAR, 28th March 1912.

10. Nawab Haji Ismail Khan contributes an article to the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 24th March 1912, in which he refers to the criticism of his suggestion that appeared in the Oudh Akhbar of the 12th instant (vide Selections No. 11 of 1912, paragraph 21), and observes that the election of ulmas as members of legislative councils is both necessary and desirable, on the ground that they will be better able to discuss the legislative measures in councils affecting their religion.

Ulmas* in legislative councils.

OUDH AKHBAR, 24th March 1912.

He goes on to say that ulmas and learned men always used to exercise great influence in the councils of Muhammadan kings, and urges in support of his contention that the post of Shaikh-ul-Islam in Muhammadan kingdoms is still given to the greatest alim (learned person) in the country, and that the approval by this functionary of all regulations is essential before they are passed into law for the guidance of the people.

He expresses the hope that his suggestion will be given a practical shape by the people on the occasion of the next election.

11. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 27th March 1912, refers to the fact that a question by the Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh was disallowed at the last meeting of the Council and that there were two questions similarly disallowed at the previous meeting, and suggests that the questions should be published for general information so that those of the public who take an intelligent interest in such matters might form their own opinion as to the propriety of the question.

The Provincial Legislative Council.

LEADER, 27th March 1912.

ADVOCATE, 28th March 1912.

The recent Provincial Council election.

12. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th March 1912, has the following:—

"RECENT COUNCIL ELECTION.

A correspondent draws attention to the following extract from the manifesto issued in support of Mr. Saiyid Nabi-ullah in his candidature in the recent Council election.

'Shaikh Shahid Husain is Joint Secretary of the British Indian Association hence to expect that he will be able to raise his voice in the Council against the Hindus is a sad mistake. The following facts will bear witness to this :—

(1) In his opinion separate electorate is not beneficial to the country and nation.

(2) He holds that cow-killing is responsible for the ruin of the country.

(3) He cannot sympathize with Turks or Persians because he is under apprehension that his estate might be confiscated.

'Brother, what right has he who feels in this way got to be your representative in the Council? In my opinion it is a matter of shame that he should seek the help of separate electorates for his honour to which he is opposed, and it is a greater matter of shame and humiliation for you electors that you should vote for a person who declares your electorate as one which clogs the progress of the country.

'Sir, in this election there is a great mystery which should no more be allowed to remain shrouded. It is this, that from the time that the Hon'ble Mr. Jenkins made a declaration to the effect that separate electorates will continue to exist till such time that the Muhammadans do not themselves cease to demand them our fellow-countrymen (biradran vatan) are on the look out for securing a majority of such Muhammadans in the Council, who might tell Government that they do not need separate electorates. Gentlemen, do not forget the fact that Mr. Shahid Husain will be a member of this party, and that is the reason why the old friend of Muhammadans, Babu Ganga Prasad Varma, and his senior Khalifa, Shaikh Muhammad Yusuf Husain Khan, are strong canvassers of Mr. Shahid Husain. There was no reason why Mr. Shahid Husain should have stood for this electorate.'

Any comments on the above are superfluous. Let it be carefully noted what disgraceful tactics friends of separate electorates use to discredit rival candidates and how the feelings of religious bitterness against Hindus are fanned by unfounded statements in order to establish the claim for sectarian electorate. When in Council elections one finds such expressions of bitterness one need not prophesy what will happen if the principle of separatism were extended to local bodies."

LEADER, 27th March 1912.

The Supreme Legislative Council.

13. Reviewing the work of the Supreme Legislative Council during the last session the Leader (Allahabad), of the 27th March 1912, remarks that the session this year was unusually short and suggests that it would be a decided advantage if the session were spread over a longer time, and the editor expresses the hope that this may be found possible in future years. He refers to the important legislative measures dealt with during the session and remarks that the Co-operative Societies, the Life Assurance Societies and the Provident Fund Societies Acts were necessary and beneficial measures for which the people should be grateful to Government. He describes the deletion of clause 34 of the second of these measures, the withdrawal of the White Phosphorous Matches Prohibition Bill and the virtual withdrawal of the General Delegation Bill as concessions to public opinion for which the government of Lord Hardinge is entitled to their gratitude.

He notes that the two non-official measures gave rise to some contention, and expresses satisfaction that the progressive section of the Indian community extended its cordial support to both measures. He expresses the hope that if the Indian reform party be energetic and watchful the ultimate triumph of both the bills will be assured.

With regard to the resolutions on general administrative matters and finance moved by the non-official members during the session he remarks that the discussions on them served a useful purpose, as was testified to by His Excellency the Viceroy in his speech when bringing the business of the session to a close. He describes Sir Fleetwood Wilson's budget as a popular one, and endorses on behalf of the Indian community the tribute to his admirable work paid by His Excellency the Viceroy and by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale.

He notes that of the members the first place must as usual be given to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, who has developed into the ablest parliamentarian in the country and who, the editor says, might well compare with Mr. Asquith in the House of Commons itself. Of the other members he commends the work of Mr. Mudholkar, Mr. Basu, Sir Vithaldas Thakersey, Mr. Mazhar-ul-Haq and Mr. Subba Rao.

Of the official members he states that Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson and Sir James Meston continued to enjoy their well-merited reputation as the best speakers and debaters, and remarks that the Law Member's speeches were disappointing and were marred by his intemperate language. The editor says that His Excellency's speeches gave evidence of his lofty ideals of his genuine sympathy, and of his ability as a statesman.

The editor, in the course of another note in the same issue of the paper about a proposal by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale for the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the possibility of broadening the basis of taxation in India, remarks that the poverty of the Indian people is reflected in the poverty of the Government's resources. He suggests that there should be a readjustment of taxation and that the import duties, including that on cotton, should be generally increased. He says that the administration and the condition of the people cannot be improved without more revenue being placed at the disposal of Government.

14. The Almora Akhbar of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 26th March), observes that His Majesty the King-Emperor's visit to India has strengthened the bonds of the British Empire. ALMORA AKHBAR, 29th February 1912.

The Royal visit.

The editor refers to the composition of the Kumaun battalion, which used to be composed of Brahmans and Kshattriyas of Kumaun and Garhwal, and which he said served Government faithfully during the mutiny of 1857, and complains that its title has now been changed to that of the 3rd Gurkhas, and that only Gurkhas are recruited. He says that the people of the Kumaun division are brave, have fewer religious scruples than their ancestors, and are desirous of being recruited for the Army, and he therefore expresses the hope that Government will give the matter its attention.

15. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 21st March 1912 (received on the 29th March), refers to the grant of an annual pension of Rs. 100 to the present holders and future recipients of the titles of Shams-ul-Ulma and Mahamahopadhyaya in connection with the announcement made at the coronation darbar by His Excellency the Governor General, and remarks that the amount of pension, which comes to Rs. 8-5-4 per mensem, is so small that it would not be enough even for a man of the lower middle class to maintain himself, and suggests that the amount should be raised to Rs. 100 per month. ZUL QURNAIN, 21st March 1912.

The Royal boons.

The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 25th instant, says that though the amount of pension is trifling it nevertheless is evidence of the generosity of Government. TOHFA-I-HIND, 25th March 1912.

The editor suggests that if it be the intention of Government that the holders of the titles of Shams-ul-Ulma and Mahamahopadhyaya should engage themselves exclusively in literary work, it should raise the amount of pension from Rs. 100 to Rs. 500 per year, in order that they may be freed from all cares and anxiety in the matter of earning their livelihood.

Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 26th instant, remarks that the sum granted is not even sufficient to enable the title-holders to maintain a respectable position. The editor suggests that the amount of the pension should be raised to Rs. 1,200 per year, and observes that, in case Government do not find it possible, it would be better that no pension at all be given to them. AL BASHIR, 26th March 1912.

The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 27th instant, suggests that at least Rs. 50 per month should be granted to the recipients of the titles of Shams-ul-Ulma and Mahamahopadhyaya, and that in case this be not possible it would be better that no pension whatever be given to them. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 27th March 1912.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th March 1912.

16. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th March 1912, refers to a rumour that the area containing Muhammadan shrines and historical buildings is to be included within the proposed site for new Delhi, and enquires whether it is intended to demolish them in order to make room for the new buildings for the new Imperial city.

The change of Capital.

The editor invites the attention of Government to the matter, and expresses the hope that any Islamic monuments will be preserved.

He altogether disapproves of the suggestion to change the name of Delhi.

LEADER, 30th March 1912.

17. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 30th March 1912, has the following :—

The Imperial Crown.

"Mr. Montague's statement on the decision to keep the Indian Darbar Crown in the Tower of London is not convincing. The mere fact of its retention in India will not surely mean that the King of England crowned at Westminster is not ipso facto the crowned Emperor of India. If the Crown worn at the Coronation in London had been brought and worn at the Delhi Darbar, nobody would have been so foolish as to urge its retention in India. But our gracious Emperor thought it fit to have a separate Crown made to wear at the Darbar, and it stands to reason that no unwelcome significance would attach to that Crown being kept in India, as the greatest and worthiest memento of that solemn and unique occasion. There is some sentiment in the affair, and we are sorry that the advisers of the Sovereign have not been able to gratify Indian sentiment in this matter."

MARYADA, Chaitra 1969 (March 1912).

18. The editor of the Maryada (Allahabad), for Chaitra 1969 (March 1912) (received on the 27th March), observes that the appearance of anarchists in India has made government officials to look for sedition even in most of the religious observations of the Hindus. He says that during the trial of sedition cases in Bengal the public prosecutors alleged on several occasions that the study of the Gita, which is held in high respect by the Hindus, was objectionable. He expresses regret that some of the Local Governments have proscribed Austrian-made matchboxes which had a portrait of Ashtabhuja (a goddess with eight hands going to kill Rakshas Mahisasur) on them, on the ground that it tended to inspire hatred and animosity against cow-killers. He contends that there is no ground for the suspicion, and that such action on the part of Government is calculated to wound the religious susceptibilities of the Hindus. He invites the attention of the Government of India to the matter.

Sedition in religion.

ADVOCATE, 24th March 1912.

19. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 24th March 1912, refers to the speech delivered by Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain at Lucknow, in which he gave an interesting account of his tour in the Muhammadan countries of Persia, Arabia, Turkey and Egypt. He is said to have told his co-religionists that at no distant date the whole world would be ruled on democratic principles and to have exhorted them to so organize their forces that they may influence the Government of the country and have their fair share in it. He concluded by saying that wherever he went he was told that Indian Muhammadans were following a mistaken policy, and that they should try to ensure that Hindus and Muhammadans live in peace, that everybody should promote the interests of his religion through peaceful means and not by quarrelling with one another.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

In this connection the editor makes the following remarks :—

"Let us see how far attention is paid by our Muhammadan brethren to this message from their co-religionists in other countries, where they are engaged in the struggle for maintaining their independence."

ADVOCATE, 28th March 1912.

20. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th March 1912, commends Mr. Montague's speech at Cambridge in which he discussed Indian affairs generally and dwelt at length on the criticism of the darbar announcements by Lord Curzon, and remarks that the views expressed by him show that he genuinely desires to see good relations established between all sections of the community. The editor says that any deviation from impartiality to all creeds and classes entrusted to the charge of England will result in much harm being done, and he expresses the hope that Liberalism and India.

India will continue to have liberal ministers who will not hesitate to apply their liberal principles to Indian as well as to home politics.

Public life in the country.

21. In a leading article entitled "Our public life," the Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th March 1912, refers to the complaints in some of the Bombay, Madras and the Punjab papers about the lack of public activity in those provinces, the want of capable leaders as well as loyal followers, the absence of organization, or of any of the other essentials to success, and remarks that the complaint is equally true with regard to the other provinces also. The editor says that public life in India cannot be compared with the activity and the organized corporate life which is a feature of even the least advanced tracts of Europe and America. LEADER, 28th March 1912.

The editor remarks that even the Indian National Congress, which is the greatest of their national organizations, is not in a very satisfactory state, particularly during its more recent sessions. He notes that the Indian Industrial Conference continues to be held yearly, although the enthusiasm for industrial development generated by the political upheaval in Bengal seems to have nearly died out.

He goes on to say that the activity or its opposite of the political bodies in these and other provinces in recent years can be judged from the number of times they held meetings and from the record of the work done by them, particularly in these provinces. He concludes with the remark that the position can be hardly worse, and that it is for the leading members of the community to concert measures to improve it, and he expresses the hope that they will give their best attention to this matter at the ensuing Provincial Conference at Cawnpore.

A proposal to make Agra the head quarters of the United Provinces.

22. Nawab Haji Muhammad Ismail Khan of Agra contributes an article to the Agra Akhbar of the 28th March 1912, in which he urges the advisability of the transfer of the Capital of these provinces from Allahabad to Agra and of the location of some of the Imperial offices at Agra instead of at Delhi. AGRA AKHBAR, 28th March 1912.

He suggests that the University and the High Court be allowed to remain at Allahabad, and the offices at present at Lucknow should also remain there, but the Government House and the Secretariat should be removed to Agra, in order to revive its past traditions and will raise the status of the city and help to remove the poverty of the people.

The editor of the Agra Akhbar expresses agreement with the views of the writer, invites the attention of the Local and Imperial Governments to the matter, and expresses the hope that the suggestion will meet with their approval and that it will lead to practical results.

The Provincial Conferences.

23. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 30th March 1912, says that no information has been communicated to the press regarding the election of delegates to the Provincial Conference, though there is less than a week to the first sitting of the Conference. LEADER, 30th March 1912.

The editor complains that the Provincial Congress Committee have not published for general information the draft resolutions, which are to be brought before the Conference.

He expresses surprise that no president has yet been selected for the Industrial Conference and that the general public are altogether ignorant of the subjects to be considered in the Conference.

He expresses surprise that there should have been no reference in any of the draft resolutions of the social Conference to the Special Marriage Bill lately thrown out by the Viceroy's Council on account of the attitude of the Government of India.

He reminds the people of Cawnpore that the Conference is not a Cawnpore Conference but the Cawnpore session of the United Provinces Social Conference.

Indians in the colonies.

24. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 30th March 1912, deplores the disabilities imposed upon Asiatics in different colonies. The editor refers to a speech delivered by Miss Grace Watts, a member of the South Australian Emigration League, in which she said that no Asiatic, domiciled European or Eurasian, was allowed to settle in Australia. He condemns the racial prejudice of European colonists. OUDH AKHBAR, 30th March 1912.

and states that the acquisition of most of the colonies was the result of the enterprise of the Asiatics, and that it was Asiatics of all classes who made many of the colonies prosperous. He complains of the selfishness and arrogance of the European colonists, and of the way in which Asiatics are treated whether in matters affecting politics or commerce.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

Nil.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 24th March 1912.

Ecclesiastical expenditure of British India.

25. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 24th March 1912, refers to government grant to the churches of Kohat and other places in the Punjab, sanctioned by the Secretary of State for India, and expresses doubt as to the propriety of such a grant for the exclusive benefit of Christians by a Government which has declared itself neutral in matters concerning religion.

The editor says that every class of subjects are entitled to enjoy equal rights, and that in case grants be made to Christian churches, Muhammadan mosques and Hindu temples have equal claims on Government.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

LEADER, 28th March 1912.

The abolition of octroi duty.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th March 1912, refers to the general opinion in these provinces against octroi as a form of municipal taxation, which is supported by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor also, and says that when Sir G. M. Chitnavis expressed himself warmly against the abolition of octroi in the Central Provinces, the opinion was received here with a certain amount of surprise. The editor adds that the surprise will be the greater when it comes to be known that the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale is so far reconciled to octroi that he would actually introduce it where it did not exist, and remarks that the question as to how the revenue now derived from octroi can be adequately made good to local bodies requires careful consideration.

LEADER, 29th March 1912.

Non-official chairman for the Mirzapur Municipality.

27. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th March 1912, has the following:—

"A correspondent from Mirzapur writes to urge that Pandit Ramavatar Pande will make an admirable chairman of that municipality just as Pandit Rama Shankar Misra will do in Benares. We agree with our correspondent and shall be highly pleased if the Government of Sir John Hewett will allow these two distinguished men to be made the chairmen of their respective municipalities in the place of the present collectors-magistrates-chairmen."

(e)—Education.

ALMORA AKHBAR, 29th February 1912.

The Government High School, Almora.

28. The Almora Akhbar of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 26th March), observes that by abolishing the matriculation class from the Government High School, Almora, the authorities will gain nothing, while, on the other hand, it will inflict much hardship on the students seeing that there is no room for matriculation students in other schools. The editor asks Government to allow both the matriculation and the school-leaving classes in the government high school.

VEDIC MAGAZINE, Chait 1969 (March 1912).

29. The Vedic Magazine (Hardwar), for the month of Chait 1969 (March 1912), contains an article entitled "The ancient and modern educational system of India" by Mr. Myron Phelps, B.A., LL.B., of New York, in the course of which the writer asserts that the complaint is made that Government is not open with the gurukul, and that, while officials assure the management that no fault is found with it and that there is nothing against it, that men high in authority speak of the institution "as a breeder of anarchy and a source of danger to the State."

The ancient and modern educational system of India.

Mr. Phelps suggests that the Government is prejudiced against the gurukul owing to misrepresentations made by both Muhammadan and Christian missionaries.

He says that the latter particularly have easy access to those in authority, and that he has known of Christian missionary statements being quoted as authority by a government official against both the gurukul and the Arya Samaj, which he is satisfied were outrageous slanders.

He notes that there are many Muhammadans in the detective service whose reports would naturally be biassed. He suggests that the character of such reports was displayed by a district official who visited the gurukul some little time ago and talked freely with the staff. "He said he had been told that the school was only a blind and that more of the time was spent there on physical exercises and military drill, but he only said this after examining the muscles of some of the boys and so satisfying himself that their development was not abnormal."

Mr. Phelps says that an English official had told him that Ajit Singh had been allowed to make repeated visits to the gurukul, which allegations he had since learned from the gurukul authorities and from government officials to be untrue.

He suggests that the reason for the mistrust of the gurukul methods may be that the practical men of the West find it difficult to believe that rational men should introduce and insist upon asceticism of life and should devote their energies to spiritual and ideal ends.

MARYADA, Chaitra 1969 (March 1912).

30. The Maryada (Allahabad), for Chaitra 1969 (March 1912) (received on the 27th March 1912), in an article entitled "The need for education," observes that education is the root of all progress and happiness in this world. The editor asks those who object to the education of the labouring classes, on the ground that they will give up their occupations, to look at the prosperous condition of the labouring classes in Japan or in any Western country, where the masses are educated, and says that they would find that the labourers there on being educated become more skillful in their trade, and earn more money. He quotes figures to contrast the amounts spent on mass education in India and in England, America and other civilised countries and expresses regret that British government should spend only one anna per student, when the Baroda State spends Re. 0-6-6 per head. He extends his warm support to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's bill for free and compulsory primary education, in the assurance that it will prove a panacea for poverty, disease, superstition and evil customs, and urges the Indians to remove the wrong impression which has got abroad as to the evil effects of compulsion in education.

Education in India.

Referring to the rejection of the bill in the Viceregal Legislative Council, the editor says that there need be no cause for disappointment, and he asks the people to keep the agitation alive in order that Government may be compelled to accept the bill.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 27th March 1912.

31. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 27th March 1912, expresses appreciation of the increased interest which the Government of India have been showing in the advancement of education since the announcement of the grant of Rs. 50 lakhs on the occasion of the Delhi darbar. The editor refers to the various recurring and non-recurring grants announced by the Viceroy at the convocation of the Calcutta University, and congratulates the Government of India on its new policy of encouraging education in all its branches.

The educational policy of the Government of India.

Referring to the proposal to impart religious education in State schools, he points out that it would supply a long-felt want, and observes that it would constitute a new feature of the educational policy of the Government of India

RAHBAR, 21st March 1912.

Education among Vaishyas.

32. A correspondent, who signs himself as "UMRAO SINGH OF UMBALLA," contributes an article to the Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 21st March 1912 (received on the 26th March), in which he says that Muhammadans have made great progress in education within a short space of time, and have acquired great political importance in the estimation of Government. The writer contends that this progress was due to their being impelled by a common enthusiasm, their natural desire for advancement and their unswerving loyalty to their leaders, while the Hindus, on the other hand, are lacking in these qualities and distrust their leaders. He goes on to say that, while Muhammadans help their national institutions, Hindus contribute to government colleges and schools in order to gain a few titles.

The writer dwells at some length on the lack of education in the Vaishya community in particular, and observes that without education it is difficult for the Vaishyas to make any progress either in business or in service. He complains of the deplorable indifference shown by rich parents towards the education and bringing up of their children, and appeals to them for funds and furniture for the Agarwal Ashram, Lahore, and says that contributions should be sent to Lala Lajpat Rai.

ADVOCATE, 24th March 1912.

The postponement of University examinations.

33. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 24th March 1912, says that some recent deaths from plague in the Civil Lines, Allahabad, have alarmed the students and intensified the feeling of insecurity. The editor asks His Honour the Chancellor to have the examinations postponed, at any rate for a few weeks. He says that, if nothing be done in the matter, there is likely to be a large number of failures and not a few absentees from the examination hall. He expresses the hope that health camps, as suggested by the Pioneer (Allahabad), will be established for the students and a sufficient number of menial servants will also be maintained, seeing that several examinees have complained that they find it difficult to pursuade their cooks and servants to go with them to Allahabad.

LEADER, 29th March 1912.

Remuneration to invigilators at the Allahabad University examinations.

34. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th March 1912, says that gentlemen who are at present engaged as invigilators at the Allahabad University examinations are not paid (?) any remuneration for their labours, and that in the case of teachers their school work also suffers in consequence of their absence. The editor says that when in other universities the invigilators are remunerated, there is no reason why an exception should be made in the case of those who are engaged by the Allahabad University for this work.

LEADER, 24th March 1912.

The matriculation examination.

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th March 1912, publishes a lengthy article on the matriculation examination, in which the writer makes certain suggestions regarding the proposal to reduce the number of days of examinations in order to lessen the chances of danger to which candidates are exposed owing to the prevalence of plague. He suggests the limiting of the number of subjects, and he proposes that any optional subject can with advantage be taken up and made compulsory; and that all educationists were agreed that the study of the mother-tongue should be made compulsory.

He gives a table to show the number of papers assigned to each subject at present and the number suggested by him, which would permit of the University reducing the number of papers from a maximum of thirteen to one of seven without detriment to the true interests of education, and says that it would also lessen the cost of conducting the examination and the amount of fees allowed to examiners.

LEADER, 29th March 1912.

The School-leaving certificate and the Law School.

36. A correspondent writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th March 1912, and refers to the concessions given by Government to those who have obtained the School-leaving certificate of this province in the matter of government appointments and with regard to admission into the Civil Engineering class of the Roorkee College, and suggests that the right of admission to the Law School in the pleadership class should be also extended to the holders of the School-leaving certificates.

37. Commenting on Lord Hardinge's convocation speech as Chancellor of the Calcutta University, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 24th March 1912, remarks that it clearly shows His Excellency's sincere interest in the progress of education in India, and observes that nothing could be more encouraging than his assurance that the Government of India have in view an educational policy which embraces every branch of education. The editor expresses satisfaction that in pursuance of the notable declaration made by His Majesty the King-Emperor on the subject of education, the Government of India have decided to make a solid advance in the direction of teaching and residential universities. He also expresses gratification at the announcement made by His Excellency in the course of his speech regarding the establishment of an Oriental Research Institute at Delhi, and entertains the hope that if properly staffed and managed the proposed institute will be of great service to the country by fostering in the rising generation the spirit of research in the various fields of oriental learning.

ADVOCATE, 24th March 1912.

The Calcutta University convocation.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

38. The Almora Akhbar of the 29th February 1912 (received on the 26th March), refers to the forest re-settlement rules in the Almora district, and asks Government to consider whether the inclusion of the land in close vicinity of the forests which had been measured and for which the people paid the prescribed revenue according to the old settlement, within the forest area, will be productive of any good on the new settlement.

ALMORA AKHBAR, 29th February 1912.

Forest re-settlement in the Almora district.

(g)—General.

39. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th March 1912, refers to Mr. Montague's statement about the decision of the Secretary of State to appoint a Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, and remarks that the post is a superfluous one which might without any disadvantage be abolished. The editor observes that it cannot be contended that the cause of sanitation in India has benefited materially by the existence of that highly-paid officer for nearly seven years, or that it had suffered since the time when the post became vacant.

LEADER, 28th March 1912.

The appointment of Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India.

40. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 30th March 1912, deplores the backward condition of India in the matter of sanitary improvements, and points out that, while for every thousand people fifteen persons die in the British Isles no less than thirty-eight die in India.

The editor observes that health depends on the use of nourishing food, which is becoming dearer every day in India, and which is beyond the reach of the ordinary people owing to its high price.

He says that the efforts to bring down the high prices of foodstuffs is useless, and suggests that Indians should be given industrial education in order that they may be able to raise their income to meet the increased expenditure of living.

OUDH AKHBAR, 30th March 1912.

Sanitary work in India.

41. The Maryada (Allahabad), for Chaitra 1968 (March 1912) (received on the 27th March 1912), contains an article entitled "The duties of young men" jointly contributed by Saiyid Amir Ali Mir and Shankar Prasad Misra, in which the writers observe that the duties of young men are to look after the well-being of their community, and they exhort them to reform their country, protect the poor, spread education and industries, give up evil customs, and to assimilate the good qualities of others. They also observe that a country which contains a large number of such young men is honoured and respected everywhere.

MARYADA, Chaitra 1968 (March 1912).

The duties of young men.

42. A correspondent, who signs himself as "SHARAFAT ALI KHAN OF ISLAMNAGAR, DISTRICT BUDAUN," contributes an article to the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 21st March 1912 (received on the 29th March), in which he refers to an order by the Sub-Divisional Officer restraining the Muhammadan hawkers of Islamnagar from selling meat by going round from house to house.

ZUL QARNAIN, 21st March 1912.

Sale of meat by Muhammadan hawkers in Islamnagar.

The writer states that when the Deputy Magistrate directed the police to enforce the order it was discovered that the representation, on the strength of which the order was passed, was a false one, and the alleged signatories of the application filed in the Deputy Magistrate's court declined ever having signed it. He goes on to say that in these circumstances the Deputy Magistrate referred the matter to a panchayat, the deliberations of which is not yet known.

The editor of the Zul Qarnain, commenting on this, invites the attention of the higher authorities to the strange action of the Deputy Magistrate in thus passing an order without instituting an enquiry into the matter and without verifying the signatures of the applicants. He points out that the custom of hawking meat has been prevalent in that town from a long time, and any restriction would cause great inconvenience to Muhammadans who constitute about half the population of the town.

OUDH AKHBAR. 24th March 1912.

43. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 24th March 1912, expresses regret at the apathy of the Indians in the matter of the development of their industries and trade, and remarks that the development of indigenous industries is calculated to do more good to the people than the spreading of education among the masses.

The need for the development of indigenous industries.

ADVOCATE, 24th March 1912.

44. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 24th March 1912, complains of the action of the Punjab government in not appointing Dewan Narendra Nath again as a Commissioner who is much esteemed by all classes of his countrymen and is a highly deserving Indian officer. The editor notes that there are several officiating vacancies in the rank of Commissioner of divisions and that he is being superseded by junior officers. The editor expresses agreement with the complaint of the Punjab papers that the claims of an Indian officer of recognized ability and admitted integrity like Dewan Narendra Nath should have been passed over, when the visit of Their Imperial Majesties had raised hopes that the claims of Indians for appointments to high offices would receive more liberal recognition than in the past.

Supersession of a deserving Indian officer.

OUDH PUNCH, 28th March 1912.

45. A correspndent, who signs himself as "SHER SINGH GAURVI," contributes an article to the Oudh Punch (Lucknow), of the 28th March 1912, in which he complains of the inconvenience caused to the public by the refusal of certain departments of the public service and of the railways to accept the rupees of 1835 and 1840 coinage.

The coinage of 1835 and 1840.

The writer suggests that either the coins should be clearly declared to be free legal tender or that their withdrawal from circulation should be notified, and a certain period fixed for the deposit of these coins in government treasuries.

V.—LEGISLATION.

ADVOCATE, 24th March 1912.

46. The editor of the Advocate (Lucknow), in the issue of the 24th March 1912, says that there was no reason to feel despondent either at the failure of the great efforts made by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale in the direction of having universal education in the country or to consider all sacrifice made on behalf of the measure as sheer waste, seeing that the agitation started on the subject about four years ago has done much good. He expresses surprise at the denial of Sir Harcourt Butler that the mass of non-official opinion was in favour of the measure, and fails to understand why greater weight should be attached to the opinions of particular non-official members who opposed the bill, than to all the public bodies in the country which have given their support to the measure. He remarks that no amount of manipulation of figures will discredit Mr. Gokhale's work, and Government will soon have to yield to the public demand for free education. He asks the people to agitate for it and to make large sacrifices in the cause of education, in order that by the time the question next comes up before the Imperial Council they may be able to demonstrate their own earnestness in the matter.

The Elementary Education Bill.

AL BASHIR, 26th March 1912.

47. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 26th March 1912, refers to the rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill in the Imperial Legislative Council, and remarks that the bill was not calculated to do any good to the Muhammadans, seeing that the present system of education obtaining in the country does not afford them ample opportunities for deriving educational benefits. The editor suggests that the old form of maktab education should be revived, and that along with the teaching of the Qoran some elementary education should also be given in Urdu and in arithmetic. He dwells on the necessity for opening free municipal schools in every muhalla for the benefit of Muhammadans, and on the need for securing a number of Muhammadans who would be prepared to accept the post of teachers in village schools.

The Elementary Education Bill.

He also suggests that a school with a hostel attached to it should be opened in every province, where provisions should be made for the free education, lodging and boarding of poor Muhammadan students.

He asks the Muhammadan supporters of Mr. Gokhale's bill to give some practical help in spreading elementary education amongst the Muhammadans, in order to prove that their support of the bill was not merely theoretical.

48. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 27th March 1912, discusses the rejection of the Elementary Education Bill, and expresses regret that the Council should have thought fit to throw out such an eminently reasonable and moderate piece of legislation which had been supported by both Hindus and Muhammadans. OUDH AKHBAR, 27th March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

The editor contends that the proposed legislation would have considerably helped to reform and improve the educational condition of the country, and points out that the mover of the bill had very carefully provided for all difficulties that could have possibly arisen in its application.

The editor dwells at some length on the provisions of the bill, and invites attention to the gradual and cautious way in which the sphere of education was proposed to be enlarged and the wide discretionary powers which had been reserved for the Local Governments. He next refers to the provisos which granted exemption from compulsory attendance, and observes that the penal provisions of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's bill were very lenient compared with those of similar laws obtaining in other countries.

In conclusion the editor deplores the rejection of such an useful and necessary measure, even when so many safeguards had been provided for the exclusion of sects and communities from the operation of the bill on religious and social grounds, and expresses regret that such an opportunity will not be again available for some time to come.

49. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 27th March 1912, expresses regret at the rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, and endorses the view expressed by the editor of the Zamindar (Lahore), that the rejection of such a beneficent measure, which was supported by both Hindus and Muhammadans, establishes that either the non-official members cannot perform their duties properly or that the Council stands in need of reform. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 27th March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

The editor of the Muslim Gazette remarks that the rejection by the Council of such a popular measure as the Elementary Education Bill should be seriously considered by Indian leaders, and suggests that they should devise means for the reform of the Council.

50. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 28th March 1912, has the following:— LEADER, 28th March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

"We are convinced that Mr. Gokhale's defeat is destined to be Mr. Gokhale's triumph. The country has impressively demonstrated its steadfast loyalty to its foremost spokesman. But Mr. Dadabhoy owes an explanation to his countrymen. Mr. Dadabhoy represents the people of the Central Provinces and they have warmly supported Mr. Gokhale's bill. This apart, Mr. Gokhale has very aptly pointed out that Mr. Dadabhoy accorded his cordial support to his resolution two years ago and also to his bill last year. Nay, more—Mr. Dadabhoy but ten days before the motion to refer the bill to the Select Committee went up to Mr. Gokhale and promised that he would support it strongly. Well may the country pray to be saved from Mr. Dadabhoy's strong support. Experience is the best teacher and it would not be surprising if she were to learn to appreciate Mr. Dadabhoy's blandishments from a distance! Excess of affection very often does produce such a result. To Mr. Gokhale's congratulations we will humbly add ours and present to Mr. Dadabhoy the following lines of his own from his presidential address at the Industrial Conference three months ago :—

We must have primary education all over the Continent . . . Primary education is as mordant or grounding. It helps the better artistic finish. And in a country like India such education, to be effective, should be free and gradually compulsory. The emphasis in the expression 'in a country like India' can have no other meaning than that in India the voluntary system has failed. Mr. Dadabhoy wants gradual compulsion; he never could contend and never did that Mr. Gokhale's bill contemplated anything else. Again, Mr. Dadabhoy says:

I have lively hopes that free and compulsory primary education will improve the character of the masses and will instil in them a healthy sense of duty and ambition.

Verily, he has discovered a singular method of realising his 'lively hopes'—by killing them. One may say that three months or rather ten days is too short a period for an intellectual somersault; but, for one who apparently intends becoming an expert acrobat, it should not be so. There you have an instance and in India Unhappily such instances are not rare."

LEADER, 29th March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

51. Under the heading "Random notes (by X. Y. Z.)," the Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th March 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer refers to the official opposition to the Elementary Education Bill, and remarks that the extracts published in the Leader from the official opinion of these provinces, show what sympathy and solicitude the officials have for the people whose affairs they are paid to administer. He says that the gist of the official opinion is that the masses, though ignorant, are happy, and for this reason they do not wish to educate them and make them unhappy and discontented.

Referring to the distinction made between the low castes and high castes in India and the strictures passed by a district officer on the character of the people of India, the writer enquires whether His Majesty the King-Emperor in speaking of his Indian subjects meant only the higher castes and by education meant only higher education.

ADVOCATE, 28th March 1912.

The Indian Companies Bill.

52. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th March 1912, says that the Indian Companies Bill introduced in the Supreme Legislative Council is a comprehensive measure which embodies almost in its entirety the most important provisions of the English Act, and asks public bodies and others, whose interests are likely to be affected by the adoption of the measure, to examine its details minutely and carefully in order to see how its provisions would affect commerce and business in India and protect the interests of the investors. The editor refers to the Hon'ble Mr. Clarke's remarks that Government had not undertaken this legislation owing to there being any widespread canker in Indian commercial circles, and observes that the assurance, coming from such a high authority as the Member for Commerce and Industry, that things in India are not after all as unsatisfactory as some people describe them to be, should silence those people who lose no opportunity to traduce the people of the country. He expresses approval of the provision regarding the auditing of companies' accounts by persons recognized by Local Governments.

VI.—Railway.

LEADER, 29th March 1912.

The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

53. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 29th March 1912, has a contributed article in which the writer refers to the rumoured amalgamation of the Oudh and Rohilkhand with the East Indian Railway, which he describes as the best-managed railway in India, and remarks that Indians are very badly treated on all railways managed by State. He says that the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway is another administration which does not care at all for the comforts of the Indian passengers generally and of the third class passengers in particular, and that the only concern of the management is to run the railway at a minimum of expense, and to get the maximum of profit in order to pay the largest dividend to its shareholders, most of whom are retired European officials.

VII.—Post Office.

54. The January number of the Postal Magazine (Agra) (received on the 29th March 1912), contains a contributed article in which the writer suggests the revival of the defunct Mussoorie Postal Memorial Association under the management of the editor of the Postal Magazine, and proposes the establishment of a postal weekly in English, Hindi and Urdu, with an annual subscription of Rs. 5 to replace the present monthly Postal Magazine.

POSTAL MAGAZINE, January 1912.

A suggestion for the revival of the Mussoorie Postal Memorial Association.

He says that the funds of the defunct Association, which are with the Bank of Upper India can be utilised, and also that the records of the Association are with him.

He suggests that the Association should urge that no employé be required to perform duty more than once in twenty-four hours, and that only for seven hours; that all employés be granted two full holidays in each month to attend to their domestic affairs; that no employé be required to stay after his hours of duty to finish the day's work, but that a separate set be employed for such extra work; that all employés be freely granted all leave to which they be entitled under the rules, and that an adequate relieving staff be maintained for the purpose; that the management of the existing funds of the defunct Guarantee Fund be entrusted to a representative committee of postal employés to be utilised for the benefit of postal men, also that the Guarantee Fund be revived but that it be used only for the good of employés and in no case for the re-imbursement of government losses, and that Government should be asked to open schools for the education of the children of postal employés.

Among other desirable objects which the proposed Association should seek to accomplish he mentions the promotion of better relations between subordinates and officials and the discussion of postal subjects in order to promote the interests of the department, the public and the employés.

In conclusion he makes an appeal to the postal staff to make earnest efforts to better their position.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

55. The Muslim Review (Allahabad), for January 1912 (received on the 14th February), publishes an article entitled "The revival of Islam" by Mr. Sundara Raja, in the course of which the writer asserts that it is the map of Asia and not that of Europe which is of most interest to students of modern history.

MUSLIM REVIEW, January 1912.

The revival of Islam.

He says that there are three principal forces in Asia, the Japanese, the Mongolian and the Islamic, and of these he describes the last as the most formidable. He expresses the opinion that Japan has reached its zenith, and that it is not likely to acquire more territory in Asia than it now holds. The Mongolian crisis he regards as of interest, but he suggests that it will require four or five decades before China attains a position of security, and thus for many years to come she will be liable to foreign depredations and aggression, on account of the natural resources of her vast country. He speaks of the revival of Islam as suggesting possibilities not merely of a self-dependent nation, but also of an expanding Empire. He says that the nation comprises every Muhammadan throughout the world, and that the idea of nationality is based on religion and politics which are indissolubly bound together. He refers to the troubles in Persia which resulted in the deposition of the Shah and the establishment of a democratic government. The writer shows how the Turkish nation also realised that Abdul Hamid was an enemy to all progress, and so they decided to depose him and to instal his brother Muhammad in his place, who was an enlightened man and who observed the precepts of Islam. He says that these were instances of Islamic democracy, which refused to recognize racial or religious superiority when spiritual laws were violated.

The Amir of Afghanistan was described as having appreciated the trend of events and the fates of the two rulers who failed to embody the principles of Islam in their administration, and he anticipated any trouble in his kingdom by introducing a system of education and by modifying his form of government.

India is said to be the scene of a similar Islamic revival, of which one of the outward signs is the All-India Muslim League, which voices the thoughts and ideals of modern Islam.

In this connection the following passages occur :—

"The cry has gone forth, 'Paradise is under the shadow of swords.' On the platform are ranged the Islamic nation, the amalgamation of all Muhammadans, over 150 millions, against the aggressor or aggressors. This feeling is smouldering in the heart of every Muhammadan, and the flame might catch at any time. The material is no doubt inflammable, and the application of the spark will set a huge conflagration. The combination of all Muhammadans in the world means more than what it is understood by the words. The Islamic federation re-organized and based on the old model means a serious menace to European trade. It means again the monopoly of trade absolute in the western side of Asia. It means the loss of hold on two important naval bases of western Asia to England. Again, it means complications in India owing to the existence of a majority (?) of Muhammadans in that country. An armed neutrality among the Muhammadan countries is more terror-striking than the 'Yellow Peril.'

Every drop of blood that is shed at Tripoli clings the Muhammadans of different countries closer and closer, regenerates the realm of Islam more and more, bridges all gulfs arising from different environments, and one Muhammadan embraces the other in fraternal love and affection. Not a holy war, but a holy alliance will follow in quick succession and the words of the Sultan of Turkey are enough for such an organization . . . And in conclusion a common cause, a common ideal, and a common purpose animate the very nerves of the nation. Its geographical position is splendid, and such a union, the union of Islam in Asia, will be the most striking event in the annals of the world. When that event will take place depends on the instruction from the chief. The Islamite is ready, joining with Shakespeare—

A power I have—
I am not yet instructed."

VEDIC MAGAZINE, Chait 1969 (March 1912).

The vindication of the Arya Samaj.

56. The Vedic Magazine (Hardwar), for the month of Chait 1969 (March 1912), has an article in its editorial notes entitled "The Arya Samaj vindicated once again," in which the editor writes that the latest recruit to the ranks of the friends of the Arya Samaj is Mr. J. A. Spender, editor of the Westminster Gazette.

He makes the following quotations from articles in the Westminster Gazette in which Mr. Spender gave his impressions of India as a result of his visit for the coronation darbar :—

"Numerous societies, and chief among them the Arya Samaj, are at work with the professed and, I believe, quite sincere purpose of purifying Hinduism and mitigating the divisions of caste. In all parts of India sages and preachers are making their appearance, who find a ready hearing for a simple doctrine not far removed from that of the Sermon on the Mount. The Government of India is worried about these, much as Herod was worried about John the Baptist. It suspects them of being preachers of sedition under the guise of religion ; it scents danger in any movement which threatens to change what it has assumed to be unalterable in the native character. And yet I find a general agreement among careful observers that a real revivalist spirit is at work which, if rightly handled, should be a great aid to good government."

The editor proceeds to give the following opinion about this pronouncement, and about the attitude of Government towards the Arya Samaj :—

"We think there are signs of returning sanity—at least this is what English friends who move in the highest circles assure us. We have the highest authority for stating that the misconceptions of those who are at the helm of affairs have been removed, and even district officials are now realising that the revivalist movement is a world-movement which has come to stay, and that the wisest course would be not to alienate the sympathy of the leaders of this movement, but to utilize this dynamic force for the good of the government and the promotion of the genuine well-being of the governed. Let us hope that calumny, backbiting, and audacious malignity will cease to be treated as reliable information, and that the rulers of the land will establish close personal relations with the real leaders of public opinion, who are sometimes different from the kow-towing jo-hozurs with whose genuflexions the lord of the district is so familiar. Then an era of peace will dawn upon the country, the roots of British connection will go deep down into the soil, and the combined efforts of the English officials and Indian leaders will lead to the broadening of the bases of law and order and to the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of a grateful nation. The shades of the East and the West will blend into a harmonious whole and succeeding generations of grateful Indians will speak in terms of warm and cordial affection untraceble to the 'praiseworthy' endeavours of the C.I.D. of a liberty-loving nation of the West, which found India a hotbed of intrigue, misrule, anarchy and discontent, and gradually raised it to the pinnacles of autonomy and glory, and restored it to the heights to which it had attained in an age lost in the mists of antiquity. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished for."

MUSAFIR, 22nd March 1912.

The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha and the Nau-Muslims.

57. The Secretary of the Bharat Shuddhi Sabha contributes an article to the Musáfir (Agra), of the 22nd March 1912 (received on the 25th March), in which he appeals for funds for the Bharat Shuddhi Sabha, which has been started for reclaiming the Nau-Muslims to the Arya faith.

He refers to the appeal made by Maulana Shibli Nomani of Lucknow to the Muhammadans which appeared in the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 11th instant (vide Selections No. 11 of 1912, paragraph 71), to save the Nau-Muslims from being reclaimed by the Hindus, and urges the Arya Samajists to collect Rs. 10,000 for the sabha to enable it to send preachers among the Nau-Muslims before they are made staunch Muslims by the members of the Anjuman Hidayat-ul-Islam or other such societies.

LEADER, 26th March 1912.

Pilgrimage to Mecca.

58. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 26th March 1912, quotes facts and figures from the annual report of the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India to show the terrible sufferings and appalling risks to life involved in a pilgrimage to Mecca, and remarks that they disclose a very discreditable state of affairs. The editor says that the enormity of the situation can be realised from the fact that during the homeward voyage there were 363 deaths as against 206 during the voyage to Mecca and that small-pox occurred on fourteen of the ships. He asks the Turkish government to pay greater attention to sanitation, which it should learn from the Western countries in its close proximity.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:
The 30th March 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 14 OF 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 6th April 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The situation in China 343
2. The Italian-Turkish war 343
3. The Italian-Turkish war 343
4. The Italian-Turkish war 343
5. The Italian-Turkish war 343
6. Muhammadans and the Sultan of Turkey 343
7. The situation in Persia 344
8. The situation in Persia 344

(b)—Home:

9. Lord Hardinge's speech in the Imperial Council 344
10. Lord Hardinge's speech in the Imperial Council 344
11. The treatment of non-official members of Council 344
12. The policy of Indian Muhammadans ... 345
13. The policy of Indian Muhammadans ... 345
14. The All-India Muslim League ... 345
15. The All-India Muslim League ... 346
16. The Royal boons 346
17. The Province of Behar and Orissa ... 346
18. The redistribution of Bengal ... 346
19. Public work in India 347
20. Journalism in India 347
21. The Provincial Conference 347
22. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 348
23. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 348

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

Page.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

24. Cantonment Magistrates and cases instituted by Cantonment Committees ... 348
25. Recuritment of the judicial service ... 348

(b)—Police:

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

26. The United Provinces budget debate ... 349

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

27. The Agra Municipality 350
28. Sanitary service in municipalities ... 350
29. Sanitary service in municipalities ... 350

(e)—Education:

30. Female education 350
31. Female education 350
32. Female education 350
33. The gurukul 350
34. The Kshattriya boarding-house ... 351
35. Muhammadan education 351
36. The appointment of Indians in the Provincial Educational Service ... 351
37. A University for Ceylon 351

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

38. The propagation of Hindi 352
39. The propagation of Hindi 352
40. The new coin and Hindi 352
41. Indecent processions in public streets... 352
42. The Royal Commission on the trade of the Empire 352
43. Anti-vaccination literature 352

V.—LEGISLATION.

44. The Elementary Education Bill ... 353
45. The Waqf Validation Bill 354

Page.

VI.—RAILWAY.

46. Outrages on Indian females... ... 354
47. The Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway... 354
48. The Bengal and North-Western Railway 354

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

Page.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

49. Hindus and their conversion to other religions 354
50. The propagation of the Vedic faith ... 355
51. The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha 355
52. The cow-protection movement ... 355
53. Devotion 355
54. The Social Conference 355

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st April 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
1	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 67.	9,000 copies.
2	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,600 „
3	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmander Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.
†4	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rev. T. T. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
5	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji ...	3,000 „
6	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	38 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Mirza Abul Hasan; 30	200 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 35.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 40.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 50.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; Arya; 30 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 46. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 46.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 30 ...	1,375 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 27 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar ...	800 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 35 ...	475 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 40... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 44.	125 „
22	Al Kwárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Azis	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 27.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Noméni; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shakháwat Ali.
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Abdus Shakur; 34	900 copies.
29	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 32	725 „
30	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 42...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Lal Nigam.
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 23.	600 copies.
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 33 ...	500 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 39.	300 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 35.	450 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
†38	Kshattriya	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shádi Rám; 36...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	200 copies.
40	Old Boy	Benares ...	Do. ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 38	1,000 ,,
41	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
42	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
43	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 55 ...	1,600 ,,
44	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Taki Ali.
45	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	300 copies.
46	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
47	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 33.	600 copies.
48	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám Chandra; Vaishya; 35 ...	650 ,,
49	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 29.	1,400 ,,
50	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
51	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 37.	550 ,,
52	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 70.	200 ,,
53	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 55.	200 ,,
54	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
55	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.
56	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Saraogi; 28	1,000 copies.
57	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
58	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 40 ...	150 ,,
59	Vyápári-wa-Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 45 ...	350 ,,
60	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
61	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Muhammadan; 53.	1,050 ,,
62	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do.
63	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 31 ...	700 copies.
64	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do.
65	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 30 ...	300 copies.
66	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 57 ...	500 ,,
67	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
68	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Khwaja Muhammad	223 ,,
69	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	300 ,,
70	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 70 ...	154 ,,
71	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shyám Kishore Varmá; Kayasth; 40...	500 ,,
72	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*73	Jadd-o-Jehad	Shahabad (Hardoi)	Do. ...	Shaikh Faiyáz Ali; Muhammadan; 42	200 ,,
74	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 38.	40 ,,
75	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 ,,
76	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
77	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 47.	800 ,,
78	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
79	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 25 ...	2,000 ,,
80	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
91	Naiyar-i-Azam	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 48 ...	350 copies.
92	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 52.
93	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 55.	225 copies.
94	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 30 ...	400 ,,
95	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 46	700 ,,
96	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 28.	350 ,,
97	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Munshi Fazil Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 25.	300 ,,
98	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 ,,
99	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
90	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 40	72 ,,
91	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 32 ...	400 ,,
92	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 31.	300 ,,
93	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 42.	500 ,,
94	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 51.	1,700 ,,
95	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 58.	300 ,,
96	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 51 ...	300 ,,
	Arabic-Urdu.
†97	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	Hindi.
98	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†99	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Brahman; 55	About 100 ,,
100	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 36	700 ,,
101	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	500 ,,
102	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do.
103	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	404 copies.
104	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 54	700 ,,
105	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	300 ,,
†106	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 57	400 ,,
107	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád-Purna, B.A.
108	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt; Brahman; 35 ...	600 copies.
109	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 39 ...	700 ,,
110	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	Bálmakund Sharmá.
111	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 28	1,000 copies.
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 44	300 ,,
113	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta.
114	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád.
115	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 36 ...	450 copies.
116	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra ...	1,500 ,,
*117	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	300 ,,
118	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 ,,
119	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 26 ...	1,500 ,,
120	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 27 ...	400 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Náráyani or The Vedánta Patriká	Fyzabad ...	Monthly ...	Rám Nandan Sahái.
122	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri	800 copies.
123	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande ; 27... ...	5,000 „
*124	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá ; 25 ...	30 „
125	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál ; Brahman ; 35 ...	500 „
126	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	...	750 „
127	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp ; Brahman ; 40 ...	1,350 „
128	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi ; Brahman.	2,200 „
129	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru ; Kashmiri ; 30.	1,000 „
130	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi ; 31	1,200 „
131	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla ; 45	500 „
132	Swadesh Bándhava ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh ; Rájput ; 44	550 „
133	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi ; Brahman.
134	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal ; Agarwal	200 copies.
*135	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád ; Máthur Brahman ; 37.	1,000 „
136	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám ; Brahman, Arya ; 40	350 „
137	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri.
†138	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási ; 45 ...	500 copies.
139	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A. ; Kshattriya ; 43.	1,000 „
140	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh ...	1,550 „
141	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád ; Khatri ; 45 ...	775 „
142	Knand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth ; Brahman ; 40 ...	200 „
143	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt ; Brahman ; 57 ...	1,500 „
144	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá ; Khatri ; 34	1,500 „
145	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A. ...	1,000 „
146	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Sita Ram Dinkar ; 45	500 „
†147	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 „
148	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám ; Khatri ; 55 ...	3,000 „
149	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal ; Khatri ; 55 ...	1,000 „
150	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Krishna Kant Malviya	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
151	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The editor of the Zamana (Cawnpore), in the issue for February 1912 (received on the 2nd April), expresses gratification at the establishment of the republican form of government in China, and the rapid progress which Asia is now making, and remarks that signs are visible on all sides of an awakening from the slothful slumber of centuries. He reminds his readers that the rights for which Europe had to fight for centuries, and the reforms which have taken generations to carry out, have fallen to the lot of Asia within a comparatively short time and without any extraordinary efforts.

ZAMANA, February 1912.

The situation in China.

He discusses the reforms outlined in the proclamation of Dr. Sun-Yat-Sen, and expresses the hope that the cherished ambitions of China will be satisfied, especially as the fortunes of other Asiatic countries depend upon the success of the experiment in China.

In conclusion he states that the path of progress in China is without doubt still beset with great difficulties, and trusts that no foreign Power will intentionally put any obstacle in the way of the regeneration of China.

2. The editor of the Zamana (Cawnpore), in the issue for February 1912 (received on the 2nd April), refers to the legislation ratifying the annexation of Tripoli by Italy, and remarks that it was only after this measure was passed that the Powers of Europe expressed their intention to mediate for peace between Italy and Turkey. He objects to their making it a condition of peace that Italy be given sovereignty over Tripoli, and says that it would be most derogatory to the prestige of Turkey to accept peace on this condition. The editor expresses the hope that the Turks will not rest until they have gained the victory in Tripoli.

ZAMANA, February 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

3. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 31st March 1912, takes exception to the criticism by the Hindu press of the views expressed by some of the Muhammadan journals on the attitude of the European Powers with regard to the Italian-Turkish war, and urges Hindus and Muhammadans to avoid all controversy on the subject, as it is calculated to aggravate the present tension of feeling between them.

OUDH AKHBAR, 31st March 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor, however, says that no blame should be attached to the attitude of the European Powers with regard to the war, seeing that they have been strictly neutral in spite of repeated requests being made to them to intervene.

4. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd April 1912, refers to the absence of news from Tripoli during the last week, and remarks that the Italians have suppressed all news of their reverses in Tripoli. The editor points out that the Italians having failed to make any headway in Tripoli have carried out the threat, which they made some time ago of bombarding the Turkish sea-coast, and he therefore urges Indian Muhammadans to vigorously boycott Italian goods.

AL BASHIR, 2nd April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

5. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 5th April 1912, objects to Russia making any proposals for terminating the war between Turkey and Italy at the present time when Italy has been sustaining reverses, and remarks that, if she had broached the subject at the commencement of hostilities and when Turkey was repeatedly appealing for intervention, it would have saved much blood-shed, and Russia would have been praised for her efforts on behalf of peace.

OUDH AKHBAR, 5th April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor urges the Turks to continue the war to the bitter end, and advises them if they desire to remain an independent nation and to maintain the Caliphate, to sacrifice the last drop of their blood in the present war with Italy, and in no circumstances to accept any monetary compensation for Tripoli.

6. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd April 1912, refers to the veneration and respect with which the Sultan of Turkey is regarded by the Muhammadans of the world. and asserts that it is not, as is popularly supposed, due to his position as guardian of the holy places of Islam. In support of this assertion the editor remarks that in the event of some local chief or of any European Power exercising sovereignty over

AL BASHIR, 2nd April 1912.

Muhammadans and the Sultan of Turkey.

Mecca and Medina, that chief or power would be hated instead of being respected by the Muhammadans.

He says that the reason why Muhammadans take so much interest in Turkey is that it is now the only Muhammadan power in the world, and that if it were to lose its independence, the Muhammadans would find themselves in the same position as the Jews. He remarks that the disturbances which have been taking place in Arabia were brought about owing to the desire of some European powers to possess themselves of the holy places of Islam, and he reminds his co-religionists that it is their duty to try to remove the mistaken impression that the possession of the holy places carries with it any special prestige in the eyes of the Muslim world.

ZAMANA, February 1912.

7. The editor of the Zamana (Cawnpore), in the issue for February 1912 (received on the 2nd April). refers to the deplorable situation in Persia, and remarks that both England and Russia originally agreed that Muhammad Ali Shah had forfeited his claim to a pension by raising a rebellion in Persia, but that now they were urging Persia to grant such a pension to Muhammad Ali Shah and a general amnesty to his followers.

The situation in Persia.

He refers to the conditions of the Anglo-Russian loan and says that they are extremely onerous and calculated to prove highly detrimental to the interests of Persia.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 1st April 1912.

8. The Lucknow Gazette of the 1st April 1912 expresses regret at Russian aggression in Persia, but remarks that the Persians themselves are responsible for all the troubles in which they have been recently involved.

The situation in Persia.

The editor says that if the Persian government had organized an efficient army, and had not neglected to govern the country constitutionally, the Russians would never have dared to cross their borders.

He expresses apprehension that the Russian troops may before long invade Persian territory again and he advises the Persians to organize their military resources so as to ensure against any future Russian aggression.

(b)—Home.

ADVOCATE, 31st March 1912.

9. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 31st March 1912, commends the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy at the last meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council, and expresses gratification at the authoritative declaration that it was the intention of the Government to devote all its energy to improving the conditions of the lives of the people. The editor expresses the hope that there will be no turning back from this course and that His Excellency's pronouncement will silence once for all those critics who declared that nothing but evil would result from the administrative changes announced on the occasion of the Delhi darbar.

Lord Hardinge's speech in the Imperial Council.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 3rd April 1912.

10. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 3rd April 1912 expresses appreciation of the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy in closing the budget debate at the last meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council.

Lord Hardinge's speech in the Imperial Council.

The editor refers to that portion of His Excellency's speech in which he referred to the good relations existing between England and Turkey, and remarks that the utterance of His Excellency on the situation was most sympathetic and statesmanlike, that it showed consideration for the feelings of Muhammadans in India, and that it deserved the gratitude of that community. He takes exception to the proposal of Government to make direct arrangements for the protection of the roads in South Persia with the co-operation of the tribes, and remarks that such a step is calculated to handicap any efforts that are being made to establish better government in Persia.

He condemns the policy of Sir Edward Grey with regard to Persian affairs, and advises the appointment of another Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs who would be able to prevent Russian atrocities and aggression in Persia, and who would give no cause to the Muhammadan world to complain against England.

ADVOCATE, 4th April 1912.

11. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th April 1912, discusses the conduct of business in some of the provincial legislative councils, and complains of the way in which the

The treatment of non-official members of councils.

interpellations of non-official members are treated. He refers particularly to the treatment of the Hon'ble Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas and of the Hon'ble Mr. Ghulam Muhammad Bhurgri by His Excellency the Governor of Bombay. The editor asserts that non-official members are powerless to offer any effective criticism in respect of any matter of importance, if amendments like those proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal in connection with the Punjab Land Revenue Act are to be ruled out of order, if resolutions brought forward by non-official members and adopted by a majority of votes are not to be given effect to, as has happened in Madras in the case of Mr. Sheshagiri Iyer's resolution to increase the grant made by the Government of Madras in aid of secondary schools, and if non-official members are not allowed facilities for discussing the details which go to make up any particular item in the budget grant.

The editor says that it is a matter which should engage the serious consideration of the people, and that vigorous protests should be made against these attempts to modify the effects of the reform scheme.

He concludes with the remark that if the non-official members of legislative councils are to co-operate with Government, their suggestions and criticisms should receive better treatment at the hands of the Government.

OLD BOY, February 1912.

The policy of Indian Muhammadans.

12. The Old Boy (Benares), for February 1912 (received on the 1st April), expresses gratification that Muhammadans have now begun to love their country and community, and that they are taking more interest in their religion.

The editor expresses appreciation of the readiness to abandon self-interest on the part of the members of the Hindu community, and asks his co-religionists to give up comfort and luxury and to make efforts for improving the condition of their community.

MASHRIQ, 2nd April 1912.

The policy of Indian Muhammadans.

13. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 2nd April 1912, discusses at considerable length the present policy of Indian Muhammadans, and deplores the rebellious attitude exhibited by Muhammadans against their leaders. The editor complains of the irreligious spirit prevailing among the educated and well-to-do classes, and remarks that it was for this reason that eminent and able religious men would not become political leaders of the Muhammadan community. He deprecates the mutual recriminations of the Muhammadan papers, and expresses regret at the disrespectful manner in which the leaders are being treated by their followers.

He warns his co-religionists against developing pro-Congress tendencies, and cautions them not to attempt to imitate the example of the Bengali agitators.

He asserts that the Indian National Congress is as much a sectarian organization as the All-India Muslim League, and that it is national only in name. He points out that there can be no genuine political life in India unless Hindus and Muhammadans are able to discard all racial prejudice. He urges that no community should try to monopolize seats for itself in the councils and on district and municipal boards, and assures his readers that if Hindus give equal rights to their Muhammadan brethren, the latter will faithfully support them, with the result that within a period of five years Hindus and Muhammadans will be welded into one nation.

In conclusion he expresses the opinion that the materialistic politics of the West cannot thrive on Indian soil so long as Hindus and Muhammadans are impelled by the force of religion which affects them more than that of politics, and says that in India unlike Europe religion can never be separated from politics, though there were some persons who discarded all religion and who successfully exhibited a mimicry of Western politics.

ZAMANA, February 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

14. The editor of the Zamana (Cawnpore), in the issue for February 1912 (received on the 2nd April), refers to the speech delivered by the Nawab of Dacca as president of the All-India Muslim League, and remarks that the Nawab could not be congratulated on the manner in which he criticised the annulment of the partition of Bengal. He points out that the Nawab was in no way justified in characterizing the anti-partition agitation as seditious, when the Government itself had declared it to be perfectly constitutional.

In conclusion he observes that the last session of the League failed to represent the views of the Muhammadan community, and he expresses agreement with the views of the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), that the present Muhammadan leaders were untrustworthy and incapable. He suggests that as most of the Muhammadans favoured self-government within the Empire, they should join the Congress.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 3rd April 1912.

The All-India Muslim League.

15. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 3rd April 1912, refers to a passage in the letter of Maulana Shibli Nomani which was published in the Zamindar (Lahore), to the effect that liberal Muhammadans should separate themselves from the conservatives, and remarks that the Maulana never meant by using the Arabic synonym for liberal to suggest that Muhammadans should become extremists. The editor assures his readers that liberal Muhammadans are not antagonistic to the continuance of British government in India, but that, on the contrary, they believe it to be a blessing for them. He expresses regret at the lack of courage in the members of the Muslim League in expressing the views of their community and observes that a separation between the liberal and conservative members was necessary in order to raise the ideals of the League to a higher level, to give a political training to the community and to carry on a constitutional agitation for securing its rights.

In conclusion he urges the necessity for a speedy reform in the constitution of the League, and observes that if this be not done the liberal Muhammadans will be compelled to organize a political institution of their own, which will be moderate in its views and constitutional in its efforts.

MASHRIQ. 2nd April 1912.

The Royal boons.

16. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 2nd April 1912, while expressing gratitude to the Government for the grant of an annual pension to the recipients of the titles of Shams-ul-Ulma and Mahamahopadhyaya, remarks that the sum of Rs. 8-5-4 per mensem was quite inadequate, and that such a pittance could not be expected to help persons in the advancement of oriental learning and research. The editor expresses the opinion that there may be some cogent reason for fixing such a low amount, and suggests that some hon'ble member should try to find out by asking a question on the subject in the council.

LEADER, 3rd April 1912.

The Province of Behar and Orissa.

17. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd April 1912, enquires why the first issue of the Behar and Orissa Government Gazette should be issued from Ranchi and not from Patna, when the gazettes of no other provincial government was issued from the summer head quarters. The editor says that the gazette might have been published at Patna without much inconvenience. He complains that of the high appointments made by the Lieutenant Governor, only three have been given to Indians, and he says that it would have been more satisfactory if a more liberal commencement had been made by a proper recognition of Indian worth and Indian claims.

LEADER, 4th April 1912.

The redistribution of Bengal.

18. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 4th April 1912, refers to the proceedings of the public meeting held in the Calcutta Town Hall to consider the questions of territorial redistribution and the Dacca University, and remarks that His Excellency rightly held that the scheme of territorial redistribution as regards provinces should not be complicated by the boundaries of districts being altered, on the ground that once such a district redistribution were attempted, it could not stop with the changes suggested and pressed for by Bengal. The editor adds that any attempt at a scientific division of provinces and districts was sure to create an all-India agitation of opposing interests and cross purposes. While fully sympathizing with the demand of Bengal for all Bengali-speaking people to be under one Government he expresses agreement with the decision of the Government of India, and says that the natives of those sub-provinces which were hitherto a part of Bengal might well object, as in fact they do, to slices of their provinces at one end or another being cut off in order to gratify the sentiment of the people of Bengal. He expresses the hope that after the lapse of a reasonable interval the Government of India will possibly consider whether it cannot give effect to Bengali wishes and that meanwhile there should not be any repetition of the agitation that followed the partition.

With regard to the establishment of a University at Dacca he expresses disagreement with the hostile views expressed at the meeting, and lends his support to the policy adopted by Government in this respect.

LEADER, 5th April 1912.

19. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 5th April 1912, has a leading article referring to the demonstration held in the Albert Hall in favour of women suffrage, which concludes with the following words :—

Public work in India.

"How does this compare with Indian Congress-men's response to Sir William Wedderburn and with the fulfilment of their promises to him? And yet our countrymen wonder that they do not make rapid progress! They may equally wonder that bricks cannot be made without straw. For the exertions and sacrifices they have made, do they honestly think that they have deserved even the concessions that have so far been made to them? How insignificant is the public work done in India, how lamentable the paucity of workers, how reluctant educated Indians are to make sacrifices! They want the harvest but will not sow. They will get it 'at doomsday in the afternoon'."

LEADER, 6th April 1912.

20. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th April 1912, says that journalism in India is still an uphill task, though it is slowly progressing in the direction of greater and more widespread popularity. It gives some promise, at any rate in the province of Bengal, that newspaper reading is becoming more popular. The editor quotes the figure of circulation of the Hitabadi, Basumati, Statesman and the Bangbasi, and remarks that the United Provinces stand nowhere in comparison to the figures. He observes that the growth of journalism is bound up with the spread of education, and there can be no surer index of the educational advancement of Bengal and backwardness of the United Provinces than the number of periodicals and the figures of their circulation in the two provinces. He says that so long as some people scent political danger in the spread of education the state of affairs cannot be otherwise than it is.

Journalism in India.

LEADER, 6th April 1912.

21. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th April 1912, reviewing the presidential address of the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha at the United Provinces Conference at Cawnpore remarks that it is an able and a faithful presentment of the needs and aspirations of the people of the United Provinces, and that few members of the Indian reform party will find in it anything to dissent from. Adverting to Mr. Sinha's view of the administrative achievements of Sir John Hewett, the editor remarks that it will always remain a matter for regret that so eminent an administrator as Sir John Hewett should have felt it his duty to oppose himself to the establishment of the executive council in these provinces, and welcomes the assurance given by the president that Sir James Meston will lose no time after his assumption of office in the formation of an executive council in the province.

The Provincial Conference.

With regard to the council regulations discussed by Mr. Sinha in his speech, the editor remarks that the intention of Government to continue the separate electorates so long as those for whose benefit they are intended do not wish to do without them, is a striking recognition of the force of public opinion, and he says that the Hindu community will be grateful if its opinion too be similarly considered by Government. If it be said that it is merely a matter of arranging a minority representation it is pertinent to enquire why the Hindu minority in the Punjab is not conceded the rights accorded to the Muhammadan minority in the United Provinces. He goes on to say that the Indian commercial community of the province has no elected representative in the council, nor has the division of Kumaun, and that men totally unacquainted with the language in which the proceedings of the council are conducted, are held qualified to take part in their deliberations. He asks the members of the reform party to set on foot a vigorous and an organized constitutional agitation to secure redress before the next elections are held. The editor expresses agreement with the views expressed by the president on other important matters such as the provincial financial settlement, the inadequate expenditure on education and sanitation, the excessive outlay on the police, and the importance of industrial development on sound business lines.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 3rd April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

22. A correspondent, who signs himself "SAIYID ZAFR-UL-HASAN ALAVI," contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 3rd April 1912, in which he refers to the article contributed by M. Firdousi of Lucknow (vide Selections No. 12 of 1912, paragraph 35), and says that the subject of reviving the indigenous industries in India as dealt by M. Firdousi should be seriously considered by the Muhammadans of India. He says that when the swadeshi movement was started the Muhammadans did not take any active part in it owing to the fact that the organizers of the movement were Bengalis, who resented the partition of Bengal which was calculated to be beneficial to the Muhammadans. He discusses the necessity for patronizing the indigenous articles, and urges his co-religionists to extend their sympathy to the swadeshi movement which was in no way opposed to the wishes of Government.

In conclusion he says that Muhammadans have never given any cause for resentment to their Hindu brethren, and that the latter alone were responsible for the tension of feeling between the two communities.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

23. A correspondent, who signs himself "MUNSHI ABDUSSHAKUR OF ETAWAH," contributes an article to the Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th April 1912, in which he dwells at length on the necessity for the establishment of harmonious relations between Hindus and Muhammadans for the good of the country, and suggests the formation of provincial Hindu-Muhammadan union committees under the control of an All-India Hindu-Muhammadan organization to cultivate amicable relations between the two communities. He also suggests that the number of Muhammadan teachers should be made equal to those of Hindus, and that textbooks on Indian history, which exaggerate the objectionable treatment of Hindu subjects by the Muhammadan rulers, should be removed from the curriculum for schools.

He asks the religious preachers of both the communities to be moderate in their expressions, and to refrain from making indecent attacks on each other's religion. He says that the members of one community should not take advantage of the depressed state of the other, and asks the Hindus and Muhammadans to help one another in the path of progress and in their efforts to regenerate India.

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 31st March 1912.

Cantonment Magistrates and cases instituted by Cantonment Committees.

24. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 31st March 1912 remarks that in the interests of justice it is necessary that Cantonment Magistrates should not be authorized to try cases instituted by themselves in their capacity as secretaries of cantonment committees, and suggests that such cases should be tried by some other magistrate, and that section 556 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be amended accordingly. The editor asks some member of the Imperial Legislative Council to invite the attention of the Government of India to his suggestion.

LEADER, 5th April 1912.

Recruitment of the judicial service.

25. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 5th April 1912, contains a contributed article on the subject of recruitment for the judicial service in India, in which the writer compares the two theories that the members of the Civil Service are the only proper persons to be District and High Court Judges, and that none but trained and practising lawyers should be made Judges not only of the High Courts but also in the district courts. Before entering into the merits and demerits of the views held by the two parties he discusses the training received by the Indian Civil servants, and remarks that in five cases out of ten the civilian is a product of the factory worked by Messrs. Wren and Guerney, and that all subjects in the competitive examination being optional none of the candidates for obvious reasons took law. He says that during the year of probation successful candidates are required to read some law, but the period is too short to master the science of law and the various systems of law laid down in the Indian Codes. He adds that the legal attainments required in the departmental examinations in India are mostly elementary, and proceeds to describe the methods in which the new civilian is trained for revenue and executive work, and illustrates by giving a story of a new arrival put under a joint magistrate to learn work. He also points out that no facilities are afforded for training in law, and that under the present system no junior civilian gets any time to prepare himself for judicial work. The writer goes on to say that the choice of the judicial service is not a free choice, seeing that many members of the Civil Service who are barristers are seldom appointed judges, and that at any rate only the best men of the service willinglyselected the judicial branch, with the result that only the duller members of the service, who have no chance of promotion in the executive branch, select the judicial line.

With regard to civil work he says that in no other country would it be tolerated that a civilian judge should hear and dispose of appeals in civil cases from the judgments of experinced munsifs and subordinate judges, and involving intricate questions of civil law or of Hindu or Muhammadan law.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

ADVOCATE, 4th April 1912.

The United Provinces budget debate.

26. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th April 1912, refers to the debate on the United Provinces budget, and expresses satisfaction that the non-official members in their speeches dwelt on those subjects which were at the time engaging the attention of the people. The editor says that it is interesting to note that the taluqdars of Oudh have withdrawn from their opposition to canal irrigation, and expresses the hope that the Government of India will find it yet possible to serve the districts of Oudh by the Sarda Canal or to open a canal from the Ghogra river, and thus protect Oudh from famines.

He expresses doubts as to the view expressed by the Hon'ble Mr. L. Stuart, that it was not feasible to construct rat-proof houses, and welcomes the institution of a provincial sanitary service which will afford good openings for the people of these provinces.

Referring to that part of His Honour's speech in which he dwelt upon the subject of provincial finance, he points out that the one characteristic feature of Sir John Hewett's administration has been his anxiety to see that the people entrusted to his care do not drop behind those of other provinces, and urges that if after the weighty appeal of His Honour for full financial justice to the provinces, the Government of India should take into consideration the financial condition of these provinces. He expresses the hope that the first thing which Sir James Meston will do on assuming charge of these provinces will be to examine this great question in all its bearings and use all his influence to bring about a financial settlement on a more satisfactory basis.

With regard to the material condition of the people he observes that Indian opinion is unanimous that there has been a deterioration in the physique of the people, which accounted for so many of them falling victims to malaria and fever, and suggests an enquiry in this direction.

In connection with the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, referred to by His Honour in the concluding portion of his speech, the editor observes that, if the feeling of separatism be discouraged and that of genuine patriotism be encouraged, and both Hindus and Muhammadans be told that they cannot make any progress as Hindus and Muhammadans but as Indians, and if every effort to create barriers between the two communities be given up the present strained relations will cease.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 31st March 1912.

The Agra Municipality.

27. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 31st March 1912 complains of the defective and insufficient lighting arrangements in Agra, and quotes figures to show that the expenditure on lighting in Agra is very low. The editor points out that the expenditure under this head in Agra is less than one-fourth of the standard fixed by Government, and remarks that it is a waste of public money to spend it on lights which are so dim that they cannot serve any real purpose.

LEADER, 3rd April 1912.

Sanitary service in municipalities.

28. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd April 1912, commends the two resolutions on the improvement of sanitary services in municipalities that appeared in the last issue of the United Provinces Government Gazette, and remarks that the people should be grateful to Government for the laudable scheme of improving sanitary services in municipalities, and for instituting a provincial service for health officers, of whom the members of the first class will be eligible for promotion to the new class of Deputy Sanitary Commissioner, if otherwise qualified.

ADVOCATE, 4th April 1912.

Sanitary service in municipalities.

29. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 4th April 1912, expresses gratification at the institution of the new sanitary services in municipalities, and says that they will attract a better class of men.

(e)—Education.

STRI DHARM SHIKSHAK, Chaitra 1969 (March 1912).

Female education.

30. The Stri Dharm Shikshak (Allahabad), for Chaitra 1969 (March 1912) (received on the 5th April 1912), contains an article entitled "Nari Kartabya" (duties of women) contributed by Saroda Devi in which the writer describes the influence which a mother has on her son, and remarks that women should be well educated and made to observe religious principles, at any rate for the sake of the welfare of their children.

GRIHA LAKSHMI, Chaitra 1969 (March 1912).

Female education.

31. The Griha Lakshmi (Allahabad), for Chaitra 1969 (March 1912) (received on the 5th April 1912), contains an article contributed by Omvati Seth in which he remarks that want of religious training and sound education is the cause of the present degeneration of Indian women. The writer expresses gratification that even in this degenerated state they have a firm faith in God and love for their religion, which their sisters in the civilized nations of the West do not possess. He expresses regret that the aim of those who have received Western education is to Westernize India, and he remarks that unless effort is made to build up character, merely passing examinations or learning languages or knowing how to read and write will not make a person perfect. He observes that there can be no progress in education which is devoid of religion.

KSHATTRIYA MITRA, 1st March 1912.

Female education.

32. The Kshattriya Mitra (Benares), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th April), contains an article on female education contributed by Jhinku Singh, a student of the Hewett Kshattriya Pradhan Pathshala, Benares, in which he remarks that without female education there can be no progress in the country. He expresses gratification that the educated people have begun to realise the importance of the subject, and that Government too has been trying to spread female education. He says that female education has chiefly contributed to the progress of Japan, Germany, America, England and other countries, and asks those who earnestly desire to better the condition of their homes and country to educate their women first, and afford them opportunity of reading accounts of noble, religious and brave women, which will make them mothers of noble sons.

BHARATODAYA, Phalgun and Chaitra (February and March 1912).

The gurukul.

33. The Bharatodaya (Moradabad), for Phalgun and Chaitra (February and March 1912) (received on the 4th April 1912), refers to the speeches delivered at a meeting held at Calcutta by two students of the gurukul who had completed their education, and expresses regret that one of them, in the course of his speech, said that the more a person was dependent on rules the worse he became, and strongly condemned subservience to rules. The editor objects to the sentment and observes that it would indicate that the money spent on the gurukul was useless. He deplores that students of such an ideal institution as the gurukul, which is considered to be the centre for the propagation of the Vedic religion and the teaching of the Vedas should rebel against the idea of obeying rules. He asks the Aryas whether all their hard-earned money, which has been devoted to the gurukul, has been usefully spent, whether the ideals of the gurukul have been realised, and how many students have been prepared at the institution who are in a position to propagate the Vedic religion.

RAJPUT, 31st March 1912.

34. The Rajput (Agra), of the 31st March 1912 (received on the 4th April), expresses appreciation of the action of the Rani of Majhauli in establishing the Mary Boarding House for the Kshattriyas at Deoria in the Gorakhpur district, and asks other rajas and maharajas to follow her example and to improve the condition of their respective communities.

The Kshattriya boarding-house.

Referring to the observation made by the Commissioner in his reply to the Maharani's address that the condition of the Kshattriya community was not so degraded as had been described in the address, the editor remarks that the Commissioner was perhaps not aware of the facts.

AL BASHIR, 2nd April 1912.

35. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 2nd April 1912, commends the suggestions made in the Hon'ble Sahibzada Aftab Ahmad Khan's speech on Muhammadan education in the Provincial Council in the course of the budget debate, and expresses disappointment at the reply of the Director of Public Instruction. The editor says that there seems no reason why a separate chapter should not be allotted to Muhammadan education in the Director's report, and he enquires why Muhammadans should not receive special educational allotments when the Anglo-Indians and Eurasians have been treated with special consideration. He expresses regret that Government should have thought fit to ignore the recommendations of the Education Commission regarding Muhammadan education, and complains that it is only in the United Provinces that no Muhammadan institution, except the Aligarh College, is given a grant-in-aid by Government, with the result that owing to the rigidity of the rules only two Muhammadan schools are recognized. He invites attention to the suggestion of the Hon'ble Mr. Shahid Husain that Mubammadan teachers should be employed to teach Muhammadan boys, and in conclusion suggests that agitation should be kept alive by the Muhammadan members in both the Provincial and Imperial Councils until Government practically recognizes the special claims of their community in the matter of education.

Muhammadan education.

LEADER, 5th April 1912.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 5th April 1912, expresses gratitude to the Director of Public Instruction for the assurance given by him in the Provincial Council that in future more Indians would be appointed to the cadre of provincial inspectors and head masters. The editor points out that with the exception of those appointments which require special qualifications all posts in the provincial service should, as a matter of right and not as a matter of favour, be held by Indians, just as they are in the Revenue and Judicial Departments, and he expresses the hope that unnecessary extensions will not be granted to the present Anglo-Indian incumbents, and that in the interests of the Department their places will be filled by younger and better qualified Indians as soon as possible. He protests against the statement of the Director that Anglo-Indians as statutory natives of India had their claims on the public service of the country, and remarks that such claims should bear some proportion to their numbers and their capacity.

The appointment of Indians in the Provincial Educational Service.

LEADER, 6th April 1912.

37. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th April 1912, expresses sympathy with the Ceylon Patriot in its plea for a University for Ceylon, and says that when Hong Kong, which holds a minor place in point of general importance is provided with a University, there was no reason why places like Burma and Ceylon should not be given one. The editor urges that the greater the number of universities in a country the greater prospect of its advancement.

A University for Ceylon.

(f)—Agriculture and question affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

VAISHYA HITKARI, March 1912.

The propagation of Hindi.

38. The Vaishya Hitkari (Meerut), for the month of March 1912 (received on the 2nd April), urges the propagation of the Hindi language, and expresses regret that nothing practical has yet been done to accomplish the object. The editor suggests that free schools should be started, that scholarships should be awarded to school and college students, that technical schools should be opened for Hindi-knowing persons, that free Hindi writers should be provided with posts in law courts at the expense of the Nagri Pracharak Fund, and that every possible assistance should be rendered to authors and newspaper writers.

He expresses the opinion that when the people become used to reading and writing Hindi as easily and freely as English and Urdu, the two latter languages will drop out of use. He takes exception to the free use of Persian and English words in writings in the Nagri character, and deplores the discontinuance of certain Hindi papers representing the Vaishya community.

KSHATTRIYA MITRA, 1st March 1912.

The propagation of Hindi.

39. A correspondent, who signs himself "RANDHIR SINGH," writing in the Kshattriya Mitra (Benares), of the 1st March 1912 (received on the 5th April), announces that Raja Vindheshwari Prasad Singh of Payagpur estate has made Hindi the court language of his estate, and expresses the hope that other rajas and raises will follow his example.

KSHATTRIYA MITRA, 16th March 1912.

The new coin and Hindi.

40. A correspondent, who signs himself "MADHAV SINGH VARMA OF ETAWAH" contributes an article in the Kshattriya Mitra (Benares), of the 16th March 1912 (received on the 30th March), in which he urges Hindu chiefs and Hindu newspapers to ask Government to have the inscription of the value of the new coin entered on it in Hindi character. He expresses the hope that Government will accede to the wishes of the Hindus.

LEADER, 4th April 1912.

Indecent processions in public streets.

41. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 4th April 1912, refers to the protest of a tourist which appeared in the Indian Daily Telegraph (Lucknow) against the authorities in Benares permitting indecent processions in the public streets in the name of religion, and expresses agreement with the writer's suggestion that for the sake of common decency and good morals such processions should never be allowed in the streets of any city, and that the scandal should be put a stop to.

LEADER, 6th April 1912.

The Royal Commission on the trade of the Empire.

42. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th April 1912, says that India is totally ignored so far as the personnel of the Royal Commission on the trade of the Empire is concerned, and expresses doubts as to whether Lord Inchcape's presence on the Commission will at all represent the large and various interests of India.

LEADER. 6th April 1912.

Anti-vaccination literature.

43. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th April 1912, publishes the following :—

"TO WHAT EXTENT IS VACCINATION RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATHS AND DISEASES OF CHILDREN IN INDIA.

SIR,—In Bombay, while on the one hand, vaccination is vigorously pushed on, on the other 'the increase of mortality is almost wholly among children, first because illness, particularly colds and chills, is unusually prevalent among them, and secondly because the number of infants in the city is much larger than usual.'—(Times of India, January 18, 1912.)

I now beg to draw your attention to the following facts :—

1.—DIED OF VACCINATION.

'The Maharaja of Bikanir has lost his third son from complications following on vaccination.'—(Times of India, April 3, 1911.)

2.—PRIMARY CAUSE SUPPRESSED IN DEATH CERTIFICATES.

(1) 'Clauses 191 to 199 of the Minority Report of the Royal Commission on Vaccination give details of numerous cases of fatal erysipelas following upon vaccination in which all reference to vaccination was suppressed in the certificate of death.'—(Vaccination Inquirer, June 1910.)

(2) Mr. Henry May, Medical Officer of Health, candidly states as follows:—'In certificates given by us voluntarily, and to which the public have access it is scarcely to be expected that a medical man will give opinions which may tell against or reflect upon himself in any way. In such cases he will most likely tell the truth, but not the whole truth, and asign some prominent symptom of the disease as the cause of death. As instances of cases which may tell against the medical man himself, I will mention erysipelas from vaccination and puerperal fever. A death from the first cause occurred not long ago in my practice; and although I had not vaccinated the child, yet, in my desire to preserve vaccination from reproach, I omitted all mention of it from my certificate of death.'—(See Birmingham Medical Review, volume III, pages 34 and 35—Vaccination, A Delusion, by Alfred Russel Wallace, LL.D. (Dubl.) D.C.L. (Oxon), F.R.S., &c.

3.—Medical interest.

(1) 'Compulsory vaccination [is] a source of large revenue to many doctors.'—(The Church and Food Reform, by the Rev. A. M. Mitchell.)

(2) 'Vaccination takes the hard-earned money out of the pockets of the people—

(a) in fees for public vaccination, paid from the poor rates, and bonuses for good work;

(b) in fees and medicine in trying to cure vaccinal diseases;

(c) in fees for attendance upon children whose health has been permanently enfeebled by the vaccine poison.'—(What Vaccination Does, leaflet published by the National Anti-Vaccination League, London.)

A prayer.

I pray that you may kindly invite an English doctor selected by the Secretary of the National Anti-Vaccination League, 27, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W. C., hear from him the other side of the vaccination question, and the reasons why the British Parliament has become opposed to the compulsory vaccination, why many thousands of Englishmen decline to get their children vaccinated, and appoint a commission to enquire as to what extent vaccination is directly as well as indirectly responsible for deaths and diseases of children in India, with a view to taking such steps as may be deemed advisable in the interests of human health.

Junagad:
18*th January*. } Labhshankar Laxmidas."

V.—Legislation.

The Elementary Education Bill.

JADU, 12th and 19th March 1912.

44. The Jadu (Jaunpur), in the combined issue of the 12th and 19th March 1912 (received on the 4th April), publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret at the rejection of the Elementary Education Bill in the Imperial Legislative Council. He deplores the official opposition to the bill, and remarks that it was due to the fact that government officers mostly consulted illiterate zamindars on the question, and that the latter, owing to lack of education, could not realise the need for popular education. He denies the correctnes of the objection raised against making elementary education free and compulsory in India that an educational cess would be resented by the public, and he says that if Government really desired to introduce popular education in the country it could easily find means for it, and that the public would not grudge the imposition of a small educational cess.

As regards the removal of caste distinction he says that no distinction has been made by Government in the matter of employment of public servants, and that it is unfair and unreasonable to deny the common rights to every man by closing the door of knowledge against him, which God meant human beings to share equally.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 3rd April 1912.

The Waqf Validation Bill.

45. A correspondent, who signs himself "SAIYID ZAFR-UL-HASAN ALAVI," contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 3rd April 1912, in which he refers to the resolution passed at the last conference of the All-India Muslim League held at Calcutta requesting Government to have an enquiry made into the management of waqf properties, and the way in which their profit was employed by the trustees, remarks that it was the duty of the members themselves to collect information about the number of waqf properties in India and the purposes for which they were created. He says that if the Muslim League, after securing information about the different waqfs in the country, had approached Government with a request to compel the trustees to discharge their duties properly, some good might have resulted, and that the mere passing of resolutions in a conference is useless, unless practical efforts be made to gain the desired object.

VI.—RAILWAY.

RAHBAR, 28th March 1912.

Outrages on Indian females.

46. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th March 1912 (received on the 1st April), published an account of an outrage alleged to have been committed by a railway guard named Gomas, on a girl whom, along with her mother, he had accommodated in his brakevan at Hajiganj. The editor also refers to the Ludhiana railway station outrage, to the disappearance of a Kahar girl at Benares and to the Amritsar case (vide Selections No. 12, paragraph 62), and remarks that the position of Indian women is daily becoming more dangerous. He concludes the article with the following words :—

"Hindu brethren! If you wish to preserve your existence, you must make an effort to prove to your oppressors that you are a morsel that would stick to their throats. If you show yourselves soft like mercury, you cannot possibly continue your existence in such times."

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 1st April 1912.

The Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway.

47. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 1st April 1912, publishes the case of one Hardeo Sahai, parcel clerk at the Pilibhit station of the Rohilkhand and Kumaun Railway, who is described as having sent three applications and three telegrams to the Traffic Superintendent praying for one month's leave without pay in order to see his father who was dangerously ill. It was said that on receiving no reply he decided to make over charge to the station master and go home only to find that his father had died.

The editor notes that on his return to duty Hardeo Sahai was informed that he was dismissed, and that no heed was paid to his appeals, in spite of the fact that he had clearly stated in his applications that if the leave were not granted he would suffer pecuniary loss. The editor invites the attention of the authorities to the case in order that justice may be done to the clerk, and suggests that the Railway Board should issue a circular that applications for leave wilhout pay should be granted immediately.

MASHRIQ, 2nd April 1912.

The Bengal and North-Western Railway.

48. A correspondent, who signs himself "SAIYID QAMAR-UD-DIN," contributes an article to the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 2nd April 1912, in which he complains of the irregularity of trains on sections of the Bengal and North-Western Railway connecting Chapra, Benares and Bhatni, and describes the inconvenience caused to passengers in consequence of trains missing connection.

He further complains that no arrangements have been made for the supply of water and refreshments at Phephna junction to passengers, and asks the railway authorities to remove these grievances.

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

RAHBAR, 28th March 1912.

Hindus and their conversion to other religions.

49. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th March 1912 (received on the 1st April), discusses the defection of large bodies of Hindus from their religion, and ascribes them as the result of the disabilities under which they labour in accordance with the customs of Hindu society.

The editor urges the importance of female education with a view to removing these disabilities, and says that organized efforts should be made in famine times to save Hindu boys from becoming Christians. He asks the educated young men to help the shuddhi movement.

50. The Brahman Samáchár (Meerut), for March 1912 (received on the 1st April), contains an article entitled "The true way of advancement in the world," in which the writer, Indu Sharma, concludes with the remark that the only means of regenerating the country is to propagate the Vedic religion.

BRAHHMAN SAMACHAR, March 1912.

The propagation of the Vedic faith.

51. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 29th March 1912 (received on the 1st April), reproduces extracts from several Arya papers describing the proselytizing zeal of the Anjuman-i-Islam, Lucknow and Delhi, and also refers to the appeal of Maulana Shibli Nomani (vide Selections No. 11, paragraph 71). The editor exhorts Hindus of all sects to make united efforts to reclaim Nau-Muslims, and deplores their apathy in the matter. He points out that the Muhammadans have subscribed cheerfully to the Turkish relief fund, while his Hindu brethren, in spite of the fact that a large number of them were being converted to Islam or Christianity, did not bestir themselves to prevent them. He appeals for ten thousand rupees for the funds of the Bharat Shuddhi Sabha at Agra to enable it to engage preachers and to push on its work vigorously and earnestly.

MUSAFIR, 29th March 1912.

The Bharat Shuddhi Sabha.

52. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 2nd April 1912, reports that the deputation headed by Mr. Jassawalla, which went to England to give the English public some information about the question of cow-slaughter in India, has made some progress. The editor says that the cow-protection movement is to be commended both on religious and utilitarian grounds, and that it should be supported by both Hindus and non-Hindus. He lays stress on the utilitarian aspect of the question, and observes that men of all religions and creeds can help the movement on this ground. He says that Mr. Jassawalla has expressed the opinion that persistent agitation will lead Government to accede to their prayer, and suggests that contributions should be sent to Mr. Jassawalla in England to enable him to keep alive the cow-protection agitation.

OUDH AKHBAR, 2nd April 1912.

The cow-protection movement.

53. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd April 1912, contains a contributed article on Bhakti or devotion by Mr. D. P. Saksena, Professor of the Maharaja College, Jaipur, in which he discusses at length the various forms and aspects of devotion.

LEADER, 3rd April 1912.

Devotion.

Commencing with devotion to love the writer describes how in days of old knights went forth on perilous enterprises inspired by a power that lent them strength and kept their hearts from drooping in the midst of the most hazardous enterprises and he points out that some of the noblest deeds which the history of the world records were prompted by love and accomplished by devotion to a virtuous cause.

He says that patriotism is another aspect of bhakti, and that it manifests itself in the desire to safeguard the place of one's birth and the home of one's childhood and to protect it from an invading foe. The patriot was thus induced to sacrifice all his worldly possessions and his life too in defence of his native land.

He says that another form in which this noble spirit of bhakti manifests itself is in love and devotion to the Government which promotes their peace, prosperity and welfare, and he observes that hearty devotion to a kind, wise and benignant rule happily, set over a people by a merciful Providence, was the most admirable form of bhakti.

54. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 6th April 1912, discusses the constitution of Hindu society of the present-day and says that its two most important factors are the divisions and sub-divisions of castes, and the ignorance and want of freedom of women.

LEADER, 6th April 1912.

The Social Conference.

The editor enquires whether the existing ramifications of caste can be rationally defended or whether they serve any useful purpose and he says that it is the obvious duty of those Hindus, whose minds have been illumined by the light of knowledge and culture, to earnestly endeavour to put down the serious and manifold evils of caste and sect separatism.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD :
The 6th April 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 15 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 13th April 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The international situation ... 363

(b)—Home:

2. The administrative changes... ... 363
3. The administrative changes... ... 363
4. The Provincial Conference 363
5. The Provincial Conference 364
6. The Provincial Conference 364
7. Government and the people... ... 364
8. Government and the people... ... 364
9. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 364
10. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 365
11. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 365
12. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 365
13. The All-India Muslim League and Maulana Shibli Nomani 365
14. The native press 366
15. Indians in South Africa 366
16. Mr. Montague's speech at Cambridge ... 368
17. The new Governor of Bengal ... 369
18. Public opinion at Delhi 369

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

19. British interference in Kashmir ... 369

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

Nil.

(b)—Police:

Nil.

Page.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

20. The Allahabad municipality... ... 370
21. The proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai park at Allahabad 370
22. Sale of meat by Muhammadan hawkers in Islamnagar 370
23. Sanitary service in municipalities ... 370
24. Separate electorates 370

(e)—Education:

25. The proposed Hindu University ... 371
26. The proposed Hindu University ... 371
27. Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal and female education 371
28. Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal and female education 371
29. Education of Europeans and Eurasians in India 371
30. The High school scholarship examination 371

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

31. The Industrial Conference 372
32. The Industrial Conference 372
33. Plague mortality 372
34. Anti-vaccination and vivisection ... 372
35. The ayurvedic and unani systems of medicine 373
36. Public health in the United Provinces... 373
37. The begar and supply of rasad ... 373
38. Cocaine smuggling in India 373
39. Bengal's Foreign Trade and Imperial preference 373
40. The sikka of King George 374
41. Muhammadans and Hindus in Oudh ... 374

		Page.
42.	The proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett	374
43.	The free use of arms in the Punjab ...	374

V.—LEGISLATION.

44.	Proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law	375
45.	Proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law	375
46.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	375
47.	The Elementary Education Bill ...	375
48.	The Wakf Validation Bill	375
49.	The Court of Wards Act	376
50.	The Orissa Tenancy Bill	376

VI.—RAILWAY.

51.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	376

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

52.	The Social Conference	376
53.	The Social Conference	376
54.	The Social Conference	377
55.	Re-marriage of widows	377
56.	The Indian women	377
57.	The protection of cows	377
58.	Theosophy and the Order of the Star in the East	377
59.	The Annual Conference of the Nadwah...	378

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st April 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Quarterly...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 37 ...	300 ,,
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	8,000 ,,
4	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 ,,
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 ,,
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 ,,
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Gulam Muhammad	700 ,,
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 ,,
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 ,,
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 ,,
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 ,,
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; B.A. Arya; 31...	600 ,,
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 ,,
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 ,,
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 31 ...	2,100 ,,
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 28 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	1,500 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 36 ...	200 ,,
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 41... ...	1,000 ,,
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zama Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 ,,
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 ,,
23	Al Aziz	Agra ...	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 ,,
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 ,,
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 ,,
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Noméni; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Abid-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	625 ,,
27	An Nazir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A.... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 ,,
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34 ...	900 ,,
29	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 33	850 ,,
30	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 ,,
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43...	70 ,,
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam. —	200 ,,
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 24.	600 ,,
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 ,,
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 ,,
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 ,,
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 ,,
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 ,,
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 ,,
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Ram Dayal Vidyarthi; 35... ...	709 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.	400 ,,
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 ,,
†52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 ,,
53	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Álam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 ,,
54	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 ,,
55	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
56	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 ,,
57	Vyápári and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 ,,
58	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 ,,
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 32 ...	800 ,,
63	Anwar Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yasuf Khan.
64	Kwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 ,,
66	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 ,,
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 ,,
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 ,,
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 ,,
71	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 ,,
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 ,,
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 ,,
76	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,800 ,,
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-uddin.
79	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 ,,
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	200 ,,
84	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	350 ,,
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 ,,
86	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	350 ,,
87	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
88	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 35	328 ,,
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 33 ...	400 ,,
90	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 ,,
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 ,,
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 ,,
93	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 ,,
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 ,,
	Arabic-Urdu.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	Hindi.
96	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan Chaudhari; Brahman; 56.	100 ,,
98	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 ,,
99	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 ,,
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	130 ,,
101	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	405 ,,
102	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 ,,
103	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	600 ,,
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 ,,
*105	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 ,,
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt Naithani; Brahman; 36.	600 ,,
107	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 ,,
†108	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	...	300 ,,
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26. ...	650 ,,
†110	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Sabaranpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 29	1,000 ,,
111	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 ,,
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád Misra; 22	1,000 ,,
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 37 ...	450 ,,
114	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra; 46 ...	1,500 ,,
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 ,,
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 ,,
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 27 ...	1,600 ,,
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 ,,
†119	Náráyani or Vedánta Patriká ...	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám Nandan, Kayasth; 32 ...	325 ,,
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri; 37	1,000 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	200 ,,
123	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 ,,
124	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Naryan Dube	700 ,,
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 ,,
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; 46...	4,000 ,,
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 ,,
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	3,000 ,,
*129	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla Vaidya; 36.	500 ,,
130	Swadesh Bándhava ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 45	600 ,,
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35	1,000 ,,
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 ,,
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 ,,
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 ,,
135	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 ,,
†136	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 46 ...	500 ,,
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 ,,
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 ,,
139	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 ,,
140	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 ,,
141	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 ,,
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 ,,
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ... / Babu Bansi Dhar	1,000 ,,
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 ,,
†145	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 ,,
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 ,,
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 ,,
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28 ...	2,000 ,,
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
149	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 7th April 1912, has an article discussing the condition of affairs in the principal countries of the world. With regard to England he observes that she is suffering under a very terrible affliction, seeing that nearly all of her interests are bound up with the coal industry, and he, expresses the hope that the employers and the employés will soon come to terms.

ABHYUDAYA, 7th April 1912.

The international situation.

With regard to Germany, the editor refers to the progress that the Socialist party have been recently making and says that signs are not wanting that imperialism will soon have to give place to socialism. He notes that Russia is apparently reorganizing her army and navy in order to avenge herself for the humiliation which she received at the hands of Japan.

He expresses the opinion that the Italian-Turkish war would never have taken place but for the disregard in which morality and religion are held in the politics of Europe.

(b)—Home.

2. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 7th April 1912, remarks that the 1st April will be regarded as a memorable day in the history of Bengal, seeing that the wound inflicted by Lord Curzon was healed on that day. The editor says that, though it is not an easy task to please the Bengalis, it may be confidently expected that Lord Carmichael with Sir W. Duke, Mr. Lyon and Maulvi Saiyid Shams-ul-Huda as his councillors, will do all that is possible to please the people of Bengal.

ABHYUDAYA, 7th April 1912.

The administrative changes.

With regard to the new province of Behar and Orissa, the editor expresses the hope that Sir Charles Bayley will endeavour to secure the establishment of a university as well as of a separate High Court in the province.

3. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 10th April 1912 refers to the meeting recently held in the Town Hall at Calcutta to discuss the territorial redistribution of Bengal and the formation of the new province of Behar and Orissa, the promise of a university at Dacca and the proposal for a separate High Court at Patna.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 10th April 1912.

The administrative changes.

The editor expresses regret that the Bengalis, who were so pleased immediately after the darbar announcements, should now be expressing dissatisfaction at the carrying into effect of the administrative changes announced at Delhi. He notes that no declaration has yet been made by Government of the lines on which the proposed Dacca University would be conducted, and he enquires whether Government has favourably considered the proposals made by the Muhammadans which would enable their community to reap most benefit from the proposed university. With regard to its promise that the Governor of Bengal would spend a part of the year at Dacca, he asks Government to announce a particular time of the year for the Governor's yearly stay at Dacca.

4. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 7th April 1912, expresses dissatisfaction at the poor attendance at the conference, though it was held at a central place like Cawnpore, and suggests as reasons for it anxiety which is prevailing on account of plague, the fact that there are several other meetings in different parts of the province during the same week, and also that the people do not take much interest in such movements. The editor urges the necessity for organizing provincial, and if possible divisional conferences, in order that their representatives in the Councils may acquire first-hand information about the wants and requirements of the people and make them known to Government.

ADVOCATE, 7th April 1912.

The Provincial Conference.

The editor says that he has not time to do more than refer to the Hon'ble Mr. Sinha's presidential address, but he expresses the hope that his remarks about the Council regulations will receive earnest attention.

He states that the indentured labourers were mostly recruited from these provinces, and he advises the conference to urge Government to abolish the system as being distructive of all sense of self-respect. He urges that with large railways and irrigation projects on which every labourer who could be spared, would be able to find employment, it would be a pity indeed if the Government of India did not pay heed to the reasonable request made by non-official members of the Supreme Legislative Council for the abolition of the system.

LEADER, 10th April 1912.

The Provincial Conference.

5. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912, says that only one ex-president, the Hon'ble Mr. Ganga Prasad Varma, was able to be present at the Provincial Conference held at Cawnpore, and he enquires what kept away the Hon'ble Pandit Moti Lal Nehru, the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Hafiz Abdur Rahim. He states that a large number of districts, including Agra and Bareilly, were unrepresented, while Allahabad sent only four delegates including the President. Benares sent two and Meerut one and there were a few from Sitapur, Unao, Rae Bareli and Fyzabad, and suggests that this indicates the extent of the public spirit of the educated people of the United Provinces.

He expresses surprise at the rapidity with which the proceedings of the conference on Sunday were finished as well as the proceedings of the subjects committee on Friday evening.

ADVOCATE, 11th April 1912.

The Provincial Conference.

6. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th April 1912, writes that, though the attendance was poor at the Provincial Conference held at Cawnpore, it did not affect the quality of the work done at the meetings, and that there was not one word in the Hon'ble Mr. Sinha's presidential address which could be described as unnecessary. The editor says that Mr. Sinha made a complete survey of the needs of the province, and, as was expected, laid particular stress on the establishment of an executive council in these provinces, and on the extension of the principle of separate electorate in the lower rungs of the administration. He remarks that Mr. Sinha's view on the question of separate electorates for the Muhammadans could not be acceptable to the public, on the ground that there was no guarantee that fresh agitation would not be started by the Muslim League if the Muhammadans failed to secure more seats in the Councils from joint electorates.

With regard to the amount of work done in the Provincial Council, he says that the fault was as much that of the Councillors as of their constituents, seeing that the latter did not urge members to do more solid work, and he knew that if the constituents elected the proper sort of men to represent popular interests the work would improve considerably.

OUDH AKHBAR, 12th April 1912.

Government and the people.

7. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 12th April 1912, says that people have been accustomed from time immemorial to express their agreement with the views held by the reigning Sovereigns, and objects that the persons who vote on the side of Government when some public measure is discussed in the Legislative Councils, should be accused of being sycophants. The editor agrees that it is to the interest of the public that the representatives of the people should give expression to their opinions in a straightforward manner and in moderate tone but with due regard for the goodwill of their rulers.

He concedes that it is essential for the welfare of a country that there should be moderates and extremists, as without them no reforms would ever be introduced but he describes disloyal opposition to Government as a misfortune to the country.

OUDH AKHBAR, 13th April 1912.

Government and the people.

8. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 13th April 1912, says that the progress and welfare of a state depend on the continuance of mutual goodwill between the rulers and the ruled, in the same way that the well-being of society depends on the existence of sympathy amongst its members.

The editor advises the Muhammadans not to concern themselves with the foreign politics of Government, and asks Government to show consideration for the reasonable requests and wishes of its subjects.

ANAND, 4th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

9. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 4th April 1912 (received on the 8th April), remarks that after the modification of the partition of Bengal the Hindus and Muhammadans have begun to realise the advantages of united action, and the editor refers to a recent meeting of Hindus and Muhammadans at Calcutta under the presidentship of Dr. Rash Behari Ghosh at which sympathy was expressed with Persia, and Government was urged to use its influence to persuade Russia to desist from provoking Persia. He suggests that those who advocate separate representation in these provinces should notice the good results which follow when Hindus and Muhammadans unite.

ANAND, 4th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

10. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 4th April 1912 (received on the 8th April), says that the Muhammadan papers are urging for separate representation on municipal boards, on the ground that no Muhammadan was returned at the election of the Allahabad Municipality on account of the majority of Hindu voters. The editor observes that the same cannot be said of all municipalities in the province, seeing that Muhammadans have been elected in those wards of Lucknow where the majority of voters are Hindus.

He states that the present difference of opinion between the Hindus and Muhammadans is due to the separatist tendency of the latter, who, after the partition of Bengal, had formed the idea that their hope of success lay in opposing the Hindus. The editor says that Lord Minto granted some important privileges to the Muhammadan community, because he saw that they were so backward but that the Muhammadans, instead of receiving them as an act of favour, began to consider them as a reward for opposing the Hindus. He suggests that when the Muhammadans are enlarging on the harm which the Hindus are trying to inflict on them, the Hindu voters are not to be blamed if they vote for a Hindu and not for a Muhammadan.

He refers to the insinuations expressed by the partisans of Saiyid Nabi-Ullah against Shaikh Shahid Husain and the Hindu community in the course of the recent election of a Muhammadan member for the Provincial Council at Lucknon, and he reminds those who complain of the Hindus not voting for Muhammadans at Allahabad, that among their own community there are people, and educated men too, who make spiteful and unjust attacks on their political opponents.

ITTIHAD, 8th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

11. The Ittihad (Moradabad), of the 8th April 1912, dwells at length on the necessity for the promotion of goodwill between Hindus and Muhammadans, and expresses regret that the Hindu leaders do not cordially reciprocate the efforts made by the Muhammadans to bring about a rapprochement between the two communities. The editor asks his co-religionists to show less enthusiasm in their attempts to gain the friendship of Hindus, seeing that their overtures to win the goodwill of the Hindus are not reciprocated, and observes that the Muhammadans should not desire the friendship of the Hindus if the latter do not want them as friends.

DARBAR, 9th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

12. The Darbar (Agra), of the 9th April 1912, makes an appeal for unity between Hindus and Muhammadans, on the ground that such unity is absolutely necessary for the progress of the country. The editor deprecates the attitude of a certain section of the vernacular press which would seem to aim at widening the gulf between the two communities, and he says that popular feeling on the subject is so perverse that either community has nothing but praise for any of its members who distinguishes himself by attacking the rival community.

He deprecates the objectionable language used on both sides, and remarks that these mutual recriminations in the name of religion are now assuming a dangerous aspect, and are likely to lead to undesirable consequences. He asks his countrymen to take a lesson from Christian missionaries of different denominations, who, when they preach, never demean themselves by making scurillous attacks on the religions of other people.

He states that the separatist tendency of the Indian Muhammadans is condemned as ill-advised by their co-religionists all over the world, and in conclusion he advises his countrymen to work in harmony, not for any political purpose, but for their moral and intellectual advancement.

KAISER-I-HIND, 4th April 1912.

The All-India Muslim League and Maulana Shibli Nomani.

13. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 4th April 1912 (received on the 8th April), complains that Shams-ul-Ulma Maulana Shibli Nomani should have spoken against the Muslim

League, and that he should have attacked the Agha Khan and other Muhammadan leaders in the columns of the Muslim Gazette.

The editor says that Maulana Shibli cannot possibly perform all the duties that he has imposed upon himself, nor can the Nadwah be expected to bear the weight of the manifold responsibilities thrust upon it.

He remarks that Maulana Shibli has got his hands already so full with various public schemes as to have no time to spare for politics.

The editor insists on some division of labour and expresses the opinion that Maulana Shibli should give up his opposition to the Muslim League, and confine his energies to the completion of his various half-finished schemes. He urges the Muhammadans not to be ungrateful to their patriotic leaders, but to rally under them.

With regard to his proposal to form a committee to discuss measures for the exposition of the modern and scientific system of theology, the editor remarks that Maulana Shibli will merely impede the progress of the Nadwah by trying to thrust upon it so many religious and political responsibilities.

In conclusion he states that it was only a short time back that the very existence of the Nadwah was in danger, and that the only strength of the Nadwah lies in Maulana Shibli and that without his guiding hand it would quickly collapse.

MASHRIQ, 9th April 1912.

The native press.

14. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer deplores the mutual recriminations indulged in by a certain section of the Urdu press and expresses regret that some papers should have made it their special business to call each other disloyal, to foment racial dissensions and to excite religious hatred. He points out that the Italian-Turkish war and the situation in Persia have supplied the Muhammadans with materials on account of which to accuse each other of sedition and disloyalty, though it is a matter of common knowledge that England is well disposed towards both Turkey and Persia. He goes on to say that the Congress party has also been made the subject of ridicule and abuse, though as a matter of fact the Government of India has expressed sympathy with many of the proposals of the Congress, and although Sir Saiyid never opposed the Congress in the sense in which his opposition has been interpreted by his present-day followers. He expresses the opinion that this mistaken course has been adopted by certain papers to further their selfish aims, and to gain an increase in the circulation of the paper by achieving cheap notoriety.

In conclusion the writer warns such papers against the consequences of their misguided policy.

LEADER, 10th April 1912.

Indians in South Africa.

15. The following is published in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912 :—

"SIR,—In the absence of the full text of the White Paper on South African Indian affairs, it is not easy to criticise the publication at all adequately, but the brief cabled summary reveals and conceals sufficient to make some words of comment at this stage advisable ; and first of all, we ought to clear the ground. Though the Imperial and Indian Governments are alive to the fact, quite a number of people appear to have failed to realise that the provisional settlement of last May, which has not yet been legalized as promised, dealt with two Transvaal matters only : an undertaking was given, first, to repeal the Registration Law of 1907, a more or less obsolete measure, and secondly, to remove the racial bar from the statute book as to immigration. The settlement did not affect any other Transvaal questions and none at all in the other provinces of South Africa. And the Imperial Government have laid it down as their policy, that in disposing of these two matters, which alone were the subject of passive resistance, they would not be consenting parties to the diminution of rights enjoyed by Indian residents in the Cape Colony or Natal, and presumably in the Transvaal itself.

All these outstanding questions have to be dealt with independently of the settlement, and some are of long standing. The White Paper seems to indicate that the Union authorities are indulging in their old practice of endeavouring to make the public believe that the Transvaal Indians are trying to go behind the terms of that settlement by demanding something new and impossible; in fact, that they are attempting a breach of faith. I will endeavour, as shortly and concisely as the somewhat complicated facts will permit, to place the situation before your readers, so that they may judge for themselves.

The new Transvaal trouble is as old as the controversy in that territory itself. The Republican Anti-Asiatic Law of 1885 laid it down that no Asiatic could own fixed property, nor could he reside anywhere outside a location for sanitary reasons. These two prohibitions still obtain, and their history is a peculiar one. Though Indians could not get land registered in their own names, either for business, residential or farming purposes, European friends undertook to accept registration in private trust for them. That these agreements, though evasive of the deliberate purpose of the law, were not illegal, was laid down in an obiter dictum of the Transvaal Supreme Court in 1905. Moreover, they have received Government authority. Before the law of 1885 came into force, a certain firm of Indians in Klerksdorp bought certain building plots at public auction, subject to payment of monthly licence fees as ground rent. They built substantial business premises thereon. It became customary for all purchasers to pay the licences half-yearly instead of monthly. The Indian firm's European trade-rivals commenced an agitation against them, and the Republican Government thereupon ordered the confiscation of the property on the ground of irregular payment of licences. The Indian firm strenuously protested and after some time the Government agreed to accept the licences and to re-invest them with the property, provided it was registered in the name of some European, and this was done. Another such case of official acceptance of the situation is one in which I was personally concerned. The late Mr. Aboobaker Amod, the pioneer Indian trader in South Africa, bought a certain property in Pretoria before Law III of 1895 came into force, but it was not registered in his name until after that date, and as a result, his heirs were debarred from taking transfer. Years passed, and the property was transferred to me as nominal owner, and as the case was one creating great hardship in the special circumstances, a clause was inserted in the Asiatic Act of 1908 enabling the heirs to take transfer from me, the Government thus recognizing the practice of private landtrusts.

In 1908 and 1909, however, the situation altered entirely without the knowledge of the Transvaal Indian community and the imperial authorities. Certain Townships Acts were passed, enabling leaseholders in townships to obtain freehold title on certain conditions, which were to be laid down subsequently by the Governor. These laws were drawn in general terms, and were therefore not subject to suspension pending examination by the Colonial Office. The conditions of the grant, however, never came before the Parliament for debate or before the Imperial Government for review, and they contained a clause prohibiting the guarantee from permitting any coloured person to occupy or reside on the property, except as a domestic servant, on penalty of its confiscation without compensation. In effect, a customary right enjoyed by the Indian community, hitherto recognized by the Government and by the courts, was annulled, not by statute, but by regulations that had never come under imperial scrutiny, and it is only recently that the new provisions have come into operation. Last year, in order partly to extend his business and partly to test the validity of these regulations, Mr. Amod Moosa Bhyat purchased a certain freehold in the township of Boksburg, and Mr. L. W. Ritch, lately the Secretary of the London Committee presided over by Lord Ampthill, took transfer in his own name. Mr. Bhyat built substantial business premises thereon, and opened an up-to-date business. But Mr. Bhyat has committed the unpardonable offence of being the first Indian to open a business outside of the Boksburg location, and Boksburg has always considered itself to be a white township. In other words, hitherto, the inhabitants of Boksburg have endeavoured to prevent any Indian getting a footing there though the law permits the issue of a trading-licence anywhere in the Transvaal to an Indian. Accordingly, the Union Government have commenced proceedings against Messrs. Bhyat and Ritch with the object of procuring the cancellation of the title-deeds of the property without compensation to Mr. Bhyat, who finds himself faced, on the one hand, with costly litigation, and, on the other, with ruin. Now, this prohibition of the direct ownership of land has never been accepted by the Indian community, and the Imperial Government

League, and that he should have attacked the Agha Khan and other Muhammadan leaders in the columns of the Muslim Gazette.

The editor says that Maulana Shibli cannot possibly perform all the duties that he has imposed upon himself, nor can the Nadwah be expected to bear the weight of the manifold responsibilities thrust upon it.

He remarks that Maulana Shibli has got his hands already so full with various public schemes as to have no time to spare for politics.

The editor insists on some division of labour and expresses the opinion that Maulana Shibli should give up his opposition to the Muslim League, and confine his energies to the completion of his various half-finished schemes. He urges the Muhammadans not to be ungrateful to their patriotic leaders, but to rally under them.

With regard to his proposal to form a committee to discuss measures for the exposition of the modern and scientific system of theology, the editor remarks that Maulana Shibli will merely impede the progress of the Nadwah by trying to thrust upon it so many religious and political responsibilities.

In conclusion he states that it was only a short time back that the very existence of the Nadwah was in danger, and that the only strength of the Nadwah lies in Maulana Shibli and that without his guiding hand it would quickly collapse.

MASHRIQ, 9th April 1912.

14. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer deplores the mutual recriminations indulged in by a certain section of the Urdu press and expresses regret that some papers should have made it their special business to call each other disloyal, to foment racial dissensions and to excite religious hatred. He points out that the Italian-Turkish war and the situation in Persia have supplied the Muhammadans with materials on account of which to accuse each other of sedition and disloyalty, though it is a matter of common knowledge that England is well disposed towards both Turkey and Persia. He goes on to say that the Congress party has also been made the subject of ridicule and abuse, though as a matter of fact the Government of India has expressed sympathy with many of the proposals of the Congress, and although Sir Saiyid never opposed the Congress in the sense in which his opposition has been interpreted by his present-day followers. He expresses the opinion that this mistaken course has been adopted by certain papers to further their selfish aims, and to gain an increase in the circulation of the paper by achieving cheap notoriety.

The native press.

In conclusion the writer warns such papers against the consequences of their misguided policy.

LEADER, 10th April 1912.

Indians in South Africa.

15. The following is published in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912:—

"Sir,—In the absence of the full text of the White Paper on South African Indian affairs, it is not easy to criticise the publication at all adequately, but the brief cabled summary reveals and conceals sufficient to make some words of comment at this stage advisable; and first of all, we ought to clear the ground. Though the Imperial and Indian Governments are alive to the fact, quite a number of people appear to have failed to realise that the provisional settlement of last May, which has not yet been legalized as promised, dealt with two Transvaal matters only: an undertaking was given, first, to repeal the Registration Law of 1907, a more or less obsolete measure, and secondly, to remove the racial bar from the statute book as to immigration. The settlement did not affect any other Transvaal questions and none at all in the other provinces of South Africa. And the Imperial Government have laid it down as their policy, that in disposing of these two matters, which alone were the subject of passive resistance, they would not be consenting parties to the diminution of rights enjoyed by Indian residents in the Cape Colony or Natal, and presumably in the Transvaal itself.

All these outstanding questions have to be dealt with independently of the settlement, and some are of long standing. The White Paper seems to indicate that the Union authorities are indulging in their old practice of endeavouring to make the public believe that the Transvaal Indians are trying to go behind the terms of that settlement by demanding something new and impossible; in fact, that they are attempting a breach of faith. I will endeavour, as shortly and concisely as the somewhat complicated facts will permit, to place the situation before your readers, so that they may judge for themselves.

The new Transvaal trouble is as old as the controversy in that territory itself. The Republican Anti-Asiatic Law of 1885 laid it down that no Asiatic could own fixed property, nor could he reside anywhere outside a location for sanitary reasons. These two prohibitions still obtain, and their history is a peculiar one. Though Indians could not get land registered in their own names, either for business, residential or farming purposes, European friends undertook to accept registration in private trust for them. That these agreements, though evasive of the deliberate purpose of the law, were not illegal, was laid down in an obiter dictum of the Transvaal Supreme Court in 1905. Moreover, they have received Government authority. Before the law of 1885 came into force, a certain firm of Indians in Klerksdorp bought certain building plots at public auction, subject to payment of monthly licence fees as ground rent. They built substantial business premises thereon. It became customary for all purchasers to pay the licences half-yearly instead of monthly. The Indian firm's European trade-rivals commenced an agitation against them, and the Republican Government thereupon ordered the confiscation of the property on the ground of irregular payment of licences. The Indian firm strenuously protested and after some time the Government agreed to accept the licences and to re-invest them with the property, provided it was registered in the name of some European, and this was done. Another such case of official acceptance of the situation is one in which I was personally concerned. The late Mr. Aboobaker Amod, the pioneer Indian trader in South Africa, bought a certain property in Pretoria before Law III of 1895 came into force, but it was not registered in his name until after that date, and as a result, his heirs were debarred from taking transfer. Years passed, and the property was transferred to me as nominal owner, and as the case was one creating great hardship in the special circumstances, a clause was inserted in the Asiatic Act of 1908 enabling the heirs to take transfer from me, the Government thus recognizing the practice of private landtrusts.

In 1908 and 1909, however, the situation altered entirely without the knowledge of the Transvaal Indian community and the imperial authorities. Certain Townships Acts were passed, enabling leaseholders in townships to obtain freehold title on certain conditions, which were to be laid down subsequently by the Governor. These laws were drawn in general terms, and were therefore not subject to suspension pending examination by the Colonial Office. The conditions of the grant, however, never came before the Parliament for debate or before the Imperial Government for review, and they contained a clause prohibiting the guarantee from permitting any coloured person to occupy or reside on the property, except as a domestic servant, on penalty of its confiscation without compensation. In effect, a customary right enjoyed by the Indian community, hitherto recognized by the Government and by the courts, was annulled, not by statute, but by regulations that had never come under imperial scrutiny, and it is only recently that the new provisions have come into operation. Last year, in order partly to extend his business and partly to test the validity of these regulations, Mr. Amod Moosa Bhyat purchased a certain freehold in the township of Boksburg, and Mr. L. W. Ritch, lately the Secretary of the London Committee presided over by Lord Ampthill, took transfer in his own name. Mr. Bhyat built substantial business premises thereon, and opened an up-to-date business. But Mr. Bhyat has committed the unpardonable offence of being the first Indian to open a business outside of the Boksburg location, and Boksburg has always considered itself to be a white township. In other words, hitherto, the inhabitants of Boksburg have endeavoured to prevent any Indian getting a footing there though the law permits the issue of a trading-licence anywhere in the Transvaal to an Indian. Accordingly, the Union Government have commenced proceedings against Messrs. Bhyat and Ritch with the object of procuring the cancellation of the title-deeds of the property without compensation to Mr. Bhyat, who finds himself faced, on the one hand, with costly litigation, and, on the other, with ruin. Now, this prohibition of the direct ownership of land has never been accepted by the Indian community, and the Imperial Government have repeatedly urged upon the Transvaal authorities the reasonableness of the amendment of the law giving Indians the right of direct ownership of their own places of residence and business premises. For the Transvaal Government then, in the face of this attitude, to rob the Indian community of an indirect right by apparently innocent measures, whose secretly hostile purpose lies concealed in regulations that did not receive publicity at the time, is a piece of oblique diplomacy on a par with all Transvaal precedents.

The history of the location grievance is somewhat different. The Republican Government attempted to give the expression 'residence in locations' the extended meaning of 'trade in locations.' As the matter was one of life and death to the Indian community, they appealed to the Imperial Government, who, after lengthy negotiations, induced the Republican authorities to agree to arbitration. The award left the interpretation of the law to the courts, which in 1898 gave judgment against the Indians by a majority. Mr. Chamberlain reserved the right to approach the Republican Government, who were induced to stay their hand, but when later on they endeavoured to force all Indians, regardless of status, to reside and trade in locations, their action became one of the avowed causes of the war. At its conclusion, the Indians found that the new Government were enforcing the very legislation against which they had protested in Republican days, and they were obliged to seek the protection of the Supreme Court, which reversed the old High Court's judgment, and sternly rebuked the British authorities for their inconsistency. Undismayed, an attempt was made to over-rule the Supreme Court's decision by fresh legislation, but this was prevented by a despatch of Mr. Lyttleton, the then Colonial Secretary, on the late Sir Charles Dilke's intervention. The Imperial Government then laid down the policy that they would not accept legislation taking away rights that had been declared by the Supreme Court. In 1908, however, against the protests of the Indian community they reversed this policy by sanctioning the old law which prohibited all coloured persons on mining areas from residing on or occupying for any purpose any land situated in such an area on penalty of criminal prosecution. The courts have held that the rights possessed when the Act came into operation are local and personal, and are current so long as the holder remains in the same place but are not transmissible. The effect of the law is to take away an existing actual or potential right, and, sooner or later, to drive the Indian population into locations for purposes of residence and trade, resulting in their eventual ruin and virtual expulsion from the province.

These, then, are the main causes of the present trouble in the Transvaal, apart from those giving rise to the recent passive resistance agitation. It is plain that, immoral as is the 'freezing out' policy of the Union Government, the Indian population, who had no voice in its making and who will be ruined by its enforcement, are no party to it at all and have always protested against its underlying principles, in which they have, on various occasions, been upheld by the Imperial Government and the Transvaal courts. I venture to think that they have a claim upon the active sympathies of the people and Government of this country in their effort to expose a wrong and to procure its removal.

BOMBAY:
April 4. } H. S. L. POLAK."

TOHFA-I-HIND, 11th April 1912.

Mr. Montague's speech at Cambridge.

16. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 11th April 1912, refers to the speech recently delivered by Mr. Montague at Cambridge, and remarks that the frank and impressive speech of the Under Secretary for India was bound to be appreciated by the Indians and to create in them a feeling of greater attachment to the Throne. The editor says that it is the duty of the State to act according to the wishes of the people and not to place obstacles in the way of the advancement of its subjects.

He refers to the intention of Government to confer Home Rule on Ireland, and expresses the hope that India also will get Home Rule some day. He goes on to say that before Indians ask for self-government they should prove themselves equally capable with the Irish, and that if Indians become united success is sure to attend them.

17. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th April 1912, expresses the hope that the expectations raised in the minds of the Indian public by Lord Carmichael's brief administration in the Madras Presidency will be successfully accomplished in Bengal, and that his real statesmanship and genuine sympathy for the aspirations of the people under his charge will result in Bengal making steady progress in all directions. The editor observes that His Excellency's success in Bengal will depend up on his ability to secure the confidence and co-operation of the people as well as of the officials, and that his powers of persuasion, conciliation and tact will stand him in good stead. He notes that his replies to the addresses of welcome fully sustain the reputation that he possesses of being a straightforward and sincere administrator. The editor approves of his replies to the Mnhammadan and Anglo-Indian Defence Association addresses in which he frankly told them that it was his duty to hold the scales evenly between all sections of the people and that he would administer justice to all alike.

ADVOCATE, 11th April 1912.

The new Governor of Bengal.

18. Shiva Prasad Gupta from Benares writes along letter to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th April 1912, in which he draws attention to the fact that, though Delhi is to be the seat of the Government of India, there is no public life there worth the name nor any means of building it up in the near future. In these circumstances he urges all public-spirited people to take active measures to remedy the defect, chief among which he recommends the establishment at Delhi of influential newspapers both in English and in the vernacular.

LEADER, 12th April 1912.

Public opinion at Delhi.

In the same letter he refers to the lack of organization among the non-official members of the Supreme Legislative Council, and suggests that it is owing to the fact that they get very little chance of meeting one another. He suggests that this dis advantage could be avoided to a great extent if arrangements were made to provide accommodation for as many members as possible in one place so that they would come more into contact with one another than was possible at Calcutta. He says that if they were to meet in a club daily and settle unofficially about their work in the council, the business would be done more methodically, and the weakness and divisions among themselves would be removed, and he suggests the building of a club house at Delhi with accommodation for all the non-official members of the Imperial Council and a good political library and reading room. This building, he says, should contain a whole-time office of the Indian National Congress and a large hall for holding the session of the Congress there whenever it may be desirable to do so. He remarks that from the funds raised for the building a portion should be allowted for starting daily papers in Hindi, Urdu and English. He expresses the opinion that the entire scheme could be accompublished at a cost of five lakhs of rupees, and that it should not be very difficult to raise that sum from the eight major provinces.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

19. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 5th April 1912, expresses disapproval of the action of Government in obtaining, through the Resident at Kashmir, the release of one Hayat Ali and some other Muhammahans who had been convicted and sentenced to death by the highest tribunal in the Kashmir State for robbery and murder.

MUSAFIR, 5th April 1912.

British interference in Kashmir.

The editor remarks that Government was wrong to have interfered in the internal affairs of Kashmir, and he suggests that, now that it has unfortunately intervened on behalf of the culprits, Government should appoint a Commission to hold a regular trial and punish the offenders for the heinous crime committed by them.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

Nil.

(b)—Police.

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 3rd April 1912.

The Allahabad Municipality.

20. The editor of the Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), in the issue of the 3rd April 1912 (received on the 8th April), complains of the inconvenience caused by the halwais collecting leaves for their stoves on the pavement of the road near the Gudri bazaar in the Chowk and by the congregation of hawkers in the neighbourhood of the new clock tower. He asks the police to make arrangements to keep the road clear for traffic.

LEADER, 11th April 1912.

The proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai park at Allahabad.

21. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th April 1912, publishes a letter from the Secretary of the Allahabad Trades' Association stating that the minority who voted against the proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai park were not opposed to the park itself but only to the site alone. The editor expresses the hope that the proposal will be approved by the Commissioner.

ZUL QARNAIN, 7th April 1912.

Sale of meat by Muhammadan hawkers in Islamnagar.

22. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 7th April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the order passed by the sub-divisional officer on the 4th April, permitting the sale of meat by Muhammadan hawkers in Islamnagar, and observes that Muhammadans will now have no cause for complaint.

Referring to the Zul Qarnain's comments on the action of the sub-divisional officer in passing an order without verifying the signatures of the applicants (vide Selections No. 13 of 1912, paragraph 42), the editor remarks that he did not mean to impugn the honesty or fair-mindedness of the officer, but that he had, with the best of intentions, simply criticised the procedure, which he considered to be wrong. He goes on to say that to err is human, but the person who does not cling obstinately to his mistakes is to be congratulated, and he concludes with the remark that an officer, who does justice without any consideration of caste or creed, is worthy of all praise.

RAHBAR, 7th April 1912.

Sanitary service in municipalities.

23. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th April 1912, expresses disapproval of the proposal for the institution of a provincial sanitary service for the municipalities of the United Provinces under government control, and remarks that the chief aim of Lord Ripon in introducing local self-government in India was to make it a training ground for self-government in the country. The editor expresses regret that officials of the present day should have persistently opposed the real object for which municipal boards were established, and in this way have prevented its accomplishment. He agrees that the proposal to institute a sanitary service was in itself commendable, but that in execution it will be most unfortunate, in that health officers will in future have to look to Government for orders. He states that even now most of the highly-paid municipal officials, who are wholely and solely subordinate to the municipal board, do not consider their responsibility to the municipal commissioners, and he expresses the opinion that when the health officers will be made directly responsible to Government, differences will be bound to arise, and those officers, instead of being of any use to the municipalities, will simply become a burden on their finances.

MASHRIQ, 9th April 1912.

Separate electorates.

24. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th April 1912, publishes a letter from the Secretary of the Ghazipur Muslim League in which the writer complains that no action has yet been taken, although representations were made to the Local Government that separate electorates should be granted and that the ward rolls should be prepared in such a way that the number of Hindu and Muhammadan voters should be equal, and that the Hindus and Muhammadans should get an equal number of seats on the municipal and district boards.

Referring to this letter the editor points out that the tension of feeling between the Hindus and Muhammadans has been growing owing to the competition for seats on municipal and district boards, and he says that it is eventually bound to lead to litigation and result in breaches of the peace. He urges that if Government be desirous of preserving amicable relations between the two communities it should introduce the system of separate electorates.

(c)—Education.

25. The Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 3rd April 1912 (received on the 8th April), refers to a collection made by one Murlidhar, Station Master of Ugarpur, in muhalla Dhuliaganj, Agra, for the Hindu University Fund, and remarks that it was not difficult for one man to collect as much as Rs. 100 when once the people had realized that the spreading of education was the noblest of all works. He urges the need for instructing the people that education is essential to progress and true life.

JAIN GAZETTE, 3rd April 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

26. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th April 1912, contains an article contributed by S. P. Bharadwaj, in which the writer observes that defective education and want of character are the causes which have led to the degeneration of India. He remarks that there is a hope for the Hindus only if they reform their character and educate their countrymen properly. He asks them therefore to promote the proposed Hindu university scheme by liberally contributing towards its funds, and expresses regret at the apathy of the people of the Agra division who have not yet contributed anything to the fund. He urges Nathpal Singh (sic) and other leading men of the Agra division to do something for the good of their country by making some contribution.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th April 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

27. The Advocate (Lucknow) of the 7th April 1912, refers to the letter addressed by Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal to the Indian public on the subject of female education in India, and the scheme for imparting it, and expresses the hope that the matter will receive the support of all patriotic Indians and Her Highness's appeal will receive a hearty response.

ADVOCATE, 7th April 1912.

Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal and female education.

28. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 10th April 1912, commends Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal's proposal to establish a school for the education of Muhammadan girls, and says that the progress of the country is dependant on the advancement of female education.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 10th April 1912.

Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal and female education.

The editor, however, expresses apprehension lest the abuses of the West should be introduced in the course of establishing such an instituion, which would tend to weaken the foundations of the Muslim religion and nationality, and he asks Her Highness to provide carefully against the possibility of such a danger in her scheme.

29. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th April 1912, refers to the meeting held at Bombay under the presidentship of Sir George Clarke to discuss the means for the education of the children of Europeans and Eurasians in India, and remarks that the speech of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay to the effect that education for Europeans and Eurasians must be free and compulsory can only be commended by the supporters of the principle of free and compulsory education in India when the same principle is extended to the Indians, who are comparatively poorer than Europeans and Eurasians, and who deserve to be treated with greater consideration in the matter.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th April 1912.

Education of Europeans and Eurasians in India.

30. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 11th April 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer criticises the language of the Hindi in the translation paper set in the last High School scholarship examination, and invites the attention of the educational authorities to the matter. He urges the importance of the examiner, who sets the paper for the examination, knowing the language thoroughly.

ABHYUDAYA, 11th April 1912.

The High School scholarship examination.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

ADVOCATE, 11th April 1912.

The Industrial Conference.

31. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th April 1912, says that the most important resolution passed at the Industrial Conference at Cawnpore was that relating to the excise duties, and urges the abolition of the excise duty on the produce of Indian mills, in view of its injurious effect on the indigenous industry.

With regard to the resolution on the sugar industry the editor expresses doubt as to whether anything of read benefit can be done in the matter.

LEADER, 11th April 1912.

The Industrial Conference.

32. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th April 1912, commenting on the proceedings of the sixth session of the United Provinces Industrial Conference, remarks that, except in point of attendance, it was a great success, and that this was mainly due to the valued contribution made by several official and non-official Europeans. The editor observes that the problems of India's industrial development are so difficult and complex that they can only be solved by action of the Government and the people, both Europeans and Indians.

The editor commends Mr. Silver's presidential speech, and says that the views expressed by him were very sound. He refers particularly to Mr. Silver's condemnation of the imposition of the excise duty on all cotton cloth manufactured in India, and describes it as an indefensible impost levied at the bidding of influential manufacturers in England. He suggests that a measure of justice would be done to Indians if the impost were levied only on those descriptions of cloth which are also imported from Lancashire, and only on so much of this cloth as is actually sold in India, and if the proceeds of the duty were devoted to the education of mill hands or to the extension and improvement of cotton cultivation.

Referring to the resolution on the organization of industries and the swadeshi movement, the editor suggests that the people, instead of fighting shy of industrial enterprises, should study the causes of their failures, and try to avoid them in future by proceeding on well-considered lines, and he concludes by expressing approval of the way in which production, distribution and consumption were severally dealt with in the resolution.

ABHYUDAYA, 7th April 1912.

Plague mortality.

33. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 7th April 1912, challenges the accuracy of the figures in the statement of plague deaths for the week ending 30th March 1912, seeing that more than thirty-three deaths were reported to have occurred in Allahabad on each day during that week.

LEADER, 10th April 1912.

Anti-vaccination and vivisection.

34. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912, publishes the representation made to the president of the Bombay Corporation, under the heading "Against Medical Tyranny" sent by Labhshankar Laxmidas from Bombay, in which he referred to the proposals for school medical inspection in the city of Bombay and for the foundation of a school of Tropical Medicine, and asked that, before giving doctors powers to inspect school children, the Corporation should take care that such powers were not abused in the way of forcing the unfortunate children to be vaccinated or inoculated for plague, cholera, consumption or any other disease, or to be carried away to a sanatorium.

He quoted cases from several papers and magazines to show the extent to which medical tyranny was carried on in the West, and mentioned the special societies and periodicals which existed in England for dealing with cases of medical cruelty to men as well as animals.

He asked for a guarantee from the Corporation to the effect that no medical tyranny or vivisection of men or animals should be allowed under the proposed new schemes.

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th April 1912, refers to that portion of the Hon'ble Colonel Manifold's speech in the Provincial Council in which he opposed any expenditure of fund, on the ayurvedic and unani systems of medicine and expresses disapproval of Colonel Manifold's condemnation of the indigenous systems. The editor remarks that if the two systems are not progressive it is not because of their inherent inability to develop on sound lines, but because patronage is withheld from them, and he refuses to believe that they are equalled as yet by alopathic medicine, in their power to effect radical cures of chronic ailments. He contends that it would be no retrogression if Government were to encourage them, seeing that the mass of the people still have more faith in indigenous medicines than in the alopathic system. He considers that an annual expenditure of a lakh or half a lakh of the public revenues on the ayurvedic and unani systems of treatment would be much appreciated by the Hindu and Muhammadan communities, and would probably promote the public good, and he expresses the hope that Government may yet reconsider its decision on the matter.

LEADER, 12th April 1912.

The ayurvedic and unani systems of medicine.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th April 1912, refers to the rate of mortality among all the communities during the year 1910-11, and says that the figures revealed an extremely unsatisfactory state of public health in the United Provinces. With regard to the Sanitary Commissioner's remarks that owing to the want of funds a large number of municipalities, which were anxious to execute sanitary works, could not give effect to their desire, the editor enquires whether in these circumstances it can be doubted that the expenditure on sanitation and medical relief in these provinces require to be considerably increased.

LEADER, 12th April 1912.

Public health in the United Provinces.

37. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th April 1912, condemns the begar system as well as that for the compulsory supply of rasad, and remarks that in the same way that begar serves no useful purpose to Government but simply helps to fill the pockets of some oppressive and iniquitious subordinate officials, so the system of forced supply of rasad is of no use except to satisfy the greed of some rapacious subordinates, specially when things can be had easily on payment of a reasonable price. The editor invites the attention of Government to the fact that all officials receive allowances when on tour, and have therefore no right to force zamindars to supply provisions, and he suggests that Government should make an example of one or two offenders in order to put a stop to the reprehensible practice.

RAHBAR, 7th April 1912.

The begar and supply of rasad.

38. In the course of a note on the increase in the excise revenue of the United Provinces for the year 1910-11, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th April 1912, invites attention to the considerable amount of illicit sale of cocaine carried on in the country by organized smuggling which eluded detection. The editor suggests that the drug being imported chiefly from Germany, the Government of Germany should be approached in order to restrict its import and to make it impossible for private individuals in India to purchase it from that country. In conclusion he remarks that the evil was daily growing more serious and he urges that something should be done to check it.

LEADER, 9th April 1912.

Cocaine smuggling in India.

39. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th April 1912, refers to the increase in the sea-borne trade of Bengal during the year 1910-11, and remarks that the exports of Bengal consist mainly of raw materials, from which it is obvious that, if foreign countries were shut out by a high tariff wall under the imperial preference scheme, the export trade of Bengal would considerably go down. The editor expresses the opinion that the diminution of the sea-borne trade of Bengal with countries outside the British Empire would be calculated to effect India injuriously for some time, in that it would lead to the dislocation of several existing trades by cheapening raw commodities, and that it might deprive other countries of facilities for obtaining raw products, but he doubts whether there would be any considerable increase in exports and imports between Great Britain and India. He says that it does not require much foresight to predict that the effect of an imperial preferential tariff on India would be a considerable reduction of exports, a fall

LEADER, 9th April 1912.

Bengal's Foreign Trade and Imperial preference.

in the value of raw products, and an appreciable decrease in the import trade throughout the country.

LEADER, 11th April 1912.

The sikka of King George.

40. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer invites attention to a sikka composed by Saiyid Ali Naqi Sahib of Lucknow on the occasion of the coronation, which, translated into English, reads as follows :—

"Struck coin our Darius on silver and gold,
George V, King of land and seas."

The writer says that it is a sikka, saja and tarikh all in one and as such stands unsurpassed and unrivalled. He describes that it is a sikka, in that it is an impression intended for a coin, a saja as it is a verse which contains the name of a person, and lastly it is a tarikh because the numerical values of the letters of the last verse, if added together, give the year 1911 (the year of the darbar).

ADVOCATE, 11th April 1912.

Muhammadans and Hindus in Oudh.

41. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th April 1912, has the following :—

"MUHAMMADANS AND HINDUS IN OUDH.

The Indian Daily Telegraph, commenting on His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's remarks about the estrangement between the Hindus and Muhammadans, writes : 'In Oudh, emissaries of the Arya Samaj and agitators of more virulent sort have been known to visit leading Hindu landowners and order them—under dire penalties—to dispense with the services of their Muhammadan employés, a step few of the landed gentry cared to take. At elections too we have received reliable information of voters being threatened with loss of caste should they not support the Hindu candidate, procedure familar to the Irish peasantry, whose priests invoke the wrath of Mother Church on anybody daring to vote in accordance with his real inclinations and the merits of respective candidates, apart from their religious opinion.'

The only comment which one is tempted to make on the above statement is that all this is pure fiction. It is such wild and unfounded accusation that create friction more than anything else."

HINDUSTANI, 12th April 1912.

The proposed memorialto Sir John Hewett.

42. A correspondent who signs himself "THAKUR RANBIR SINGH OF DAHIAWAN" contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 12th April 1912, in which he suggests that the proposed memorial to Sir John Hewett by the taluqdars of Oudh should take the form of an educational institution, and should consist of a zamindar school to be known as the Hewett School to be attached to the present Colvin School at Lucknow.

He says that it would not be advisable to introduce the zamindari course in the Colvin School, as many young men, who study at home or at other schools, would not be able to avail themselves of its benefits. He suggests that at the proposed Hewett School rent and revenue laws, agriculture and principles of zamindari management should be taught, and that the period of instruction should extend over one year. In the case of the students of the Colvin School he suggests that this special course should be finished in three years, in order that it may not interfere with the literary education of the students. In conclusion he says that the amount of money required for a boarding house to accommodate about twenty students at the beginning, and that the farm which will not be very expensive, should be met by contributions from the taluqdars, and that the deficit, if any, by the Taluqdars' Association.

LEADER, 13th April 1912.

The free use of arms in the Punjab.

43. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 13th April 1912, has the following :—

"As will be seen from the telegram in another column the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, having regard to the increase of violent crime in his province, proposed to the Government of India that he should be allowed to let the villagers be armed freely, but the higher authority disagreed with the proposal. We regret the decision of the Government of India. It is their policy under the Arms Act which has made the population incapable of self-protection. They are not in a position either to defend themselves against attack or even to save their crops at times against the depredations of beasts and birds. The policy, inaugurated by Lord Lytton's government and continued till now, is a very unsound one and ought to be abrogated. Meanwhile we are glad to be told by Sir Louis Dane that His Honour has asked deputy commissioners to grant licenses for arms freely.

V.—Legislation.

Proposed amendment in Muhammadan law.

44. Referring to the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah's proposal to introduce legislation in the Imperial Legislative Council to effect necessary changes in the existing Muhammadan law, the editor of the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), in the issue of the 9th April 1912, remarks that there would be no opposition to the measure, if the legislation be devised in order to include in the new Act all those legal precepts of the Muhammadan religion which had been previously left out by the original framers of the law. MASHRIQ, 9th April 1912.

He says that if however it be intended to tamper in any way with the legal principles of the Islamic faith, it will cause deep resentment among the Muhammadans, and concludes by expressing the hope that such legislation will be strongly opposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Saiyid Ali Iman and by other Muhammadan members of the Council.

Proposed amendment in Muhammadan law.

45. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 10th April 1912, reproduces an article from the Muslim (Poona) which condemns the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah's proposals to amend the Muhammadan law, and urges that the Hon'ble member had no right to inflict his personal views upon the Imperial Council. The editor remarks that Mr. Jinnah is a representative of the Muhammadans of the Bombay Presidency in the Council and that he is in no way entitled to put forward a proposal which he knew was opposed to the religious belief and national feeling of his electors. He says that Mr. Jinnah should have realized his position in the Council as the representative of a community before expressing his private opinions. In conclusion the editor suggests that a public meeting be convened to censure the conduct of Mr. Jinnah, and to put on record that his electors have now no confidence in him and that he does not represent their views. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 10th April 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

46. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th April 1912, takes exception to the view that the Muhammadan papers which opposed the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill expressed genuine Muhammadan public opinion. The editor points out that the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi is evidently not yet acquainted with the condition and needs of the Muhammadan community, and remarks that those who opposed Mr. Gokhale's bill appear to be totally ignorant of the requirements of the country. MASHRIQ, 9th April 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

47. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th April 1912, has the following :— LEADER, 12th April 1912.

"Nawab Abdul Majid in his speech on the Elementary Education Bill, the language of which for correctness and elegance favourably compares with that of the Hon ble Malik Umar Hayat Khan, said that attempts were being made in the United Provinces 'to create a Hindi language.' All whom it may concern will please note that there has not been and is not a Hindi language: it may only be created in the future if the reprehensible attempts of certain anti-Muslim Hindu zealots were unfortunately to succeed. It is obvious that Nawab Abdul Majid never went for instruction to the late Shams-ul-Ulama Dr. Saiyid Ali Bilgrami."

The Waqf Validation Bill.

48. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th April 1912, refers to the Waqf Validation Bill and says that the rights of daughters are already ignored and that they are treated as negligible quantities, and expresses apprehension that when the bill is passed all the property be vested in the name of the eldest son and the rights of the daughters would be neglected. MASHRIQ, 9th April 1912.

The editor suggests that as the Waqf Validation Bill will not be introduced within a year, and that this subject will be thoroughly discussed in view of its importance.

TAERIK, 7th April 1912.

The Court of Wards Act.

49. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses approval of the passing of the Court of Wards Act in the Provincial Legislative Council, and says that it will save the properties of zamindars and taluqdars from falling into the hands of mahajans and money-lenders.

He says that sometimes the relations between a ward and the manager of his estate are not amicable, and suggests that Government should advise the managers to treat their wards as friends and not as their subordinates. He also suggests the creation of a post of Inspector General of Court of Wards, whose duty should be to inspect the offices under the Court of Wards and to ascertain the relations between the managers and their wards.

ADVOCATE, 7th April 1912.

The Orissa Tenancy Bill.

50. Referring to the refusal of His Excellency the Viceroy to give his assent to the Orissa Tenancy Bill, which has given cause for indignation to some of the Anglo-Indian papers, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 7th April 1912, remarks that the Anglo-Indian co-temporaries, who have roused themselves to such a high pitch of excitement over the matter, should remember that this is not the first occasion that a Viceroy has thought it necessary to withhold his assent to a measure passed by a provincial Government. The editor refers to the Punjab Colonization Bill which was vetoed by Lord Minto, and expresses appreciation of the action of the Viceroy in making use of his constitutional power in the matter of the veto.

VI.—Railway.

LEADER, 12th April 1912.

The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

51. A correspondent writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th April 1912, to complain that the office of the Traffic Superintendent, Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, does not always close for gazetted holidays and that it was open even on Good Friday, and that when all the clerks had come to office an order was circulated at noon that the office was to be closed for the day. He invites the attention of the Manager of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway to the matter.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

LEADER, 10th April 1912.

The Social Conference.

52. Commenting on the proceedings of the Social Conference held at Cawnpore, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912, remarks that but for the poor attendance the conference may be said to have been a success. The editor compares favourably Mr. Ganga Prasad's presidential address with those of the past presidents of the conference, and endorses the well-merited tribute paid by him to the late Sroti Shankar Lal. He expresses satisfaction that it was the intention of the late Srotiji's son to devote himself to the promotion of the cause of widow re-marriage, and he entertains the hope that he will receive the practical support and sympathy of all earnest and progressive members of the community.

In noticing the resolutions passed by the conference he specially commends the resolution on Hindu marriage and suggests that if the word "inter-marriage" be substituted for "widow-marriage" in the preamble of the Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act of 1853, the whole preamble will be admirably applicable to the present occasion.

ADVOCATE, 11th April 1912.

The Social Conference.

53. Commenting on the proceedings of the Social Conference held at Cawnpore, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 11th April 1912, remarks that one noticeable feature of this year's conference was that the principal addresses were delivered in the vernacular.

With regard to Mr. Basu's bill the editor observes that when the Shashtras supported marriages between the different castes of the Hindus, the State could surely help the cause of social reform in the Hindu community by legalising a system of marriage for which there was a growing demand in the country.

54. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 11th April 1912, remarks that the passing of resolutions on social reforms year after year in social conferences is of no use, seeing that no one acts according to them. The editor observes that no practical benefit has yet accrued to the people, who regard these conferences as mere shows, and he advises that steps should be taken to make these conferences practical in their work. He says that only those people who really work earnestly can remove the poverty and the degraded condition of India.

ANAND, 11th April 1912.

The Social Conference.

55. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 1st April 1912 (received on the 9th April), contains an article contributed by one Advaitanand, in which the writer expresses disapproval of the re-marriage of widows.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 1st April 1912.

Re-marriage of widows.

56. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912, has the following :—

LEADER, 10th April 1911.

The Indian women.

"Would we made every one of our daughters a gift and a benediction—would we ceased to seem and lived a true life and washed away our manifold sins against woman. We hurry her from her infancy—through physical tortures—through a joyless childhood, without opportunities for playing or learning, into the bonds of early matrimony—into the miseries of early widowhood. We sin against her as a baby—we sin against her as a wife as a daughter-in-law, as a mother, as a widow. And what is more, we are hardly conscious of sinning—so benumbed has become our sense of duty—our sense of fair play—and even our common sense as to what is good for us and for our country. I do not want you to revolutionize your society, I do not ask you to introduce Western fashions and Western modes of life. But I do ask you to give up your apathy—to rouse yourself from your terrible lethargy, and do the barest justice to your women.—MR. DAYARAM GIDUMALL."

57. The Brahman Sarvasva (Etawah), for February 1912 (received on the 8th April), contains an article contributed by Mela Ram Vaishya of Delhi, in which the writer quotes passages from Shaikh Sadi's works and from the Qoran to demonstrate that these books teach Muhammadans to be merciful, and he expresses surprise at their cruelty.

BRAHMAN SARVASVA, February 1912.

The protection of cows.

He concludes the article with a prayer in which a cow is represented as beseeching the Muhammadans to have pity on her, on the ground that she supplies milk to both Hindus and Muhammadans, and that her young ones also serve them. She says that if the Muhammadans had any grudge against the Hindus it was not just to sacrifice her for the sake of that, and that so long as Muhammadans will not give up beef-eating, and Government will not favour the cow the people are sure to suffer from recurring famines.

In the same issue of the journal a peice of poetry in Sanskrit is also published, in which the writer praises cow-worship, and observes that the person who worships the cow gets prosperity in this world and heaven after death. He expresses regret that the people of kaliyug are ignoring it, and urges them to worship cows and to open gaushalas.

58. The combined number for March and April 1912 (received on the 11th April) of the Theosophy in India (Benares) has a long article by Babu Bhagwan Das, M.A., the joint secretary of the Indian section of the Theosophical Society, who is the editor of the magazine. The article, entitled the "Theosophical Society and the Order of the Star in the East" opens with the remark that the writer has received many communications of enquiry, doubt, suspicion and condemnation regarding the activity which centres round the expressions "the Coming Christ," "Alcyone" and the "Order of the Star in the East." He goes on to quote from a letter received from Reigate in England complaining that Mrs. Besant was changing the avowed neutrality of the Theosophical Society for a partisan attitude to a prophesied avatar. He complains that Mrs. Besant, as president of the Theosophical Society, has been acting ultra vires and against the published

THEOSOPHY IN INDIA, March and April 1912.

Theosophy and the Order of the Star in the East.

objects and rules of the Theosophical Society. In this connection he expresses himself in the following terms :—

"I therefore wish to place upon record here my own conviction as a Councillor of the Theosophical Society and as Councillor and General Secretary of the Indian section of the Theosophical Society for this year, and as a member and servant of the Theosophical Society for the past twenty-seven years, that the Order of the Star in the East, or any belief connected with it or in any Coming Christ or Alcyone, and much more so any such belief as is embodied in the fantastically extragavant words of the Adyar Album (which words, surely, could not have been published with the knowledge of Mrs. Besant) is no more an integral or essential part of the Theosophical Society and its constitution than the Benares Central Hindu College, or the Delhi and Madura Girls' Schools or the Ceylon Buddhist Colleges and Schools, or the Madras Panchama Schools, or any Co-Masonry Lodge or any of the other thousand and one local and special activities in which individual members or lodgers may be and are interested."

He asserts the entire independence of the Theosophical Society from any "person cult". He complains that the official journals of the Theosophical Society should have been employed for encouraging such a "person cult". Mrs. Besant's presidential letter, which was reproduced in Theosophy in India for December 1911, was the subject of particular complaint, because she advocated in it the 'shaking out' of the 'feeble members' and 'half-hearted adherents' of the cult of Alcyone, which seemed to suggest that the Theosophical Society would in future substitute for its present three objects a belief in a coming Christ and Alcyone. Babu Bhagwan Das expresses the hope that Mrs. Besant did not intend to convey such an unhappy impression. He admits that the Order of the Star in the East may possibly be useful for people of a certain type of mind, and that those who were not yet ready to become Fellows of the Theosophical Society might become members of the Order of the Star in the East. He expresses anxiety on account of such a determined effort being made to supersede the Theosophical Society by the new order, and in this connection he says that he has often felt latterly that the energies of the Theosophical Society as a body were being frittered away in too many side-activities of minor importance (Golden Chain, Leagues of Service, Sons and Daughters of India, Order of the Rising Sun, Order of the Star in the East, &c., succeeding and mostly replacing one another with great rapidity), instead of being concentrated one-pointedly in a carefully-thought-out and well organized plan of definite and progressive work under each of the three objects.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 10th April 1912.

The annual Conference of the Nadwah.

59. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 10th April 1912, has an article in which the editor reviews the resolutions passed at the annual conference of the Nadwah at Lucknow, and asks his co-religionists to agitate in favour of the resolution for securing to all Muhammadan government servants two hours' leave for saying their prayers on Fridays.

Referring to the resolution regarding the grant of jagirs to khatibs and imams in the Nizam's Dominions, the editor points out that most of the imams and khatibs receive no religious education, and suggests that representations should be made to His Highness the Nizam that proper arrangements should be made for their education.

In conclusion he invites the attention of Government to the resolution relating to waqfs, and remarks that Government will earn the everlasting gratitude of its Muhammadan subjects by assenting to legislation on the lines desired by them.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD :
The 13*th April* 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 16 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 20th April 1912.

CONTENTS.

	Page.
I.—POLITICS.
(a)—Foreign:
1. The Italian-Turkish war	385
2. The Italian-Turkish war	385
(b)—Home:
3. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	385
4. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	385
5. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	385
6. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	385
7. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	386
8. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	386
9. The Bengal Provincial Conference ...	386
10. The Bengal Provincial Conference ...	386
11. The Provincial Conference	387
12. The British government and the loyalty of Muhammadans	387
13. Eastern and Western civilisation ...	387
14. The administration of Berar ...	388
II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.
Nil.
III.—NATIVE STATES.
15. Muhammadans in Kashmir	388
IV.—ADMINISTRATION.
(a)—Judicial and Revenue:
16. The Hoti Mardan case	388
(b)—Police:
17. Fishing at Rajghat	388
(c)—Finance and Taxation:
Nil.

	Page.
(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:
18. The Allahabad Municipality	388
19. The Cawnpore Municipality... ...	388
20. Separate electorates	389
(e)—Education:
21. Muslim education in the United Provinces	389
22. Education among Hindus	389
23. Unity and education	389
24. Education and social reform ...	389
25. Education of women in India ...	390
(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:
26. Famines in India...	390
(g)—General:
27. Hindus and the census	390
28. The census employés	390
29. The census employés	391
30. The Royal Commission on the trade of the Empire	391
31. Indian Muhammadans and trade ...	391
32. Complaint against the mahajans of Kalpi	391
33. The propagation of Hindi	391
34. The export of oil seed	391
35. Opium officers and the Provincial Service	392
36. Gambling in Allahabad	392
37. Plague inoculation in Gorakhpur ...	392
V.—LEGISLATION.
38. The Elementary Education Bill and Muhammadans	393
39. The Elementary Education Bill ...	393
40. The Agra Estates Bill	393
41. The Wakf Validation Bill	393
42. The Poisons Act	393
VI.—RAILWAY.
43. Indian railways	393
VII.—POST OFFICE.
Nil.

Page.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

44. The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal ... 394
45. The Samaj Rakshani Sabha 394
46. Theosophy and the Order of the Star in the East 394
47. The Parasnath Hills 394
48. The depressed classes 395
49. The Bengal Social Conference ... 395
50. Relaxation of religious laws 395
51. Christian missionary societies in Asia and Africa 395
52. The pardah system among the Kayasths 395

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st April 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Quarterly...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 37 ...	300 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 „
4	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Gulam Muhammad	700 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 „
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; B.A. Arya; 31...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	~~Leader~~	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 31 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 28 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	1,500 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 36 ...	200 „
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 41... ...	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-us-Zama Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Kwárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Abid-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A.... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34 ...	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam ...	200 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ..	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 ,,
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 ,,
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 ,,
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Ram Dayal Vidyarthi; 35... ...	709 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.	400 ,,
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Abid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 ,,
†52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 ,,
53	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 ,,
54	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jain; 29	1,000 ,,
55	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
56	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 ,,
57	Vyápári and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 ,,
58	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 ,,
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 32 ...	800 ,,
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 ,,
66	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 ,,
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 ,,
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 ,,
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 ,,
71	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 ,,
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 ,,
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 ,,
76	Mukhbir-i-Alam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,800 ,,
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
79	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nizám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 ,,
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	300 ,,
84	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	350 ,,
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 ,,
86	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	350 ,,
87	Taftíh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
88	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 35	328 ,,
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 33 ...	400 ,,
90	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 ,,
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 ,,
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 ,,
93	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 ,,
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 ,,
	Arabic-Urdu.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	Hindi.
96	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan Chaudhari; Brahman; 56.	100 ,,
98	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 ,,
99	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 ,,
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	130 ,,
101	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	405 ,,
102	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 ,,
103	Dehátí	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	600 ,,
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 ,,
*105	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 ,,
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt Naithani; Brahman; 36.	600 ,,
107	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 ,,
†108	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do.	...	300 ,,
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26.	650 ,,
†110	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do.	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 29	1,000 ,,
111	Jásúa	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 ,,
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád Misra; 22	1,000 ,,
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 37 ...	450 ,,
114	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra; 46 ...	1,500 ,,
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 ,,
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 ,,
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 27 ...	1,600 ,,
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 ,,
†119	Náráyani or Vedánta Patriká ...	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám Nandan, Kayasth; 32 ...	325 ,,
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri; 37	1,000 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	200 „
123	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
124	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Naryan Dube	700 „
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 „
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; 46...	4,000 „
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 „
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	3,000 „
*129	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla Vaidya; 36.	500 „
130	Swadesh Bándhava ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 45	600 „
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35	1,000 „
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 „
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 „
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 „
135	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 „
†136	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 46 ...	500 „
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 „
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 „
139	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 „
140	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 „
141	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 „
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 „
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ...	1,000 „
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Babu Bansi Dhar ... ... Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 „
†145	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 „
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 „
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 „
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28 ...	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
149	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 9th April 1912 (received on the 18th April), refers to the rumoured intention of the Italians to blockade the port of Camaran, and expresses the hope that the blockade of the port will be followed by a vigorous boycott of Italian goods on the part of Indian Muhammadans. The editor points out that the Muhammadans are only required by their religion to make pilgrimage to Mecca when there is no danger in the way, so that they need not make the journey at present, and he observes that the only result of action of the Italians in blockading the port will be to accentuate the resentment of the Muhammadans against the Italians.

AL BASHIR, 9th April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

2. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th April 1912, remarks that the Italian naval demonstrations on the Arabian coast are likely to greatly inconvenience Muslim pilgrims, and suggests that the British government should not be content with the ingenuous reply given by the Italian government, but should take further steps in the matter. The editor observes that the Italians have recently been sustaining reverses and so they want to secure to themselves the possession of Tripoli by threats to attack the Arabian coast, and he expresses the opinion that unless she is helped by the Powers, Italy will be obliged to finally retire ignominiously from Tripoli.

MASHRIQ. 16th April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

(b)—Home.

3. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses the opinion that the Hindus are desirous of attaining self-government, but find the Muhammadans to be an obstacle in their way, and that it is on this account that they endeavour to damage the prestige of the Muhammadan community. He suggests that Government should carefully watch the course of Hindu agitation, and he urges his co-religionists not to join the Congress.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

4. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th April 1912, discusses the publication in the issue of the Indian Daily Telegraph (Lucknow), of the 10th April 1912, of the following sentiments: "Some of the extremist papers write of the people of this country as Indians and Muhammadans, implying thereby that the land belongs to the Hindu, while the Muhammadan, like the Britisher, is an undesirable alien." Reference is also made to the statement made in that paper that the emissaries of the Arya Samaj in Oudh had been threatening and compelling Hindu zamindars to dismiss their Muhammadan employés, and intimidating Hindu electors so as to induce them to refrain from voting for any but Hindu candidates. The editor challenges the truth of these assertions, and suggests that Government should put a stop to such writings in order to preserve good relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

TAFRIH, 14th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

5. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer urges that Hindus and Muhammadans should work together in order to attain any objects which are desired by both communities. He suggests that in any matters in which their interests are not identical the Muhammadans should not adopt a mendicant policy and beg for favours from a democratic government, but that they should command respect by boldly demanding their rights. He observes that Muhammadans have adopted a mistaken policy in parading their weakness as a minority, and points out that a minority can only prevail over a majority if it has sufficient courage and enthusiasm.

TAFRIH, 14th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

6. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th April 1912, deplores the strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, and reports instances in which the members of one community have attempted to boycott the other. The editor expresses regret that Hindus and Muhammadans should quarrel with each other when they

RAHBAR 14th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

know that their interests are identical, and he remarks that Government could easily allay the growing ill-feeling.

He questions the wisdom of Government having taken the initiative in introducing the principle of separate electorates, and suggests that Indians themselves should endeavour to solve this problem.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

7. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th April 1912, expresses regret that all efforts to promote a better understanding between the Hindus and Muhammadans have so far proved futile, and asserts that the difference between them is only political and not religious. The editor remarks that there is little doubt that the Hindu and Muhammadan leaders have not been able to come to an agreement, and he expresses the opinion that Government should endeavour to effect a reconciliation by holding the balance even between them.

In conclusion he appeals to both communities to exercise self-restraint and to use their best endeavours to promote the progress of the country.

OUDH AKHBAR, 17th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

8. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 17th April 1912, refers to the recent meeting organized by the Hindus and Muhammadans of Calcutta to protest against Russian aggression in Persia, and expresses regret that the Hindus and Muhammadans should be so ready to show their sympathy with a foreign country, and yet should make no efforts to settle their own differences.

The editor suggests that the leaders of the two communities should approach Government and ask it to remove the causes of disagreement between the two communities, and he says that their voice is only likely to carry weight and prove effectual if they work in combination.

ADVOCATE, 14th April 1912.

The Bengal Provincial Conference.

9. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 14th April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the success of the Bengal Provincial Conference held at Chittagong, and says that the sympathy of a considerable section of the Muhammadan community was clearly demonstrated by the fact that half of the funds subscribed for the conference was contributed by Muhammadan merchants and tradesmen. The editor welcomes the change in the attitude of the officials towards the movement, which was particularly indicated by the fact that the Commissioner of the division gave a dinner party at which Mr. Rasul, Mr. Surendra Nath Banarji and several other distinguished delegates were invited.

The editor discusses Mr. Rasul's presidential address, commends to the attention of the Muhammadans his observations on separate electorates and regarding the Hindu-Muhammadan question, and remarks that all reasonable persons will agree with Mr. Rasul in condemning the system of separate electorates, while providing for adequate and effective representation of minorities.

LEADER, 16th April 1912.

The Bengal Provincial Conference.

10. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th April 1912, discusses the Bengal Provincial Conference held at Chittagong during the Easter holidays, and notes that, as was to be expected, it was a great success, seeing that it was the first session held after the modification of the partition upon which all that was best in Bengal had set their hearts. The editor describes the determined agitation of the Bengalis as a veritable Seven Years' War, which they had waged against the twin forces of disruption and reaction, from which they came out triumphantly, and contrasts the circumstances in which the last conference at Chittagong met with the conditions under which the Barisal Conference of 1906 was forcibly dispersed. He goes on to say that it was most appropriate that Mr. Rasul should have presided over the first conference of re-united Bengal, seeing that he was in the chair at the abortive conference at Barisal.

With regard to Mr. Rasul's address the editor remarks that there was much in it which Mr. Rasul might have refrained from saying in view of the present comparatively happy situation in the country. He expresses surprise at the reasons given by Mr. Rasul for his condemnation of the Dacca University project, that higher education would benefit only a few and not the mass of the population, and enquires whether he has similar objections to make to the proposed Aligarh University. He ridicules Mr. Rasul's other argument that more Hindus were likely to make use of the Dacca University than Muhammadans, and that Government should not therefore utilize the revenue for promoting an object likely to prove of more use to one section of the people than to the other.

The editor says that the demand for the almost immediate concession of provincial autonomy to Bengal exhibited a strange and regrettable lack both of statesmanship and of imagination, and he expresses surprise that any responsible body should make such a vague and undefined claim on no more solid ground than that an ideal for the future was sketched by the Government of India in its despatch of August 25th.

The editor discusses the proceedings of the social conference and remarks that the resolutions passed and the speeches delivered at the conference were all sound and progressive, and he expresses the hope that Bengal, instead of being a slow-moving follower, will be an inspiring leader in the sphere of social reform, as it has been in that of political action, and that its people will soon take their proper place in social reform activities.

11. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th April 1912, commenting on the proceedings of the Provincial Conference held at Cawnpore, remarks that the conference has now degenerated into a dull annual affair which serves only to reiterate the old cries of a particular community. The editor commends the effort to create a political spirit in these provinces, but expresses regret that the conference failed to put forward useful suggestions and to properly champion the rights of the people of these provinces. He criticises the omission of reference to such important subjects as plague, police reform, the vernacular press, the Lucknow Medical College and the Tibbi Conference, and says that the discussion of the partition question was quite out of place and ill-advised. He contends that it was not fair to overlook the splendid services rendered by Sir John Hewett to these provinces, and to condemn his administration simply on account of his opposition to the establishment of an Executive Council in the province. He expresses regret that there was no representation of either the Muhammadan or of the agricultural community at the conference, and asserts that there is no likelihood of reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans until the latter are granted separate electorates.

MASHRIQ, 16th April 1912.

The Provincial Conference.

12. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 9th April 1912 (received on the 18th April), in a leading article discusses the subject of the loyalty of the Muhammadans of India to the British government, and condemns the views expressed by some persons that Muhammadans are loyal to Government only because they are afraid of being oppressed by the Hindus in the event of the discontinuance of British rule in the country. The editor remarks that the expression of such opinions is calculated to promote hatred and enmity between Hindus and Muhammadans and to make them more suspicious of each other.

AL BASHIR, 9th April 1912.

The British government and the loyalty of Muhammadans.

He says that even if the British rule were to be discontinued in India, swaraj could not be established until the Muhammadans were deprived of their powerful position in the country, or unless they had become absolutely weak and degenerate, and expresses satisfaction that Government has at last begun to realize that the existence of the Muhammadans as a separate community is essential for the stability of its rule.

He goes on to say that Muhammadans are loyal to Government because they believe British rule to be the best possible government in India. and because it affords to its subjects ample opportunities for progress and for the development of their material condition.

13. The editor of the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), in the issue of the 14th April 1912, says that Western civilization is quietly undermining the vitality of the people of the West, and remarks that it is sure to result in disaster. He contrasts the civilization of the East with that of the West, and remarks that while the former is God-fearing the latter is godless. He concedes that Eastern civilization is not perfect, but he remarks that the people can acquire self-government if they will but set themselves to the task of removing the existing defects from it and if they will then adhere to it.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th April 1912.

Eastern and Western civilization.

LEADER, 16th April 1912.

The administration of Berar.

14. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th April 1912, publishes a lengthy memorandum from the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur R. N. Madholkar entitled "The Berar anomaly," which purports to have been submitted to His Excellency the Viceroy, in which he invites the attention of the Government in England and in India to the urgent need for effectively dealing with the anomalies and difficulties, legislative, judicial and executive, which exist in the administration of Berar, and for removing the disabilities of its people.

The writer describes the measures taken by the people for the grant of the rights, privileges and concessions enjoyed by residents of districts in British India, and suggests that Berar should be amalgamated with the Central Provinces, that a Lieutenant Governor with an Executive Council be appointed for the combined provinces and that the Judicial Commissioner's Court be raised to the status of a Chief Court. Mr. Madholkar asks that the inhabitants of Berar also be granted all the privileges and facilities that the people of the Central Provinces enjoy.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th April 1912.

Muhammadans in Kashmir.

15. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th April 1912, complains of the condition of Muhammadans in Kashmir, and says that they are said to be deprived of all posts in the state, and he refers to allegations as to the defilement of Muslim places of worship.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

LEADER, 18th April 1912.

The Hoti Mardan case.

16. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 18th April 1912, announces that a pamphlet has been received from the Khan of Hoti Mardan dealing with the sensational case in which he was lately involved and honourably acquitted by the Bombay High Court, and enquires whether the matter will be allowed to rest as it is, and whether the Government of India will not see that the Frontier officials who conducted themselves in so objectionable a manner are punished, and that some suitable reparation is made to the injured Khan.

(b)—Police.

ABHYUDAYA, 18th April 1912.

Fishing at Rajghat.

17. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th April 1912, complains that boatmen fish at Rajghat in Daraganj where people bathe, and alleges that this is contrary to the rules.

The editor says that there is no constable on duty at the ghat in the afternoon to whom the matter may be reported, and he asks the Collector to take steps to remove the complaint.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 10th April 1912.

The Allahabad Municipality.

18. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912 (received on the 15th April), invites the attention of the municipal board to the dirty state of the streets adjoining Johnstonganj and particularly of the streets on either side of the Jhanjharia pul, and asks the municipal authorities to have the dust bins removed at some distance from the road.

LEADER, 14th April 1912.

The Cawnpore Municipality.

19. In the course of "Notes from Cawnpore" contributed by its own correspondent to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th April 1912, reference is made to the work of the Hon'ble Mr. John Campbell as chairman of the municipal board in the following terms:—

"Whatever people may have got to say about the brusqueness of manners and the autocratic ways of Mr. Campbell, there is no doubt that he had by his efficient and hard work more than justified his appointment as the whole-time chairman of our municipal board."

The correspondent gives details of the excellent work done by Mr. Campbell, and expresses satisfaction that at the time of his departure he left a balance of Rs. 1,26,000 in hand after paying all the bills of the municipality, when as a rule it only has a balance of Rs. 75,000 in hand.

The correspondent refers to the amount of debt which is due to Government from the municipality and suggests that Government should excuse the payment by the municipality of the rest of the debt, especially as it has nearly realized in the form of interest the amount actually advanced to the municipality.

20. The Darbar (Agra), of the 16th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer invites the attention of Government to the fact that in Agra a Hindu member has been elected to the district board and a Hindu vice-chairman to the municipal board in place of retiring office holders who were Muhammadans, and he suggests that, this argues the need for separate electorates being given to Muhammadans, in view of their inability to secure seats on local bodies. He remarks that this is the only way to prevent Muhammadans from being excluded from all municipal and district boards, and to secure against the Hindus oppressing them to their hearts' content.

DARBAR, 16th April 1912.

Separate electorates.

He suggests that it is surprising that, though Muhammadans are more loyal than Hindus and Bengalis, Government should not protect their rights against the aggressions of other communities.

(c)—Education.

21. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th April 1912, expresses dissatisfaction at the reply given by the Director of Public Instruction to the Hon'ble Sahibzada Aftab Ahmad Khan's request for a separate chapter on Muslim education in the Director's report, and suggests that Muhammadan members should not slacken their efforts till the matter is satisfactorily settled.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th April 1912.

Muslim education in the United Provinces.

22. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th April 1912, expresses regret at the rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, and urges Hindus to concert measures to spread education independently of Government. The editor draws attention to the sacrifices which Muhammadans are making in the cause of education, and warns the Hindus that if they do not exert themselves they will be left far behind in the march of progress. He contrasts the poor success of the Hindu University with the splendid achievements of the Muslim University movement, and expresses the opinion that the Hindus lack genuine public spirit.

RAHBAR, 14th April 1912.

Education among Hindus.

In conclusion he appeals to Hindus to learn the lesson of self-help and not to rely on Government alone for the spread of education.

23. The Kshattriya Mitra (Benares), in the issue of the 16th April 1912, publishes an article contributed by one Kunj Bihari Singh, in which he says that unity and education are essential for the progress of a community, and expresses regret that both these gifts are wanting in the Kshattriya community. He suggests that associations should be formed in order to promote unity by means of lectures, and he also urges the people to go to foreign countries to acquire industrial education, and advocates the need for spreading education among the illiterate Kshattriyas.

KSHATTRIYA MITRA, 16th April 1912.

Unity and education.

24. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 14th April 1912, refers to the reply of His Excellency the Viceroy to the municipal address at Kohat, and remarks that the Viceroy has truly read the signs of the times.

ADVOCATE, 14th April 1912.

Education and social reform.

The editor expresses satisfaction at the signs of activity throughout the country, and observes that people themselves should open pathshalas and makhtabs in places where Government or municipal boards fail to meet the demand for education, on the ground that this is the only way to impress the Government with the necessity of action. He urges that Government must be made aware of the fact that there has really been a stirring of the bones, and that the interests of the country require more paternal interest on the part of Government.

The editor says that another hopeful sign is the increased attention which the question of social reform is receiving from the people in every province, and he concludes by saying that if all earnest workers avail themselves of the present state of public feeling, they will be able to achieve great results.

LEADER, 17th April 1912.

Education of women in India.

25. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th April 1912, publishes the first instalment of a contributed article on the education of women in India, in which the writer says that, apart from the political and economic problems of the country, there is no problem, with the possible exception of that of the raising of the depressed classes, of the same vital importance as that of the education of Indian women, and he asserts that on the satisfactory solution of it rest the foundations of Indian nation-building. He describes the attempts made before the consolidation of British rule in India for the education of women, the progress it has made during the last fifty or sixty years, its present condition, the work and the efforts of the different agencies, the obstacles that have arisen in the way and the methods of coping with them.

The writer says that the policy of Government with regard to female education was for the first time explicitly laid down in the despatch of 1854, but it did not make any appreciable progress owing to the indifference of the people to their superstitious prejudices and to certain deep-rooted evil customs, such as the parda and early marriage, as well as to the apathy of the officials. He quotes figures from Mr. Howell's note on the state of education in India during 1866-67, from the report of the Education Commission of 1882, and expresses satisfaction at the appreciable advance made during the last twenty years.

He expresses appreciation of the efforts made by religious bodies in the matter of female education, and remarks that in spite of the advance that has been made during the last forty-five years, very little has been achieved, and he quotes statistics to show the number of female students of the various provinces of British India.

He refers to the state of secondary education, and says that the higher education of girls cannot proceed at a rapid rate until the obstacles of early marriage and parda are removed.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th April 1912.

Famines in India.

26. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th April 1912, writes, in connection with the famines in Gujrat and Burma, that "there can be nothing more pitiable than people dying of hunger even when their country produces corn in abundance for them."

The editor observes that it is the policy of free trade which has ruined the country, and expresses regret that Government has not yet considered it advisable to impose an export duty. He remarks that in French, Indo-China and Nepal people do not suffer from scarcity for the simple reason that the governments of those countries do not allow the export of corn. He expresses the hope that the attention of Government will be drawn towards this matter.

(g)—General.

RAHBAR, 14th April 1912.

Hindus and the census.

27. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th April 1912, protests against the Right Hon'ble Mr. Saiyid Amir Ali's proposal that the depressed classes should not be classed as Hindus in the census reports, and that they should be given special and separate rights. The editor says that the British government has so far made no changes in Hindu society, and he remarks that any attempt to treat the depressed classes as a separate body would tend to weaken the Hindu community.

LEADER, 14th April 1912.

The census employes.

28. A correspondent who signs himself "CENSUS" writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th April 1912, to say that the work done by the census employés at Fyzabad from deputy superintendent down to the sorter at the cost of their health and comfort deserves special consideration at the hands of the Government.

29. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 19th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer invites the attention of Government to the services of the subordinate census officials, and suggests that suitable concessions be granted to the permanent government servants. He says that it would be difficult to provide all deserving men with tahsildarships and excise inspectorships, and suggests that a few be made sub-registrars, that some be given promotion in their offices, and that some of them be granted exemption from passing certain examinations.

HINDUSTANI, 19th April 1912.

The census employés.

30. The following is from the Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th April 1912:—

LEADER, 14th April 1912.

The Royal Commission on the trade of the Empire.

"What does Sir Roper Lethbridge mean by saying that Lord Inchcape and Sir Edgar Vincent do not represent the opinion of India on the fiscal question? Does he do? The fact is, India is neither for rigid free-trade nor for imperial preference and tariff reform as understood in England. If there is to be a change in the fiscal policy of the Government of India, or rather of His Majesty's Government in relation to India (for the Government of India have no policy of their own, being bound by the policy dictated by his Majesty's Government), Indian opinion thinks the change should be in the direction of protection of Indian industries against British manufactures. This, as we know, is not likely to be allowed for a long time to come. Accordingly the interest of our countrymen in discussions on fiscal policy is only academic. It has been stated authoritatively that Lord Inchcape's Commission will only be concerned with the trade between the United Kingdom and the self-governing dominions of the Empire."

31. A correspondent who signs himself "KHWAJA SAIYID MANZUR AHMAD," contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 17th April 1912, in which he expresses regret at the lack of interest shown by Indian Muhammadans in trade and commerce which was the chief occupation of their ancestors. He exhorts his co-religionists to show greater aptitude for trade and business and to improve the economic condition of the country.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 17th April 1912.

Indian Muhammadans and trade.

32. A correspondent who signs himself "S. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, HEAD MASTER, BHAWANI SCHOOL, KADAURA," contributes an article to Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 9th April 1912 (received on the 18th April), in which he complains that the mahajans of Kalpi exact a fixed sum from both the Hindu and Muhammadan grain sellers for the Ramlila fund, which they have started, and invites the attention of the district authorities to the matter.

AL BASHIR, 9th April 1912.

Complaint against the mahajans of Kalpi.

He suggests that half of the sum thus realized every year should be given to the Muslim University Fund, seeing that the majority of the grain sellers in the district are Muhammadans. The editor remarks that the action of the mahajans, though objectionable, is not illegal, and invites discussion on the subject.

33. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 14th April 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer expresses satisfaction that the people have begun to realize the necessity for the propagation of Hindi. The writer expresses the opinion that a dictionary of legal words and phrases in Hindi should be compiled in order to further the progress of Hindi.

ABHYUDAYA, 14th April 1912.

The propagation of Hindi.

The editor, commenting on the article, observes that it is most essential for the propagation of any language that its promoters should meet at a place occasionally to discuss the meaning of disputed words and phrases and to introduce such new words as may be necessary for the development of the language. He expresses agreement with the suggestion of the correspondent for compiling a legal dictionary, and urges that the foreign words which have been assimilated in the Hindi language should be allowed to continue. He invites the attention of all lovers of Hindi to this subject.

34. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th April 1912, refers to the Oil and Colour Trade Journal's suggestion that a Commission should be appointed by the seed crushers of Great Britain, if not by the Government, to make full enquiry into the question of the small export of cotton seed from India, and remarks that an examination of the export figures of the Indian cotton seed does not support its contention that exports have fallen. The editor states that from the Indian point of view the growing export of a valuable raw material is an enormous economic waste, and cotton seed represents only a small percentage of the total exports of all oil seeds from India. He says that it would have been much beneficial if, instead of such an enormous quantity of raw material being exported, the process of crushing, pressing and extracting oil were arranged in this country, and only the finished product were exported, which would not have deprived the Indian labourer of the work and wages to be provided by the starting of connected industries, the soil would not have been deprived of valuable manures and fertilisers nor the cattle of rich concentrated food. He also remarks that the oil could be utilized locally to great advantage for industrial and other purposes, seeing that with the development of soap and other allied industries cotton seed has a great future before it in the country.

LEADER, 16th April 1912.

The export of oil seeds.

ADVOCATE, 18th April 1912.

Opium officers and the Provincial Service.

35. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 18th April 1912, refers to the announcement made by Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson in the Supreme Council that the Government of the United Provinces have decided to provide for officers of the Opium department, who will be brought under reduction on the closing of the opium factory at Patna, in the Provincial Civil Service, and remarks that provision should be made with due regard to the claims of the present members of the service, seeing that the Deputy Collectors have been expecting substantial advantages from the reorganization of their cadre. The editor says that it will be unfair to place persons who have had no experience of criminal and revenue work on the highest rungs of the ladder, and he points out that if all Sub-Opium Agents drawing salaries between Rs. 400 and Rs. 700 and those who are under twenty years' service are drafted into the Provincial Civil Service of these provinces, and if none of them be sent to the Province of Bihar and Orissa, they will prevent the promotion of Deputy Collectors now in the Rs. 400 grade. The editor expresses the hope that in these circumstances Government will carefully go into the matter and see that justice is done to all, so as to avoid hardship to Deputy Collectors. He suggests that many of the opium officers could be employed as Managers of Court of Wards estates, in which capacity they are likely to prove efficient and capable, and he proposes that, in the event of their names being brought on the Deputy Collectors' cadre, the salary of every one of the officers should be made personal and, if possible, separately listed in order that they may not supersede the claims of existing officers. He adds that if it be decided that there should be one common list, the number of Deputy Collectors of particular grades should be increased temporarily for the period that these officers continue to be members of the service.

ABHYUADYA, 18th April 1912.

Gambling in Allahabad.

36. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 18th April 1912, complains that gambling is carried on extensively in Daraganj and its vicinity, and that it is very difficult for the sub-inspector to check it. The editor invites the attention of the Superintendent of Police and asks him to take early steps to put a stop to it.

HINDUSTANI, 19th April 1912.

Plague inoculation in Gorakhpur.

37. A correspondent who signs himself "A RESIDENT OF GORAKHPUR," contributes an article to the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 19th April 1912, in which he complains of the excessive zeal on the part of the local police in the matter of plague inoculation, and says that on the 6th April the whole of the Urdu bazaar was closed from 12 noon which caused great inconvenience to the people, in consequence of the news that the people would be inoculated by force at 2 p.m. He states that the fact was brought to the notice of the District Judge through his nazir by a chaprasi of the civil court. The District Judge reported the matter to the Collector, and the matter is now being enquired into by his personal assistant.

Commenting on the above the editor remarks that if the report be true, and if the local police also exhibited undue zeal, it must have been without the knowledge and consent of the local authorities, and he expresses the hope that they will take immediate steps to remove the complaint.

V.—Legislation.

38. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, and remarks that it was designed to raise the depressed classes with the intention of using them as a set-off against the Muhammadans.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th April 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill and Muhammadans.

The editor challenges those so-called Muhammadan leaders who were so loud in proclaiming their support of the bill to come forward and develop a scheme of voluntary universal education for Muhammadans.

39. The Darbar (Agra), of the 16th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer objects to the principle of compulsion in the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, and remarks that any extension of the present system of education by compulsion would have only served to create in the minds of students a distaste for religion and for all manual occupations. He goes on to say that poor parents would not have been able to spare their children from work on which they keep them employed for which they would have been punished with oppressive fines.

DARBAR, 16th April 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

40. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer strongly condemns the provisions of the Agra Estates Bill, and mentions about a dozen other newspapers holding similar views. The writer states that under the bill all the property would go to the eldest son, and that adoption, which was illegal under Muhammadan law, would be validated. He says that the daughters and wives would have no rights, while the property would be inherited by the eldest son of the eldest male issue of the family. He points out that these clauses are diametrically opposed to the spirit of the religious and social customs of India, and remarks that the analogy of England cannot be applied to India.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th April 1912.

The Agra Estates Bill.

41. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 16th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses approval of the suggestion that the consideration of the Waqf Validation Bill should be postponed for a year, and that public opinion on the subject should be ascertained during that period.

He expresses the opinion that the bill is opposed to the tenets of the Muhammadan religion, and urges that it be dropped.

MASHRIQ, 16th April 1912.

The Waqf Validation Bill.

42. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th April 1912, asserts that at present quacks and unqualified medical practitioners have too great facility for prescribing poisons for medical purposes, and he draws attention to the dangerous nature of such license. The editor advocates that only men who have been examined and found qualified should be allowed to dispense poisonous drugs, and he advises some restriction on the sale of many of the common poisons.

LEADER, 17th April 1912.

The Poisons Act.

VI.—Railway.

43. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the fact that the Indian public have begun to take a real interest in the administration of the railways, in view of the fact that their prudent management is a matter of the highest concern to the community, and that the development of trade and industry is connected with transport facilities. The editor ascribes the indifference and ignorance of the people on the subject to the character of the education imparted to them, and remarks that India's educational institutions have been designed primarily in order to prepare men for government service and the learned professions, and not to equip them for occupation in wealth production. He welcomes the change that has recently come over the ideas of the people, who now aspire to obtain economic freedom as a necessary element of their national salvation. He commends to the reader Mr. Wacha's pamphlet on Indian Railway Finance and another by Mr. S. C. Ghosh entitled Indian Railway Finance and Indian Railway rates. He condemns the criticisms as being too sweeping, but endorses Mr. Wacha's suggestion that the capital expenditure on railways as well as their working expenses should be restricted, and that the constitution of the Railway Board should be amended.

LEADER, 17th April 1912.

Indian railways.

Referring to Mr. Ghosh's pamphlet the editor says that it deals especially with the important question of railway rates and the need for a suitable revision of them, in order that Indian industries and inter-provincial trade may not suffer in their competition with foreign imports.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 10th April 1912.

The Bharat Dharam Mahamandal.

44. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 10th April 1912 (received on the 15th April), publishes three letters without any comments on the present affairs of the Bharat Dharam Mahamandal. In the first letter the writer asks the leading members of the Mahamandal to have an enquiry instituted into the affairs of the institution, which have led to an undesirable controversy between Swami Gyananandji and the Raja of Tahirpur.

The writer of the second letter exonerates Swami Gyananandji from all blame, while in the third the conduct of the Raja of Tahirpur in the affair is adversely criticised, and the hope is expressed that the Mahamandal will continue its progress after removing from its list such members as are considered undesirable.

TRISHUL, 11th April 1912.

The Samaj Rakshani Sabha.

45. The Trishul (Benares), of the 11th April 1912 (received on the 17th April), says that the Samaj Rakshani Sabha started at Benares does not appear to have done any good to society so far, and he remarks that convening meetings and delivering long speeches seem to be the order of the day. The editor expresses the opinion that the Indian National Congress also, in spite of its strenuous efforts for the last twenty-six years, has proved unsuccessful in improving the condition of the country. He points out that it did nothing beyond criticising Government measures, and says that those who are really bent on doing good to society should show practical and earnest work instead of frittering away their energies in useless speeches.

LEADER, 14th April 1912.

The theosophy and the Order of the Star in the East.

46. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th April 1912, discusses under the appropriate heading "Et tu Brute," the article by Babu Bhagwan Das about the cult of J. K. worship which appeared in the current number of Theosophy in India (Benares), (vide paragraph 58 of Selections No. 15), and remarks that the writer is entitled to the gratitude of the community for having given expression to his views on the subject in this public way, and in disregard of all unpleasantness to himself. The editor observes that Mrs. Besant's religious opinions or convictions have passed through various phases, and that it is impossible to predict that her latest opinions will remain her last, and in spite of this certain people simply followed her lead unquestioningly, surrendering the right and duty of private judgment. He reminds his readers of Lord Acton's words that absolute devotion to a mortal man did not exist.

JAIN PRACHARAK, 15th April 1912.

The Parasnath Hills.

47. The Jain Pracharak (Deoband, Saharanpur), of the 15th April 1912 (received on the 19th April 1912), contains a contributed article, in which the writer, referring to the rumour that the summer capital of the new province of Behar would be located on the Parasnath Hills, observes that the hill is considered by the Jains as a great place of pilgrimage, and that, in case the rumour be true, it will [illegible] a severe shock to the religious feelings of the Jains. He appeals to Swetambari and Digambari Jains to sink their differences, and asks them to concert measures for the protection of their holy place. He concludes the article by expressing the hope that Government will earn the gratitude of its Jain subjects by giving up the idea of having a summer capital at the Parasnath hill.

HINDUSTANI, 15th April 1912.

The depressed classes.

48. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 15th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer urges the necessity for raising the depressed classes on political and social grounds. He says that the Hindus are decreasing in numbers while other communities in India are increasing at their expense, and he points out that the decrease is chiefly due to the defections of large numbers of the depressed classes. He discusses the difficulties which impede the progress of the depressed classes, and remarks that the caste system is the chief formidable obstacle. He describes how in ancient times the State used to help in raising the status of able men among the depressed classes, and in conclusion suggests that Hindu pandits should endeavour to remodel Hindu society in accordance with the provisions of the Shashtras.

LEADER, 16th April 1912.

The Bengal Social Conference.

49. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th April 1912, refers to the strictures passed by the Amrita Bazar Patrika (Calcutta) on Babu Surendra Nath Banarji and his presidential address at the Social Conference held at Chittagong, and strongly condemns the editor for his attacks.

KSHATTRIYA MITRA, 16th April 1912.

Relaxation of religious laws.

50. The Kshattriya Mitra (Benares), of the 16th April 1912, suggests the desirability of holding a convention of intelligent and learned Pandits in order to discuss the Shastraic laws in order to amend or modify them to suit the requirements of the present day Hindu society. The editor observes that in this materialistic age it is difficult to give up temporal pleasures in accordance with the precepts of the Hindu sages, and he urges that people should be made to refrain from hypocrisy in religious matters by relaxing the rigour of the laws.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 17th April 1912.

Christian missionary societies in Asia and Africa.

51. A correspondent who signs himself "SAFDAR HUSAIN KHAN," contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 17th April 1912, in which he refers to the report published in America about the amount of work done by missionary societies in Asia and Africa, and expresses regret that the Muhammadans of India do not show any appreciable zeal for the propagation of their religion. He exhorts his co-religionists to organize missionary societies for safeguarding and propagating their religion, and deplores that no discussion took place at the last anniversary meeting of the Nadwat-ul-Ulama about the best means for the spread of Islam.

LEADER, 18th April 1912.

The parda system among the Kayasths.

52. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 18th April 1912, publishes a lengthy article entitled "Kayasths and Parda" contributed by Lala Ishwar Saran in which he refers to the criticism and comments made by the community on his remarks regarding the rigidity of parda observed among the Kayasths (vide Selections No. 12, paragraph 85) and reiterates that he regards parda as a curse and an evil, the abolition of which should be brought about by cautious and gradual steps. He says that the rigour of the present parda must be relaxed before any real education is possible among their women.

Lala Ishwar Saran states that he is opposed to the transplanting of European institutions wholesale into this country, and says that each nation should develop along its own distinct and distinctive line in harmony with its genius and traditions. He says that he does not mean to criticise European ladies but simply wishes to point out that their ways and manners are not suitable for Hindu ladies. He would far prefer their ignorance and backwardness to their complete Europeanization, which would inevitably result in the extinction of the type of Hindu women. He urges the need for preserving the type while altering their conditions of life, in order that Hindu women may once more play their part, as they did in the past in the regeneration of the Indian race.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:

The 20th April 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 15 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 27th April 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The Italian-Turkish war 403
2. The Italian-Turkish war 403
3. The situation in Persia 403

(b)—Home:

4. The coming Council elections ... 403
5. The coming Council elections ... 404
6. The coming Council elections ... 404
7. The coming Council elections ... 404
8. The working of the Press Act in the Punjab 404
9. The working of the Press Act in the Punjab 405
10. Relation between Hindus and Muhammadans 405
11. The regeneration of Indians ... 405
12. The civil service 405
13. Mr. Montagu's speech 405
14. The administration of the Central Provinces and Berar... 406
15. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce ... 406
16. The policy of Muslim League ... 406

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

17. Honorary munsifs and magistrates ... 407

(b)—Police:

18. The Criminal Investigation department 407

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

Page.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

19. Separate representation for Muhammadans 407
20. Separate electorates on local bodies ... 407
21. Separate electorates on local bodies ... 407
22. The proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai park at Allahabad 408
23. The Allahabad district board ... 408
24. Water supply at Allahabad 408
25. The Allahabad municipality... ... 408
26. The Lucknow municipality 408
27. Non-official chairmen for Benares and Mirzapur municipalities 408

(e)—Education:

28. The proposed Hindu University ... 409
29. The proposed Dacca University ... 409
30. Sectarian Universities in India ... 409
31. The Ayurvedic system and the Lucknow Medical College... 409
32. The King George Medical College, Lucknow 409
33. Proposed memorial to the late Lala Ramanuj Dayal of Meerut 410
34. The raising of the school fees in the United Provinces 410
35. The Darbar educational grant ... 410
36. The Nadwat-ul-ulama and Al Bashir ... 410
37. The convocation of the gurukul ... 411
38. The Educational policy of Government... 411
39. The education of woman in India ... 411
40. The proposed Veda-Vidyalaya and Dayanand school at Benares 411
41. The proposed Veda Vidyalaya at Benares 412

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

42. Land acquisition at Delhi 412

(g)—General:

43. The Titanic disaster 412
44. The Titanic disaster 412
45. The progress of Co-operative Credit Societies 413

		Page.
46.	Muhammadans and Co-operative Credit Societies	413
47.	The reclamation of the Sansias ...	413
48.	The free use of arms in the Punjab ...	413
49.	The Hindi language	413
50.	The Indian Planter's Gazette and the Hon'ble Babu Brij Nandan Prasad ...	414
51.	Economic development of India ...	414
52.	Memorial to Sir John Hewett ...	414
53.	An assault by a European railway employé

V.—LEGISLATION.

54.	The Medical Registration Bill ...	414
55.	Prevention of the use of tobacco ...	414
56.	The Agra Estates Bill	415

VI.—RAILWAY.

57.	Railway thefts	415

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

58.	A gaushala at Gaya	415
59.	Pasturage for cows at Chitrakot ...	415
60.	Agra gaucharan fair	415
61.	Christianity in India	416
62.	The Social Conference	416
63.	The propagation of Islam	416

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st April 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian ...	Lucknow ...	Quarterly...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 37 ...	300 ,,
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 ,,
4	Hindustán Review... ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidánand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 ,,
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 ,,
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 ,,
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Gulam Muhammad	700 ,,
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 ,,
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 ,,
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P	450 ,,
11	Theosophy in India ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehángir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 ,,
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Rám Deva; B.A. Arya; 31...	600 ,,
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 ,,
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 ,,
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintámani; Madrasi; 31 ...	2,100 ,,
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Mádho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European, 28 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	1,500 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudágar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Náth Vaishya; 36 ...	200 ,,
†20	Alamgir...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal; Vaishya; 41... ...	1,000 ,,
21	Al Fasih...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-us-Zama Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 ,,
22	Al Awárif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40	900 ,,
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 ,,
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 ,,
25	Al Kásim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 ,,
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Abid-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 40.	625 ,,
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A.... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 ,,
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34 ...	900 ,,
29	Arya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Rám; Kayasth; 33	350 ,,
30	Arya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Anand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 ,,
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Rám Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43...	70 ,,
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam ...	200 ,,
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumár; Brahman; 24.	600 ,,
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 ,,
35	Istibsár	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zámin, Muhammadan; 40.	400 ,,
36	Khátún	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdullá, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 ,,
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29	525 ,,
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 ,,
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 ,,
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 ,,
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 ,,
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Sháh Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 ,,
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A.; Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Ram Dayal Vidyarthi; 35... ...	709 ,,
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 ,,
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.	400 ,,
50	Zíá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 ,,
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 ,,
†52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 ,,
53	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Álam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Iláhi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 ,,
54	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 ,,
55	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 ,,
56	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathurá Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 ,,
57	Vyápári and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 ,,
58	All India Shia Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubárak Ali; 32	600 ,,
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 ,,
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 ,,
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 ,,
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktadá Khán; 32 ...	800 ,,
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Awáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 ,,
66	Dabdabá-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 ,,
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 ,,
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 ,,
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 ,,
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	160 ,,
71	Ittihád	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 ,,
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 ,,
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 ,,
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kámtá Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 ,,
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 ,,
76	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 ,,
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tárá Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,300 ,,
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
79	Naiyar-i-Ásam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyad-Ibn-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nisám-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 ,,
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	200 ,,
84	Sahífa	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	350 ,,
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahúr Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 ,,
86	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	350 ,,
87	Tafríh	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 ,,
88	Tájir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 35	328 ,,
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor ...	Do. ...	Sajjád Husain; Shaikh; 33 ...	400 ,,
90	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 ,,
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 ,,
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 ,,
93	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 ,,
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 ,,
	Arabic-Urdu.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaimán; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	Hindi.
96	Almorá Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan Chaudhari; Brahman; 56.	100 ,,
98	Bháratodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 ,,
99	Bhárat Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 ,,
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	130 ,,
101	Brahman Samáchár ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Naráyan Prasád; Brahman ...	405 ,,
102	Brahman Sarvasva ...	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhímsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 ,,
103	Deháti	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulób Chand Shrivástava; Kayasth ...	600 ,,
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 ,,
*105	Dharm Kusumákar... ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasád Parna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 ,,
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girjá Dutt Naithani; Brahman; 36.	600 ,,
107	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 ,,
†108	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	...	300 ,,
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26. ...	650 ,,
†110	Jain Nári Hitkári	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasád; Jain; 29	1,000 ,,
111	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 ,,
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rám Prasád Misra; 22	1,000 ,,
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Náth Yogishwar; 37 ...	450 ,,
114	Kányakubj Hitkári ...	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lál Misra; 46 ...	1,500 ,,
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bálmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 ,,
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 ,,
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kánt Málviya; 27 ...	1,600 ,,
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 ,,
†119	Náráyani or Vedánta Patriká ...	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Rám Nandan, Kayasth; 32 ...	325 ,,
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shástri; 37	1,000 ,,

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Narayan Bande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	200 ,,
123	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 ,,
124	Sanádhyopárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Naryan Dube	700 ,,
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Saráp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 ,,
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahábir Prasád Dwivedi; 46...	4,000 ,,
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 ,,
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasodá Devi; 31	3,000 ,,
*129	Sudhánidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannáth Prasád Shukla Vaidya; 36.	500 ,,
130	Swadesh Bándhava ...	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rájput; 45	600 ,,
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35	1,000 ,,
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 ,,
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 ,,
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swámi Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 ,,
135	Bhárat Dharm Netá ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 ,,
†136	Kám Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Bábá Bhagwán Dás Udási; 46 ...	500 ,,
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 ,,
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 ,,
139	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 ,,
140	Anand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	300 ,,
141	Arya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 ,,
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 ,,
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Babu Banársi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ...	1,000 ,,
				Babu Bansi Dhar
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 ,,
†145	Mahilá Hitkárak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Shrimati Vidyávati Devi	250 ,,
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 ,,
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 ,,
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28 ...	2,000 ,,
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
149	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. Al-Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd April 1912, refers to the blockade of the Dardanelles by the Italian fleet and remarks that the action of the Italians contravenes the terms of the treaty of Berlin, and constitutes a challenge to the European powers. AL-BASHIR, 23rd April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor objects to the desire of the European powers to effect an end of the war between the Turks and the Italians, and remarks that at the beginning of the war the powers did not pay any heed to the appeal of the entire Muhammadan world and consequently they have no right now to force peace on Turkey, particularly when it is obvious that the Italians cannot conquer Tripoli by force of arms.

2. Al-Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd April 1912, on the authority of the Hindustan (Lahore), says that the Director of Public Instruction (Punjab) has issued a confidential circular prohibiting employés of the Educational department from showing any sympathy with the Turks in the Italian-Turkish war, and from subscribing to the Turkish relief fund. The editor questions the propriety of such action, and says that contribution to the Turkish relief fund is an act of charity which has no connection whatsoever with politics. AL-BASHIR, 23rd April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

3. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 25th April 1912, expresses regret that unsatisfactory conditions continue in Persia, and that the Russian troops have not yet been withdrawn from the country. OUDH AKHBAR, 25th April 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor takes exception to the Russian demand for an indemnity from Persia, and expresses doubt as to whether the loan advanced to Persian government will improve the internal situation of the country.

(b)—Home.

4. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th April 1912, in a leading article entitled "Our Legislative Councillors" refers to the activity of the intending candidates for the ensuing elections, and expresses the hope that they will not base their claim, and that constituents will not base their preference on personal grounds instead of considering the best interests of the public. The editor observes that in India the reason for the absence of party divisions based on differences of public opinion similar to those in the West is that India does not enjoy the right of self-government, and that the government is a fixture instead of being liable to displacement by a rival party. He contends that the differences between Hindus and Muhammadans do not influence matters which come up before the councils. In these circumstances he urges electors merely to consider the individual worth of the candidates which should be indicated by a liberal education, proof of ability, character and public spirit, and public services rendered in one sphere of activity or another. He states that indication of work are to be found in case a candidate has joined the Indian National Congress, and distinguished himself in the work and deliberations of that great organization, if he has worked well as a member of a municipal or district board or if he has shown public spirit and activity in connection with local institutions and public associations. He advises electors to make sure that the candidate possesses the necessary qualities of courage and candour, as well as a sense of responsibility and power of restraint in expression. LEADER, 19th April 1912.

The coming Council elections.

Applying these standards to the members of the present council, the editor suggests that the choice of the electors on the last occasion was not altogether happy and he says that the councillors as a body were remarkable for their indifference. He remarks that the records of proceedings of the several Provincial Councils meetings would indicate that the members of the United Provinces Council have not distinguished themselves by their work to the extent that their compeers of Madras, Bombay and Bengal have done.

He suggests that, if a member has done no better than a man of average capacity, he should not be given a second chance, but that another man should be afforded the opportunity of serving his community.

LEADER, 20th April 1912.

The coming Council elections.

5. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 20th April 1912, refers to the candidature of the Hon'ble Mr. Ganga Prasad Varma, Rai Sri Ram Bahadur and Munshi Chail Bihari Lal, for election to the Council by the Municipal and District Boards of the Lucknow division, and says that it is not difficult to make a choice from among them. The editor observes that the Hon'ble Mr. Ganga Prasad is a tried and trusted patriot, a man of high character and strenuous purpose, and richly endowed with common sense. He notes that he has laboured with single-minded devotion for the public weal, while, though Rai Sri Ram Bahadur has been in the Council for more than eighteen years, he has carefully kept himself aloof from the National Congress and the Provincial Conference. Regarding Munshi Chail Bihari Lal he says that he is an estimable man, but that his record of public service is not to be compared with that of Mr. Ganga Prasad.

MASHRIQ, 23rd April 1912.

The coming Council elections.

6. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 23rd April 1912, urges the necessity for the re-election of the Hon'ble Nawab Abdul Majid, C.I.E., as a member of the Provincial Council, and says that as long as the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is returned to the Council the presence of the Nawab in the Council is most essential.

The editor says that the Nawab is the most fitting person to be re-elected, and suggests that if any person offers himself for election against him, it should be amicably settled between the new candidate and the Nawab in favour of the latter.

LEADER, 24th April 1912.

The coming Council elections.

7. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th April 1912, announces the candidature of the Honourable Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya for election to the Imperial Legislative Council by the non-official members of the Provincial Council, of the Hon'ble Pandit Moti Lal Nehru and Munshi Ishwar Saran for election to the United Provinces Legislative Council by the Municipal and District Boards of the Allahabad and Gorakhpur divisions respectively. The editor recapitulates the work done by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan both in the Provincial and Imperial Councils, and expresses appreciation of the valuable services rendered by Mr. Malaviya to his community in the Provincial Council. He strongly supports Mr. Malaviya's candidature for the Imperial Council, and expresses the hope that the non-official members of the Local Council will again elect him. With regard to the second member to be elected by the non-official members of the Local Council, the editor expresses the hope that the sitting member will not be returned on the ground that his performances have not only been ludicrous, but on occasions they have been scandalous. He suggests that, in view of the fact that the Muslim community enjoys the right of separate representation on the Imperial Council, there is no reason why one of the two members elected by the non-official members of the Local Council should be a Muhammadan, and he accordingly proposes that a second Hindu be elected. The Editor refers to the fact that Rai Sri Ram Bahadur is again standing for election to the Imperial Council, and remarks that he will be far more useful than the Hon'ble Nawab Abdul Majid, but he would only advise the election of men of exceptional worth. He says that the chief complaint against Rai Sri Ram Bahadur is his having kept aloof from the National Congress and the Provincial Conference, and he expresses the opinion that if he does not consider that the public activities of his country-men are good enough for him to participate in the latter may be pardoned for preferring others who have not "ploughed a lonely furrow like him."

With regard to the Hon'ble Pandit Moti Lal Nehru, the editor remarks that he has given evidence of his ability, power of expression, and independence, but that he has failed to show hard work as a councillor, and unremitting attention to public affairs.

The editor supports the candidature of Munshi Ishwar Saran and urges that he is more actively associated with public life than the sitting member, who should now make room for his friend. The editor also expresses the hope that the Rohilkhand division will re-elect the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad to represent it in the Council.

ZAMINDAR-WA-KASHTKAR, 26th April 1912.

The working of the Press Act in the Punjab.

8. The Zamindar-wa-Kashtkar (Bijnor), for April 1912 (received on the 26th April), takes exception to the demand of security under the Press Act from the editor of the Zamindar

(Lahore) by the District Magistrate of Lahore, and expresses regret that the District Magistrate did not clearly specify the objectionable articles that were published in the paper, on account of which action had been taken. He remarks that the Zamindar has always been straightforward and loyal in its attitude towards Government.

He complains of the campaign undertaken by the Watan and Millat (Lahore) against the Zamindar and asks Government to modify the order passed by the District Magistrate demanding security from the Zamindar.

9. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 24th April 1912, expresses its agreement with the suggestion of the Zamindar (Lahore) that Government should appoint a committee well versed in the niceties of the Urdu language to judge the tone and writings of Urdu journals.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 24th April 1912.

The working of the Press Act in the Punjab.

The editor says that Europeans as a rule cannot grasp the true meaning and significance of Urdu words, and he expresses the hope that Government will speedily do something to remove the complaint of Urdu journalists, and that in future no action will be taken against them merely on the opinion of a European Magistrate.

10. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 24th April 1912, refers to the differences among the members of the Muhammadan community, and says that no useful purpose will be served if only a few Muhammadans adopt the political views of the Hindus, and that it will only serve to show that when the Muhammadans are not united in themselves they can do no good to others.

OUDH AKHBAR, 24th April 1912.

Relation between Hindus and Muhammadans.

The editor says that the friction between the two communities is due to their demand for equal rights irrespective of their numbers, and that Government also is at a loss to discover any means of effecting a reconciliation between them.

11. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 24th April 1912, says that though the Indians have made considerable progress under British rule, they are still very backward will regard to education and commerce when compared with people in foreign countries. The editor says that Indians owing to their being a subject race cannot reach the level of European civilization, and asks them not to limit their efforts simply to the spread of education, but to take more interest in commerce and industries.

OUDH AKHBAR, 24th April 1912.

The regeneration of Indians.

12. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th April 1912, refers to an article that appeared in the Times of India about the conditions of the civil service, and notes the following remarks :—

LEADER, 24th April 1912.

The civil service.

"Our contemporary would like them (Indian Civil Servants) to be given a remuneration which would lift them above pecuniary anxieties, and also give them means for a liberal hospitality, as if they were given starvation wages. And be it remembered that all this maudlin sympathy is expressed about the members of a service the most highly paid in the world, and that too when they enjoy exchange compensation allowance over and above high salaries, all at the expense of the Indian taxpayers, full 40 millions of whom, according to the late Sir. William Wilson Hunter, do not know from year's end to year's end what it is to have one full meal in the day. Our contemporary sighs for the good old days, alas! never again to return, and finds a remedy for many present-day evils in a return to sheer undiluted nomination, a pious hope which reminds one of dame Partington trying to sweep back the surging tide of the ocean by a vigorous application of her broomstick."

13. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912, refers to Mr. Montagu's speech in replying to Sir John Rees in the debate on the administrative changes in India in which he mentioned the strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans in Upper India, and remarks that the root of the trouble between the two communities is the unfair and disproportionate representation.

LEADER, 25th April 1912.

Mr. Montagu's speech.

The editor suggests that the only way to effect a rational compromise in the matter is to leave undisturbed the arrangements for separate representation, and to remedy the inequalities and anomalies with regard to the right to vote, the number of members and the mode of election.

He reminds His Honour of his appeal for unity made at the last Council meeting and of the command of His Imperial Majesty and suggests that such unity will be best secured by effecting a suitable modification in the Legislative Council's Regulations.

LEADER, 25th April 1912.

The administration of the Central Provinces and Berar.

14. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912, expresses sympathy with the demand for the establishment of a teaching and residential university at Nagpur, and for the appointment of a fourth judge in the Judicial Commissioner's court there. The editor asks the people of the Central Provinces as well as those of Berar to persist in their demand for amalgamation until their wish is satisfied, and Berar treated as an integral part of the Central Provinces for purposes of legislation, elections, and other purposes. He suggests that when this reform is effected the administration should be raised to the status of a Lieutenant Governorship, that a Legislative Council be appointed for the whole of the combined territory, that the Judicial Commissioner's court be raised to the status of a chief court, and that a university founded at Nagpur. He remarks that the Central Provinces and Berar will not come into line with the larger provinces until these reforms had been introduced.

LEADER, 25th April 1912.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

15. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912, expresses disapproval of the suggestions made by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce that the two departments of the Government should be isolated from the rest and situated at one place convenient for mercantile community. He ridicules the suggestion that there should be no fewer than nine members of the Bengal Legislative Council, who were to be the representatives of European trade and commercial interests.

LEADER, 26th April 1912.

The policy of Muslim League.

16. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 26th April 1912, publishes a letter from a correspondent who signs himself "Yusuf" in which he defends the present attitude and policy of the Muslim League, and remarks that the League like a human being can only find the right path after making mistakes whether it plods along the track prescribed by Sir Saiyid, or goes off on new ways of its own.

He says that the recent changes in India and affairs in Turkey and Persia have surcharged the Muslim atmosphere with new thought currents and have given a rude shock to their national sentiments, with the result that political affairs suggest a different outlook to the more thoughtful of Muhammadans.

He refers to the message of His Highness the Agha Khan and the circular letter issued by the Honorary Secretary of the All India Muslim League, and asks the Muhammadans to strive to bring the constitution of the League in harmony with the minds of the people.

He urges the critics of the League to formulate practical proposals and to suggest practical lines of work to enable the League to effect improvement in its constitution and in its scope of work.

He goes on to describe the work done by the League during the last five years, and asks its critics to realize the forces of racial ascendency, of monopoly and of power arranged on one side and those of ignorance, apathy and helplessness on the other.

He exhorts his co-religionists to work out their national regeneration unitedly and deliberately.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

17. The Nasim-i-Agra, of the 23rd April 1912, expresses regret that no test is made of the capability of the persons who are appointed as honorary munsifs and magistrates, and suggests that some sort of preliminary examination should be held for the appointment of honorary munsifs and magistrates in order to ensure satisfactory work.

Honorary munsifs and magistrates.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 23rd April 1912.

(b)—Police.

18. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th April 1912, has the following :—

The Criminal Investigation department.

LEADER, 19th April 1912.

"The Amrita Bazar Patrika, whose comparisons are often interesting, has the following about the Criminal Investigation department :—

We know how, through the marvellous working of the law of evolution, the minutest of organisms, say the amœba, simple and homogeneous in its structure, is ultimately developed into a highly complex and heterogeneous one like the octopus. Do we not see the same phenomenon here? There was the Criminal Investigation department, in its inception a purely Government of India department, watching and dealing with organized criminal gangs. Then it developed its structure with corresponding developments of its functions, extending its ramifications, like the tentacles of the octopus, through the various provinces and ultimately evolving into a highly complex, heterogenous and hideous organism."

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

19. The Zul-Qarnain (Budaun), of the 21st April 1912, refers to the portion of the Hon'ble Mr. Sinha's presidential speech at the provincial conference held at Cawnpore, in which he advised the Muhammadans to give up their demand for separate electorates on local bodies in order to gain the good will of the Hindus, and remarks that the advice of Mr. Sinha was most unreasonable and that Muhammadans should continue their demand for separate representation on local bodies for which Government has given its pledge.

Separate representation for Muhammadans.

ZUL-QARNAIN, 21st April 1912.

With regard to Mr. Sinha's complaint that the Muhammadans were allowed direct representation while the Hindus could only send their representatives through the municipal and district boards, the editor says that, as the Hindus were always on the majority on the boards, and as experience has shown that no Muhammadan could even hope to be elected as a member of the Council through the boards, Government considered it advisable to grant the Muhammadans the privilege of sending their representatives directly, and that therefore the complaint of the Hindus was altogether unreasonable.

20. The Agra Akhbar, of the 21st April 1912, refers to the election of Munshi Narayan Prasad Asthana as the vice-chairman of the Agra municipality, and remarks that the Hindu members being in majority did not like to elect a Muhammadan as vice-chairman of the municipal board. He appeals to His Honour Sir John Hewett to grant separate electorates to Muhammadans on local bodies, and remarks that, unless the number of Muhammadan representatives is fixed on municipal and district boards, the present tension of feeling between the two communities will increase every day.

Separate electorates on local bodies.

AGRA AKHBAR, 21st April 1912.

21. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 23rd April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer refers to the racial feeling exhibited at the last municipal election at Agra, and points out that the Hindu were successful against their Muhammadan rivals. He says that there is no hope in future of any Muhammadan being returned to the local boards, seeing that the majority of the voters will always be Hindus, and that their religious prejudices will influence them, and he urges the necessity for separate electorates being granted on local bodies to Muhammadans to enable them to safeguard their interests.

Separate electorates on local bodies.

AL BASHIR, 23rd April 1912.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st April 1912.

The proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai Park at Allahabad.

22. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the fact that the minority who voted against the proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai Park were not opposed to the park itself but only to the site. The editor observes that if the proposed park be constructed at Garhi-ki-Sarai, which is an insanitary place in the heart of the city, it will improve the condition of the whole town, and he expresses the hope that the Chairman will give the matter the consideration it deserves.

ABHYUDAYA, 21st April 1912.

The Allahabad district board.

23. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912, contains an article contributed by Indra Narayan Dwivedi in which he urges the need for reform in the selection of voters of the district board. He suggests that a tahsil, consisting of 1,000 mahals and 432 villages and paying about Rs. 3,50,000 as revenue, should have only 100 voters. He complains of the fact that Muhammadans, who pay a revenue of Rs. 100 and even those who do not pay anything, are on the list of voters, while Hindus who pay a revenue of about Rs. 4,000 are not entitled to vote. He remarks that the voters should be selected on the basis of the land revenue they pay, and complains of the fact that new voters have not yet been appointed in place of those who died long ago.

The editor remarks that if Mr. Dwivedi's statements be true, the district board is to be blamed for neglecting its duties. He says that, when revenue is collected both from Hindus and Muhammadans alike in proportion to their income, their selection as voters should also be made in the same way, and that it is not proper to show partiality to one community. He invites the attention of the authorities of the district board to the matter.

INDEPENDENT, 22nd April 1912.

Water-supply at Allahabad.

24. The Independent (Allahabad), of the 22nd April 1912, says that much inconvenience is caused to the people owing to the restriction of water-supply at Allahabad.

The editor complains that the City road, which runs from Katra to the Chauk, is not watered in the evening, and he expresses regret that the members of the Allahabad municipal board do not discharge their duties properly and do not care for the public comfort.

LEADER, 25th April 1912.

The Allahabad Municipality.

25. One Badri Prasad of Daraganj writes to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912, to complain of the serious inconvenience and hardship caused to the residents of Daraganj and that neighbourhood owing to the inadequate supply of water during the hot weather, with the result that the use of water from wells which have not been used for a long time has caused deaths from cholera.

The writer also invites attention to the disgraceful condition of the road leading from the Chauk to Daraganj.

ANAND, 18th April 1912.

The Lucknow municipality.

26. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 18th April 1912 (received on the 22nd April), complains of the insanitary condition of certain muhallas, and of the defective lighting arrangements in the streets of Lucknow city.

The editor admits that the sanitary condition of the town has been improved by widening the roads, but he complains that the municipal authorities acquire more land than is actually required for the purpose with the result that, after the construction of roads, they sell spare land at higher prices, and make a large profit out of it at the expense of the poor classes.

He refers to the rumour as to the abolition of octroi duty and the imposition of house tax instead, and asks the residents of the Chauk to protest against such a hardship. He remarks that it is unwise to repose any confidence in the commissioners, and he asks the people to submit a petition direct to Government to protect the interests of the poorer citizens.

LEADER, 21st April 1912.

Non-official chairmen for Benares and Mirzapur municipalities.

27. The following is from the Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912:—

"We have published letters from Hindus as well as Muhammadans at Benares urging the appointment of Pandit Rama Shankar Misra as chairman of that important municipality. The qualifications of the gentleman being unquestionable and both the communities being agreed that he is deserving of the position, we hope the Government of his Honour Sir John Hewett will find no objection to the proposed concession to the citizens of Benares. If Pandit Rama Shankar Misra in Benares and Pandit Ram Avatar Pande in Mirzapur be made chairmen of the respective municipalities, two excellent steps in the direction of advance of local self-government will have been taken, for which the gratitude of the community will be due to Sir John Hewett."

(c)—Education.

28. The Sudhanidhi (Allahabad), for Magh 1968 (January 1912) (received on the 13th April), urges the Hindus to contribute liberally towards the proposed Hindu University fund and he addresses the vaidyas in particular, seeing that the proposed inclusion of instruction in the ayurvedic system of medicine in the university scheme would materially improve their position.

SUDHANIDHI, January 1912.

The proposed Hindu University.

In the issue for Chaitra 1968 (March 1912) (received on the same date), the editor refers to the proposal that arrangements should be made to impart instruction both in the ayurvedic and unani systems of medicine in the proposed Hindu University, and observes that the university should only confine itself to improving and encouraging the ayurvedic system of treatment. He suggests that the difference between the ayurvedic and the unani, the alopathic, and homœopathic systems of medicine, can easily be explained to the students by the staff employed to teach them the ayurvedic system.

29. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th April 1912 (received on the 20th April), expresses regret that some of the Hindu leaders who supported the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's elementary education bill should have opposed the establishment of a university at Dacca, and says that the opposition was simply due to the fact that the Hindus holding Congress views never wish to see any measure introduced by Government which is calculated to do some good to the Muhammadans.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th April 1912.

The proposed Dacca university.

The editor refers to the address of the Hindu deputation that waited on His Excellency the Viceroy protesting against the proposed Dacca University, and remarks that His Excellency's reply to the deputation was quite convincing as to the need of a residential and teaching university at Dacca.

30. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 26th April 1912, refers to the article contributed by Sir Andrew Fraser to the Nineteenth Century on Sectarian Universities in India, in which he noted that the absence of religious and moral education in Government schools and colleges was given as the reason for the demand for the new universities, and expressed the opinion that the Government system of education had failed, not because of its own defects but because of defects in its application and administration.

LEADER, 26th April 1912.

Sectarian Universities in India.

The editor invites attention of the educational department to this unqualified condemnation of departmental methods, by one who so lately was a part of the machine himself, and remarks that it will be an evil day for India when theological teaching, which he says the scheme for religious education amounts to, is introduced in Government colleges and schools.

31. The Sudhanidhi (Allahabad), for Kartika 1968 (October 1911) (received on the 13th April), expresses regret that the proposal made in the Legislative Council that the ayurvedic system of medicine should also be taught in the Lucknow Medical College was not accepted in view of the unquestioned efficacy of the system. The editor says that he could give instances of cases which were pronounced incurable by assistant surgeons and other doctors, which were subsequently cured by vaidyas. He suggests that if Government cannot arrange to teach the indigenous system of medicine in the Lucknow College, it should induce some raises to open an independent college for the purpose.

SUDHANIDHI, October 1911.

The Ayurvedic system and the Lucknow Medical College.

32. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 20th April 1912, refers to the composition of the staff of the King George Medical College at Lucknow, and remarks that the efficiency of an institution of the kind depends chiefly on the calibre of its professional and teaching staff, and only to a limited extent on the buildings and the equipment. The editor acknowledges the ability of most of the Indian Medical Service officers but enquires whether at present there are not many doctors outside the charmed circle who are abler and more up-to-date than many Indian Medical Service doctors, and asks why some of the more talented among these should not be given an opportunity of imparting their knowledge to medical students and of winning distinction for themselves. The editor contends that the Indian Medical Service is meant for the country and not India for the service. He states that sympathy, tolerance, patience, and ability to impart knowledge to others are essentials for success in a professor in a medical college as much as in other teachers, and enquires whether at the time of the appointment of the Principal and other Professors of the Lucknow Medical College care was taken to secure men with such qualities.

LEADER, 20th April 1912.

The King George Medical College, Lucknow.

With regard to the Indian staff, the editor deprecates the existence of any soreness or feeling of discontent due to a belief that they are unfairly treated, and that invidious distinctions are made between them and the European professors. He criticises the rules about private practice and says that if Government were convinced that it would be detrimental to the work of the college, it should have forbidden all doctors employed in the college from any but consulting practice instead of making invidious distinctions between the professors and the teachers and demonstrators.

He refers to the other grievances of the demonstrators, and suggests that adequate allowances, exemption from the septennial examinations, security of tenure of appointment and permission to take up consulting practice, will make them thoroughly contented, and will insure whole hearted devotion to their important duties.

VAISHA, February 1912.

Proposed memorial to the late Lala Ramanuj Dayal of Meerut.

33. The Vaishya (Allahabad), for Phalgun 1968 (February 1912), (received on the 15th April), refers to the proposal of the Vaishya Mahasabha, Meerut, for raising a suitable memorial to the late Lala Ramanuj Dayal, which was discussed at the Vaishya conference held at Fyzabad, and suggests that a first grade college would be a suitable memorial to him, seeing that he was a great patron of education. The editor proposes that the college, even if only a second grade institution, be opened at Allahabad, as being the best place for it.

ADIB, April 1912.

The raising of the school fees in the United Provinces.

34. The editor of the Adib (Allahabad), in the issue for April 1912, expresses approval of the rules framed by Government as a result of the recommendations of the committee appointed to discuss the question of the school fees in the United Provinces.

ADIB, April 1912.

The Darbar educational grant.

35. The editor of the Adib (Allahabad), in the issue for April 1912, refer to the grant of fifty lakhs announced at the Darbar for elementary education and says that the allotment of thirty lakhs for primary education and five lakhs for female education will not be productive of beneficial results unless proper means be devised to utilize the money.

He complains of the inadequacy of the grant of two lakhs for industrial education, and urges the allotment of more funds under this head, seeing that agriculture and industry are the mainstays of the country.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th April 1912.

The Nadwat-ul-ulama and Al Bashir.

36. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th April 1912 (received on the 20th April), discusses the necessity for establishing institution for Muhammadans, at which purely religious instruction should be imparted, and takes exception to the adverse comments of Al Bashir (Etawah) on the working of the Nadwat-ul-ulama and of the Deoband School.

The editor expresses apprehension that the opposition of Al Bashir to the Nadwat is likely to alienate the sympathy of orthodox Muhammadans from the Muir Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, seeing that Al Bashir is regarded by the public as an organ of that institution, and he asks the editor of Al Bashir to refrain from unfavourably criticising the work done by Nadwat-ul-ulama or the Deoband School.

37. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the progress of the gurukul institution (Kangri) and remarks that the sacrifices made by the Hindus of the Punjab in establishing and in maintaining the institution have not been for nothing. The editor also expresses satisfaction at the fact that Pandit Harish Chandra, son of Lala Munshi Ram, has promised to devote his life to the gurukul, while the other graduate, Pandit Indra Chandra, has announced that he will spend his life in the service of humanity.

ADVOCATE, 21st April 1912.

The convocation of the gurukul.

He observes that it was a great achievement to conduct with such success an institution, which was not supported by the richer classes of the people, nor helped by Government, without any endowment and solely with the help of donations from middle-class people, particularly as it was regarded by some members of Government with suspicion.

The editor refers to the enthusiasm displayed at the anniversary meeting and to the popularity of the institution, and remarks that possessing a sound knowledge of Sanskrit and a fair acquaintance with English, the students are likely to prove good traders, good agriculturists, and to be fit for any other avocation of life. He speaks in praises of the sentiments of love of the motherland and of religion which the gurukul has inspired in thousands of men and women, and concludes by saying that if the gurukul succeed in reviving the custom of brahmacharya in the land, that achievement in itself will be invaluable, and those engaged at the institution will deserve every encouragement which the community can afford to give them.

38. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 24th April 1912, refers to the statement made by the Hon'ble the Raja of Kurupam in his speech in the Budget debate in the Imperial Council about the change in the educational policy of Government, which has been indicated by the establishment of expensive Government model schools, and observes that there has lately been a distinct tendency on the part of Government to spend more money on institutions directly controlled by it and less in the way of help to private institutions. The editor expresses the opinion that endeavour should be made to effect the extension of education by encouraging private effort as was insisted upon by the education commission, and that it was for this reason that he was opposed to the provincialization of the district board schools in the United Provinces.

LEADER, 24th April 1912.

The educational policy of Government.

39. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912, publishes the second instalment of the contributed article on "Education of women in India," in which the writer refers to the different agencies that are working for the extension of female education in the country, and particularly to the Arya Samaj in Northern India, and discusses the obstacles that have prevented any progress in this direction during the last fifty years.

LEADER, 25th April 1912.

The education of women in India.

The writer quotes extensively from the report of the Indian Education Commission of 1883, and remarks that the obstacles in the way of female education pointed out by the Commissioners are as real to-day as they were in 1883, but that fortunately the situation is more hopeful than it was then.

He quotes from the recent reports of the different Directors of Public Instruction the same tale of obstruction and he urges those officers to persist in endeavouring to carry out the recommendations of the Commissioners.

40. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912, publishes an appeal from Babu Gauri Shankar Prasad, vakil, secretary of the Veda-Vidyalay a and Dayanand High School Committee, Benares city, asking for funds for the proposed Veda-Vidyalaya which will be "a seminary where Sanskrit and English scholars will be able to undertake also post-graduate studies on lines of comparative Theology." It is announced that the institution will be associated with the Dayanand high school, and will inculcate Aryan principles, and "contribute to the uplifting and upbuilding of the country, and turn out self sacrificing young men, who, imbued with holy zeal, will carry truth to every corner of India and to distant

LEADER, 21st April 1912.

The proposed Veda-Vidyalaya and Dayanand School at Benares.

lands." The writer says that along with the high school there will be a boarding house or Vedic Ashram where students will be required to observe Brahmacharya, and perform their morning and evening worship according to Vedic injunctions. A sum of Rs. 50,000 is asked for in order to start this institution, and it is announced that the opening ceremony will take place in the first week of July next.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 17th April 1912.

The proposed Veda Vidyalaya at Benares.

41. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares). of the 17th April 1912 (received on the 20th April), refers to the proposal for starting a new educational institution at Benares where students, irrespective of caste, will be given instruction in the Vedas, the Vedangas, and the Vedants, and ridicules the idea of giving such instructions to Chamars and suggests that the time would be more profitably spent if they were taught the art of shoe-making. He suggests that the sum of Rs. 50,000, which is to be raised for the purpose, should be given to the Hindu University fund.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

LEADER, 19th April 1912.

Land acquisition at Delhi.

42. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th April 1912, says that complaints have been heard in connection with the acquisition of land by the Government of India in Delhi that injustice has been done to the owners of land and the editor expresses the hope that every care will be taken that nobody is treated unfairly and that no sense of hardship is left behind.

(g)—General.

LEADER, 21st April 1912.

The Titanic disaster.

43. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912, says that of all the lives that were lost in the disaster that befell the Titanic, perhaps none was more valuable to the world at large than of W. T. Stead, the far-famed editor of the Review of Reviews.

After describing his many virtues and qualities, the editor says that Indians will always remain grateful to him and bless his memory on account of his advocacy of the cause of Indian progress, and that journalism is the poorer for his loss and all philanthropic movements.

In the issue of the 23rd April 1912, the editor says:—

"Once more we should like to draw the pointed attention of our countrymen to the noble manly qualities of courage and unselfishness shown by many on board the ill-fated Titanic as revealed by the Senate Committee's enquiry. There was hardly a man, be he never so humble, who did not give a good account of himself in a situation that might have unnerved any man. They all showed themselves to be such humble obedient slaves of duty and their thought was all for others' safety. Let our countrymen reflect on the qualities which make a nation great. It is far from our meaning to deny that individual Indians there are like, for instance, the late Dr. P. R. Roy or the late Nafar Chandra Kundu of Calcutta, who need not fear comparison with the bravest of the brave in the west, but we have to consider the average. And it is idle for any one to affirm that the Indian average is equal to the European or American average in this respect or in many other respects. Here is work for the true Indian patriot, character-building without which there can be no nation-building."

ADVOCATE, 25th April 1912.

The Titanic disaster.

44. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 25th April 1912, praises the conduct of all on board the steamer Titanic, and in this connection publishes the following passage:—

"Every country has witnessed similar noble deeds of martyrdom, but they have been performed either in a battle field or in defence of personal honour by individuals. It must be admitted that the history of few countries in the East can show such noble deeds from the mass of population in an hour of unpreparedness. The Anglo-Saxon race occupies its present position by the qualities which were exhibited in the dark hours of the 14th April on board the "Titanic." We who have been nursed in Vedantic Philosophy, who talk of being indifferent to the requirements of our physical bodies and loudly preach that the soul being immortal it cannot be killed, with all our religious fervour, we cannot show the same indifference towards our physical bodies as was shown on the "Titanic" by men who have been brought up differently. Westerners have been accused of being too materialistic a people who care too much for the enjoyments of life, but here we see that men who rolled in wealth and whose death is mourned to-day all over the world, made no struggle to save themselves at the expense of a weak brother or sister's life. It is this noble trait in the westerner which our people have to emulate before they can think of raising themselves in the scale of nations." Referring to the death of Mr. Stead, the editor remarks that his loss to India is irreparable.

LEADER, 21st April 1912.

45. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912, reviews the figures showing the progress of co-operative credit societies in India, and congratulates the government and the people of the United Provinces on having the largest number of societies and members as well as the largest amount of working capital in the whole of British India. The editor observes that the co-operative movement is fraught with enormous possibilities for good, and asks the educated section of the commu nity to take a greater interest in it. He says that the new Act is much more helpful and progressive than the old one and he particularly commends the possibilities of productive and distributive societies among the artizans.

The progress of co-operative credit societies.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 24th April 1910.

46. Zafar Ahsan Alavi contributes an article to the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 24th April 1912, in which he expresses regret at the poverty of Muhammadans, and after discussing its causes, suggests that the helpless state of the majority of Muhammadan agriculturists is due to the exorbitant rate of interest charged by money lenders.

Muhammadans and Co-operative Credit Societies.

He urges the need for organizing Co-operative Credit Societies in every city, town and village for the benefit of the Muhammadan agriculturists, and observes that until Muhammadans are freed from the yoke of money-lenders there is no hope of improving their material condition.

VEDA PRAKASH, April 1912.

47. A correspondent writing to the Veda Prakash (Meerut), for April 1912 (received on the 20th April), refers to the order of the Local Government requiring the members of the Sansia community to settle in various districts, and to the efforts of the Salvation Army to reclaim them by imparting to them religious and industrial education, and expresses regret that the Arya Samaj has so far done nothing for that community.

The reclamation of the Sansias.

The editor invites the attention of the leading me mbers of the Arya Samaj to the matter, and suggests that they should obtain the permission of Government to open primary schools for Sansia boys, and that they should try to reform them.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 17th April 1912.

48. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 17th April 1912 (received on the 20th April), refers to the order of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab to Deputy Commissioners to grant licenses for arms freely to the people to enable them to protect themselves, and expresses gratification that Sir Louis Dane has always been trying to improve the condition of the people of the Punjab.

The free use of arms in the Punjab.

LEADER, 19th April 1912.

49. The following is an extract from the first instalment of a contributed article entitled "Creation of Hindi" in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th April 1912:—

The Hindi language.

"To what extent prejudice may vitiate the visual faculty of man is illustrated by Nawab Abdul Majid Khan's assertion that the Hindi language is being 'created.' One might have acquiesced if he had stuck to what is a fact, namely, that Nagari is being made the common script of India, but to say that the Hindi language is being created is (well, one does not know how to express it) untrue, as u-n-t-r-u-e as to say that English or Bengali or French is being created. If I had not known that the noble Nawab is an Indian who has lived in that part of India in which some of the greatest Hindi poets (Hindu and Musalman) have flourished, I would have certainly assumed that he, while making that huge and baseless statement in the Viceroy's Council was fresh from 'wilayat.' Nothing else would ordinarily explain such amazing ignorance of common-place Indian facts. There is only one other alternative to ignorance in explaining the mistake, but that alternative must not be thought of in the case of a man of the Nawab's position."

LEADER, 20th April 1912.

50. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 20th April 1912, complains of the attack made on the Hon'ble Babu Brij Nandan Prasad by the Indian Planter's Gazette (Calcutta) in connection with the altercation at the last meeting of the Provincial Council between the Hon'ble Member and the Inspector General of Police, and expresses the opinion that "more disreputable and mean language had rarely disfigured the columns of any newspaper in India."

The Indian Planter's Gazette and the Hon'ble Babu Brij Nandan Prasad.

ADVOCATE, 21st April 1912.

51. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 21st April 1912, expresses satisfaction at the suggestion made at the second dinner of the 1911-12 session of the London Chamber of Commerce held on the 20th February last, that a separate section of the chamber should be constituted to deal with purely Indian affairs; and says that the remarks in the "Economic Geology of India" regarding her mineral productions was applicable not only to mineral products, but to almost every other article of produce. The editor expresses regret that, in spite of her vast natural resources, her advantages of climate, soil and situation, and of a sober, thrifty and industrious population, India is so backward in industrial matters, though she was at one time in no way behind Europe in that respect. He asserts that every one who desires the progress and prosperity of India heartily welcomes the discussion by the British public of a subject of such supreme importance as the question of India's industrial development.

Economic development of India.

OUDH AKHBAR, 24th April 1912.

52. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 24th April 1912, after expressing appreciation of the administration of Sir John Hewett, urges the need for raising a fitting memorial to His Honour in the province. He asks the leading men of the province to hold a meeting as soon as possible in Lucknow to discuss the most suitable form for the memorial and to open a subscription list for the purpose.

Memorial to Sir John Hewett.

LEADER, 25th April 1912.

An assault by a European railway employé.

53. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912, has the following:—

"A respectable correspondent writes to us that on a recent date at the Ambala Cantonment station a man named B. Nabi Bux, yard foreman of that station, was severly assaulted by a European servant of the railway and that the man sustained serious injuries. Our correspondent expresses the hope, in which we join, that the authorities of the North-Western Railway will enquire into the matter and mete out suitable treatment to the offending assaulter. Such cases, of which happily we hear less at present than we did some time ago, create a painful impression, and do no good to any body, and when they do occur it behoves the authorities to take such notice of them as to make their recurrence, even in frequently, a matter of extreme difficulty and improbability. We hope Sir Henry Burt, the manager of the North-Western Railway, will not disappoint expectation."

V.—Legislation.

SUDHANIDHI, January 1912.

54. The Sudhanidhi (Allahabad), for Magh 1968 (January 1912) (received on the 13th April,) criticises the Medical Registration Act, and observes that it does not confer any special advantages on the doctors who will be registered, while it restricts their liberty, and also puts great difficulties in the way of good vaidyas and hakims. The editor observes that Government should patronize the indigenous systems of medicine, seeing that the mass of the Indian people have still more faith in them than in the allopathic system.

The Medical Registration Bill.

He contrasts the amount spent on education in medical colleges and on expensive English medicines with the Economical ayurvedic system of medical education and with the small cost of its medicines, and he asserts that an additional reason for the relation of the ayurvedic system is that these allopathic medicines cannot be obtained in villages. He asks Government not to condemn the indigenous system and urge the Bombay Government not to pass the measure in opposition to the public opinion.

SANATAN DHARM PATAKA, February 1912.

55. The Sanatan Dharam Pataka (Moradabad), for February 1912 (received on the 15th April), discusses the evils of tobacco-smoking, and suggests that Government and the leaders of the people should resort to legislation to prevent the use of tobacco by boys in the interests of their health in the same way as has been done in Japan.

Prevention of the use of tobacco.

LEADER, 21st April 1912.

The Agra Estates Bill.

56. A correspondent of the Leader (Allahabad), of the 21st April 1912, invites the public of the United Provinces generally, and particularly the Muhammadans to give their attention to the Agra Estates Bill before it seals the fate of the landowners in the Province of Agra. He points out that, besides other defects in the bill, it is opposed to the rules of inheritance laid down by the Quran, and that its failure to provide for certain contingencies is calculated to result in ruinous litigation. He asserts that the outcome of the bill, whatever may have been the motive of the mover will be to increase the power and influence of the few and leave the many to provide for themselves as best they can.

VI.—Railway.

LEADER, 23rd April 1912.

Railway thefts.

57. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 23rd April 1912, expresses satisfaction that the Upper India Chamber of Commerce, Cawnpore, has not lost sight of the importance of the matter of theft of goods in course of transit by rail, which has now become a chronic and widespread evil, and that it has again brought it before the President of the Railway Board. The editor suggests that the root of the evil lies in the owner's risk-note forms, which practically absolve the railways from all responsibility for loss of goods in transit, and which therefore take away all incentive from the railways concerned to trace the theft and bring home the guilt to the wrong-doers among their staff.

The editor remarks that people have come to regard railway thefts so much as a necessary evil that the majority of sufferers have ceased to prefer any complaint, seeing that it will result in no good, and thus no correct idea of its widespread character can be formed from the few complaints actually made.

He congratulates the Cawnpore Chamber on having secured a promise from Sir William Dring that well-founded claims for compensation from 'concerns of repute which could produce certificates of shortage from regiments and Government departments would be entertained,' but enquires how the small traders and others who are probably greater sufferers are to be treated in the matter. The editor suggests that the last of the several railway administrations who had the handling of the goods should be made responsible for the loss, instead of the administration which received the goods for transmission seeing that in the latter case the claim will neither be equitable nor will it probably be entertained without the railway risk-note being executed.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

SANATAN DHARM PATAKA, March 1912.

A gaushala at Gaya.

58. The Sanatan Dharam Pataka (Moradabad), for March 1912 (received on the 15th April), contains a contributed article in which the writer asks all Hindus to contribute liberally towards the funds required for opening a gaushala at Gaya to be named the George gaushala.

VAISHYA, March 1912.

Pasturage for cows at Chitrakot.

59. The Vaishya (Allahabad), for Chaitra 1968 (March 1912) (received on the 15th April), contains an article contributed by one Baldeo Prasad Gupta of Banda in which he appeals for Rs. 3,000 required to secure a portion of forest near Chitrakot in order to utilize it permanently as pasture-land for cows.

LEADER, 19th April 1912.

Agra Gaucharan fair.

60. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 19th April 1912, publishes a memorial submitted to His Excellency the Viceroy by one Jagan Nath Piyari and other Hindu residents of Agra about the Gaucharan fair, praying that no condition of obtaining a license for holding the fair be imposed upon them.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 17th April 1912.

61. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 17th April 1912 (received on the 20th April), says that Christianity cannot make any headway in this country, because India requires a philosophic religion, and he asserts that with the spread of knowledge in Europe the faith of the people in Christianity has been shaken. The editor expresses the hope that some day the teaching of the Vedant will be the prevailing religion of the West.

Christianity in India.

ANAND, 18th April 1912.

62. The Anand (Lucknow), of the 18th April 1912 (received on the 22nd April), adversely criticizes the proceedings of the social conference held at Cawnpore, and remarks that such conferences can never improve the condition of the country. The editor observes that social reforms can only be carried out if people will really carry into effect the resolutions adopted at the conference. He expresses surprise that those men who violate the laws of Hinduism should give themselves out to be the leaders of the Hindu community.

The social conference.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 24th April 1912.

63. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) of the 24th April 1912, urges the Muhammadans of India to save Nau-muslims from being reclaimed by the Arya Samajists and from being converted to Christianity.

The propogation of Islam.

The editor expresses regret that the Muhammadans of India have as yet made no efforts for the propagation of their religion, and observes that if they still remain idle a large portion of their community will be soon absorbed either in the Arya Samaj or in Christianity.

He commends the vigour of the missionary work of the Arya Samajists and Christians, and asks his co-religionists to work with the same enthusiasm for the propagation of their religion.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

ALLAHABAD:

The 20th April 1912.

PRINTED BY F. LUKER, SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS, UNITED PROVINCES.

CONFIDENTIAL.] (621) No. 18 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 3rd May 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The Italian Turkish war 425
2. The Italian-Turkish war 425
3. The Italian-Turkish war 425
4. The Italian-Turkish war 425
5. Turkish sovereignty in Arabia ... 425
6. The situation in Persia 425
7. Indians in German East Africa ... 425

(b)—Home:

8. The Indian National Congress and the Muslim League 426
9. Treatment of political prisoners in Indian jails 426
10. The right of interpellation 426
11. The Indian Planters' Gazette and the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad ... 426
12. Legislative Council elections 426
13. Indians in the Executive Councils ... 427
14. The Anglo-Indian Defence Association ... 427
15. The Anglo-Indian Defence Association ... 427
16. Mr. Montague and the Muhammadans ... 427

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

Nil.

Page.

(b)—Police:

17. Assistant and deputy superintendents of police 428

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

Nil.

(e)—Education.

18. The Dacca University scheme... ... 428
19. The need for the diffusion of education among the Indian masses 428
20. Hindu religious funds and education ... 428
21. Mass education 428
22. Sectarian universities in India ... 428

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

23. The new coinage 429
24. The depressed classes in the United Provinces 429
25. The Court of Wards and certain estates in the district of Bijnor 429
26. The Khwab-o-Khyal 429
27. Exemption of naib-tahsildars from the operations of the Arms Act... ... 429
28. Plague inoculation in Gorakhpur ... 429
29. The Titanic disaster: an appeal to Indians 430
30. Civil assistant surgeons 430
31. The Nicholson Committee 430
32. Journalistic enterprise at Delhi ... 430
33. Publication of Council proceedings in vernacular 431
34. Indians in the public service 431

	Page.
V.—LEGISLATION.
35. The Elementary Education Bill ...	431
36. Proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law	431
37. The Government of India Bill ...	431
VI.—RAILWAY.
38. Railway thefts	432
39. The third class passengers' hall at the Mankapur junction railway station ...	432
40. Grievances of the Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	432
VII.—POST OFFICE.
41. Enquiry fee for value payable parcels ...	432
42. Enquiry fee for value payable parcels ...	432

	Page.
VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.
43. The Gau Charan fair at Agra... ...	432
44. Agarwal caste dispute at Benares ...	433
45. Alleged religious intolerance in Sikandrabad	433
46. Alleged religious intolerance in Sikandrabad	433
47. The place of social reforms in India ...	433
48. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	433
49. Cow-killing in Ajodhya	433
IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.
Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st May 1911.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian	Lucknow ...	Quarterly ...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	300 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 „
4	Hindustán Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ghulam Muhammad ...	700 „
8	Prabúdha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P.	450 „
11	Theosophy in India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehangir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Ram Deva; B.A., Arya; 31 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Ganga Prasad Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintamani; Madrasi; 30 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Madho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European; 38 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	1,500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	150 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudagar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Nath Vaishya; 36 ...	200 „
†20	Álamgir	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal, Vaishya; 41	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Áwarif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40...	900 „
23	Al Azis	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kasim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nazir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A. ... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ram Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ánand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Ram Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43 ...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam	200 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Rudaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumar; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsar	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zamin; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulla, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29 ...	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 "
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 "
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 "
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 "
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shah Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 "
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A., Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Rám Dayal Vidyarthi; 35	709 "
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 "
49	Zamíndár-wa-Káshtkár ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.	400 "
50	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 "
51	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 "
†52	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 "
53	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Ilahi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 "
54	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 "
55	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 "
56	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathura Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 "
57	Vyápari and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 "
58	All-India Shiah Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubarak Ali; 32	600 "
59	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 "
60	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 "
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 "
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktada Khan; 32 ...	800 "
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Áwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 "
66	Dabdaba-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 "
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 "
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 "
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 "
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 "
71	Ittihad	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 "
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 "
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 "
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kamta Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 "
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 "
76	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 "
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandít Tara Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,800 "
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
79	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nizam-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qazi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 "

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 "
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	200 "
84	Sahifa	Bijnor	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	350 "
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahur Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 "
86	Surma-i-Bozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	350 "
87	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 "
88	Tajir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 35	328 "
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Sajjad Husain; Shaikh; 33	400 "
90	Unioh Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 "
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 "
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 56.	1,700 "
93	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 "
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 "
"	ARABIC-URDU.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaiman; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdal Wali; 27	300 copies.
"	HINDI.
96	Almora Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini... ...	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Chaudhari; Brahman; 56	100 "
98	Bharatodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 "
99	Bharát Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 "
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	130 "
101	Bráhman Samáchár... ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Narayan Prasad; Brahman... ...	405 "
102	Bráhman Sarvasva	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhimsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 "
103	Dehati	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Srivastava; Kayasth ...	600 "
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 "
*105	Dharm Kushmakar	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasad Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 "
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girja Dutt; Naithani Brahman; 36.	600 "
107	Griha Lakshmí	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 "
†108	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...		300 "
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26	650 "
†110	Jain Nari Hitkari	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasad; Jain; 29	1,000 "
111	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Ram; Bania; 45	300 "
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Ram Prasad Misra; 22	1,000 "
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Nath Yogishwar; 37... ...	450 "
114	Kányakubj Hitkári	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lal Misra; 46 ...	1,500 "
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Balmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 "
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 "
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya; 27 ...	1,000 "
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Narayan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 "
†119	Naraini or The Vedanta Patrika	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Ramnandhan; Kayasth; 32 ...	325 "
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shastri; 37	1,000 "

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 35 ...	200 "
123	Rásik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 "
124	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Narayan Dube	700 "
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 "
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahabir Prasad Dwivedi; 46 ...	4,000 "
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 "
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasoda Devi; 31	3,000 "
*129	Sudhanidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannath Prasád Shukla; Vaidye; 36.	500 "
130	Swadesh Bándhavá	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rajput; 45	600 "
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Naráyan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35.	1,900 "
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 "
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 "
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swami Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 "
135	Bharat Dharm Neta... ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedáshastri; 26 ...	500 "
†136	Kam Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Baba Bhagwan Das Udasi; 46 ...	500 "
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 "
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 "
139	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 "
140	Ánand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 "
141	Árya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 "
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 "
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banarsi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ...	1,000 "
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Babu Bansi Dhar ... ... / Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 "
†145	Mahila Hitkarak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Srimati Vidyavati Devi	250 "
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 "
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 "
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 38 ...	2,000 "
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
149	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. Referring to the withdrawal of the Italian fleet from the Dardanelles the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 24th April 1912 says that it would be unfair for the Powers to attempt to put any pressure on Turkey at a time when she is proving herself victorious all round, and remarks that any such action, if meditated, would create deep resentment among Muhammadans all over the world. The editor suggests that the Powers should inform Italy that her invasion of Tripoli is totally unjustifiable, and require her to withdraw her forces. He says that the question of the cost of the war should be subsequently decided by the Powers.

The Italian-Turkish war.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 24th April 1912.

2. Referring to the rumoured intention of the Italians to throw bombs on the holy places of Mecca and Medina, Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 25th April 1912, reproduces an article from the Siraj-ul-Akhbar (Kabul), urging the Muhammadans to proclaim a jehad or holy war against the Italians, and to destroy all Christian places of worship within the Turkish Empire.

The Italian-Turkish war.

AL MUSHIR, 25th April 1912.

3. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 25th April 1912, discusses the prospects of peace between Turkey and Italy, and remarks that the terms offered by Italy cannot be accepted by Turkey at a time when she is proving herself so constantly victorious in the field of battle.

The Italian-Turkish war.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 25th April 1912.

The editor observes that hostilities can be terminated either by pressure being brought by the Powers on the party considered to be in the wrong or by the appointment of a court of arbitration approved of by both parties.

4. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 2nd May 1912, expresses satisfaction that the attempt of the Italian fleet to force a passage through the Dardanelles was unsuccessful and remarks that it reflects discredit on that nation. The editor approves of the Sultan's desire to conclude peace only on condition that Turkey's sovereign rights are maintained, and entertains the hope that Turkey will be able to maintain her national honour and dignity.

The Italian-Turkish war.

ADVOCATE, 2nd May 1912.

5. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 30th April 1912 (received on the 3rd May), says that if Turkey does not strengthen her army and navy, she will lose all her possessions one after another. The editor remarks that it is manifest from the attitude of the Europeans Powers that they desire to possess Arabia, and he urges Turkey to make the best of the present enthusiasm to bring all the states of Arabia under her control, and to organize an army of trained Arab soldiers. He suggests that military colleges should be established in Arabia, and that the present wave of feeling should be utilized to raise a body of volunteers.

Turkish sovereignty in Arabia.

MASHRIQ, 30th April 1912.

6. The Oudh Akhbár (Lucknow), of the 2nd May 1912, suggests that the demand of an indemnity from the Persian government for the losses suffered by the British Consul and by European and Indian traders should be postponed until Persia has effected some improvement in her internal affairs. The editor enquires whether the Persians are not entitled to some indemnity for the attacks made on their country, and remarks that in any case Persia will have to accept a loan at disadvantageous terms in order to effect administrative reforms.

The situation in Persia.

OUDH AKHBAR, 2nd May 1912.

7. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912, refers to the report that Germany intends to deal arbitrarily with the Indians in German East Africa, urging as an excuse that England has been treating Indians in a similar manner in South Africa.

Indians in German East Africa.

LEADER, 2nd May 1912.

The editor observes that it is a great blow to British prestige that British subjects should be liable to be dealt with unjustly in a foreign country without any power of protest, and he expresses the hope that British statesmen will now realise their imperial obligation to do justice to Indians in British South Africa.

(b)—Home.

TAFRIH, 28th April 1912.

The Indian National Congress and the Muslim League.

8. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer expresses regret at the Muslim opposition to the Congress, and remarks that Muhammadans are mistaken in thinking that the Congress is a Hindu body. He says that the Muslim League has been instrumental in creating discord between Hindus and Muhammadans, but he notes with satisfaction that some of those who were previously the most popular leaders of the Muslim League are now developing Congress proclivities and becoming opposed to the League.

In conclusion he says that Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan, had he been alive, would now never have counselled his co-religionists to keep aloof from the Congress, and he urges Muhammadans to join Hindus on the common platform of the Congress.

ABHYUDAYA, 28th April 1912.

Treatment of political prisoners in Indian jails.

9. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 2nd May), says that it has heard from an accused in the Dacca conspiracy case, who has recently been released, that Indian political prisoners are treated as harshly in jails as other criminals, and that they are given very coarse food, and the editor asks why political prisoners in India should be treated in a different way from those in England, although they are under the same Government. He expresses the hope that the matter will attract the notice of Government and that it will soon remedy the grievances complained of.

LEADER, 30th April 1912.

The right of interpellation.

10. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 30th April 1912, expresses agreement with the contention put forward by the Hon'ble Mr. Harchand Rai Vishindas of Karachi in the Bombay Council when the Commissioner of Sindh suggested to him that members should seek information on local details from Commissioners of divisions or Heads of departments rather than through the medium of questions in the Council, seeing that Mr. Harchand Rai is described as having said that the object of interpellations is to throw a search light on dark spots and corners, and that this object would not be attained if questions were put to Commissioners in the mufussil and answers received there.

LEADER, 30th April 1912.

The Indian Planters' Gazette and the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad.

11. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 30th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains, apparently with the object of obtaining cheap notoriety, the Indian Planters' Gazette (Calcutta) has dug up a buried episode and defamed the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad in his private life. He asserts that the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad is a scholar of great merit, a successful lawyer, and the most prominent public man in the Rohilkhand, and describes it as being gross impudence on the part of the critic in the Indian Planters' Gazette to attack a gentleman about whom he had little or no information. The writer points out many mis-statements, which indicate the ignorance of the critic and states that the latter has clearly brought himself within the clutches of the law, though he doubts whether Babu Brijnandan Prasad will care to take any steps.

LEADER, 2nd May 1912.

Legislative Council elections.

12. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912, publishes an article on "Legislative Council elections" contributed by Rai Bahadur Lala Baij Nath, in which he deplores the want of really earnest workers in the Councils, and observes that the fault lies in the system of recruitment. He says that rich people seek election for the sake of the position and spend large sums of money to secure votes, and he also asserts that the voters' lists are frequently incorrectly prepared. He suggests as a remedy for these abuses that rate-payers' associations should be formed in all large towns in order to keep watch over the work of municipal members. He urges that public opinion should influence Government to widen the field of selection by amending the rules so as to allow municipal and district boards to elect the best men wherever they may be found.

He goes on to suggest the formation of divisional associations to watch the work of members of Legislative Councils, and urges that only those persons who have a good record of work to their credit, or who promise to faithfully represent the public cause, should be elected.

13. Referring to the statement made by Lord Minto in his speech at the East India Association to the effect that Indians should not be appointed to the Executive Councils for the sake of appointing an Indian, but in view of the ability of the candidate for such an appointment, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 2nd May 1912, observes that there are many Indians who are equal to the duties of the highest offices in the gift of the Crown, and he congratulates Lord Morley on his courage in insisting on the appointment of an Indian qua Indian to the Law Membership. The editor says that there can be no objection to the application of the principle of appointing Indians to such high posts, if Government always take care to select the best men available. In this connection he notes that the Indian Daily News (Calcutta) suggested that one or two unhappy selections to posts in the Executive Councils could only have been justified on the assumption that Government did not wish that the experiment should succeed, or that it was incapable of selecting the right men. The Indian Daily News is also referred to as having asserted that the Public Service Commission definitely allotted a specified number of appointments in the higher branches of the public service to Indians, and remarked that as this recommendation had not been carried out in a liberal spirit, Lord Morley was right to insist on Indians qua Indians being appointed to the Executive Councils.

Indians in the Executive Councils.

ADVOCATE, 2nd May 1912

14. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 25th April 1912, expresses apprehension of a new danger in the proposal to extend the membership of the Anglo-Indian Defence Association and to widen its scope of operations, so as to establish a strong and united political organization to represent the non-official European community. The editor states that from the time of the Ilbert Bill agitation the association has always proved itself inimical to Indian interests, and he expresses the opinion that the infusion of new life into the body by the appointment of a whole-time secretary in Calcutta and the opening of a branch or agency in London will seriously affect Indian aspirations. He quotes some passages from a recent speech of the chairman of the association in which the speaker attacked the Indian reform party, and takes exception to the tone used by the chairman towards educated Indians.

The Anglo-Indian Defence Association.

ADVOCATE, 25th April 1912.

15. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 30th April 1912 remarks that the Anglo-Indian Defence Association has not changed its attitude of opposition to Indian aspirations, and expresses apprehension that the recent activity of the association and the opening of a branch at London is calculated to injure Indian interests.

The Anglo-Indian Defence Association.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 30th April 1912.

16. Referring to Mr. Montague's speech during the debate on the second reading of the Government of India Bill in the House of Commons, the Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 3rd May), says that the appointment of three Muhammadan members in the Executive Councils and the residence of the Governor of Bengal for a certain period at Dacca cannot be regarded as sufficient safeguards for the protection of the interests of the Muhammadans, and he urges that special steps should be taken in the matter. The editor takes exception to Mr. Montague's statement that the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal had no connection with Muhammadans in other parts of India, and says that it is well known that Muhammadans all over the world are strongly united, and their only fault is that they are poor and helpless and loyal to the British Government.

Mr. Montague and the Muhammadans.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th April 1912.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

Nil.

(b)—Police.

LEADER, 30th April 1912.

Assistant and deputy superintendents of police.

17. Referring to the statement of the Under Secretary of State for India that by regulation assistant superintendents of police must be of European descent, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 30th April 1912, says that the existence of that regulation is a standing violation of the principle of racial equality guaranteed by Act of Parliament and the Proclamation of the Sovereign. The editor remarks that, though in practice many posts must continue to be filled by Europeans, there ought to be no bar sinister of racial disability. He says that deputy superintendents have a grievance at present that in the matter of promotion they do not receive the same measure of justice or the same encouragement as assistant superintendents, and suggests that Government should abolish the distinction and make them all assistant superintendents.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

Nil.

(e)—Education.

EDUCATIONAL MAGAZINE, February and March 1912.

The Dacca University scheme.

18. The Educational Magazine (Ghazipur), for the months of February and March 1912 (received on the 2nd May), lends its support to the Dacca University scheme, and asserts that the Bengali opposition to it is actuated by selfishness.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 24th April 1912.

The need for the diffusion of education among the Indian masses.

19. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 24th April 1912 (received on the 2nd May), publishes an article entitled "Education and society" contributed by Pandit Ramavatar Pande, M.A., in which he points out that the Hindu community cannot make any real progress until its leaders discard all superstitious ideas, and take steps for the diffusion of education among the masses. He says that the dignity of manual labour should be impressed upon their minds, and healthy morality encouraged among them. He points out that one hundred crores of rupees must be raised from the wealthier classes to combat the evils of ignorance in the country.

ADVOCATE, 28th April 1912.

Hindu religious funds and education.

20. In the course of an article on the proceedings of the Conjeeveram Parishad, the Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th April 1912, remarks that a great deal of good could be done to the cause of education in India, if the surplus funds of temples could be diverted to the promotion of education and culture. The editor observes that, apart from any other advantages, the exchange of views brought about by conferences like the one held at Conjeeveram is likely to lead to the growth of a spirit of toleration and a better understanding of each other.

OUDH AKHBAR, 1st May 1912.

Mass education.

21. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912, deplores the opposition which many people raise to extending popular education, and urges that technical and industrial education should be imparted to the masses in order to enable them to earn a living. The editor remarks that all other nations are making great progress in civilization and he expresses apprehension that India will be left far behind if her masses are not educated.

ADVOCATE, 2nd May 1912.

Sectarian universities in India.

22. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 2nd May 1912, reviews Sir Andrew Fraser's article on "Sectarian universities in India" in the April number of the Nineteenth Centurg and After (London), and remarks that much of the criticisms which he has levelled against the proposed universities shows that he has failed to recognize the important fact that the movement gives expression to the growing demand for education on national lines. The editor says that there is a strong feeling among thoughtful Indians in favour of establishing independent educational institutions, which, while supplementing State efforts, will supply the deficiencies of the present system, and adapt them to India's particular conditions and requirements. He states that Sir Andrew Fraser's views on the subject of religious education deserve the serious consideration of Government and of the public, and he expresses disagreement with Sir Andrew Fraser's reasoning that while religious education given in the proposed universities would be injurious, the same religious education should be imparted in colleges.

The editor says that critics who complain of the absence of any moral or religious basis in State education in India, and attribute the growing lack of discipline to irreverence are mistaken, and he asserts that the growth of tendencies unfavourable to discipline is not due to lack of religious instruction but to other causes.

In conclusion he observes that no radical change in the methods hitherto adopted by Government with regard to religious education is called for.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

23. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 24th April 1912 (received on the 29th April), refers to the intention to make a fresh issue of the new coins bearing the effigy of the King-Emperor and asks Government to have the inscription of the value of the coin entered on it in Hindi character also and thereby earn the gratitude of the Hindus similarly to the way in which it earned that of the Muhammadans by withdrawing the coins of 1911 because they were said to contain the likeness of a pig.

ARYA MITRA, 24th April 1912.

The new coinage.

24. The Musâfir (Agra), of the 26th April 1912, says that though Hindus form 86 per cent. of the population in the province about one-fourth of them belong to the depressed classes. The editor points out that the Christian missions are bestowing their special attention to these classes, and that they are also being brought under the insidious influences of the Muslim preachers. He says that if Hindus want to keep within the fold of their religion the sixty millions of the depressed classes of India, they should give them more social privileges, engage teachers to convert them and spread education among their children.

MUSAFIR, 26th April 1912.

The depressed classes in the United Provinces.

25. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th April 1912, invites the attention of the district and higher authorities to the deplorable condition of the finances of certain estates in the district of Bijnor, and suggests that they should be brought under the management of the Court of Wards. The editor mentions the names of Kunwar Tej Bal Bikram Singh, Mufti Tasadduq Husain, and others.

SAHIFA, 26th April 1912.

The Court of Wards and certain estates in the district of Bijnor.

26. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th April 1912, says that the order that alterations be made in the book named the Khwab-o-Khyal is not sufficient, and it urges that the book should be wholly excluded from all courses, and that any copies of it that may be found should be destroyed. The editor strongly condemns the book, and says that it is a standing insult to the loyalty of the Muslim community. He points out that the book is written by a Hindu who cannot be expected to be a master of the Urdu language, and suggests that it should be replaced by a book written by a Muhammadan.

SAHIFA, 26th April 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khyal.

27. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th April 1912, says that the post of a naib-tahsildar carries as much respectability and responsibility as that of an excise inspector or sub-inspector of police, and suggests that naib-tahsildars should be also exempted from the operations of the Arms Act.

SAHIFA, 26th April 1912.

Exemption of naib-tahsildars from the operations of the Arms Act.

28. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 29th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer refers to the articles which appeared in the Hindustani and Mashriq (Gorakhpur) (vide Selections Nos. 16 of 1912, paragraph 37, and 17 of 1912, paragraph 20) on plague inoculation in Gorakhpur, and remarks that the allegations made in the Hindustani were not exaggerated. He says that if the editor of the Mashriq had taken the trouble to study the record of the case, he would have realised that the statements made by the writer in the Hindustani were not directed by any animus against the local police but were a narration of the true

HINDUSTANI, 29th April 1912.

Plague inoculation in Gorakhpur.

facts. He goes on to say that the Mashriq omitted to mention that the chaprasi had been awarded compensation of Rs. 10, and that the inoculating doctor, Pandit Madan Lal Atri, was reverted to his substantive appointment.

LEADER, 1st May 1912.

The Titanic disaster: an appeal to Indians.

29. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 1st May 1912, has the following :—

"THE TITANIC DISASTER: AN APPEAL TO INDIANS.

SIR,—The Titanic disaster must make the whole world kin. The spirit of sacrifice shown by European Seetas to die with their husbands rather than to save themselves, and the true chivalry of European gentlemen to save the women at the sacrifice of their own lives, have eclipsed the bravery of 'Balaclava charge,' the contempt of death shown by the Japanese in the Russo-Japanese war and even the glory of Rajput ladies.

I appeal to all my countrymen, rich and poor, to start funds for the relief of the sufferers of the disaster all over the country, and to subscribe according to their means.

I subscribe Rs. 25 to the fund.

LALTA PD. JOHRI,
Munsif, Khurja."

April 27.

LEADER, 2nd May 1912.

Civil assistant surgeons.

30. Referring to the memorial submitted by the civil assistant surgeons in the United Provinces to the Inspector General of Civil Hospitals, the Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912, contrasts the prospects of the military and civil assistant surgeons, and suggests that more civil surgeoncies should be thrown open to the latter, who possess higher qualifications.

The editor says that the conditions of service of the civil assistant surgeons in the junior grades are deplorable, and expresses the hope that their prospects will be improved. He objects to periodical examinations, which, he says, should only be inflicted on young men, and suggests that there should be other tests besides examinations to find out whether an assistant surgeon has kept up his professional knowledge or not.

He urges that assistant surgeons should be treated more courteously by civil surgeons, and suggests that Government should issue a circular to this effect.

In conclusion he expresses the hope that the very moderate and reasonable demands of the civil assistant surgeons will receive the sympathetic consideration of Government, and says that public interests will suffer if the assistant surgeons as a body are discontented. He reminds Government that the present policy is opposed to the expressed views of the Secretary of State for India, who wished more Indians to occupy responsible posts in the State medical department.

LEADER, 2nd May 1912.

The Nicholson Committee.

31. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912, expresses regret that a competent Indian representative has not been associated with the committee to be presided over by Sir William Nicholson, particularly in view of the fact that the enquiry is to be so comprehensive, and the hope is expressed that the committee will give due consideration to Indian interests so that its conclusions may impress the Indian people as just and equitable. The editor disapproves of the intention to keep the report of the committee secret, and contends that, though part of the enquiry may deal with matters that should be kept secret, most of the report should be published. He urges the impossibility of offering informed criticism on a secret report, as an additional reason for appointing at least one Indian member on the committee.

ADVOCATE, 2nd May 1912.

Journalistic enterprise at Delhi.

32. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 2nd May 1912, states that the weekly Comrade and a new Urdu Muslim daily to be named the Hamdard will shortly be published from Delhi and the new capital will have two Anglo-Indian dailies in the Morning Post and the Pioneer, and he expresses surprise at the lack of enterprise on the part of the Hindus and the Congress party in the matter. The editor says that it will be a great pity if Anglo-Indian and Muslim League politics find means of expression at the head quarters of the Government of India while the most important of all non-official bodies, the Congress, remains unrepresented in the new capital. He suggests that a company should be floated to run three daily newspapers, one in English, one in Urdu and one in Hindi, on Congress lines and that a residential club be built at the same time for unofficial members of Council and others.

33. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 25th April 1912, refers to the statement published by Government to the effect that the experiment of publishing the Council proceedings in vernacular did not promise much success, and expresses agreement that Government cannot continue for an indefinite period to publish the proceedings in vernacular when these are not wanted by the people. At the same time the editor contends that it is not to be concluded from this that no one but the English-knowing public cares to read the proceedings, and he states that only a few days ago an Urdu-knowing councillor was heard to say that but for the Hindustani he would not know what took place at the meetings.

ADVOCATE, 25th April 1912.

Publication of Council proceedings in vernacular.

The editor suggests that in case the experiment is to be continued the proceedings should be published more promptly instead of some weeks after the council meetings.

34. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912, remarks that it has always been the ambition of Indians to take a greater share in the administration of their country, and that they have always been encouraged in this desire by their rulers. The editor refers to the speech of Sir William Plowden suggesting that Indians should be given an opportunity to distinguish themselves in the police and military services, and expresses regret that Indians have not yet been appointed to higher posts in the police and the army. He says that there are other branches of the public service also in which high appointments have not yet been opened to Indians, and he urges that the promises made by the rulers from time to time should now be fulfilled, and that no consideration of caste or creed should be allowed to stand in the way of appointing really able Indians to the highest administrative appointments in the country.

OUDH AKHBAR, 1st May 1912.

Indians in the public service.

V.—Legislation.

35. The Educational Magazine (Ghazipur), for the months of February and March 1912 (received on the 2nd May), expresses opposition to Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill, on the ground that the people have no desire for education and that a little education is dangerous. The editor says that the only result of elementary education would be that people would leave their hereditary occupations, and he points out that Mr. Gokhale's scheme would cost a very large sum which the Indian exchequer could not afford to spend.

EDUCATIONAL MAGAZINE, February and March 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

He says that when Government itself devotes so much attention to elementary as well as to higher education it was needless to introduce such a bill and waste the time of the Council, and he expresses gratification at its rejection.

36. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 26th April 1912, reproduces without any comment the article on the proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law published in the Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 9th April 1912 (vide Selections No. 15 of 1912, paragraph 44).

SAHIFA, 26th April 1912.

Proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law.

37. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 28th April 1912, referring to the debate on the second reading of the Government of India Bill in the House of Commons, expresses appreciation of the declaration by the Hon'ble Mr. Montague that the British in India are to impartially rule the country, and points out that the changes have been accepted by the Muhammadans of East Bengal. The editor also expresses approval of the views of Mr. Montague regarding popular control and provincial autonomy.

ADVOCATE, 28th April 1912.

The Government of India Bill.

He expresses surprise at the unfriendly comments made by the Daily News (London) on the debate, and observes that the best way to remedy the inequality in treatment between the United Provinces and the Province of Behar and Orissa is to grant to the former an Executive Council rather than deny the same to the latter. He says that the people of the United Provinces will wait rather than complain against their neighbouring province being given the council form of government. He takes exception to the remarks of the Daily News about the backwardness of the Central Provinces, and contends that at any rate the Mahratti-speaking section of the people are sufficiently advanced to have a legislative council, and he suggests that it is apparently in the interests of the planters that the Daily News would like to give a legislative council to Assam. He concludes with the remark that the comments made by the Daily News show an illiberal spirit, and he expresses the hope that this may prove to be only a passing phase of the opinions of that liberal organ.

VI.—Railway.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th April 1912.

38. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 3rd May), complains of thefts from parcels committed by railway employés during transhipment, and expresses the hope that the representation made on the subject by the Upper India Chamber of Commerce to the President of the Railway Board will receive favourable consideration. The editor expresses agreement with the suggestion of the Leader (Allahabad) that the present risk-note forms should be amended, so as to increase the responsibility of the railways.

Railway thefts.

In conclusion he suggests that a commission should be appointed to collect evidence from the trading public as to the actual extent of thefts by the staff of the railway.

ABHYUDAYA, 25th April 1912.

39. One Gaya Prasad Pande, writing in the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 25th April 1912 (received on the 29th April), points out that the third class passengers' hall at the Mankapur junction station on the Bengal and North-Western Railway line is very small, and can scarcely accommodate forty or fifty passengers, although thousands of pilgrims gather there on their way to Ajodhya. The editor suggests that the Bengal and North-Western Railway administration should construct a much bigger hall in order to give passengers protection from the inclemencies of the weather.

The third class passengers' hall at the Mankapur junction railway station.

LEADER, 30th April 1912.

40. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 30th April 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer invites the attention of the public and the Government to the differential treatment accorded to Indians on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway in the matter of emoluments, free passes, uniforms and punishments. He complains that Europeans and Eurasians always get better treatment in all these matters, and suggests that some honourable member should take up the cause of the Indian employés in the Supreme Council.

Grievances of the Indian employes on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

VII.—Post Office.

AL MUSHIR, 25th April 1912.

41. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 25th April 1912, protests against the levying of a fee of one anna for enquiries into lost or misdelivered value payable parcels. The editor complains that whenever postmen find any difficulty in tracing the addressee of any parcel, it is kept in deposit and afterwards returned to the sender. He asserts that these parcels are sometimes kept for a very long time before being returned to the original sender, and that in some cases, though the money is realized at once by the postmen it is only handed over to the post office after a considerable time, after being utilized by the postmen for their private purposes.

Enquiry fee for value payable parcels.

In conclusion he contends that it is the duty of the post office to deliver parcels to the right persons and that it is iniquitous to expect the public to pay for the institution of enquiries owing to the failure of postal employés to discharge their duties properly.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 25th April 1912.

42. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 25th April 1912, protests against the levying of a fee of one anna for any enquiry about a lost or misdelivered value payable parcel. The editor says that the provision that the fee would be returned in case the complaint is found to be true does not affect the grievance, and he expresses apprehension that nearly all fees are likely to be forfeited on the excuse that the complaints were groundless.

Enquiry fee for value payable parcels.

VIII.—Native Societies and Religious and Social Matters.

ARYA MITRA, 24th April 1912.

43. The Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 24th April 1912 (received on the 29th April), lends its support to the memorial submitted by the Hindu residents of Agra to His Excellency the Viceroy praying that they may not be required to take out a licence under the Police

The Gau Charan fair at Agra.

Act for the holding of the annual Gau Charan fair at Agra, and expresses the hope that His Excellency will be pleased to grant the request contained in the memorial. The editor says that no licences are taken out for the holding of annual fairs like the Ramlila and Muharram, and that no licence should therefore be necessary for the holding of the Gau Charan fair, which is also an annual institution.

Agarwal caste dispute at Benares.

44. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 26th April 1912, publishes a letter from its Benares correspondent in which the writer states that Babu Moti Chand and certain other outcasted Agarwals have been purified, and admitted into a newly formed purist section on payment of a fine of Rs. 2 each. The correspondent attributes the present move to Babu Baleshwar Prasad, who himself is said to have paid the fine of Rs. 2. He goes on to say that through the influence of Babu Baleshwar Prasad several other people have either paid or have allowed their names to be put on the list of purified ones, and he expresses surprise at the anxiety of Babu Baleshwar Prasad to be re-admitted into a caste from which he was never outcasted. He adds that Babu Baleshwar Prasad has in his introduction to the Sant Bani Sevak expressed his disapproval of caste in unmistakeable terms and he therefore owes an explanation to the public for what he has done.

ZUL QARNAIN, 28th April 1912.

Alleged religious intolerance in Sikandrabad.

45. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 3rd May), refers to a report in the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore) to the effect that the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate of Sikandrabad (Deccan) fined some Muhammadans for holding a maulud sharif within a mosque, and remarks that such acts of interference in religious ceremonies are much resented by Indians, and constitute a distinct violation of their right of religious freedom. The editor invites the attention of the Government of India to the matter.

TAFRIH, 28th April 1912.

Alleged religious intolerance in Sikandrabad.

46. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 28th April 1912, refers to the fines imposed on certain Muhammadans by the Assistant Cantonment magistrate of Sikandrabad (Deccan) for holding a maulud sharif in a mosque, and remarks that Government should surely disapprove of such an unjust interference in the religious liberties of its subjects. The editor expresses the hope that the higher authorities will reverse the order of the cantonment magistrate.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 24th April 1912.

The place of social reforms in India.

47. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 24th April 1912 (received on the 2nd May), points out that for the regeneration of the country social reform is as necessary as political reform, and deplores that the leaders of the country pay little or no attention to the eradication of social evils from society. Discussing the causes of this indifference the editor remarks that as the carrying out of social reforms involves greater risks and subjects the social reformer to the ridicule of the public, educated persons consider it more advisable to criticise Government measures than to attack the social defects of their fellow-countrymen.

QAISER-I-HIND, 25th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

48. The Qaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 25th April 1912, contains a contributed article in which the writer observes that the present strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans are the result of the mischievous activities of a certain section of the press, and he remarks that the introduction of the system of separate electorates has nothing to do with this tension of feeling. He says that cow-killing is no doubt objected to by Hindus, but that Muhammadans are not to be blamed for it, as beef is mostly consumed by Europeans, and it is only the poorer Muhammadans who kill cows instead of goats or sheep at religious festivals.

QAISER-I-HIND, 25th April 1912.

Cow-killing in Ajodhya.

49. The Qaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 25th April 1912, expresses doubt as to whether the enquiry into the question of cow-killing in Ajodhya has been successfully disposed of, and observes that the evidence adduced in the Muhammadan memorial to the Commissioner of Fyzabad conclusively proves that the customs of cow-killing and sale of beef have been prevalent in Ajodhya for a long time. The editor says that if, in spite of all this, the Muhammadans are restricted in the proper discharge of their religious duties, they can only conclude that their case was not presented properly on account of their poverty, and that the question of cow-killing had now assumed a new aspect owing to the proposed Hindu memorial to the King-Emperor, and that the precedent of Ajodhya would, in the near future, be followed in Muttra and Kashi.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,

NAINI TAL: The 3rd May 1912. } Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, United Provinces.

PRINTED BY J. R. MIDDLETON AT THE GOVT. CAMP BRANCH PRESS, NAINI TAL.

CONFIDENTIAL.] (631) No. 19 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 10th May 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The Italian-Turkish war 441
2. The Italian-Turkish war 441
3. The Italian-Turkish war 441
4. The Italian-Turkish war 441
5. The Italian-Turkish war 441
6. The Italian-Turkish war 441
7. The Italian-Turkish war 442
8. The situation in Persia and Tripoli ... 442

(b)—Home:

9. The United Provinces Provincial Conference 442
10. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 442
11. Maulana Shibli Nomani of the Nadwat-ul-Ulma and politics 442
12. The late Mr. Stead and the Arya Samaj ... 442
13. Muslim leaders and the progress of the Muslim community 443
14. Muslim leaders and the progress of the Muslim community 443
15. The transfer of the Capital to Delhi ... 443

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

16. Alleged oppression of Arya Samajists in Dholpur State 444

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

17. The Hoti Mardan case 444

Page.

18. The Hoti Mardan case 444
19. Indian Judges in the Bombay High Court 444
20. The Basti judgeship 444

(b)—Police:

21. Alleged police oppression 444

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

22. The Jalesar Municipality 445
23. The Jalesar Municipality 445
24. The proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai park at Allahabad 445
25. The Allahabad civil station 445
26. The water-supply at Allahabad ... 446
27. Municipal commissioners and their relatives 446
28. District boards 446

(e)—Education:

29. The Kanya Gurukula and the Hathras Arya Samaj 446
30. Need for religious instruction in schools in India 446
31. Objectionable books on Indian history ... 447
32. Compulsory elementary education ... 447
33. The Lucknow Medical College ... 447
34. Agricultural education in Lucknow ... 447
35. Technical and industrial school, Agra ... 447
36. Election of Fellows by graduates of the Allahabad University 447

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

37. The cultivation of poppy in India ... 448
38. Industrial development of the United Provinces under Sir John Hewett ... 448

		Page.
39.	Acquisition of land in Delhi	448
40.	The Nicholson Committee	448
41.	The Nicholson Committee	448
42.	Civil assistant surgeons	449
43.	The Khwab-o-Khiyal	449
44.	The Titanic disaster	449
45.	High rate of mortality in the United Provinces	449
46.	The Almora district gazetteer... ...	449
47.	The cotton industry and the excise duty...	450
48.	The Famine Insurance Fund	450
49.	The prison system of India	450

V.—LEGISLATION.

50.	The Government of India Bill ...	450
51.	The Sindh Muhammadan Education Cess Bill	450
52.	Proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law	451

VI.—RAILWAY.

53.	Complaint about the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway	451

VII.—POST OFFICE.

54.	Grievances of postal employés ...	451
55.	Enquiry fee for value payable parcels ...	451
56.	Enquiry fee for value payable parcels ...	451

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

57.	The problem of universal brotherhood in India	451
58.	Alleged religious intolerance in Sikandrabad	452
59.	The cow-protection movement ...	452
60.	The solar eclipse at Delhi	452
61.	The emancipation of women	452
62.	The pardah system amongst the Muhammadans	452

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st May 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian	Lucknow ...	Quarterly ...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	300 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 „
4	Hindustán Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ghulam Muhammad	700 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P.	450 „
11	Theosophy in India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehangir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Ram Deva; B.A., Arya; 31 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. / Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintamani; Madrasi; 30 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Madho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European; 28 ... / Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	1,500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adíb	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	150 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudagar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Nath Vaishya; 36 ...	200 „
†20	Álamgir	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal, Vaishya; 41	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Áwarif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40...	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kasim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. / Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nazir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A. ... ... / Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ram Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ánand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Ram Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43 ...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam	200 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumar; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsar	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zamin; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulla, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29 ...	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 „
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 „
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shah Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 „
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A., Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Rám Dayal Vidyarthi; 35	709 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 „
49	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 „
50	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 „
51	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 „
†52	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Ilahi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 „
53	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 „
54	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
55	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathura Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 „
56	Vyápari and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 „
57	All-India Shiah Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubarak Ali; 32	600 „
58	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
59	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 „
60	Al Khalil	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 copies.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktada Khan; 32 ...	800 „
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Áwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 „
66	Dabdaba-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 „
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 „
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 „
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 „
71	Ittihad	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 „
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 „
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kamta Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 „
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 „
76	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandít Tara Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,800 „
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
79	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nizam-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qazi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 „
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	200 „
84	Sahifa	Bijnor	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	350 „
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahur Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 „
86	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	350 „
87	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 „
88	Tajir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 35	328 „
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Sajjad Husain; Shaikh; 33	400 „
90	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 „
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 „
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 „
93	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 „
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 „
	Arabic-Urdu.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaiman; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	Hindi.
96	Almora Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini... ...	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Chaudhari; Brahman; 56	100 „
98	Bharatodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 „
99	Bharát Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 „
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	130 „
101	Bráhman Samáchár... ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Narayan Prasad; Brahman... ...	405 „
102	Bráhman Sarvasva	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhimsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 „
103	Dehati	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Srivastava; Kayasth ...	600 „
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 „
*105	Dharm Kusumakar	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasad Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 „
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girja Dutt; Naithani Brahman; 36.	600 „
107	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 „
†108	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	...	300 „
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26	650 „
†110	Jain Nari Hitkari	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasad; Jain; 29	1,000 „
111	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 „
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Ram Prasad Misra; 22	1,000 „
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Nath Yogishwar; 37... ...	450 „
114	Kányakubj Hitkári	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lal Misra; 46 ...	1,500 „
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Balmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 „
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 „
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya; 27 ...	1,600 „
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 „
†119	Naraini or The Vedanta Patrika	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Ramnandhan; Kayasth; 32 ...	325 „
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shastri; 37	1,000 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	200 „
123	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
124	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Narayan Dube	700 „
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 „
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahabir Prasad Dwivedi; 46 ...	4,000 „
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 „
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasoda Devi; 31	3,000 „
*129	Sudhanidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannath Prasád Shukla; Vaidye; 36.	500 „
130	Swadesh Bándhavá	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rajput; 45	600 „
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35.	1,000 „
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 „
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 „
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swami Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 „
135	Bharat Dharm Neta	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 „
†136	Kam Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Baba Bhagwan Das Udasi; 46 ...	500 „
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 „
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 „
139	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 „
140	Ánand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 „
141	Árya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 „
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 „
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banarsi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ...	1,000 „
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Babu Bansi Dhar
				Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 „
†145	Mahila Hitkarak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Srimati Vidyavati Devi	250 „
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 „
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do.	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 „
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28 ...	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI
149	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 30th April 1912 (received on the 8th May), refers to the reported death of Enver Bey, and remarks that the circulation by the Italians of the false news of the death of Enver Bey, when he is actually in the enjoyment of perfect health, shows great moral depravity on their part. AL BASHIR, 30th April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor expresses surprise that such a cowardly and mean nation as the Italians should desire to rule over the Muhammadans.

2. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 30th April 1912 (received on the 8th May), says that the Turkish government is perfectly justified in closing the Dardanelles and in refusing passage to the merchant vessels of the different European Powers. AL BASHIR, 30th April 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor remarks that the Italians are responsible for the closing of the Dardanelles, and that they should be required to give compensation for the loss resulting to the several European countries concerned, and he suggests that, if the European Powers wish the Dardanelles to be opened, they should first guarantee that the Italians will not bombard the coast of Turkey from their fleet guns.

3. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 4th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer says that Turkey was entirely mistaken in originally trusting the friendship of Germany and in confiding in the sense of justice of the European Powers, and he asks Muhammadans to take a lesson from the neutral attitude taken up by the Powers with regard to the Italian aggression in Tripoli. He suggests that in all national movements Muhammadans should always rely on their single and unaided efforts and should never be led away by false hopes of outside support. He goes on to say that the war has served to strengthen the bonds of unity and mutual interest between the different sections of the Islamic world, and he urges Muhammadans to encourage amity and friendliness between Muslim countries. MUSLIM GAZETTE, 1st May 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

He goes on to remark that Muhammadans should be prepared for all contingencies, and even when confronted by insurmountable difficulties they should not lose heart, but should strive on courageously and present an united front to their enemies.

4. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th May 1912, expresses gratification at the timely action of the Government of India in preventing the Italians from blockading the port of Jeddah, where Indian pilgrims for Mecca generally land. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th May 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor takes grave exception to the suggestion alleged to have been made by the Times (London) for increasing the strength of the army in Egypt, and remarks that the present moment when the European Powers are endeavouring to bring about peace between Turkey and Italy, is a most inopportune one to revive the Egyptian question. He asserts that the British Government is the only honest and humane government amongst the European Powers, and entertains the hope that it will pay no attention to the irresponsible writings of the Times.

5. Referring to the loss caused to trade consequent on the closing of the Dardanelles, the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, says that Turkey was perfectly justified in refusing to open the straits unless the Powers made themselves responsible for the safety of them. The editor expresses doubt as to whether Italy would consent to such an arrangement, and remarks that, if the Powers were to give the desired assurance to Turkey, peace might be considered as being within sight. He also expresses approval of the suggestion that a temporary armistice should be proclaimed in order to facilitate a thoughtful consideration of the situation by the Powers. OUDH AKHBAR, 5th May 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

6. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, remarks that the majority of the European Powers have been inclined to favour Italy at the expense of Tripoli, and the editor expresses regret that the Powers should have offended Turkey by communicating to her the Italian terms of peace. OUDH AKHBAR, 5th May 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor points out that Turkey cannot be coerced by means of threats into ceding Tripoli to Italy, more particularly at a time when the Italian army in Tripoli is sustaining frequent reverses at the hands of the Turks and Arabs, and suggests that the Powers should bring pressure to bear on Italy to evacuate Tripoli, and withdraw her fleet from the Red Sea.

OUDH AKHBAR, 7th May 1912.

7. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 7th May 1912, after condemning in general terms the aggressive action of Italy with regard to Tripoli, commends the energy and zeal shown by the Arabs and the Turks in defending their country against the Italians. The editor expresses apprehension that the closing of the Dardanelles may lead to some international complication, and he says that Italy alone is responsible for the closing of the straits, and that she should be required to make good any loss suffered by other Powers.

The Italian-Turkish war.

OUDH AKHBAR, 8th May 1912.

8. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 8th May 1912, refers to the blue book on Persian affairs issued by the Foreign Office, and expresses gratification that the British Government was instrumental in saving the Persian independence.

The situation in Persia and Tripoli.

The editor refers to the Italian-Turkish war and says that no proposals for peace should be entertained which provide for the annexation of Tripoli, seeing that Italy has been unable to achieve any military success in her present campaign against the Turks. He reviews events of recent years in Tunis, Algiers and Morocco, and says that England is the only Power which is friendly to Muhammadans, and he urges Government to improve its relations with the Muhammadan kingdoms of Persia, Morocco and Turkey. He reminds the Muhammadans that it was owing to the intervention of the British Government that Persia did not fall into the hand of the Russians, and he urges them to continue loyal to the Government which has saved the independence of their co-religionists in Persia.

(b)—Home.

MARYADA, April 1912.

9. The Maryada (Allahabad), for April 1912 (received on the 10th May), discussing the proceedings of the last United Provinces Provincial Conference remarks that the poor attendance at the session shows that the inhabitants of these provinces do not realize the importance of the conference, and urges the need for taking a livelier interest in its proceedings in order to keep abreast of their fellow-countrymen in other provinces. The editor expresses agreement with the views and sentiments contained in the presidential address, but he recommends that the conference should carry on its work throughout the year instead of confining itself to the passing of resolutions in the course of a three-days' sitting at some centre.

The United Provinces Provincial Conference.

RAHBAR, 28th April 1912.

10. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 8th May), attributes the present strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans to the policy of Government of attaching special political importance to the Muhammadans and giving them preferential treatment. The editor says that if Government desire peace between the two communities, it should grant rights and privileges in proportion to the numbers of each community, and should give up the policy of special treatment.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

KAISER-I-HIND, 2nd May 1912.

11. The Kaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 6th May), expresses objection to the action of Maulana Shibli Nomani in taking part in politics when he is honorary secretary to the Nadwat-ul-Ulma, and suggests that this departure of the Maulana from his sphere of work is likely to retard the progress of the institution under his control and supervision.

Maulana Shibli Nomani of the Nadwat-ul-Ulma and politics.

The editor urges Maulana Shibli to confine his energies to the improvement of the educational condition of his co-religionists, and not to concern himself with the politics of the country.

MUSAFIR, 3rd May 1912.

12. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 3rd May 1912 (received on the 8th May), deplores the death of Mr. W. T. Stead in the wreck of the Titanic, and describes it as a great loss to Indians. The editor reminds his readers that when the Arya Samaj was being looked upon with distrust in all quarters it was Mr. Stead who raised his voice in its defence, and he expresses the hope that Indians may have other sympathetic and just champions like him.

The late Mr. Stead and the Arya Samaj.

13. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 4th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer describes the progress made by the Hindus and contrasts it with the deplorable condition of the Muhammadans.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 1st May 1912.

Muslim leaders and the progress of the Muslim community.

He observes that, while Muhammadans have been clamouring for Muslim schools and colleges, Hindus have made great progress in education with the help of non-Hindu institutions. He remarks that even in the few Muslim colleges that exist the Muhammadans have handed over all control to Government, and that such institutions, though they be raised to the status of a Muslim University, can never be national.

The editor suggests that the Muslim League, in view of its present policy, might well be called the English League, seeing that, instead of joining hands with Hindus on questions of common interest and looking at things from the Muslim point of view, the League has always been identifying itself with British interests.

He attributes the degenerate condition of the Muslim community to the selfishness of their leaders, and remarks that a community the leaders of which are always working for themselves, can never make any real progress. He appeals to his co-religionists to follow only such leaders as are true, honest and unselfish workers, and who do not fear but rather court public criticism. He says that Muslim history abounds with instances of leaders who were always ready to listen to the remonstrances of their humblest followers and who never feared to sacrifice their lives in a righteous cause.

14. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, refers to the article that appeared in the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow) on the Muslim League and the political activities of the Muhammadans (vide para. supra), in which the writer attributed the present state of affairs in the Muhammadan community to the want of proper leaders, and pointed out that Nawab Mushtaq Husain and the Right Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali were the only two Muhammadan leaders who enjoyed the fullest confidence of their co-religionists.

ADVOCATE, 5th May 1912.

Muslim leaders and the progress of the Muslim community.

The editor remarks that there is no doubt that these two gentlemen are the most prominent Muhammadans of the present day and he expresses surprise that the League does not accept their leadership.

15. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th May 1912, refers to the criticisms of the Englishman (Calcutta) regarding the transfer of the Capital to Delhi, and remarks that the agitation seems to resemble the much maligned methods of the Bengal agitator, especially as the Bengal politician as not the only one who seeks the aid of his fellow-citizens of the Empire in securing the abandonment of undesirable administrative measures.

LEADER, 7th May 1912.

The transfer of the Capital to Delhi.

With regard to the agitation which is being engineered by the Englishman the editor writes as follows :—

"So much used to be made in bygone days of the 'settled fact.' Is it permissible for us now to offer the same cold comfort to our contemporary of Calcutta? But is it not, by the way, all this talk about the doom of the British raj, by the transfer of the Capital to Delhi a little overdone? What will the European merchants of the other Indian ports say to it? The raging, tearing antics of the Englishman seem to have thrown even common decency to the winds, leave aside the exercise of a political judgment."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

MUSAFIR, 3rd May 1912.

16. The Musáfir (Agra), of the 3rd May 1912 (received on the 8th May), reports that many of the Arya Samajists of Dholpur were insulted, assaulted and robbed of their property at the incitement of one Dhani Ram, and had to take refuge in British territory in order to save their skins. The editor states that Dhani Ram has since been arrested, but that some Hindu idols are said to have been broken in order to implicate the Arya Samajists. He invites the attention of the British Government to the matter, and urges that it should depute a responsible officer to enquire into the case, and to secure the adequate punishment of the offenders.

Alleged oppression of Arya Samajists in Dholpur State.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

MARYADA, April 1912.

17. The Maryada (Allahabad), for April 1912 (received on the 10th May), refers to the pamphlet issued by the Chief of Hoti Mardan regarding the origin of the recent sensational case against him, and expresses the hope that it will not be too much to ask Government to take adequate notice of the objectionable proceedings of the authorities of the Frontier Province, and to make some reparation to the injured Khan.

The Hoti Mardan case.

BHARAT JIWAN, 29th April 1912.

18. The Bharat Jiwan (Benares), of the 29th April 1912 (received on the 4th May), refers to the pamphlet which the Khan of Hoti Mardan has published in connection with the recent sensational case against him in Bombay, and expresses the hope that Government will make some suitable reparation to the Khan if the account recorded in the pamphlet be true.

The Hoti Mardan case.

LEADER, 3rd May 1912.

19. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd May 1912, lends its support to the memorial of the Bombay Presidency Association for the appointment of more Indians as Judges of the Bombay High Court, and states that with a strong bar there is no justification for the rule laying down that one-third of the Judges should be civilians and one-third barristers. The editor objects to the reservation of a proportion of the judgeships for civilians, and suggests that no distinction should be made between barristers, advocates and vakils. He expresses regret that there are only two Indian Judges in the Bombay High Court, while there are many Indian barristers, advocates and vakils who would fill with credit the office of a High Court Judge, and he urges that Government should recognize the claims of the Indian lawyers of Bombay.

Indian Judges in the Bombay High Court.

LEADER, 7th May 1912.

20. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th May 1912, invites the attention of Government to the telegraphic memorials submitted to the Hon'ble High Court, the District Judge and His Honour the Lieutenant Governor from Basti expressing dissatisfaction at the sudden transfer of Mr. Rose to Shahjahanpur without providing another judge for the district, and states that the grievance of the people seems to be very just and fair. The editor entertains the hope that in the circumstances pointed out in the memorial the Government and the High Court will be pleased to arrange for appointing a judge at Basti, even if it be temporarily.

The Basti judgeship.

(b)—Police.

TAFRIH, 7th May 1912.

21. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 7th May 1912, alleges that illiterate, ignorant, and badly-paid constables generally practise torture in order to extort confessions, and he suggests that Government should increase the pay of police constables, in order that the constabulary service may attract a better class of educated men.

The editor insists that, so long as ignorant constables are employed who cannot properly realize their responsibilities, trained inspectors and sub-inspectors will be helpless in putting a stop to police oppression.

Alleged police oppression.

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

22. A correspondent in the Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 19th April 1912 (received on the 6th May), complains that the members of the municipal board of Jalesar are most of them incapable and selfish, and take very little interest in the administration of the business of the town. He also complains that the list of voters is not properly made up, in that it contains the names of several members of one and the same family, as well as the names of butchers, washermen, weavers and vegetable sellers, while the names of many respectable persons are omitted. He says that the list of voters was prepared by Lala Sham Lal Bohra and Mir Mahmud Ali, both of whom he describes as being unfit to sit on the board. He remarks that now that the public proposes to elect Lala Banarsi Das, B.A., who is a really capable man, and as a result the old commissioners have begun to form cliques so as to prevent his election. (The writer promises to finish the article in some future issue of the paper.)

JAIN GAZETTE, 19th April 1912.

The Jalesar Municipality.

23. In continuation of his previous remarks on the affairs of the Jalesar Municipality a correspondent in the Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 25th April 1912 (received on the 8th May), complains that practically all the municipal work is conducted by the secretary, and that the vice-chairman only signs the papers submitted to him. He says that the vice-chairman is a capable man, but that he is wanting in backbone and is afraid of using his full powers for fear of losing his office. He asserts that the public, and particularly the educated section, decided to elect Lala Banarsi Das to the board, because they thought that, being a graduate and a vakil, his presence would give the necessary moral support to the vice-chairman. He says that the partizans of Bohre Sri Ram, the outgoing municipal member, held a large meeting at the house of Mir Ausaf Ali, at which the municipal secretary was also present, in order to concert measures to prevent the election of Lala Banarsi, Das, and he alleges that some papers were sent for from the municipal office which were brought by a clerk who is a relative of the secretary.

JAIN GAZETTE, 25th April 1912.

The Jalesar Municipality.

24. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 5th May), expresses regret at the rejection of the proposal to construct a park at Garhi-ki-Sarai at Allahabad, and ascribes it to the existence of party feeling among the members of the board. The editor remarks that the citizens themselves should see that their representatives work in the interests of the public, and that they do not form cliques for effecting private purposes. He also suggests that municipal commissioners should always consult their constituents before bringing forward any important motion at meetings of the board.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 1st May 1912.

The proposed Garhi-ki-Sarai park at Allahabad.

25. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, publishes a letter from one Ramdin Vaish, a rate-payer from the city ward of Allahabad, in which he refers to the complaints recently made about defective lighting and the bad state of the roads in the civil station at Allahabad, and reminds the public that the board maintain about forty-eight miles of metalled roads in the civil station for the comfort of a few residents in the civil station, while an additional seven miles is for the bulk of the population of Allahabad. He urges that if the tax-payers in the civil station choose to occupy large compounds which necessitate the construction of so many roads, they should pay more, so as to enable the municipality to maintain the roads and to light them properly. He enquires why those who live in the city, for whose convenience the board spent very little, should be made to add to their inconveniences by providing more money for making and mending civil station roads. He invites attention to the dirty condition of the streets in the city, and remarks that, while one set of the tax-payers suffer all the inconveniences, the other set enjoys all sorts of comforts, while it pays less than the other. He commends the suggestion made by "An old resident" in the Pioneer (Allahabad) that the civil station should be taken away from the municipality and that Government should look after it itself, and says that no one would be more relieved than the residents of the city if the expenses of the civil station were made a charge on the residents of that quarter.

ADVOCATE, 5th May 1912.

The Allahabad civil station.

LEADER, 8th May 1912.

The water-supply at Allahabad.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912, publishes a communication from the chairman of the municipal board about the present arrangements for water-supply at Allahabad, and suggests that it would be a great convenience to the people if it could be arranged that the supply could be kept up between the hours of 12 and 3 o'clock, the hottest part of the day.

The editor also invites the attention of the Municipal Health department to the bad state of the drains in the Chauk and Yahiapur.

ADVOCATE, 5th May 1912.

Municipal commissioners and their relatives.

27. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, refers to the discussion at a recent meeting of the Madras Municipal Corporation in connection with the employment of the relations of commissioners in the service of the corporation, and expresses agreement with Mr. Natesan that the practice of employing relatives of municipal commissioners on their recommendation is not at all consistent with the independence, efficiency and discipline which the members of the corporation are expected to maintain. The editor, however, states that he does not consider it at all equitable that the fact of a man being a relation of a commissioner should be a bar to his employment by a municipal board.

HINDUSTANI, 6th May 1912.

District boards.

28. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 6th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer observes that, since the reform of the Legislative Councils, the public has been taking greater interest in the work of municipal and district boards, and expresses regret that the district boards have not the same rights in the matter of electing non-official chairmen as the municipal boards. He invites attention to the fact that the members can do nothing independently of the official chairmen, and suggests that, in order to make the district boards really self-governing bodies, non-official chairmen should be allowed and that more freedom should be given to members.

(e)—Education.

RAHBAR, 28th April 1912.

The Kanya Gurukula and the Hathras Arya Samaj.

29. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 8th May), says that the unsatisfactory condition of the Kanya Gurukula at Hathras is due to the want of foresight on the part of its founder, Pandit Rudra Dat, editor of the Arya Mitra (Agra). The editor remarks that the institution had no real connection with the Arya Samaj and had not received any public support before it was started, and he suggests that Pandit Rudra Dat was actuated by a selfish desire for personal distinction in opening the gurukula on such a weak foundation. He complains of the action of Pandit Tulsi Ram Swami, president of the United Provinces Arya Pritinidhi Sabha, in laying the foundation stone of the Kanya Gurukula, and says that he will be responsible for any misfortune which may befall the girls of this institution. He complains that the Arya Samaj suffers severely owing to the indiscretions of men like Pandits Rudra Dat and Tulsi Ram, and he urges Arya Samajists to appoint more capable representatives.

CENTRAL HINDU COLLEGE MAGAZINE, May 1912.

Need for religious instruction in schools in India.

30. In an article entitled "The three R's or the four" in the Central Hindu College Magazine (Benares), for May 1912, Babu Bhagwan Das, the contributor of the article, urges the need for religious instruction in schools in India, which, he says, would make a proper foundation for elementary education. He says that the knowledge should be of a soul-improving nature, and, in deprecating the risks of partial education, he writes as follows:—

"In a village school in the Benares district twenty-six boys recently passed the middle vernacular examination, four received scholarships from the Education department and are carrying on further study; eight have undertaken further study on their own private resources; fourteen are sitting idle. As a typical instance, one of these idlers declines to help his father in the family agriculture business—'because he has received an education!' The younger brother, who has not 'received an education,' drives the plough all right enough. The father wants to know what to do with his 'educated' son. Very likely he is secretly abetting his son, feeling with him that an education like that deserves a more honourable and distinguished sequel than the plough-share.

We come back to the old couplet :—

"A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep or taste not pyrean spring."

31. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 4th May), protests against the inclusion in the university course of books on Indian history containing misinformed attacks on the Muhammadan religion and rulers, and remarks that such books produce very harmful results on the minds of Muhammadan youths. The editor urges Muhammadans to bring out a book on the Muhammadan period of Indian history, and to ask Government to prescribe the same in schools and colleges. In this connection he suggests that a prize of Rs. 1,000 be offered by the Nadwat-ul-Ulma for the best book on the Muslim period of Indian history.

Objectionable books on Indian history.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 1st May 1912.

32. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 8th May), publishes a long article in which the editor opposes the introduction of compulsory primary education in this country, and points out that the Primary Education Society, which has recently been formed in Benares, is mainly supported by Arya Samajists, who see a good opportunity of destroying the caste system by the spread of elementary education. He urges that what is required most for the regeneration of the country is technical education, and not compulsory elementary education, which is calculated to cause dissatisfaction among the masses.

Compulsory elementary education.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 1st May 1912.

33. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd May 1912, has a contributed article in which the writer states that definite promises about free quarters, furniture, electric fittings and twelve scholarships were given to candidates for admission to the Lucknow Medical College, and complains that none of these promises have been fulfilled. The editor points out that only six scholarships have been awarded and that graduates who had been promised Rs. 16 have been given only Rs. 12. He complains that the present staff is not representative and urges that the best men available in any part of the country should be selected without consideration of class, colour and race. He condemns the proposal to appoint military assistant surgeons to professorships, on the ground that their qualifications are insufficient, and says that only eminent specialists should be appointed.

The Lucknow Medical College.

LEADER, 3rd May 1912.

34. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 6th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains of the absence of facility for elementary education in the science of agriculture in Lucknow. He urges the need for making some arrangements for education in agriculture as the subject is prescribed for candidates going up for the matriculation and school-leaving certificate examinations, and also because most of the students, especially those of the Colvin Institute, belong either to the agricultural or to the landowning classes. He suggests that use could be made of the government gardens at Lucknow, where instruction in gardening is at present given, and that the services of officers of the agricultural department might be requisitioned to start an agricultural school in Lucknow.

Agricultural education in Lucknow.

HINDUSTANI, 6th May 1912.

35. The Darbar (Agra), of the 7th May 1912, complains that industries in Agra are languishing, and suggests the establishment of an industrial and technical school for training the children of the industrial classes.

The editor says that as a result of such a measure the industries of Agra would receive a fresh impetus, production on a large scale would become possible, factories and mills would be erected and the prosperity of the city would greatly increase.

Technical and industrial school, Agra.

DARBAR, 7th May 1912.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th May 1912, expresses gratification that the anomaly in the matter of electing a certain proportion of ordinary Fellows has now been removed, and that the graduates of the Allahabad University have been placed on a level with their confreres of other universities, and the editor expresses the hope that they will not fail to exercise the privilege.

Election of Fellows by graduates of the Allahabad University.

LEADER, 7th May 1912.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

LEADER, 8th May 1912.

The water-supply at Allahabad.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912, publishes a communication from the chairman of the municipal board about the present arrangements for water-supply at Allahabad, and suggests that it would be a great convenience to the people if it could be arranged that the supply could be kept up between the hours of 12 and 3 o'clock, the hottest part of the day.

The editor also invites the attention of the Municipal Health department to the bad state of the drains in the Chauk and Yahiapur.

ADVOCATE, 5th May 1912.

Municipal commissioners and their relatives.

27. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, refers to the discussion at a recent meeting of the Madras Municipal Corporation in connection with the employment of the relations of commissioners in the service of the corporation, and expresses agreement with Mr. Natesan that the practice of employing relatives of municipal commissioners on their recommendation is not at all consistent with the independence, efficiency and discipline which the members of the corporation are expected to maintain. The editor, however, states that he does not consider it at all equitable that the fact of a man being a relation of a commissioner should be a bar to his employment by a municipal board.

HINDUSTANI, 6th May 1912.

District boards.

28. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 6th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer observes that, since the reform of the Legislative Councils, the public has been taking greater interest in the work of municipal and district boards, and expresses regret that the district boards have not the same rights in the matter of electing non-official chairmen as the municipal boards. He invites attention to the fact that the members can do nothing independently of the official chairmen, and suggests that, in order to make the district boards really self-governing bodies, non-official chairmen should be allowed and that more freedom should be given to members.

(c)—Education.

RAHBAR, 28th April 1912.

The Kanya Gurukula and the Hathras Arya Samaj.

29. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 28th April 1912 (received on the 8th May), says that the unsatisfactory condition of the Kanya Gurukula at Hathras is due to the want of foresight on the part of its founder, Pandit Rudra Dat, editor of the Arya Mitra (Agra). The editor remarks that the institution had no real connection with the Arya Samaj and had not received any public support before it was started, and he suggests that Pandit Rudra Dat was actuated by a selfish desire for personal distinction in opening the gurukula on such a weak foundation. He complains of the action of Pandit Tulsi Ram Swami, president of the United Provinces Arya Pritinidhi Sabha, in laying the foundation stone of the Kanya Gurukula, and says that he will be responsible for any misfortune which may befall the girls of this institution. He complains that the Arya Samaj suffers severely owing to the indiscretions of men like Pandits Rudra Dat and Tulsi Ram, and he urges Arya Samajists to appoint more capable representatives.

CENTRAL HINDU COLLEGE MAGAZINE, May 1912.

Need for religious instruction in schools in India.

30. In an article entitled "The three R's or the four" in the Central Hindu College Magazine (Benares), for May 1912, Babu Bhagwan Das, the contributor of the article, urges the need for religious instruction in schools in India, which, he says, would make a proper foundation for elementary education. He says that the knowledge should be of a soul-improving nature, and, in deprecating the risks of partial education, he writes as follows:—

"In a village school in the Benares district twenty-six boys recently passed the middle vernacular examination, four received scholarships from the Education department and are carrying on further study; eight have undertaken further study on their own private resources; fourteen are sitting idle. As a typical instance, one of these idlers declines to help his father in the family agriculture business—'because he has received an education!' The younger brother, who has not 'received an education,' drives the plough all right enough. The father wants to know what to do with his 'educated' son. Very likely he is secretly abetting his son, feeling with him that an education like that deserves a more honourable and distinguished sequel than the plough-share.

We come back to the old couplet :—

"A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep or taste not pyrean spring."

31. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 4th May), protests against the inclusion in the university course of books on Indian history containing misinformed attacks on the Muhammadan religion and rulers, and remarks that such books produce very harmful results on the minds of Muhammadan youths. The editor urges Muhammadans to bring out a book on the Muhammadan period of Indian history, and to ask Government to prescribe the same in schools and colleges. In this connection he suggests that a prize of Rs. 1,000 be offered by the Nadwat-ul-Ulma for the best book on the Muslim period of Indian history.

Objectionable books on Indian history.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 1st May 1912.

32. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 8th May), publishes a long article in which the editor opposes the introduction of compulsory primary education in this country, and points out that the Primary Education Society, which has recently been formed in Benares, is mainly supported by Arya Samajists, who see a good opportunity of destroying the caste system by the spread of elementary education. He urges that what is required most for the regeneration of the country is technical education, and not compulsory elementary education, which is calculated to cause dissatisfaction among the masses.

Compulsory elementary education.

BHARAT DHARM NETA, 1st May 1912.

33. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd May 1912, has a contributed article in which the writer states that definite promises about free quarters, furniture, electric fittings and twelve scholarships were given to candidates for admission to the Lucknow Medical College, and complains that none of these promises have been fulfilled. The editor points out that only six scholarships have been awarded and that graduates who had been promised Rs. 16 have been given only Rs. 12. He complains that the present staff is not representative and urges that the best men available in any part of the country should be selected without consideration of class, colour and race. He condemns the proposal to appoint military assistant surgeons to professorships, on the ground that their qualifications are insufficient, and says that only eminent specialists should be appointed.

The Lucknow Medical College.

LEADER, 3rd May 1912.

34. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 6th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains of the absence of facility for elementary education in the science of agriculture in Lucknow. He urges the need for making some arrangements for education in agriculture as the subject is prescribed for candidates going up for the matriculation and school-leaving certificate examinations, and also because most of the students, especially those of the Colvin Institute, belong either to the agricultural or to the landowning classes. He suggests that use could be made of the government gardens at Lucknow, where instruction in gardening is at present given, and that the services of officers of the agricultural department might be requisitioned to start an agricultural school in Lucknow.

Agricultural education in Lucknow.

HINDUSTANI, 6th May 1912.

35. The Darbar (Agra), of the 7th May 1912, complains that industries in Agra are languishing, and suggests the establishment of an industrial and technical school for training the children of the industrial classes.

Technical and industrial school, Agra.

DARBAR, 7th May 1912.

The editor says that as a result of such a measure the industries of Agra would receive a fresh impetus, production on a large scale would become possible, factories and mills would be erected and the prosperity of the city would greatly increase.

36. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 7th May 1912, expresses gratification that the anomaly in the matter of electing a certain proportion of ordinary Fellows has now been removed, and that the graduates of the Allahabad University have been placed on a level with their confreres of other universities, and the editor expresses the hope that they will not fail to exercise the privilege.

Election of Fellows by graduates of the Allahabad University.

LEADER, 7th May 1912.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

OUDH AKHBAR, 4th May 1912.

37. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 4th May 1912 (received on the 6th May), expresses satisfaction that the system of purchasing opium by Government at a cheap rate and then selling it at a great profit is shortly to be discontinued, and suggests that, as poppy seed is much used by Indians, its cultivation should not be prohibited.

The cultivation of poppy in India.

The editor asks Government to allow cultivators to grow poppy plants without restriction, beyond this that they should not prepare opium, and that they should only derive profit by the sale of the seed.

HINDI VYAPARI AND KARIGAR, 1st April 1912.

38. The Hindi Vyapari and Karigar (Benares), of the 1st April 1912 (received on the 10th May), makes a brief survey of the industrial progress which these provinces have made in the régime of Sir John Hewett, and points out that no previous Lieutenant Governor took even half as much interest and pains in the industrial development of these provinces. The editor says that the inhabitants of the provinces must always remain deeply indebted to His Honour, and that they cannot be too grateful to him for what he has done for their material welfare. He remarks that the best way in which they can show their gratitude to him is to appreciate his work and take full advantage of the industrial facilities provided by him.

Industrial development of the United Provinces under Sir John Hewett.

He observes that if his successors continue to take a similar interest in this department of administration, these provinces will assume a different aspect and will become the most prosperous part of the country.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 1st May 1912.

39. Referring to the question of acquisition of land in Delhi by Government, the Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 5th May), expresses the hope that Government will so arrange it as to cause no monetary loss to the local landowners.

Acquisition of land in Delhi.

LEADER, 5th May 1912.

40. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 5th May 1912, expresses the opinion that, having regard to the present internal and external peaceful condition of India, the strength of the British Army in India is excessive, and that if England does not like to reduce the Indian Armyi n order to safeguard her other Asiatic possessions, she should make a fair contribution to Indian military expenditure.

The Nicholson Committee.

The editor suggests the following subjects for the consideration of the Nicholson Committee: the reduction of the excessive number of British soldiers as compared with Indian sepoys, the admission into the military service of certain sections of the Indian population which have hitherto been debarred from it, the reduction of the number of British officers attached to native regiments, the admission of Indians into the commissioned ranks of the Army, the opening of a military college in India for the training of Indian officers, and the enlistment of Indians as volunteers.

The editor expresses the hope that these questions will be considered by the committee with due regard to their connection with military policy and expenditure, and he urges Indian public bodies to make up for the absence of an Indian member on the committee by submitting representations for the consideration of the committee.

ADVOCATE, 5th May 1912.

41. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, expresses satisfaction that the Government of India has taken the earliest opportunity to take the Indian public into their confidence with regard to the scope of the Nicholson Committee and enquires whether the committee will afford people outside the military circle an opportunity to submit their views. The editor urges that non-officials should at any rate be asked to state their views, and he says that if men like Mr. D. E. Wacha be given an opportunity, they might be able to present a workable scheme by which a reduction of military expenditure could be secured without impairing the efficiency of the Army. He expresses satisfaction at the reference to the external and internal situation, seeing that the committee will be able to decide once for all the question as to whether the present strength of the Army in India is at all necessary in the existing circumstances. He urges that, if it be found that the balance of the Army is needed in the interests of the Empire, the Indian Treasury should be relieved of the burden by a contribution from the Imperial Exchequer. He states that it would cause great satisfaction to the people if the committee were to recommend the raising of regiments from among the Eurasians, middle class Indians and from classes which had been for no good reason debarred from admission to the Army. The editor asserts that, if facility be given for admission to the higher ranks of the Army, the military castes among Hindus and Muhammadans would be only too glad to avail themselves of the privilege, and that the wider employment of Indians in the Army would meet with general approval. He complains that efforts have been made to convince the English public that any reduction in the Indian Army or curtailment of expenditure is impossible. And remarks that Indians are as much interested in the proper defence of the country as are the military advisers of Government, and that they will never suggest any measure which is likely to affect the efficiency of the military organization. He expresses the hope that as a result of the deliberations of the committee it will be possible to improve the military administration and at the same time curtail the growing Army expenditure which is impoverishing the country.

The Nicholson Committee.

42. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 5th May 1912, publishes a memorial submitted to the Inspector General of Civil Hospitals by the civil assistant surgeons of the United Provinces, and remarks that the demands made by the memorialists are temperate and reasonable, and should receive favourable consideration at the hands of Government. The editor remarks that nothing could be more anamolous than that military assistant surgeons, who are men of inferior qualifications, should, when they rise to their highest grade, draw a salary of Rs. 700 per month, while only in a few special cases can civil assistant surgeons hope to rise to the senior grade on Rs. 300 a month.

ADVOCATE, 5th May 1912.

Civil assistant surgeons.

43. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 5th May 1912, says that a few alterations in the book named the Khawb-o-Khiyal will not satisfy the Muhammadan community. The editor asserts that the book is calculated to create ill-feeling amongst the Muhammadans against their Hindu brethren, and urges that it should be wholly excluded from all courses.

SAHIFA, 5th May 1912.

The Khwab-o-Khiyal.

44. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 5th May 1912, refers to the Titanic disaster, and expresses profound regret at the death of Mr. W. T Stead, who is described as having been a valued and trusted friend of the Muhammadans.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 5th May 1912.

The Titanic disaster.

45. The Darbar (Agra), of the 7th May 1912, deplores the high rate of mortality which prevailed in a number of districts in these provinces during the year 1910-11, and attributes it to the insanitary condition of municipal areas. The editor complains of the gross neglect of sanitary precautions in the municipalities, and urges that efforts should be made to supply pure water, and to keep all inhabited localities of every town neat and clean.

DARBAR, 7th May 1912.

High rate of mortality in the United Provinces.

46. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912, contains a criticism of the gazetteer of the Almora district contributed by a correspondent signing himself "G.P.," in the course of which he accuses the writer of inaccuracy and of wilful maligning the people.

LEADER, 8th May 1912.

The Almora district gazetteer.

He closes the article with the following remarks :—

"Be that as it may, one thing is certain that much heart-burning results from loose remarks, such as those cited above, appearing in a publication which is issued under the seal of the Government. The task of writing the gazetteer should, we venture to opine, be never entrusted to men who have no proper discretion. Government should do well to guard against such contingencies by carefully examining the manuscript before allowing it to go to the press. A particular mistake, occasionally creeping here or there and affecting a particular individual, matters little, but general remarks of a mischievous character touching a whole nation or community spread poison far and wide."

LEADER, 8th May 1912.

47. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912, discusses the cotton industry in India with particular reference to the decrease in the shipments from the Bombay mills to China as a result of Japanese competition, and remarks that the industry in India has not in recent years made as much progress as that in Japan, which fact should give occasion for reflection to the Indian mill owners. The editor says that, in spite of the progress made in India in this direction, much still remains to be accomplished before Indians can hope to replace English by Indian goods. He says that the Japanese and other civilized governments have recognized the obligation to do all that is possible to help those employed in trade and in dustry, and he asks the Indian Government to act so as to make it impossible for the people to make unfavourable comparisons. He concedes that if the Government of India had a free hand in the matter it would gladly abolish the cotton excise duty, but that unfortunately India's policy is dictated by Lancashire and Dund ee, and not even the Secretary of State can act freely in the matter. He expresses the hope that sooner or later India will enjoy fiscal autonomy like the self-governing dominions in the Empire.

The cotton industry and the excise duty.

LEADER, 8th May 1912.

48. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912, refers to the accounts of the Famine Insurance Fund for the last two years, which show that nearly one crore and 61½ lakhs was spent in the two on reduction or avoidance of debt, and remarks that such expenditure was not called for, seeing that there was no urgent hurry for Government to reduce its comparatively trifling unproductive debt. The editor says that the amount could have been much better utilized on protective irrigation works, on agricultural improvements, or even for a reduction of land revenue.

The Famine Insurance Fund.

ADVOCATE, 9th May 1912.

49. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 9th May 1912, refers to an account of the prison system of India, which appeared in the Weekly Telegraph (London), in which the existing system in India is compared favourably with that which prevails in England, and suggests that the writer had praised the Indian system so highly, because he was ignorant of Indian jail conditions. He states that no department stands more in need of reform than that of the Indian jails, and expresses astonishment that the existing system should be described in an English paper as being far in advance of the system prevailing there.

The prison system of India.

The editor strongly condemns the custom of the parading of prisoners without their clothing for the inspection of the superintendent and medical officer, of which the writer expressed appreciation, and which he is glad is not followed in the United Provinces jails, and asks Government to put a stop to it at once wherever it is observed.

V.—Legislation.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 1st May 1912.

50. The Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 6th May), takes exception to the remark made by the Hon'ble Mr. Montagu in his speech in the debate on the second reading of the Government of India Bill to the effect that the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal had no right to ask anything beyond the appointment of a Muhammadan in the Executive Council of the Governor of Bengal, and that the Governor should spend a part of the year at Dacca, and describes the speech as unfair and contrary to the pledges given by Government to the Muhammadans. The editor remarks that the Muhammadan community as a body is not prepared to accept the verdict of the Under Secretary of State for India, and referring to Mr. Montagu's statement that it was a mistake to talk of the Muhammadans of India as though they were a homogeneous nationality, he remarks that it exhibited his want of knowledge about Muhammadans and about Indian affairs. He states that Islam is the only religion which does not teach territorial patriotism, and that the Muhammadans, not only of India but of the whole world, consider one another as brothers and are bound by the ties of religion, history and ideals.

The Government of India Bill.

LEADER, 3rd May 1912.

51. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 3rd May 1912, expresses approval of the laudable motive of the Hon'ble Mr. Bhurgri in bringing forward the Sindh Muhammadan Education

The Sindh Muhammadan Education Cess Bill.

Cess Bill, and urges other communities of India to make a sacrifice similar to that made by the Muhammadans of Sindh.

The editor entertains the hope that the carrying of the bill will be a practical step towards the accomplishment of the scheme of free and compulsory elementary education.

52. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th May 1912, asserts that the bill proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, is opposed to the fundamental principles of the Islamic faith, and cannot be given effect to without making changes in Muhammadan Law. AL MUSHIR, 4th May 1912.

Proposed amendment in Muhammadan Law.

The editor expresses agreement with the opinion of the Hon'ble Mr. Shamsul-Huda that the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah was not a true representative of his community, and that such representatives were likely to cause ruin to the Muhammadan community in India.

VI.—Railway.

53. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th May 1912, complains that the railway employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway do not treat the third and intermediate class passengers with politeness and courtesy. AL MUSHIR, 4th May 1912.

Complaint about the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

The editor also complains of the want of accommodation for intermediate class passengers in trains other than mail trains running between Moghal Sarai and Lucknow, and urges the need for more accommodation in that class, and for waiting rooms for Indian ladies at all stations on the line. He invites the attention of the railway authorities and of the Railway Board to these grievances.

VII.—Post Office.

54. The Postal Magazine (Agra), for the month of February 1912 (received on the 10th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains that the postal employés are over-worked and under-paid. He says that the hours of duty are very long, and that the clerks have to do without punkahs in the hot weather, and to put up with other inconveniences during office hours. He suggests that the hours of duty be reduced during the cold season, and that better arrangements be made in every post office for the comfort of the clerks. POSTAL MAGAZINE, February 1912.

Grievances of postal employés.

55. The Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 6th May), protests against the levying of a fee of one anna for enquiries into lost or misdelivered value payable parcels. AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 1st May 1912.

Enquiry fee for value payable parcels.

56. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 6th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer objects to the recent orders imposing an enquiry fee of one anna for value payable parcels lost or misdelivered, and urges that in the case of parcels worth only a few annas the amount realized would probably be expended in fees for repeated enquiries. He suggests that Government should ascertain public opinion on the subject, which would demand the withdrawal of the circular, and he urges that in case his suggestion be not found feasible, the fee should be reduced to a quarter of an anna, and that all communications marked "postal complaints" should be allowed to go post free. HINDUSTANI, 6th May 1912.

Enquiry fee for value payable parcels.

VIII.—Native Societies and Religious and Social Matters.

57. The Bharat Dharm Neta (Benares), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 8th May), says that those who profess zeal for effecting the regeneration of the country insist that the people should cultivate feelings of brotherhood and unity. The editor warns them however that neither the abolition of the caste system nor inter-dining and inter-marrying will bring about this desirable consummation, and that those who advocate such methods are likely to bring disaster upon the country. He asserts that such reformers are not really patriotic but only advocate such reactionary methods in order to serve their own ends. BHARAT DHARM NETA, 1st May 1912.

The problem of universal brotherhood in India.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 1st May 1912.

58. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 4th May), protests against the fine imposed by the Cantonment Magistrate of Sikandrabad (Deccan) on sixteen Muhammadans for reciting the maulud sharif (the narrative of the birth of Muhammad) within a mosque. The editor remarks that such unwarranted acts on the part of its officers bring discredit on Government, and suggests that in such cases Government should demand an explanation from the offending officers and have their orders cancelled. He concludes by observing that such cases of injustice, though in themselves petty, should not be connived at, as their cumulative effect may be disastrous.

Alleged religious intolerance in Sikandrabad.

AWAZA-I-KHALQ, 1st May 1912.

59. The Awaza-i-Khalq (Benares), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 6th May), discusses the benefits which people derive from cows, and expresses regret that Indians have not yet adopted measures to improve their breed.

The cow-protection movement.

The editor refers to the cow-protection deputation to England headed by Mr. Jassawalla, and remarks that it will be more profitable to preach at home the advantages of protecting cows from being slaughtered rather than to preach such doctrines abroad.

He suggests the formation of cow-protection societies in every town and village, and urges his co-religionists not to sell their cows to any person who is likely to dispose of them to butchers.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 1st May 1912.

60. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 5th May), reports that a number of Hindus were crushed to death in the crowd at Delhi on the occasion of the last solar eclipse, and that a few Hindu ladies were insulted by a party of Muhammadans. The editor remarks that such a state of affairs reflects discredit on the police of Delhi and he suggests that a band of Indian volunteers should have been formed to help and protect the pilgrims on the occasion.

The solar eclipse at Delhi.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 7th May 1912.

61. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 7th May 1912 strongly protests against greater liberty being given to women, and asserts that Hindu women have sufficient freedom and are loved and respected by their relatives and enjoy every happiness. The editor expresses surprise at the statement made by some people that Indian women are lacking in spirit and courage, and trusts that they will not emulate the performances of the militant suffragettes of the West. He would not advocate Indian ladies walking about in the public streets, on the ground that they would run risk of insult and annoyance.

The emancipation of women.

He contends that it is contrary to the laws of nature that the weaker and gentler sex should be on an equality with the stronger sex, and he urges that women should be taught to obey, trust and adore their husbands and not to rule over them.

He also inveighs against female education, and argues that it develops a spirit of insubordination among girls, and in conclusion suggests that the reformers should try to inculcate the sound principles of Hindu religion and morality into the minds of their women folk instead of trying to implant exotic customs and manners.

AL MUSHIR, 4th May 1912.

62. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 4th May 1912, discusses the necessity for the observance of pardah by Muhammadan women, which, the editor says, they are enjoined by their religion to observe strictly, and reproduces a translation of the Fatwah recently issued by the Sheikh-ul-Islam of Constantinople in which the Muhammadan women of Turkey were exhorted not to discard pardah which was a religious obligation. He urges his co-religionists in India not to be led away by the outward splendour of European civilization and to keep their pardah system intact.

The pardah system amongst the Muhammadans.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

Nil.

C. E. W. SANDS,
Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

NAINI TAL:
The 10th May 1912.

PRINTED BY J. R. MIDDLETON AT THE GOVT. CAMP BRANCH PRESS, NAINI TAL.

CONFIDENTIAL.] No. 20 of 1912.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 17th May 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The situation in Morocco 459
2. The situation in Persia 459
3. The situation in Persia 459
4. The Italian-Turkish war 459
5. Indians in German East Africa ... 459
6. Indentured Indian labour in Damaraland 459

(b)—Home:

7. Indian labourers in foreign countries ... 459
8. Indians in South Africa 460
9. A suggestion for the representation of the Kumaun division on the Legislative Council 460
10. Proscription of a book by the Bombay Government 460
11. The working of the Press Act ... 460
12. Meaning of sedition 460
13. Legislative Council elections 461
14. The coming council elections 461
15. The coming council elections 461
16. The Royal boons 461
17. The Muslim League and Maulana Shibli Nomani 462
18. The future policy of the Muslim League... 462
19. The policy of the Muslim League ... 462
20. Muhammadans and Indian politics ... 462
21. The administration of Sir John Hewett ... 463
22. Mr. Montagu's speech 463
23. Provincial autonomy and Mr. Montagu ... 463
24. The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's visit to England 464

Page.

25. Relations between the rulers and the ruled in India 464
26. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans 464
27. The Madras Provincial Conference ... 465

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

Nil.

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

28. Government and the Village Panchayat Association of Gaya (Behar)... ... 465
29. Recruitment for the judicial service ... 465
30. The Hoti Mardan case 466

(b)—Police:

31. Assistance to the police by private individuals in the detection of crime ... 466
32. Alleged police surveillance over public men 466
33. The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale and the Criminal Investigation Department 466
34. The United Provinces police training school... 466

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

35. The powers of finance committees ... 466

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

36. The abolition of octroi at Almora ... 467
37. Improvement of Agra city 467
38. The Bareilly Municipality 467
39. The water-supply at Allahabad ... 467
40. Separate electorates on local bodies ... 467

		Page.
	(e)—Education:
41.	Suggestion for a central institute for Indian and English students in England ...	467
42.	The proposed Muslim University ...	468
43.	The proposed Muslim University ...	468
44.	The proposed Muslim University ...	468
45.	The Allahabad University	468
46.	Royal boons: grace marks for matriculation candidates	468
47.	Objectionable passages in Thornton's History of India	468
48.	State technical scholarships	469
49.	Primary education in Garhwal ...	469
50.	Primary education in the United Provinces	469
51.	Religious education for Hindus ...	469
52.	Female education	469
53.	Complaint against the Ghazipur educational committee and its agent ...	470
54.	The Nadwat-ul-Ulama and the Madrasa Ilahiyat	470
	(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:
	Nil.
	(g)—General:
55.	Prevention of cruelty to animals ...	470
56.	A scare at Shahjahanpur	470
57.	Plague inoculation in Gorakhpur ...	470
58.	Electric illumination in the Taj ...	470
59.	Assaults on Indians by Eurasians and Anglo-Indians	471
60.	Indians and high offices under the State ...	471
61.	Possession of firearms by young boys ...	471
62.	The Nicholson Committee	471
63.	Vaccination	471
64.	The sugar industry	472
65.	The Indian Planters' Gazette and the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad ...	472
66.	Revision of clerical establishment in the United Provinces	472
67.	Need for holding an agricultural exhibition at Lucknow...	472
68.	The importation of foreign goods into India	472
69.	The importation of foreign goods into India	473
70.	The depressed classes	473
71.	The editor of the Leader (Allahabad) ...	473
72.	Khan Bahadur Saiyid Muhammad Hadi ...	473
73.	Industrial and economic development of India	473
74.	The late Mr. W. T. Stead	474
75.	The late Mr. W. T. Stead	474
76.	Recent shipping disasters	474
	V.—LEGISLATION.
77.	The Wafq Validation Bill	474
78.	The Government of India Bill ...	474
79.	The Viceroy and the veto	474
	VI.—RAILWAY.
80.	The Bengal and North-Western Railway ...	475
81.	Insufficiency of railway wagons for dispatching fodder to Gujrat and Kathiawar	475
82.	Minimum railway rates	475
83.	Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway	476
84.	Refreshment cars for Indians... ...	476
	VII.—POST OFFICE.
85.	Cause (71) of the Postal Guide ...	476
	VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.
86.	Cow-killing in Ajodhya	476
87.	The Gausharan fair at Agra	476
88.	The cow-protection movement ...	476
89.	Reform of sadhus	477
90.	The alleged degenerate condition of the Bengalis	477
91.	Relations among the different communities of India	477
	IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.
92.	A man-eating tiger in the Naini Tal district	477

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st May 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian	Lucknow ...	Quarterly ...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	800 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 „
4	Hindustán Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	2,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ghulam Muhammad	700 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swami Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P.	450 „
11	Theosophy in India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehangir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Ram Deva; B.A., Arya; 31 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Ganga Prasad Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintamani; Madrasi; 30 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Madho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Anchterlonie; European; 28 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	1,500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	150 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudagar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Nath Vaishya; 36 ...	200 „
†20	Álamgir	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal, Vaishya; 41	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakim Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Áwarif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakim Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40...	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kasim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A. ... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ram Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ánand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Ram Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43 ...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam	300 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumar; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsar	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zamin; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulla, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshid-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 39 ...	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 „
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 „
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shah Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 „
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A., Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Rám Dayal Vidyarthi; 35	709 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 „
49	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 „
50	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 „
51	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 „
†52	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Ilahi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 „
53	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 „
54	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
55	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathura Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 „
56	Vyápari and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 „
57	All-India Shiah Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubarak Ali; 32	600 „
58	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
59	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 „
60	Al Khalil	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 copies.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktada Khan; 32 ...	300 „
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Áwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 „
66	Dabdaba-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 „
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 „
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 „
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 „
71	Ittihad	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 „
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 „
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kamta Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 „
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 „
76	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 „
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Tara Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,300 „
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
79	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nizam-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qazi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 „

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 „
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	300 „
84	Sahifa	Bijnor	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	250 „
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahur Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 „
86	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 „
87	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 „
88	Tajir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 35	325 „
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Sájjad Husain; Shaikh; 33	400 „
90	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	300 „
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 „
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 „
93	Nasim-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 „
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 „
	ARABIC-URDU.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaiman; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	200 copies.
	HINDI.
96	Almora Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini... ...	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Chaudhari; Brahman; 56	100 „
98	Bharatodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 „
99	Bharát Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 „
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	180 „
101	Bráhman Samáchár... ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Narayan Prasad; Brahman... ...	405 „
102	Bráhman Sarvasva	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhimsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 „
103	Dehati	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Srivastava; Kayasth ...	600 „
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 „
*105	Dharm Kusumakar	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasad Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 „
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girja Dutt; Naithani Brahman; 36.	600 „
107	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 „
†108	Gurúkul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	... ...	300 „
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26	650 „
†110	Jain Nari Hitkari	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasad; Jain; 29	1,000 „
111	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 „
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Ram Prasad Misra; 22	1,000 „
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Nath Yogishwar; 37... ...	450 „
114	Kányakubj Hitkári	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lal Misra; 46 ...	1,500 „
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Balmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 „
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 „
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya; 27 ...	1,600 „
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 „
†119	Naraini or The Vedanta Patrika	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Ramnandhan; Kayasth; 32 ...	325 „
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shastri; 37	1,000 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 35 ...	300 „
123	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
124	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Narayan Dube	700 „
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 „
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahabir Prasad Dwivedi; 46 ...	4,000 „
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 „
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasoda Devi; 31	3,000 „
*129	Sudhanidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannath Prasád Shukla; Vaidye; 36.	500 „
130	Swadesh Bándhavá	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rajput; 45	600 „
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35.	1,000 „
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 „
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 „
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swami Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 „
135	Bharat Dharm Neta... ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 „
†136	Kam Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Baba Bhagwan Das Udasi; 46 ...	500 „
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 „
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 „
139	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 „
140	Ánand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 „
141	Árya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 „
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 „
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banarsi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ...	1,000 „
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Babu Bansi Dhar ... ... Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 „
†145	Mahila Hitkarak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Srimati Vidyavati Devi	250 „
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 „
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 „
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28 ...	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI
149	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), refers to the action of the Sultan of Morocco in the following terms:— AL BASHIR, 7th May 1912.

The situation in Morocco.

"Mullai Abdul Hafiz, Sultan of Morocco, the traitor to the nation, has, as it were, sold his country by signing the treaty with the French Government, though wide unrest prevails amongst the people of Morocco, and there is rebellion and bloodshed everywhere."

2. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), refers to the report of the bombardment of a mosque in Meshed by the Russians, and remarks that such a deplorable event will reveal to the world that even at the present time Christian governments commit outrages which surpass the acts of tyranny of even the most cruel of Muhammadan kings on account of which they have been constantly vilified by European historians. AL BASHIR, 7th May 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor says that the atrocities which are being perpetrated in the name of civilization by the Christian governments of Russia and Italy will give a good opportunity to future generations to distinguish between Christians and Muhammadans, and remarks that, though the Muhammadans may be defeated, and though the kings in Persia, Afghanistan and Turkey lose their independence, Islam will surely be victorious in the end.

3. The editor of the Ittihad (Moradabad), in the combined issue of the 1st and 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), observes that the Anglo-Russian loan appears to have greatly relieved the situation in Persia, but he expresses doubt whether Russia will abandon what he thinks was her intention of affecting a permanent occupation of Teheran. ITTIHAD, 1st and 8th May 1912.

The situation in Persia.

4. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), publishes the translation of a letter purporting to have been written by a Turk from Tobruk that appeared in Al Moid (Egypt) in which he ridiculed the information cabled by Reuter that the Italian losses in Tripoli amounted to only five hundred killed, and asserted that so far no less than fifteen thousand Italians had been killed in the Italian-Turkish war, and remarks that the object of cabling false news appears to be to dishearten the Muhammadans throughout the world, so that they should not encourage their co-religionists in Tripoli by congratulating them on their success. ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

The Italian-Turkish war.

5. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 16th May), referring to the report that Germany proposes to expel British Indians from its possessions in East Africa as undesirables, says that the German government has decided to do this because it has seen that British Indians are similarly maltreated in the British colonies of South Africa. The editor remarks that such a state of affairs shows the unfortunate and friendless flight of Indians. SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 8th May 1912.

Indians in German East Africa.

6. Referring to the report that Germany desires to obtain indentured Indian labour in Damaraland, the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 13th May 1912, remarks that there is little to choose between prison life and the life of an indentured labourer, and enquires why Indians should be required to serve as indentured labourers when no European is ever consigned to such an existence. ABHYUDAYA, 13th May 1912.

Indentured Indian labour in Damaraland.

(b)—Home.

7. The Rajput (Agra), of the 30th April 1912 (received on the 13th May), publishes accounts of recruitment of Indian labourers for emigration to foreign countries, and asserts that the treatment which they receive at the hands of their employers is harsh and cruel. RAJPUT, 30th April 1912.

Indian labourers in foreign countries.

The editor describes the various inducements which recruiting agents hold out when urging unwary and ignorant Indians to emigrate, and he suggests that educated Indians should endeavour to secure the punishment of unscrupulous agents, so as to put a stop to such illegal procedure and save their countrymen from being sent away to foreign places as coolies against their will.

He also suggests that the authorities before whom the emigrants are produced prior to their departure should carefully ascertain that the men have not been deceived by the recruiting agents, and that they have enlisted of their own free will.

LEADER, 16th May 1912.

Indians in South Africa.

8. The following is from the Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912 :—

"The following story told by Mr. Maurice Evans in his book on Black and White in South Africa shows the ill-treatment accorded to the former even in very unimportant matters :—

'In a certain South African town, which I will not indicate further, a petition was sent to the corporation by the painters of the town, protesting against the custom of allowing natives to paint the electric tram posts. A report was called for and sent in. This report pointed out that, although the painting of the lower portion of the poles was simple, unskilled work, merely daubing the paint on a plain surface, the upper portion was more intricate, and involved a certain amount of danger to the workmen from the electric current. It was decided to allow the black man to continue to undertake the somewhat dangerous, but more skilled work at the top of the poles, at the low rate of pay, the white operator to have the safe and unskilled work at the bottom, at skilled labour prices.'

Mr. Evans rightly asks : 'Could irony go further ?' "

ALMORA AKHBAR, March 1912.

A suggestion for the representation of the Kumaun division on the Legislative Council.

9. The Almora Akhbar for March 1912 (received on the 11th May), urges the need for the election of a representative from the Kumaun division to the Provincial Legislative Council, on the ground that the members from the plains cannot adequately represent the needs and requirements of hillmen in the council on account of their ignorance of that part of the provinces.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 1st May 1912.

Proscription of a book by the Bombay Government.

10. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 11th May), expresses surprise at the action of the Bombay Government in proscribing "The Trial of Mr. Tilak" four years after its publication, when nobody is probably reading its contents. The editor expresses doubt as to whether there is anything seditious or inflammatory in the pamphlet, and questions the propriety of the action on the part of Government, when peace and quiet has been ensured in the country by the visit of the King-Emperor.

ABHYUDAYA, 12th May 1912.

The working of the Press Act.

11. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, complains of the harsh and arbitrary enforcement of the Press Act through executive officers, giving as an instance the case of the Swaraj, a purely literary magazine which was to be started at Allahabad, but which could not be published because the District Magistrate demanded a security of five hundred rupees. He invites the attention of the United Provinces Government to the matter, and remarks that such arbitrary proceedings on the part of the executive officers spread dissatisfaction among the people and produce hatred for the ways of the bureaucracy.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 8th May 1912.

Meaning of sedition.

12. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 16th May), discusses the question raised by the Amrita Bazar Patrika (Calcutta) as to whether Mr. Rudyard Kipling's verses on the Irish Home Rule Bill constituted sedition, and the remarks of the Bharat Mitra (Calcutta) on the subject (vide Bengal report on native newspapers No. 19, paragraph 41), and observes that such verses, if they had appeared in the Anglo-Indian press, would not have been regarded by Government as seditious.

The editor refers to the agitation against the Ilbert Bill in the Anglo-Indian press, and asserts that if similar language had been used by the Indian press it would undoubtedly have been described as seditious.

He goes on to say that the language used by Indian publicists in connection with the swadeshi movement and the partition of Bengal are considered seditious and inflammatory, though such language if used by Anglo-Indians, would not be interpreted in the same light, and he asserts that in politics the interpretation of sedition depends not on the position of a country but on that of a community or race.

13. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 11th May), deplores the want of really earnest workers in the Councils, and remarks that the reform scheme so far appears to have proved a failure. ZUL QARNAIN, 7th May 1912.

Legislative Council elections.

The editor says that the questions asked by the non-official members in the Councils are mostly unimportant and have no bearing on the general well-being of the country, and he expresses regret that the Hon'ble Members, before putting a question in the Council, do not thoroughly master the subject about which they seek information from Government.

With regard to the representatives in the Provincial Legislative Council he says that their failure is due to the absence of any public life in the province, and to the disinclination of capable men to interest themselves in the working of the district and local boards, which are described as the training ground for the higher and more responsible work in the Councils.

14. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 11th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer supports the candidature of the Hon'ble Nawab Abdul Majid for election to the Imperial Council, on the ground that he has constantly represented Muhammadan views and sentiments, and has not gone over to the Congress party like certain other Muhammadan members. He opposes the candidature of Mr. Abdul Raoof, and contends that it would not be safe to exchange the only true representative of the Muhammadans for an untried man. MASHRIQ, 7th May 1912.

The coming council elections.

The editor, commenting on the above, observes that Nawab Abdul Majid was the only Muhammadan councillor who remembered his duty to his constituency, and did not succumb to the temptation of inflicting his personal views on the council, when such views were opposed to those held by the majority of his co-religionist electors, and adds that the Hon'ble Nawab is trusted by Government as well as by the majority of Muhammadans.

In the same issue of the paper another contributed article is published in which the writer supports the candidature of Babu Ishwar Saran for election to the Local Legislative Council from the Gorakhpur division, and observes that he is an able speaker and well versed in politics. He points out that Babu Ishwar Saran has always been trusted by Muhammadans, and he expresses the hope that the Hon'ble Babu Narsingh Prasad will withdraw in his favour.

The editor commends the views of the writer and says that Babu Ishwar Saran, in spite of his being a Hindu, has won the hearts of Muhammadans. He remarks that it would be a mistake to consider him to be prejudiced against Muhammadans on account of his opposition to the Muslim League, seeing that he is as much opposed to a Hindu League and is animated by the praiseworthy desire to see Hindus and Muhammadans united on a common platform.

15. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), discusses the importance of the question of electing representatives for councils, and asks the Muhammadans of the Kumaun division to nominate a representative from their division after carefully considering the merits of the candidate. The editor says that there can be no hope of Government being apprised of the demands and legitimate aspirations of Muhammadans unless Muhammadan representatives be sent to the Councils, who can express their opinion fearlessly and courageously and who can safeguard the interests of their constituents. ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

The coming council elections.

16. The Ittihad (Moradabad), in the combined issue of the 1st and 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), expresses disappointment at the grant of an annual pension of Rs. 100 to the present holders and future recipients of the titles of Shams-ul-Ulama and Mahamahopadhyaya, and remarks that a monthly allowance of Rs. 8-5-4 may suffice for a coolie but it cannot satisfy the needs of an educated Indian. The editor argues that even if the pension be meant as an honorarium to learned men and not for their support, the amount is disgracefully small. ITTIHAD, 1st and 8th May 1912.

The Royal boons.

In conclusion he urges Government to make an adequate grant and to follow the example of ancient Indian rulers who used to give jagirs (grants of land) to learned men.

ITTIHAD, 1st and 8th May 1912.

The Muslim League and Maulana Shibli Nomani.

17. The editor of the Ittihad (Moradabad), in the combined issue of the 1st and 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), commends the political and educational work of the Muslim League, and expresses regret at Maulana Shibli's opposition to such an useful national institution. He takes objection to Maulana Shibli's contention that the Muslim League is doing no constructive work, and challenges the Maulana to show any real work to his own credit. He says that from the time Maulana Shibli has taken the management of the Nadwat-ul-Ulama under his control it has been passing high-sounding resolutions which have never been carried into effect, and that he has been concerning himself with politics which is entirely outside the scope of the institution. He points out that the Maulana has got the idea into his head that an attack on other Muslim institutions is necessary to a proper advocacy of the claims of the Nadwah, with the result that the Maulana and his organ, the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), have made it their business to fall foul of every Muhammadan public institution. He goes on to say that the Maulana is possessed of an inordinate desire for fame, and that he is dissipating his energies in so many varied activities that it is impossible for the Nadwah to progress in his hands.

In conclusion he asks Maulana Shibli to refrain from politics, and says that his attempts to turn the Nawdah into a new political body and to set it against the Muslim League will be futile.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

The future policy of the Muslim League.

18. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), publishes a contributed article under the heading "The future policy of the Muslim League as seen by an educated young man," in which the writer asks the organizers of the League to reform its constitution, and emphasizes the need for the election to the League of only such members as can give expression to their opinions with courage and independence, and of men who have no direct connection with Government.

He asks the members of the All-India Muslim League to arouse ethusiasm in the members of the District Leagues, and he dwells on the necessity of carrying on constitutional agitation, without which, he asserts, nothing can be gained from Government. He advises the members of the League to cultivate friendly relations with the Hindus and to oppose them only when they take up questions which directly interfere with the interests of the Muhammadan community.

In conclusion he remarks that, unless a number of Muhammadans, volunteer their services, who are really willing to sacrifice their own interests in promoting the cause of their community, none of their political institutions will thrive, and he suggests that the secretary of the All-India Muslim League should devote his whole time to the work of the League, and that his chief duty should be to publish political literature for the benefit of his co-religionists.

LEADER, 11th May 1912.

The policy of the Muslim League.

19. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th May 1912, publishes the second instalment of the contributed article entitled "The Muslim League" (vide Selections No. 17, paragraph 16) in which the writer gives an account of the progress of the League in support of his contention that the Muslim League is a representative organization and is not composed of sycophant title-holders. He points out that the League has provincial and district branches under it, and that it is helped by influential and educated men with true ideas of patriotism who can hardly be called sycophants. He goes on to say that the League is taking a keen interest in the welfare of the masses, and is daily gaining in popularity. He invites the critics of the League to favour the secretary with a list of the persons whom they consider to be fit for the membership of the League, and impresses on them that progress can only be slow and gradual, and that it would be foolish to ignore obvious limitations.

TAFRIH, 14th May 1912.

Muhammadans and Indian politics.

20. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th May 1912, publishes an article by Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain entitled "Muslims and Indian politics," in which he urges Hindus and Muhammadans to always work together in matters of common interest, and to strive for self-government within the Empire.

He points out that it is absurd to urge that cow-killing would never permit of any rapprochement being effected between Hindus and Muhammadans, and contends that the Muhammadan community has been eating beef and the Hindus have been revering the cow for many years past but that those circumstances have never prevented their friendly relations. He suggests that the Hindus can solve the cow question by raising large flocks of sheep and goats so as to make mutton as cheap as beef. With regard to self-government he urges that the success of the experiment in the self-governing colonies of the British Empire proves that its introduction is desirable in India also.

He replies to the argument that Indians are not fitted for self-government on account of their backwardness in education and civilization, by stating that ignorant and selfish men are to be found in every country, and that government is generally carried on by the educated classes.

He remarks that there is little danger from the evils of an ignorant electorate, and says that difficulties would only arise when the interests of the majority and the minority are opposed to each other.

He concedes that those who take part in the agitation for self-government might be deprived of Government favours, but points out that such considerations must not weigh with true patriots.

In conclusion he says that if Hindus and Muhammadans will try wholeheartedly for the progress of the country and will regard each other with mutual confidence and trust, the goal of self-government will be easily realized.

The administration of Sir John Hewett.

21. The following is published in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th May 1912, under the heading "Random notes by X.Y.Z.":— LEADER, 10th May 1912

"After the fulsome adulation that was heaped upon Sir John Hewett by the non-official Hon'ble members in the last budget debate in our local council—in which the Hon'ble members vied with each other to sing the praises of the retiring Lieutenant Governor—it was refreshing to read the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Sinha delivered as president of the provincial conference at Cawnpore. I do not in the least suggest that Sir John Hewett did not deserve many of the good things that were said of him. He did deserve them, but could not any of the Hon'ble members tell him the bad things he had done and the good things he omitted to do; for example, could not some Hon'ble members tell him that, while appreciating all that he had done for the two provinces during the long term of his rule, the educated classes deplore his unreasonable attitude regarding the creation of an Executive Council for our provinces? When will our people learn to speak the truth?"

Mr. Montagu's speech.

22. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th May 1912, refers to the speech of Mr. Montagu on the administrative changes in India, and takes exception to the statement made by him that the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal had no connection with Muhammadans in other parts of India. AL MUSHIR, 11th May 1912.

The editor refrains from entering into any discussion on the subject at present, and expresses the hope that Government will show consideration for the claims of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

Provincial autonomy and Mr. Montagu.

23. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, reproduces that portion of Mr. Montagu's speech on the Government of India Bill in which, he replied to the charge of change of policy made by Mr. Bonar Law, and asserted that, though there was going to be no immediate step as a consequence of the changes, it had been thought fit, in view of the circumstances prevailing in India, to indicate a definite direction in which the British occupation was tending. The editor remarks that Mr. Montagu has now clearly defined his previous pronouncement about the scheme of provincial autonomy, which was foreshadowed in the famous dispatches of the Government of India and the Secretary of State, and he expresses the opinion that this portion of Mr. Montagu's speech will be read with the keenest interest by educated Indians. LEADER, 12th May 1912.

ADVOCATE, 12th May 1912.

24. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 12th May 1912, discussing the visit of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale to England, says that the Congress in its earlier days devoted a great deal of its attention to the education of public opinion in England in favour of India, and to enlisting the sympathies of the English people in favour of the cause by deputing Indian leaders to England, and expresses regret that recently the visits of its delegates have been few and the work has been neglected. As an instance of neglect the editor refers to the failure to send a deputation to England when Lord Morley and the members of the Indian Council were busy in framing the Council Regulations, with the result that the Regulations proved to be defective and were a source of dissatisfaction and discontent. He complains that there are very few Indian leaders who carry influence with their countrymen as well as with the English public, and urges that steps be taken to arrange for annual visits of Indian delegates to England.

The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's visit to England.

He notes that though Mr. Gokhale's present visit to England is more with the object of recouping his health than anything else, Mr. Gokhale will try to persuade his English friends to take a greater interest in the spread of primary education in India, and that he may succeed in persuading the Home Government to accept a measure of mass education which might be introduced by the Government of India.

Referring to the need for a leisured class, willing to devote themselves to the service of the country and advance the cause on behalf of which Mr. Gokhale has been working, the editor remarks as follows :—

"The ideal set by Mr. Gokhale before his country is high indeed. Those who desire to serve their country by work in the Council or outside it have great opportunities for service. The goal of self-government within the Empire is a long way off, yet a far-sighted Viceroy has brought it within the pale of practical politics. Attempts have been made to explain away solemn promises made by the English Sovereign to their Indian people, attempts will be made to explain away the promise made for the grant of autonomy to India. But these attempts are bound to fail. We have, as Mr. Gokhale said, to qualify ourselves for the form of government which it is our belief will ameliorate the condition of the country by disinterested public work."

DARBAR, 14th May 1912.

25. The Darbar (Agra), of the 14th May 1912, remarks that the policy of the Imperial Government has always been a liberal one, and that it would be gross injustice to assert that England has tried to rob India or that she has been trampling on the just rights of Indians. The editor observes that indiscreet actions on the part of individual officers are sometimes misinterpreted by the people as the acts of Government, which generally leads to disaffection, and that officials sometimes misinterpret the Imperial policy or follow a mistaken course in cases in which they are given sufficient latitude under the law. He asserts that the character of the people affects the behaviour of officials, and that the personal equation is therefore an important factor in determining the relations between the rulers and the ruled. He contends that the Supreme Government should not be blamed for the mistakes or idiosyncracies of its individual officers.

Relations between the rulers and the ruled in India.

LEADER, 16th May 1912.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912, reproduces an extract from the Tribune (Lahore), about the appeal for unity made by Sir John Hewett at the last Council meeting, in which the editor of the Tribune pointed out that the responsibility for the present undesirable and unsatisfactory condition of affairs lay partly with a class of European officers who for several years past had not been holding the balance even between Hindus and Muhammadans, and who favoured the latter at the expense of the former. The Tribune described His Honour's reference to the duty that lay on the British rulers of India to protect the weak against the strong as "enunciating an unexceptionable doctrine," but remarked that "in not a few districts in Upper India generally British officials had interpreted it so as to substitute Hindus and Muhammadans for the words strong and weak respectively," which formed the root cause of the trouble. With regard to the question of special and racial electorates in Councils and in municipal and district boards, which had to a very great extent strained the relations between the two communities, the Tribune blamed Lord Minto for the evil, and held the United Provinces Government responsible so far as municipal and district boards were concerned, and observed that, so long as no notice was taken of the open partiality shown to Muhammadans by a certain class of officials, there could be no hope of improvement in the present state of things. TRIBUNE,

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

The editor expresses agreement with the views expressed in the Tribune, and remarks that it has correctly voiced the opinion of a large body of fair-minded men of both the communities in the matter, and has furnished a key to a real solution of the problem.

The Madras Provincial Conference.

27. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 16th May 1912, after reviewing the proceedings of the nineteenth session of the Madras Provincial Conference held at Kumbakonam, expresses approval of the suggestion of the chairman of the Reception Committee that the leisured classes like landholders and retired officers of Government, who have experience, should come forward to work for the regeneration of the country. He says that institutions and movements are suffering for lack of workers, and urges that the growth of a stronger public spirit is absolutely necessary in order to raise the masses and to create a nation. ADVOCATE, 16th May 1912.

Referring to the president's speech, he remarks that he was right in observing that it was better to have some people dissatisfied with the existing condition of affairs and disinclined to accept without demur all that is said by a few men, than that there should be a large number of men who would willingly vote on every occasion and relapse into inactivity as soon as a gathering or conference was over.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

Government and the Village Panchayat Association of Gaya (Behar).

28. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, supports the memorial submitted by the Village Panchayat Association of Gaya to the Viceroy praying for its representation on the Legislative Council, the improvement of sanitation in rural areas and for imparting free primary education to their children, and urges that Government should earn the gratitude of the memorialists by acceding to their just and reasonable requests. The editor points out that landowners cannot represent the interests of cultivators on the Legislative Councils, and that they should be allowed to elect one of their own community, or a person who sympathizes with them, to represent their interests. ABHYUDAYA, 9th May 1912.

Recruitment for the judicial service.

29. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th May 1912, publishes the second instalment of the contributed article entitled "Recruitment for the judicial service" (vide Selections No. 14, paragraph 25), in which the writer suggests that, in order to get good district judges, successful candidates at the Civil Service examination should be asked to choose either the judicial or the executive line, and those choosing the former should be required to go through a probationary period of two years in England to study law. He goes on to suggest that on their arrival in India they should be placed under district judges with the designation of assistant judges, and should devote one year solely to learning civil and criminal work. He further insists that all the civilian judges should be placed entirely and absolutely under the High Courts. Out of thirty-one permanent district judgeships in this province he proposes that at least ten should be given to barristers and vakils, who have practised for ten years or more in the highest courts of the province. LEADER, 10th May 1912.

TAFRIH, 14th May 1912.

The Holi Mardan case.

30. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th May 1912, refers to the question in the House of Commons about the Holi Mardan case, and expresses surprise at the fact that the Under Secretary of State for India has not yet been supplied with the particulars of the case so as to enable him to reply to the question.

The editor expresses the hope that the Government of India will give the Secretary of State for India a detailed account of the case as soon as possible.

(b)—Police.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 8th May 1912.

Assistance to the police by private individuals in the detection of crime.

31. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 16th May), refers to a report that the magistrate in Barisal refused to pay the expenses of three persons who had given material help to the police in a case of abduction of a Hindu woman, and remarks that when Government sets no value on help rendered to the police there can be no justification for the complaint that the public in India do not assist the police in the detection of crime.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 8th May 1912.

Alleged police surveillance over public men.

32. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 16th May), complains that all public men, whether their sphere of work is political or social, are subjected to police surveillance, and he remarks that the detectives are a source of trouble to the people and Government alike, in that their reports are mostly false. The editor observes that it is of little use making a complaint of it seeing that men like the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale are also watched.

He says that the police finds out the doings of public workers, but fails miserably to discover the whereabouts of thieves, robbers and dakaits.

OUDH AKHBAR, 14th May 1912.

The Hon ble Mr. Gokhale and the Criminal Investigation Department.

33. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 14th May 1912, refers to statements published in various newspapers to the effect that the movements of the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale are being watched by the police, and expresses surprise that an honest well-wisher of Government and the people should have become an object of suspicion to the police.

The editor remarks that such action on the part of the police would only be calculated to create disaffection, and he urges that steps be taken to ensure that in future Mr. Gokhale is not subjected to police espionage.

LEADER, 14th May 1912.

The United Provinces police training school.

34. The following is from the Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th May 1912:—

"In the police training school of the United Provinces in 1910-11, 'four assistant superintendents passed the final examination with credit but the three deputy superintendents who appeared were not successful.' Was it due to the fault of the latter or of their training, or to some idiosyncracies on the part of the examiners? As the deputy superintendents are recruited from amongst the educated and intelligent classes, this wholesale failure requires an explanation. It appears that the officers of the Criminal Investigation Department in 1910-11 enquired into no less than thirty-seven cases relating to false civil suits in the United Provinces, and that convictions in some cases of fraudulent suits were obtained. We think that there is much scope for the activity of the department in this direction, and it would indeed be a great service to the community if through wholesome fear of the department institutions of false suits become rare, and civil courts cease to become a resort of professional litigants who do not come to seek bona fide relief but abuse the machinery of law for selfish ends."

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

LEADER, 15th May 1912.

The powers of finance committees.

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th May 1912, refers to the article on public expenditure reproduced in a recent issue from the Times (London), pointing out how the closer scrutiny of the annual estimates by the committees of supplies was tending to become a purely formal affair, and remarks that nobody except the Finance Minister in India and the Chancellor of the Exchequer in England really exhibited any interest in the financial administration of the country, with the result that public expenditure kept continuously growing. In these circumstances the editor urges the necessity for strengthening the powers of the finance committees in India, and suggests that if these committees are to be of any use they should be taken into greater confidence by Government, and should also be in some measures authorised to send for papers and records relevant to the subject in hand. He observes that policies, when they are made and announced and have their results incorporated in the estimates, cannot be very much kept under control or modified, but it would be much more useful to influence policies when they are in their making.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

36. The Almora Akhbar for March 1912 (received on the 11th May), complains of the imposition of a toll and house tax in place of octroi at Almora, and describes the new taxation as being more burden some to the people. The editor remarks that no one in the town favours the change, and he strongly advises Government to restore the old system of taxation.

ALMORA AKHBAR, March 1912.

The abolition of octroi at Almora.

37. The Agra Akhbar of the 7th May 1912, (received on the 13th May), complains of the bad condition of the roads and of the defective lighting arrangements in Agra, and adds that the inadequate supply of water has become a standing grievance. The editor says that a public library and a public place of recreation are urgently needed, and expresses regret that no heed is paid to the improvement of the city. He says that Agra received some attention at the hands of Lord Curzon, chiefly on account of the existence of the Taj, and deplores that it has of late been much neglected by Government. He expresses the hope that now that the Capital has been transferred to Delhi, Agra may receive official attention in the matter of improving the city.

AGRA AKHBAR, 7th May 1912.

Improvement of Agra city.

In conclusion he enlarges upon the evil effects produced by the presence of prostitutes in Kinari Bazar, and urges the authorities to take steps to remove them from that quarter.

38. The Rohilkhand Gazette (Bareilly), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), complains that the roads of Bareilly are in a very deplorable condition, and that it causes great inconvenience to the public.

ROHILKHAND GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

The Bareilly Municipality.

The editor invites the attention of the municipal board to the matter, and expresses the hope that it will soon remove this public grievance.

39. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, publishes a communication from the chairman of the municipal board about the present arrangements for water-supply at Allahabad, and urges, in the interests of public convenience, that the supply should also be kept up between the hours of 12 and 3 o'clock, which is the hottest part of the day.

ABHYUDAYA, 12th May 1912.

The water-supply at Allahabad.

40. Al Mushir (Moradabad), of the 11th May 1912, says that the system of mixed electorates on local bodies is the chief obstacle in the way of a rapprochement between the Hindus and Muhammadans, and remarks that it has caused great injury to the interests of the Muhammadan community. The editor urges Government to grant separate electorates to Muhammadans on local bodies, which will not only prove advantageous to them in electing members for municipal and district boards but also in sending representatives to the Councils.

AL MUSHIR, 11th May 1912.

Separate electorates on local bodies.

(e)—Education.

41. The Hon'ble Babu Deva Prasad Sarbadhikary contributes an article to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, in which he suggests that, in order to pave the way for a better understanding between Europeans and Indians and to raise a fitting memorial of India's appreciation of England's good work in the domain of education in this country, and of the King's visit, a central institute should be started in England, where selected Indian youths going there for education and English youths qualifying for an Indian career might be brought up together and could learn to know and understand one another. He says that the initial cost of the building and appliances would be about 10 lakhs which the Indian people and princes could easily raise.

LEADER, 9th May 1912.

Suggestion for a central institute for Indian and English students in England.

TOHFA-I-HIND, 11th May 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

42. The Tohfa-i-Hind (Bijnor), of the 11th May 1912, refers to the fact that the Secretary of State for India, when promising to grant a charter to the Muslim University, has stipulated that no colleges besides the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and any other similarly constituted institutions are to be affiliated to the University, and remarks that if this be done it will defeat the object of the organizers of the University movement which was to spread education in the country.

The editor asks the Hindus and Muhammadans to impress on Government the importance and necessity of allowing the affiliation of other colleges to their respective universities.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

43. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), expresses regret that the Secretary of State for India has expressed his opinion against the affiliation to the Muslim University of other colleges besides the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, and objects to the clause in the proposed constitution providing that the provost and nine professors must in all cases be Europeans. The editor remarks that the provision is altogether unjustifiable and will never be liked by the Muhammadan community.

He also takes exception to the fact that by the constitution of the university the Chancellorship is reserved for the Governor General, who will have the power of veto, and that the majority of senators in the university will be Europeans, and observes that it was the earnest desire of Muhammadans that their university should be an independent body in which Government would have only the power of supervision, in order to see that nothing opposed to its interests was being taught there. He says that the conditions imposed by Government will be most distasteful to the Muhammadans.

ADVOCATE, 12th May 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

44. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 12th May 1912, reproduces from the Observer (Lahore), an article entitled "Government and the Muslim University," in the course of which reference was made to the report that the Secretary of State had withheld his assent to the grant of powers of affiliation outside Aligarh, and expressed the hope that the report was incorrect, or that at any rate the authorities would agree to the suggestion of the leaders of the University movement that only those institutions should be affiliated to the University which maintained a residential system, imparted religious teaching and were otherwise run on the model of the Aligarh College.

LEADER, 14th May 1912.

The Allahabad University.

45. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 14th May 1912, refers to the notification issued by the Registrar of the Allahabad University requiring all candidates who appeared at the Nagpur centre to present themselves on the 17th of June next for re-examination in Physiology and Modern History, in consequence of a report made by the superintendent of that centre that the question papers in both the subjects had been tampered with, and complains of the delay of the Allahabad University in making this announcement. The editor enquires why the re-examination did not take place within a reasonable time, seeing that the discovery about the leakage of the question papers must have been known immediately after the examination, instead of now causing the candidates serious inconvenience.

LEADER, 9th May 1912.

Royal boons: grace marks for matriculation candidates.

46. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, lends its support to the suggestion of a matriculation candidate, who urges that, in commemoration of the Royal visit, candidates who are likely to fail by only a few marks should be allowed to pass this year. The editor says that the Royal boon of allowing grace marks would be far more effective in stamping out unrest in the student world than any scheme of religious instruction, and he expresses regret that in devising boons the responsible advisers of His Majesty forgot the poor student.

RAHBAR, 7th May 1912.

Objectionable passages in Thomson's History of India.

47. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer objects to certain passages in Thomson's History of India in which it is said to be written that the ancient Aryas ate beef and sacrificed bulls, and that they killed their enemies and enchanted women through the agency of mantras. He points out that such statements about the cow deeply wound Hindu feelings, and expresses regret that the Hindu members of the Punjab Text-Book Committee should have allowed such a book to be prescribed for schools, and in conclusion urges Hindu leaders to agitate for the exclusion of this book from all courses.

LEADER, 15th May 1912.

48. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th May 1912, refers to the opposition of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce to the system of State technical scholarships to foreign countries, which was instituted eight years ago for the benefit of Indians, and to the opinions expressed by Mr. Silver, Sir Thomas Holland and Sir Theodore Morrison on the subject, and remarks that the defects were evidently pointed out only to be remedied and not as arguments for discontinuing the scholarships altogether. The editor discusses the difficulties encountered by Indian technical students owing to the reluctance of manufacturers to admit them to their workshops for practical training, and says that is necessary for the success of the scheme to provide openings for these young men on their return to India. He would strongly deprecate the discontinuance of these scholarships at this stage when they give promise of result and when an industrial awakening is just visible.

State technical scholarships.

LEADER, 9th May 1912.

49. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, publishes a contributed article discussing the subject of primary education in Garhwal, in which the writer states that various causes have contributed to make primary education unpopular and suggests remedies. He urges that primary education should be made compulsory and free, and that not only should the boys be exempted from payment of fees but that means should also be devised to stop the exactions of the teachers by raising their pay by recruiting a better class of teachers, and by exercising greater supervision over them. He says that inspecting officers cause inconvenience to villagers by requiring coolies, and suggests that they should have permanent coolies engaged for their transport work, and that the government bania should in all cases arrange for supplies. He objects to the practice of subordinate inspecting officers stopping with the school teachers, and says that this should be discouraged.

He advocates that night schools be started for such children as are required to work in the fields during the day.

Primary education in Garhwal.

ABHYUDAYA, 12th May 1912.

50. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, after thanking Sir John Hewett for his efforts to extend industrial and technical instruction in these provinces, expresses regret that primary education has not received the same amount of support at His Honour's hands. In view of the urgent need for money for the extension of elementary education, the editor expresses surprise at the action of the Local Government in not drawing the whole amount of its proportionate allotment out of the grant of 50 lakhs of rupees announced on the occasion of the King-Emperor's coronation at Delhi. He quotes Dr. Sundar Lal's remarks in this connection at the last provincial budget debate, and urges that Government should draw its whole allotment to help the district boards in re-opening the primary schools closed last year, and in starting new schools in places where there is demand for them.

Primary education in the United Provinces.

TYAGI BRAHMAN, April 1912.

51. The Tyagi Brahman (Meerut), for the month of April 1912 (received on the 13th May), discusses at length the evils which result from the absence of religious education for Hindus in schools and colleges, and says that English educated Hindus in most cases despise their religion and are lacking in morality. The editor appeals to Hindus to impart religious education to their children, and suggests that they should make arrangements to teach them Hindi and Sanskrit as a second language in schools, and that they also should arrange to employ Sanskrit teachers in Hindu hostels.

Religious education for Hindus.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 12th May 1912.

52. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 12th May 1912, says that there has been an increase of immorality among Muhammadan women, and that the reading of novels is producing a harmful effect on their character.

The editor observes that he is not opposed to giving reasonable freedom to women, but that he deprecates granting any freedom which might lead to immorality. He says that there is scope for religious education for women, and that it is the defective system of education and the bad example and neglect of the husbands that have brought about the present deplorable state of affairs.

Female education.

He strongly opposes any scheme to impart English education to Muslim women, and urges that if the Muhammadans do not want to hasten their national extinction, they should confine female education to a study of religion and Urdu.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

Complaint against the Ghazipur educational committee and its agent.

53. A correspondent, who signs himself "SHAH HAFIZ ALAM JUNAIDI FAKHRI," writes in the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), complaining of the misappropriation of the funds of the Ghazipur educational committee by its agent, and expresses regret at the indifference of the members of the committee towards the conduct of the agent. He expresses the hope that the matter will now be thoroughly enquired into, and that the public will be informed of the result.

QAISER-I-HIND, 9th May 1912.

The Nadwat-ul-Ulama and the Madrasa Ilahiyat.

54. The Qaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 9th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), remarks that the Nadwat-ul-Ulama has done very little work in the field of religion, and that it has been wasting its energies in trying to win over men of the Aligarh cult. The editor expresses the opinion that students educated in the Aligarh College only imbibe the evils of the West without assimilating any good qualities, and that they have no regard for their religion.

With regard to the Madrasa Ilahiyat, he suggests that it should try to propagate the Qoran and the teachings of the Qoran only, and that the students should be encouraged to study the Qoran independently and without the help of translations by Maulana Shibli or Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 1st May 1912.

Prevention of cruelty to animals.

55. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 11th May), asserts that civilized humanity inflicts great cruelty upon dumb animals both in connection with their requirements for food and for other luxuries, and expresses gratification that for some time past philanthropists have been establishing societies both in Europe and India for preventing such cruelty. The editor admits that these societies have done much useful work, but he urges that they should redouble their efforts and that they should draw upon ancient Indian literature to inculcate sympathy for animals.

HITAISHI, 4th May 1912.

A scare at Shahjahanpur.

56. The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 4th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), reports that news has been received from Shahjahanpur that during the last week about a dozen children between ten and fourteen years of age have been missing from their homes. The editor states that it is rumoured in the city that it is the work of coolie-recruiting agents, and that the residents of Shahjahanpur have petitioned the District Magistrate.

He observes that it is a serious affair which should engage the early attention of the authorities.

MASHRIQ, 7th May 1912.

Plague inoculation in Gorakhpur.

57. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 11th May), contradicts the allegations made in the contributed article that appeared in the Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 29th April 1912, about plague inoculation in Gorakhpur (vide Selections No. 18, paragraph 28), and asserts that the police had no hand in the affair, and that it never compelled people to get themselves inoculated. The editor says that Pandit Madan Lal Atri has not been transferred from Gorakhpur, and that those who are opposed to inoculation exhibit their short-sightedness and narrow-mindedness.

AGRA AKHBAR, 7th May 1912.

Electric illumination in the Taj.

58. The Agra Akhbar of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), refers to the objection of the Watan (Lahore), to having electric light over the tomb and at the gate in the Taj at Agra, and expresses agreement with the Watan that electric light takes away the beauty from the Taj. The editor of the Agra Akhbar expresses regret that the criticisms of the Watan cannot influence the authorities, but he notes that the electric lights have been in existence for about a year, and that engineers have given the assurance that the electric fittings will in no way damage the walls of the Taj.

59. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), remarks that the unrest prevailing in India is due not only to the distinction made by Government in dealing with Hindus and Muhammadans, but also to the preferential treatment accorded to Europeans and Eurasians, and the editor refers to a report said to have been published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika (Calcutta) that a man named Nabi Bakhsh, a yard foreman of Ambala cantonment station, was severely assaulted by the assistant station master of that station, and that the railway authorities had not yet given him permission to prosecute the assistant station master.

RAHBAR, 7th May 1912.

Assaults on Indians by Eurasians and Anglo-Indians.

The editor suggests that, if the Under Secretary of State for India pays his proposed visit to India to study Indian affairs at first hand, he should not only study the Hindu-Muhammadan question, but should also carefully go into the still more important question of the treatment accorded to Indians by Eurasians and Anglo-Indians. He asserts that the unwarranted acts of Eurasians and Anglo-Indians are interpreted by the ignorant masses as those of the British Government, and he urges that it is essential for the strengthening of the foundations of its rule and the enhancement of its prestige that Government should take steps to stop the recurrence of such outrages on the part of its Eurasian and Anglo-Indian subjects.

60. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), refers to the opinion expressed by Lord Minto that Indians should be appointed to high offices under the State in consideration of their qualifications, and that no distinction of colour should be allowed to influence such appointments, and points out that Lord Minto appointed very few able Indians to high posts during his viceroyalty. The editor warns his countrymen against the tactics of statesmen like Lord Minto whose deeds do not correspond with their words.

RAHBAR, 7th May 1912.

Indians and high offices under the State.

61. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), referring to the recent incident at Allahabad, which resulted in the death of a young boy named Hardie, suggests that Government should enforce some restriction against the possession of firearms by young boys who are likely to injure themselves through careless handling of them.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 8th May 1912.

Possession of firearms by young boys.

62. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, welcomes the appointment of a committee under the presidency of Sir William Nicholson to consider and discuss Indian military affairs, but expresses doubt as to whether it will result in any real good to Indians. The editor deprecates the intention to keep the report of the committee secret, and points out that it would be much better to publish it and invite public criticisms.

ABHYUDAYA, 9th May 1912.

The Nicholson Committee.

He urges that the questions relating to the strength of the Army and the curtailment of the growing Army expenditure should be considered from the Indian rather than from the imperial standpoint, and that the strength of the Army should be strictly limited to the needs of India for the preservation of internal peace, and for defence against foreign invasion.

He argues that if the Indian Army is also required to safeguard British possessions in Asia a portion of its cost should be met from the Imperial Exchequer and from the revenues of those possessions. He points out that the strength of the British Army has been increased which benefits the United Kingdom and not India, in that India only serves as a training ground for British soldiers, who return to England and are available there as reservists. He says that if the term of service of Indian sepoys were reduced a large reserve force could be established in the country.

He closes the article with the suggestion that Lord Roberts's scheme of 1879 for the increase of the reserves should be carried out so that in case of emergency their services could be utilized for the defence of the country.

63. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, reproduces an article entitled "Vaccination" from the Bharat Mitra (Calcutta), and expresses agreement with its contemporary's suggestion that parents should be given the option of getting children vaccinated instead of its being made compulsory. The editor remarks that it is an important question which Government should not disregard, and suggests that, as in England, the law relating to vaccination in British India should be so amended as to eliminate all element of compulsion from it.

ABHYUDAYA, 9th May 1912.

Vaccination.

ABHYUDAYA, 9th May 1912.

The sugar industry.

64. A correspondent, signing himself "AN INDIAN," contributes a long article to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 9th May 1912, in which he advises Indians not to buy cloth and sugar of foreign manufacture but to develop those two industries in their own country.

He says that their liking for foreign cloth and sugar is responsible for the enormous export of corn to foreign countries, while Indians have to live only on one meal, and he urges that Government be moved to legislate against the exportation of corn.

In conclusion he makes some suggestions for the improvement of sugarcane cultivation.

LEADER, 10th May 1912.

The Indian Planters' Gazette and the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad.

65. The following is an extract from "Random notes by X.Y.Z." which appeared in the Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th May 1912:—

"An Upper India correspondent of that obscure paper, the Indian Planters' Gazette, has earned a cheap notoriety by making a foul attack on one of our esteemed countrymen—the Hon'ble Babu Brijnandan Prasad of Moradabad. After the explanation made by the Hon'ble member which satisfied even the Inspector General of Police, and the dignified attitude of Sir John Hewett, every one thought this unfortunate incident had closed. But this correspondent would not let it alone. He wants to know who this Hon'ble gentleman was. I am sure your readers would like to know who is this denizen of Billingsgate. Really it would be interesting to know the antecedents of this man, so that some light might be thrown on the motives for this cowardly attack. These are the people who are really the enemies of the British Government in India, as writings such as these arouse bitter feelings which require a good deal of tact to allay."

LEADER, 12th May 1912.

Revision of clerical establishment in the United Provinces.

66. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer refers to the proposal laid down by Mr. Pike's Committee that if the head of an office said a man was inefficient it should be recognized that he was, and that there should be no interference by way of appeal with orders of reduction or dismissal or suspension for inefficiency, and says that the sanction of such procedure would create great discontent among government servants. He urges that the prospect of pension and the right to make an appeal in cases of unjust punishment or unjust promotion of juniors are the two most attractive features of government service, and that in the absence of the right of appeal there is danger of injustice at the hands of prejudiced officers.

With regard to the proposal that appointment to the post of head assistant should be confined to gazetted officers, he urges that the clerical staff should not be deprived of opportunity for promotion, on the presumption that a gazetted officer would prove more trustworthy than a clerk raised from the subordinate grade.

HINDUSTANI, 13th May 1912.

Need for holding an agricultural exhibition at Lucknow.

67. The Hindustani (Lucknow), of the 13th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer suggests to the Agricultural department that an agricultural exhibition should be held at Lucknow every year on the occasion of the Aligunj fair, which, he says, will enable visitors from different parts of the country to see the latest improvements in agricultural implements.

He says that the holding of agricultural exhibitions is a much better way of teaching new methods of agriculture to Indian agriculturists than giving instruction in the school at Cawnpore, where it is difficult for an ordinary cultivator to support himself while learning new methods.

DARBAR, 14th May 1912.

The importation of foreign goods into India.

68. The Darbar (Agra), of the 14th May 1912, discusses at length the harm done by the extensive importation of foreign articles into India, and remarks that the continual exchange of India's raw products for the finished articles of other countries is daily adding to the impoverishment of the country.

The editor says that Government can improve the condition of India either by totally stopping the importation of foreign goods into India or by restricting their importation by means of heavy duties. He acknowledges that either course would be difficult to take, and so he urges his countrymen to improve the condition of their country by opening factories and by patronizing indigenous industries.

69. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 14th May 1912, says that the importation into India of articles of European manufacture is constantly increasing, and observes that while large sums of money are being spent on buying articles of foreign manufacture, the Indian industries are suffering for want of encouragement. The editor expresses regret that, though Indians have begun to realize their duty in respect of the development of indigenous industries, they have not yet been able to carry into effect the principles of the swadeshi movement. He points out that though European articles command an extensive sale owing to their artistic design and superior finish, they cannot compete with Indian articles in point of durability, and deplores the limited sale of articles of Indian manufacture. He attributes this to an unhealthy desire to follow European fashions, and expresses apprehension that the use of such luxuries, as motor cars and other recently invented articles, will swell the import figures for years to come.

OUDH AKHBAR, 14th May 1912.

The importation of foreign goods into India.

70. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th May 1912, refers to a recent meeting of the Brahmans of Benares to protest against the claim of the Saha community of Eastern Bengal to recognition as Vaishya, and remarks that if the Brahmans continue to disregard the feelings of the lower classes the latter are likely to give up the Hindu religion and adopt some other faith.

TAFRIH, 14th May 1912.

The depressed classes.

The editor says that it is remarkable that so long as a low caste Hindu professes his ancestral faith, Hindus of higher caste do not like even to touch him, but that as soon as he becomes a Christian, they begin to show respect to him.

He appeals to the Hindus not to treat the lower classes contemptuously, and expresses apprehension that, if their present objectionable treatment of their low caste brethren continue, the Hindu community will soon lose considerably in numbers.

71. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 16th May 1912, reports that Mr. C. Y. Chintamani, the editor of the Leader (Allahabad), has gone on one month's leave to Vizagapatam, and expresses appreciation of the successful and strenuous work done by him in conducting the paper and making it self-supporting.

ADVOCATE, 16th May 1912.

The editor of the Leader (Allahabad).

The editor states that Mr. Chintamani will preside over the seventh session of the Vizagapatam District Conference, and that Mr. N. A. Dravid, M.A., of the Servants of India Society will edit the Leader in his absence.

72. The editor of the Advocate (Lucknow), in the issue of the 16th May 1912, refers to a long letter sent to him by a correspondent from Partabgarh in reply to a letter which appeared in the Leader (Allahabad) stating that the new Assistant Director of Land Records and Agriculture, Mr. L. Sharma, had proved to the Government that Mr. Hadi's sugar machines were a failure. The editor, in this connection, suggests that, in case Mr. Sharma has submitted any report to Government on this subject the report should be immediately published and that the opinions of capitalists should be ascertained.

ADVOCATE, 16th May 1912.

Khan Bahadur Saiyid Muhammad Hadi.

He reproduces a portion of the letter of his Partabgarh correspondent, and observes that he is glad to hear that Mr. Hadi has proved to be a very popular Magistrate and Collector, has shown himself free from any bias towards Muhammadans, has proved to be a great friend of the taluqdars and has become a "palladium of justice to the humble peasant." In conclusion the editor remarks that Government will now have the satisfaction of noting that the experiment of appointing deputy collectors as district magistrates has been very successful in the United Provinces.

73. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912, publishes an account of an address delivered by Babu Bipin Chandra Pal at a meeting held in Calcutta, in the course of which the lecturer is said to have discussed the advantages of the establishment of mills and big factories, and to have said that the mills had done more mischief than

LEADER, 16th May 1912.

Industrial and economic development of India.

good in the West, and that India, which was primarily an agricultural country, would be involved in ruin and poverty if she followed the example of the West. Babu Bipin Chandra Pal is described as having advocated the encouragement of manual work instead of machinery.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 1st May 1912 and the SHUBH CHINTAK, 8th May 1912.

The late Mr. W. T. Stead.

74. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 11th May), and the Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), publish appreciatory notes about the late Mr. W. T. Stead, commending his fearless and honest character, and referring to what he had done for the weak and oppressed throughout the world.

AGRA AKHBAR, 7th May 1912.

The late Mr. W. T. Stead.

75. The Agra Akhbar of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), expresses appreciation of the late Mr. W. T. Stead's endeavours in the cause of peace, and of his unflinching advocacy of the rights of subject nations. He was described as having had great sympathy with Indian aspirations and was praised for his denunciation of Italy's invasion of Tripoli.

ABHYUDAYA, 12th May 1912.

Recent shipping disasters.

76. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, calls attention to the finding of the Admiralty Court with regard to the sinking of the Oceana, and points out that the recent shipping disasters were most of them due to the negligence of the ships' officers. The editor suggests the enforcement of stricter rules regulating the conduct of officers in order to minimise the chances of disaster due to preventible causes.

V.—Legislation.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 8th May 1912.

The Waqf Validation Bill.

77. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 8th May 1912 (received on the 13th May), expresses gratification at the acceptance of the principles of the Waqf Validation Bill by the Secretary of State for India, and congratulates the Nadwat-ul-Ulama on the success of its efforts in moving Government to recognize the principle of waqf-allal-aulad according to the Muhammadan Law.

ADVOCATE, 16th May 1912.

The Government of India Bill.

78. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 16th May 1912, reproduces the portion of the speech by the Hon'ble Mr. Montagu in the course of the debate on the second reading of the Government of India Bill, in which he dealt with the attitude of the Muhammadans on the darbar pronouncements, and contrasts it with its summary, as cabled by Reuter, to India. The editor asserts that Reuter's version misrepresented the Under Secretary and made the speech somewhat offensive to the Muhammadan community. He says that Mr. Montagu made a clear statement of fact, entirely moderate and respectful in tone, and that he was right in saying that the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal were in nationality different from those of other parts of India. He remarks that the growth of Urdu in India as the common language of the Muhammadans is calculated to increase the feeling of unity among the Muhammadans of India, but that it will not make the Bengali, Punjabi or Moplah Muhammadans of one nationality.

He goes on to say that Mr. Montagu was perfectly justified in stating that the Muhammadans in East Bengal were more akin by birth and nationality to Bengali Hindus than to Muhammadans living outside Bengal, and that he did not describe the claims of the Eastern Bengal Muhammadans as preposterous and ambitious, but simply stated that in accordance with their desire they were given a new university at Dacca for their educational facility, and that the Governor would be in their midst for a portion of the year.

In conclusion the editor remarks that the speech read as a whole could not give any reasonable cause for offence to Muhammadans. He congratulates Mr. Montagu on enunciating the wise and just policy of observing strict impartiality between Hindus and Muhammadans, and entertains the hope that the policy of just dealings with all classes will become the permanent policy of the Government of India.

LEADER, 11th May 1912.

The Viceroy and the veto.

79. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 11th May 1912, expresses surprise at the numerous objections raised against the power of veto exercised by the Viceroy in rejecting the Orissa Tenancy Bill passed by the Bengal Legislative Council. The editor points out that the technical irregularities of not recording his reasons in writing and of communicating his decision verbally to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal have now been set right by the Viceroy, and says that the Viceroy was quite right in deferring to the wishes of the representatives of the people, who keenly opposed the bill and wanted it to be considered by the new Behar Council. He goes on to say that the Viceroy would have been much better advised if, instead of taking the whole burden upon himself, he had referred the whole question to a committee of his Council, but remarks that as it was he was quite within his right.

Referring to the question of prestige, he remarks that the prestige of no Local Government need be affected by the veto of the Viceroy, and contends that it was more important to keep up the prestige of the representatives of the people.

He replies to the contention that the opposition to the bill was not a new thing and that the Bengal Tenancy Bill was passed in spite of strenuous opposition by pointing out that the reformed councils were meant simply to remedy this state of affairs and to make public opinion a living factor in the decision of legislative questions.

He observes that the public disclaimer of Messrs. Haq and Sinha disposes of the theory of backstairs influence, and contends that, as the press communiqué refers to the constitutional advisers and not adviser, no responsibility can attach to the Law Member alone apart from the whole of the Executive Council. With regard to the objection that the Viceroy should have interfered with the bill in the very beginning, he remarks that it was not possible for the Viceroy to anticipate the increasing volume of opposition to the bill, and he replies to the final agreement that Sir Charles Bayley, the new Lieutenant Governor of Behar, had assented to the measure by stating that the provisions of the bill should now be considered by the new members of the Behar Council.

VI.—RAILWAY.

The Bengal and North-Western Railway.

80. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 7th May 1912 (received on the 11th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains that changes in the timing of the Bengal and North-Western Railway up and down Chapra-Allahabad trains have been made without any consideration of connection with trains leaving the junctions en route. He also invites the attention of the railway authorities to the inconvenience caused by the failure of these trains to stop at many intermediate stations, and remarks that if they are meant only for passengers proceeding from Chapra to Allahabad viâ Benares, tickets should not be issued by this train for intermediate stations.

MASHRIQ, 7th May 1912.

He also complains of the absence of arrangements for the supply of water for Muhammadans, and suggests that bhistis should be provided at stations.

Insufficiency of railway wagons for dispatching fodder to Gujrat and Kathiawar.

81. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 10th May 1912, complains of the insufficiency of wagons on the Great Indian Peninsula and East Indian Railways for dispatching fodder to the famine-stricken areas in Gujrat and Kathiawar, and emphasizes the urgency of expediting supplies from several dépôts for fodder to the affected areas. The editor expresses apprehension that a temporary break down of the supply would nullify the efforts hitherto made to save cattle and the philanthropic relieving agencies would suffer considerable financial loss.

LEADER, 10th May 1912.

He urges the railway authorities to take prompt measures to ensure a sufficient supply of wagons.

Minimum railway rates.

82. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, refers to the question of minimum rates over a portion of the East Indian Railway raised by the Calcutta merchants, and remarks that if the Indian producer of the tract in question could transport his produce to the market of the world for less than it now costs him, it would be to his advantage, and the whole agricultural industry of the area concerned would be encouraged. The editor says that the minimum rate varies with the cost of transport, and that if the cost of transport towards Calcutta over a longer distance were really less than over a shorter distance towards Bombay it would be to the advantage of both the inland producer and of the Calcutta merchant.

LEADER, 12th May 1912.

In conclusion he urges that the whole question is of a very technical nature, and he suggests the institution of an enquiry by experts to thresh out the whole question, and settle it not merely in the interests of the mercantile communities of the rival ports but for the benefit of the producer in the interior.

ADVOCATE, 12th May 1912.

Indian employes on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

83. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 12th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer describes certain alleged grievances of Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, and remarks that there should be no distinction of colour and nationality in the matter of employment, salary and allowances. He takes exception to the treatment of the Indian staff by the European officers, says that it sometimes indicates scarcely concealed hatred and contempt, and remarks that the disregard by the officers of the rules framed by Government for dealing with Indian subordinates creates considerable discontent.

The editor invites the attention of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway authorities to the grievances of the Indian staff.

LEADER, 15th May 1912.

Refreshment cars for Indians.

84. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 15th May 1912, refers to the letter addressed by Sir Henry Burt of the North-Western Railway to an Hon'ble member of the Punjab Legislative Council with regard to his proposal to run refreshment cars for Indians on all important mail and passenger trains, and reminds the readers of the efforts made by the paper so far back as June 1910 in the matter, with the result that the Southern Mahratta Railway perceived the necessity of running refreshment cars and succeeded in their experiment. The editor briefly summarizes the history of the movement, and remarks that Sir Henry is not justified in stating that it would not be possible to provide refreshment cars for Indians on the track between Lahore and Karachi, seeing that this section is one on which such cars are most needed. He contrasts this procedure on a State-managed railway with that on a company-worked system in Madras, and observes that there is certainly no excuse for this tardiness in following the example set by another administration.

VII.—Post Office.

ABHYUDAYA, 12th May 1912.

Clause (71) of the Postal Guide.

85. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, asks the Postmaster-General not to insist on the strict enforcement of clause (71) of the Postal Guide, but to allow the continuance of the present practice whereby advertisement sheets containing little or no news are also freely distributed through newspapers.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

VAISHYA HITKARI, April 1912.

Cow-killing in Ajodhya.

86. The Vaishya Hitkari (Meerut), for the month of April 1912 (received on the 13th May), expresses regret that the birth place of Ram in Ajodhya should now be represented only by a temple in the courtyard of a mosque which is surrounded on all sides by Muhammadan tombs. The editor refers at length to the iconoclastic tendencies of the Muhammadan rulers of India, and remarks that Ajodhya is a standing example of the fanatic zeal of Muslim despots.

He goes on to say that after the downfall of the Moghal Empire the Hindus enjoyed a little relief, but complains that the Muhammadans have again assumed an aggressive attitude, and are now demanding the right to sacrifice cows in the courtyard of this mosque in Ajodhya.

SWADESH BANDHAVA, April 1912.

The Gaucharan fair at Agra.

87. The Swadesh Bandhava (Agra), for April 1912 (received on the 13th May), supports the memorial submitted by the Hindus of Agra to the Viceroy praying that they may not be required to take out a license for holding the Gaucharan fair, and remarks that the request is a reasonable one and should be granted by His Excellency, in view of the fact that under British rule every community in India has been given complete liberty to celebrate its religious fairs and festivals.

TAFRIH, 14th May 1912.

The cow-protection movement.

88. The Tafrih (Lucknow), of the 14th May 1912, publishes an article contributed by a Muhammadan in which the writer describes the usefulness of cows, and in support of his contention quotes a hadis of the Prophet Muhammad to the effect that beef produced disease and the milk of the cow was of value medicinally. The editor invites the attention of Muhammadans to the hadis, and expresses the hope that they will make efforts to gain the goodwill of the Hindus by refraining from slaughtering cows.

SADDHARM PRACHARAK, 1st May 1912.

89. The Saddharm Prachárak (Kangri, Bijnor), of the 1st May 1912 (received on the 11th May), says that the bulk of the sadhus of the present day are a burden upon society, and instead of being public benefactors, set a bad example to the public by abducting women and children. The editor urges that all religious societies should establish institutions for their reform, in order that they may be induced to live moral and useful lives.

Reform of sadhus.

TRISHUL, 9th May 1912.

90. The Trishul (Benares), of the 9th May 1912 (received on the 16th May), in a leading article entitled "Is this our social progress," complains of the degenerated condition of the Bengalis, and of their disregard for their religion and social customs. The editor advises the Bengalis to try to preserve their nationality like Englishmen, whom they wish to follow, and he ascribes the prosperity of the latter to their patriotism and sense of nationality. He goes on to say that every nation has its own peculiarities and characteristics, and that if the Bengalis go on imitating others they will eventually have none of their own, and it will be difficult for them to distinguish themselves from other nations.

The alleged degenerate condition of the Bengalis.

In conclusion the editor discusses the evils of inter-marriage, and urges the Bengalis to refrain from adopting new customs.

ABHYUDAYA, 13th May 1912.

91. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 12th May 1912, discusses the problem of improving relations between the three chief communities of India—Hindus, Muhammadans and Christians—and remarks that no rapprochement between them is possible unless they realize that they are all equal and that their interests are identical, and unless Government ceases to attach greater importance to one community than another. The editor says that another disturbing factor in this connection is that, while Europeans take the greatest possible care for the protection of their rights and interests, they disregard the claims of other communities, and he points out that the latest instance of such an attitude on the part of Europeans is the demand of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce to return nine members to the Provincial Legislative Council, although the Bengali and Marwari merchants are not entitled to have even one representative on that body. He says that the wish of His Majesty the King-Emperor for the establishment of unity and sympathy in India will never be realized if more regard is not paid to it than this.

Relations among the different communities of India.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

ALMORA AKHBAR, March 1912.

92. The Almora Akhbar for March 1912 (received on the 11th May), reports the presence of a man-eating tiger in the Naini Tal district, in the neighbourhood of Ramgarh and Nathua Khan which is said to have already caused a loss of more than eight lives. The editor asks the local authorities to take immediate steps to kill it.

A man-eating tiger in the Naini Tal district.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, United Provinces.

NAINI TAL: The 17th May 1912.

PRINTED BY J. B. MIDDLETON AT THE GOVT. CAMP BRANCH PRESS, NAINI TAL.

SELECTIONS FROM THE NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 25th May 1912.

CONTENTS.

		Page.
I.—POLITICS.
(a)—Foreign:
1.	Russia and Afghanistan and England's duty towards India	485
2.	The situation in Morocco	485
3.	The situation in Persia	485
4.	The situation in Persia	485
5.	Deportation of two Sikh women from Canada	486
6.	Pan-Islamism and the Turkish Foreign Minister	486
7.	The Italian-Turkish war	486
8.	The Italian-Turkish war	486
9.	The European Powers and Muhammadan states	486
(b)—Home:
10.	The regeneration of India	487
11.	The regeneration of India	487
12.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	487
13.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	487
14.	Relations between the rulers and the ruled in India	488
15.	Raja Chet Singh	488
16.	Saiyid Rashid Raza	488
17.	The treatment of political prisoners ...	488
18.	The Queen Victoria's Proclamation of 1858 and the public service	489
19.	Sir J. D. Rees and India	489
20.	The transfer of the Capital to Delhi ...	489
21.	The coming council elections	490
22.	The coming council elections	490
23.	The coming council elections	490
24.	Self-government of India	490
25.	Executive Councils for the United Provinces and the Punjab	491
26.	The Council regulations	491
27.	The Council regulations	491
28.	Indians in South Africa	492
29.	Indians in foreign countries	492
30.	The evils of subjection	492
31.	Maulana Shibli Nomani and Muslim politics	492
32.	The future political policy of Muhammadans	493
33.	The political awakening amongst the Muhammadans of India	493
34.	Mr. Montagu and Indian Muhammadans...	493
35.	Mr. Montagu and Indian Muhammadans...	493
36.	Mr. Montagu and Indian Muhammadans...	494
II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.
	Nil.
III.—NATIVE STATES.
	Nil.
IV.—ADMINISTRATION.
(a)—Judicial and Revenue:
	Nil.
(b)—Police:
37.	Police reform	494
38.	The Moradabad police training school ...	495
(c)—Finance and Taxation:
	Nil.
(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:
39.	The Allahabad district board	495
40.	Expenditure on sanitation by the district board of the United Provinces ...	495

Page.

(e)—Education:

41. The high cost of education in India ... 495
42. Female education amongst Muhammadans in India 496
43. The need for an Indian history in Hindi... 496
44. The proposed Muslim University ... 496
45. The proposed Muslim University ... 496
46. The gurukul 496
47. University reform in Bombay... ... 496
48. Muhammadan education in the United Provinces 497
49. Election of Fellows by graduates of the Allahabad University 497
50. The Allahabad University 498
51. The Allahabad University 498

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

52. The new coinage 498
53. The new coinage 498
54. The boycott movement 498
55. Forest re-settlement in Garhwal ... 498
56. The civil law examination in Kumaun ... 498
57. The excise duty on cotton 498
58. Official displeasure on the Hindi language 499
59. The Empire Trade Commission ... 499
60. The closing of the Hanumat press of the Kalakankar estate 499
61. Japanese prostitutes in Calcutta ... 499
62. The export of corn to Europe 499
63. Relations between Indian officials and the public 499
64. A suggestion for an United Provinces students' conference 499

Page.

65. Complaint against emigration agents ... 500
66. An attempted murder in Raswara in the Mirzapur district... 500

V.—LEGISLATION.

67. The Elementary Education Bill ... 500
68. The Waqf Validation Bill and the Muslim League... 500
69. Anti-gambling legislation 500

VI.—RAILWAY.

70. The Rajputana-Malwa Railway ... 501
71. Grievances of the Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ... 501

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

72. The cow-protection movement ... 501
73. The cow-protection movement ... 501
74. The sanctity of the Vedas 502
75. The parda system amongst the Muhammadans 502
76. The condition of Hindus 502
77. Muhammadan government employés and Friday prayers... 502
78. The proselytising work of the Arya Samaj... 502
79. Dedication of minor girls and young women to temples 503

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

80. Rumour regarding the building of the Saraghat bridge... 503

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st May 1913.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian	Lucknow ...	Quarterly ...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	300 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 „
4	Hindustán Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ghulam Muhammad	700 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P.	450 „
11	Theosophy in India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehangir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Ram Deva; B.A., Arya; 31 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Ganga Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintamani; Madrasi; 30 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Madho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European; 28 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	1,500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	150 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudagar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Nath Vaishya; 36 ...	200 „
†20	Álamgir	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal, Vaishya; 41	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Áwarif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40...	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kasim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nasir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A. ... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ram Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ánand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Ram Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43 ...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam	300 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumar; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsar	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zamin; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulla, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29 ...	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 "
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 "
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 "
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 "
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shah Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 "
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A., Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Rám Dayal Vidyarthi; 35	709 "
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 "
49	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 "
50	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 "
51	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 "
†52	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Ilahi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 "
53	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 "
54	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 "
55	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathura Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 "
56	Vyápari and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 "
57	All-India Shiah Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubarak Ali; 32	600 "
58	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 "
59	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 "
60	Al Khalil	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 copies.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktada Khan; 32 ...	300 "
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Áwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Guláb Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 "
66	Dabdaba-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 "
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 "
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 "
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 "
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 "
71	Ittihad	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 "
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 "
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 "
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Agra	Do. ...	Kamta Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 "
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 "
76	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 "
77	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandít Tara Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,800 "
78	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
79	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.
80	Nizam-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qazi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 "

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 copies.
82	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 „
83	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	200 „
84	Sahifa	Bijnor	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	350 „
85	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahur Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 „
86	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	350 „
87	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 „
88	Tajir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nazir Ahmad; 35	328 „
89	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Sajjad Husain; Shaikh; 33	400 „
90	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 „
91	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 „
92	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 „
93	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do. ...	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 „
94	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	800 „
	ARABIC-URDU.
†95	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaiman; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
96	Almora Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†97	Ánand Kádambini... ...	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Chaudhari; Brahman; 56	100 „
98	Bharatodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 „
99	Bharát Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 „
100	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	180 „
101	Bráhman Samáchár... ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Narayan Prasad; Brahman... ...	405 „
102	Bráhman Sarvasva	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhimsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 „
103	Dehati	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Srivastava; Kayasth ...	600 „
†104	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 „
*105	Dharm Kusumakar	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasad Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 „
106	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girja Dutt; Naithani Brahman; 36.	600 „
107	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,800 „
†108	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	...	300 „
109	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26	650 „
†110	Jain Nari Hitkari	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasad; Jain; 29	1,000 „
111	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 „
*112	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Ram Prasad Misra; 22	1,000 „
113	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Nath Yogishwar; 37... ...	450 „
114	Kányakubj Hitkári	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lal Misra; 46 ...	1,500 „
*115	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Balmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 „
*116	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 „
117	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya; 27 ...	1,600 „
118	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 „
†119	Naraini or The Vedanta Patrika	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Ramnandhan; Kayasth; 32 ...	325 „
120	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Keshavdeva Shastri; 37	1,000 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 copies.
*122	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	200 „
123	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
124	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Narayan Dube	700 „
125	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 „
126	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahabir Prasad Dwivedi; 46 ...	4,000 „
127	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 „
128	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasoda Devi; 31	3,000 „
*129	Sudhanidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannath Prasád Shukla; Vaidye; 36.	500 „
130	Swadesh Bándhavá	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rajput; 45	600 „
131	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35.	1,000 „
132	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 „
*133	Vánijya Sukhdáyak	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 „
134	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swami Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 „
135	Bharat Dharm Neta... ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 „
†136	Kam Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Baba Bhagwan Das Udasi; 46 ...	500 „
137	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 „
138	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 „
139	Vyápári and Kárigar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 „
140	Ánand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 „
141	Árya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 „
142	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 „
143	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banarsi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ... Babu Bansi Dhar	1,000 „
144	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 „
†145	Mahila Hitkarak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Srimati Vidyavati Devi	250 „
146	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 „
147	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 „
148	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI
149	Trishnl	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to the increase of Russian influence in Asia, and remarks that her recent action in Persia is part of a carefully thought out scheme for creating a naval base in the Persian Gulf, and for concentrating Russian forces on the Western Frontier of the Indian Empire. The editor attributes the present move to Delhi and the increased attention bestowed on the defence of the North-Western Frontier to England's solicitude for the safety of India, and urges that the integrity and strength of Afghanistan as a buffer state be preserved at all costs. He points out that Russia has, in order to advance her interests in Persia, flagrantly violated the terms of the Anglo-Russian Convention of 1907, and observes that if England will try to stick to the letter and spirit of the Convention she will soon find further proof of Russian duplicity. He goes on to say that England has suffered a severe diplomatic defeat at the hands of Russia in Persia, and that she should not in future allow herself to be misled by false promises.

MASHRIQ, 14th May 1912.

Russia and Afghanistan and England's duty towards India.

He denounces the suggestion offered by some statesmen that Afghanistan should not be preserved as a buffer state, and says that any attempts to exercise undue influence on Afghanistan would be deeply resented by Afghans and might lead them to become the instruments of Russian treachery.

In conclusion he observes that Russia's action in Persia, Russian Turkistan and Mongolia, and her military preparations should make England realize her duty to ensure the safety of India by increasing her military strength and preserving friendly relations with Afghanistan.

2. The editor of Al Bashir (Etawah), in the issue of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), discusses the situation in Morocco, and remarks that though his co-religionists are being killed there in thousands there is the doubtful satisfaction of knowing that it is the people who charge Muhammadans with spreading Islam by means of the sword who are themselves committing atrocities in the name of civilization.

AL BASHIR, 14th May 1912.

The situation in Morocco.

He says that such conduct will have the effect of disclosing to the world the merits of Islam, with the result that one day the whole world will embrace the Islamic faith.

3. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), refers to the desecration of a mosque at Meshed by Russian troops, and to the press communiqué issued by the Government of India to the effect that it had protested against the action of the Russian troops through the British ambassador at St. Petersburg, and remarks that the desecration of the shrine of Imam Raza at Meshed has wounded the feelings of both the Shia and Sunni Muhammadans throughout the world, and that it was the duty of the British Government, for the sake of its Muhammadan subjects, to protest in strong terms against any such outrage as that committed by the Russians in Meshed.

AL BASHIR, 14th May 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor observes that Sir Edward Grey made a great mistake in forming an alliance with Russia seeing that the latter is notorious as a cruel and tyrannical Power.

4. The Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), of the 15th April 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to the statement made by Lord Hardinge that the Government may in the near future be compelled to effect some settlement with the tribes in Southern Persia through the British Consul-General, and expresses the opinion that the Persian government is rightly troubled over this announcement, and that it is justified in apprehending that any interference on the part of the Government of India would only render the task of Persian administration still more difficult, seeing that the tribes cannot be expected to recognize the authority of more than one Power.

PREM, 15th April 1912.

The situation in Persia.

The editor asserts that Russia's action in permitting the ex-Shah to return from Odessa and to create trouble in Persia, justified the Persians in doubting the honesty of her intentions and he questions the wisdom of giving any allowance to the ex-Shah, instead of being punished for causing trouble.

PREM, 15th May 1912.

5. The Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 22nd May), complains of the action of the Dominion government in deporting two Sikh women as being a harsh measure and not what one would expect of a civilized people, and the editor urges that, when the husbands have been recognized as domiciled inhabitants of the place, the deportation of their wives was unjust and he asks the Imperial Government to interfere on their behalf.

Deportation of two Sikh women from Canada.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

6. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to the opinion expressed by the Turkish Foreign Minister about Pan-Islamism to the representative of the Outlook, which was to the effect that Pan-Islamism did not contemplate political union between the Muhammadans of different countries and that it was only intended to create religious union and remarks that the expression Pan-Islamism has been invented in order to prejudice Europeans against Muhammadans and to justify their aggression on Muhammadan countries.

Pan-Islamism and the Turkish Foreign Minister.

The editor says that if Europeans insist on giving this interpretation to Pan-Islamism Muhammadans might begin to accept the position and the European dream of Pan-Islamism might become a reality in Africa or in some other country. He says the Europeans would only have themselves to thank if any such union did take effect amongst the Muhammadans of any country, with the result that they rose against the Christians, because by their misinterpretation of the expression Pan-Islamism they had created the desire amongst the Muhammadans for a general rising against the Christians. He asserts that at the present time there is no movement for political union amongst the Muhammadans of the world and that there is no likelihood of such a union being effected.

QAISER-I-HIND, 16th May 1912.

7. The Qaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), expresses apprehension that the Muhammadan kingdoms are likely to be soon deprived of their independence, and remarks that the European Powers have, by their secret sympathy with Italy, encouraged the continuance of hostilities, and have so made themselves responsible for the slaughter of many innocent Muhammadans.

The Italian-Turkish war.

The editor says that the Muhammadans are subjected to so much oppression simply because they are Muhammadans, and that apparently efforts are being made to annihilate them, and he therefore appeals to his co-religionists to protect their holy faith. He states that it has been asserted that after the annexation of Morocco it was intended to destroy the independence of Persia and that an attack on Afghanistan was contemplated after that. He enquired whether Muhammadans were going to permit the defilement of the Qoran and of mosques, the forcible baptism of children and old men, the wholesale massacre of young men and the violation of the chastity of Muslim women by Italians in Rhodes. He complains of the action of the Powers in bringing pressure to bear on Turkey to induce her to open the Dardanelles without any assurance for its safety, and contends that the refusal of the Powers to safeguard the Straits is a clear indication of their desire that Italy should always be in a position to harass Turkey by attacking the Straits. He remarks that her repeated reverses in Tripoli have not affected Italy's resolve to adhere to her announcement of annexation, and that the Powers also do not think it unreasonable to negotiate for peace on such terms. In conclusion he says that the Italian-Turkish war is the critical struggle of the Muhammadans against the attacks of the West, and he appeals to the Turks to prove themselves worthy of their name and traditions.

OUDH AKHBAR, 16th May 1912.

8. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to the closing of the Dardanelles by the Turkish government and to the subsequent opening of the Straits on the representation of the Powers, and observes that, though the situation was serious and Turkey was perfectly justified in closing the Straits, she should open them so as not to give any cause of complaint to the Powers, whose commercial interests would suffer in case the Dardanelles continued to be closed.

The Italian-Turkish war.

OUDH AKHBAR, 17th May 1912.

9. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 17th May 1912, refers to the concentration of Turkish troops on the frontier in connection with the dispute about the delimitation of the Turko-Persian Frontier owing to the recent Afghan raids into Persian territory.

The European Powers and Muhammadan states.

and expresses gratification at the fact that the Turko-Persian Frontier delimitation question has been referred for decision to the Hague Tribunal, and that the raid has turned out to be merely a quarrel between some frontier tribes. The editor says that a war between the Muslim Powers at such a critical period would be singularly inopportune, seeing that they had hardly been able to obtain any respite from the constant interference of the European Powers, with the result that neither Turkey nor Persia have yet met with success in their experiment of constitutional government. He remarks that the few remaining Muhammadan Powers should now realize that unless they give up mutual hostilities and jealousy and try to help each other they will very soon lose their independence, and he reminds them that internal disunion and strife led to the downfall of Morocco, and that Turkey failed to make a strong protest regarding the action of France.

He contends that if the Muhammadan Powers had really resented the usurpation of Morocco by France, Morocco would not have lost her independence, nor would Turkey and Persia have suffered so soon afterwards. He asserts that when the European Powers assented to the occupation of Morocco by France, they must have contemplated the acquisition of territory in other countries for themselves, and they are now gradually claiming their respective shares. He acknowledges the difficulty of resisting the passion of European Powers for land-grabbing but urges that the only hope of success lies in united action on the part of the Muhammadan states.

(b)—Home.

10. The Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 3rd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), has an article on the regeneration of India, contributed by one Krishna Lal Jain, in which he points out that the present deplorable condition of Indians is due to their slothful and indolent habits and to their giving up their ancestral avocations. He says that if they want to be a great nation again they should improve their national character and try to become industrious, enterprising and practical men of business. He urges that the examples of Bapa Rawal, Maharana Pratap Singh and Shivaji should be kept in mind by them, and should be a source of inspiration to them.

JAIN GAZETTE, 3rd May 1912.

The regeneration of India.

11. Tahal Ram Ganga Ram of Dera Ismail Khan writing to the Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 22nd May), says that one of the best means for effecting the regeneration of India is to interest its inhabitants in newspaper reading in order to make them acquainted with the needs of the country. He urges that libraries and reading rooms should be opened in temples and dharamshalas in every village and town, and that wealthy people should provide newspapers and books for the use of their poorer countrymen. He states that this experiment has been tried with success in his native place, and that no time should be lost in giving it a trial in other places.

PREM, 15th May 1912.

The regeneration of India.

12. Referring to Sir John Hewett's appeal for unity between Hindus and Muhammadans, the editor of the Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), in the issue of the 15th April 1912 (received on the 18th May), expresses the hope that Government will now see that no considerations of caste or creed influence its actions, and that it will help to put down racial ill-feeling by avoiding references to racial and religious distinctions in official papers.

PREM, 15th April 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

13. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 18th May 1912, discusses at length the subject of the rise and fall of nations, and says that a nation which at one moment is regarded as the greatest on earth, may after some time become the most despised and weak. The editor urges Indians to remember this and to avoid the causes which have brought about the ruin of other nations. He says that Hindus cannot secure prosperity by injuring the interests of Muhammadans nor vice versa, and he appeals to them to strive for unity. He reminds them that their hope of salvation lies chiefly in education and in the acquirement of modern arts, and in asking for their rights from Government with a united voice. He remarks that Indians are a conquered people, and that rivalry and mutual jealousy cannot help them as

OUDH AKHBAR, 18th May 1912.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

might be done in the case of a conquering race, and he expresses the opinion that it is difficult for Indians to attain the scale of civilization reached by Europeans.

DARBAR, 21st May 1912.

Relations between the rulers and the ruled in India.

14. The Darbar (Agra), of the 21st May 1912, in continuation of the article entitled "Relations between the rulers and the ruled in India," published in its issue of the 14th May 1912 (vide Selections No. 20 of 1912, paragraph 26), discusses the national character of Indians, and expresses the opinion that every government should, when initiating a new policy, make allowance for the national character of its subjects. The editor says that the writers who represent Indians to be the embodiment of all virtues are as much mistaken as those who consider them to be the incarnation of all evils, and remarks that, though there are many excellent traits in the Indian character, Indians stand greatly in need of improvement in their moral, intellectual and social condition, and that sometimes they suffer harsh treatment from their rulers in consequence of their own shortcomings and moral weakness. He says that in ancient times no nation would have dared to treat Indians with scorn and contempt, but that India has now fallen on evil days, and the condition of its people has become deplorable. He expresses the opinion that Indians can now only progress with the help of the education and training which they get from the benign British Government and its sympathetic officials, and he urges Indians not to take offence at the rebukes they receive from the officials, seeing that such rebukes are meant only for their own good.

MARYADA, April 1912.

Raja Chet Singh.

15. In the course of an article on Raja Chet Singh, contributed to the Maryada (Allahabad), for April 1912 (received on the 9th May), Chaturvedi Dwarka Prasad remarks:—"So long as Hindu kings or Asiatics ruled over this country they did not unjustly repress the power of the people and confiscate their arms in order to maintain their rule. Indian rajas and nawabs of that time, even as is the modern policy in Europe and America, regard themselves strong in the strength of their subjects. At that time in this country it was regarded as just to keep the armed people under control only by means of state-craft and administrative ability."

URDU-I-MUALLA, May 1912.

Saiyid Rashid Raza.

16. The Urdu-i-Mualla (Aligarh), for May 1912, refers to the speeches delivered by Saiyid Rashid Raza at the Nadwat-ul-Ulma, the Aligarh College and at the Deoband Madrasa, and expresses approval of his educational and religious reform movement. The editor remarks that, like Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan, his political views are totally wrong, and he takes exception to his statement that the English Government encourages the Muhammadans of India by all possible means to educate themselves. He says that, when Saiyid Rashid declares the British occupation of Egypt beneficial and the constitutional government of the young Turks as injurious to the interests of their country, his political views can carry no weight with the Muhammadan public.

URDU-I-MUALLA, May 1912.

The treatment of political prisoners.

17. The Urdu-i-Mualla (Aligarh), for May 1912, says that the repressive measures employed by the Government of India have stifled freedom of thought in the country to such an extent that, with one singular exception, the Marhatta (Poona), no other paper expressing the views of the nationalist party, has been enabled to continue its existence. The editor refers to a memorial submitted by the wife of Chidambaram Pillay to the Government of India, which appeared in the Marhatta of the 7th April, and which goes to show that political prisoners in India are treated everywhere in the same objectionable manner.

He refers to the harsh treatment meted out to him (the editor) while confined in the Allahabad Central Jail and says that Mr. Pillay also had to suffer the same hardships.

He takes exception to Mr. Pillay's being detained in a jail in India, and points out that he was legally entitled to be sent to the Andamans, where he could have enjoyed more freedom and could have managed to live with his family.

He reminds his readers that Mr. Pillay was convicted on a charge of taking part in the Tinnevelly riots, but really his chief fault was that he had started a Swadeshi Steam Navigation Company at Tuticorin, which was calculated to be injurious to the interests of the European shipping merchants.

He states that since 1907 on three occasions periods of imprisonment were remitted to prisoners generally, and he expresses regret that no mercy was shown to political prisoners even in commemoration of the Delhi darbar.

He mentions the name of Bal Gangadhar Tilak, whom he calls the leader of the extremist party, and says that he was not released on the occasion of the Delhi darbar because he refused to accept the conditions imposed on him for his release, that he should not visit his province and should not take part in any political agitation, and remarks that the whole English race is devoid of the feelings of generosity, forgiveness and forgetfullness, and that Napolean's famous reference to Englishmen as "a nation of shop-keepers" has been proved to be quite true in this case.

He expresses regret that though His Majesty King George expressed his wish that political prisoners should be released and that a pension should be granted to the learned men of the country, the authorities in India should impose such conditions for the release of political prisoners that no self-respecting man could accept them, and that the amount of the pension should be so low that the public would feel ashamed to call it a Royal gift.

18. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), complains that in the matter of higher appointments in the public service the pledges made in Queen Victoria's Proclamation of 1858 are often violated, in that colour and racial prejudice stand in the way of Indians getting such appointments, and remarks that this was specially the case during the viceroyalty of Lord Curzon, who objected to the Proclamation as being an impossible charter. The editor complains of the unsatisfactory reply given to Mr. MacCallum Scott in answer to his question to the Secretary of State for India regarding the injustice of removing officials who were not of pure European descent from the civil and police departments in the Straits Settlements, and remarks that the present practice of appointing only Europeans on the pretext of efficient administration is opposed to the proclamation and to established law. He says that Indians have always protested against this procedure and will not be satisfied until it is abolished. He notes that to secure peace and order in the country capable men, irrespective of colour and creed, should be appointed to posts of trust and responsibility, and that the disregard of the legitimate aspirations of the people is always unjustifiable and likely to cause injury to all parties.

ABHYUDAYA, 2nd May 1912.

The Queen Victoria's Proclamation of 1858 and the public service.

19. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), states that the Conservatives are so confident about the dissolution of the Liberal Ministry during the current year in consequence of the Home Rule Bill, that the question of the constitution of a Conservative Ministry is being discussed, and that the name of Sir J. D. Rees is being mentioned in connection with the office of the Secretary of State for India. The editor observes that Sir J. D. Rees, who professes an immense solicitude for India, never loses an opportunity to injure Indian interests, and remarks that his appointment is contemplated probably with a view to counteract the effects of the Liberal government and in order to unsettle the reforms introduced during the administration of Lord Morley and Lord Minto. He concludes by saying that the appointment of Sir John Rees as Secretary of State for India would mean a serious obstacle in the path of India's progress.

ABHYUDAYA, 16th May 1912.

Sir J. D. Rees and India.

20. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), says that the transfer of the Capital to Delhi has caused resentment to the Anglo-Indian papers of Calcutta, and that they are engineering an agitation against it, in which they desire the co-operation of Indians. The editor observes that these papers have never lost an opportunity of creating bad blood between Europeans and Indians, and remarks that numerous evils have resulted from their supercilious and selfish writings. He expresses the opinion that it was not desirable for Indians to join the Anglo-Indians in the matter, seeing that their journals would revert to the anti-Indian policy as soon as they have served their present purpose.

ABHYUDAYA, 16th May 1912.

The transfer of the Capital to Delhi.

MASHRIQ, 14th May 1912.

21. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), takes exception to the letter published by Mr. Abdul Raoof in support of his candidature for election to the council, and remarks that a man who mismanaged the affairs of the Muhammadan boarding-house and the district Muslim League committee at Allahabad cannot be expected to represent his community.

The coming council elections.

The editor observes that Nawab Abdul Majid is the only Muhammadan member who has been able to show any wisdom on the part of his co-religionists in their dealings with the Hindus, and points out that so long as Mr. Malaviya, who has distinguished himself by his opposition to the Muhammadan interests, is returned to the council the presence of the Nawab in the council is most essential. He goes on to say that both Mr. Abdul Raoof and Mr. Mushir Husain Kidwai readily court Hindu favour at the expense of the interests of their own community, and he appeals to Muhammadans to re-elect Nawab Abdul Majid as their representative.

ZUL QARNAIN, 14th May 1912.

22. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to Rai Bahadur Lala Baijnath's article entitled "Legislative council elections" contributed to the Leader (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (vide Selections No. 18 of 1912, paragraph 12), in which he deplored the want of really earnest workers in the councils and municipal and district boards, and referred to the corrupt practices which were followed in order to secure votes, and remarks that if the methods at present adopted to gain election to local bodies are persisted in, there will be little prospect for some years for really able Indians to gain an adequate share in the administration of their country.

The coming council elections.

The editor complains of the present condition of district boards and observes that it would be difficult to find more than four or five per cent. of the members taking an intelligent interest in the proceedings of the boards. He urges that, in order to secure efficient councillors, it is necessary to effect reforms in the system of election to local bodies, and suggests that the educated element should be made to predominate in the voters' lists, and that rate-payers' associations should be formed in every town to educate the voters about their rights and duties.

He refers to the speech which the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale delivered at Bombay before leaving for England, and expresses approval of his advice that candidates for election to the legislative councils should be sufficiently educated, and should possess independence of character. He asks the Muhammadans to carefully consider the qualifications required of their representatives before sending them to the councils, and suggests that the candidate's work and solicitude for the improvement and welfare of his community, his interest in the educational progress of his community and his politics should form the chief test of his claim for election. He goes on to remark that the Muhammadans have got the right of separate electorates after a great struggle, and that it was their duty to safeguard it against the attacks of the Hindus.

He invites attention to the actions of certain Muhammadan members of the councils who oppose the interests of their own community and side with the Hindus, and urges his co-religionists to disown then.

ALIGARH INSTITUTE GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

23. Haji Musa Khan of Aligarh contributes an article to the Aligarh Institute Gazette of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), in which he asks his co-religionists to carefully consider the work done by their representatives in the legislative councils, and to select candidates for election for the next term after testing their capability and qualifications.

The coming council elections.

He expresses regret that the Muhammadan representatives did no useful work in the councils, and that they never asked any question affecting the public good, and entertains the hope that, like their Hindu colleagues, they will in future discharge their duties conscientiously and will evince greater interest in the discussion of public affairs.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

24. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to the memorial recently submitted to the Secretary of State for India by the London branch of the Muslim League, in which particular reference was made about the granting of autonomy to different provinces of India as contemplated in the despatch of the government of Lord Hardinge to the Secretary of State for India, and discusses the criticisms of the Times (London) on the memorial. The editor suggests that the Times would have its readers to understand that the Government of India merely wanted to please the Indians by deceiving them, and that it had no intention of granting autonomy to Indian provinces in spite of the reference to it in its despatch to the Secretary of State.

Self-government of India.

Executive Councils for the United Provinces and the Punjab.

25. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th May 1912, has the following :— LEADER, 17th May 1912.

"The London correspondent of a contemporary understands that an announcement regarding the creation of Executive Councils in these provinces and the Punjab will not long be delayed. This is indeed welcome news to us of these provinces, and we hope that our wishes in this direction will soon be realized. The hope has now been too long deferred."

The Council regulations.

26. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th May 1912, says that there is universal dissatisfaction among the educated classes about the existing regulations governing the election of representatives to the Legislative Councils, and refers to the Madras regulations which require that a candidate seeking election to the Legislative Council must be a member of a local board or municipality, and contrasts them with the rules in these provinces, where no such qualification is insisted upon in the case of elections for municipal boards. The editor says that there seems no reason why a certain experience of local bodies should be considered a necessary equipment for a legislative councillor, when there are so many other ways in which the requisite experience can be gained, and when such a condition must unnecessarily restrict the field for drawing councillors from. LEADER, 17th May 1912.

He points out that there are many really able and public-spirited men who somehow or other fail to find their way into the local bodies, and the restrictions imposed by the Madras regulations would thus deprive the country of the benefits to be derived from the services of such men in the Legislative Council.

The editor fails to understand the considerations which prompted the delegates at the Madras Provincial Conference last year to vote for the resolution recommending that a three years' previous membership of a local body should be made a necessary qualification for an aspirant to the honours of councillorship, and expresses gratification that this year's conference has unanimously adopted a resolution, which, if accepted and acted upon by Government, will have the effect of making every one who is eligible to be elected as a member of a local board or municipality also eligible for a membership of the legislative council.

The Council regulations.

27. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 19th May 1912, expresses the hope that now that the Council regulations are being considered by the Government of India some steps will be taken to remove the just grievances of the educated people in the matter. The editor refers to Lord Minto's speech before the East India Association in which he is said to have admitted that the Council regulations framed in 1909 were extremely confusing, and that he himself had great difficulty in understanding some of them, and remarks that when the framer of the scheme himself failed to understand it, it is no wonder that educated Indians express their inability to understand the principles on which the regulations are based. He says that in spite of the wishes of Lord Minto to the contrary, the expanded councils are sure to form the basis of the future Parliament of India, and expresses the conviction that sooner or later parliamentary government will be established in India. He invites the attention of Government to the dissatisfaction expressed by the provincial conferences of Bengal, Madras and the United Provinces with regard to the regulations, and urges it to carefully examine the literature of these conferences on the subject, and to effect changes in accordance with public opinion. He instances the case of the United Provinces where out of the five members to be sent to the Imperial Council in the coming election, two instead of one will be members of the Muhammadan community returned by their separate electorate, while a third is to be elected by their co-religionist zamindars, and notes that in addition they would be allowed to contest one of the two seats reserved for representatives of members of the Provincial Legislative Council, with the result that out of five United Provinces representatives there might be only one or at the most two Hindus. He enquires whether in these circumstances Hindus are ADVOCATE, 19th May 1912.

wrong in being dissatisfied with an arrangement by which the Muhammadans, who are in a minority of one-fifth, are given three out of five seats. He says that the Hindus are in such a case quite justified in combining among themselves on racial grounds and refusing to vote for a Muhammadan candidate, even though he may be in every way superior to the rival Hindu candidate. He goes on to say that the Council regulations are to a great extent responsible for the estrangement of feeling between Hindus and Muhammadans, and for creating a feeling of exclusiveness and separatism. He contends that as long as any large community has the grievance that its members are suffering from disabilities because of their religion, the feeling of annoyance and bitterness at unequal treatment will continue to exist, and he urges Government to increase the number of members so that all classes may have a fair share in representation.

ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

Indians in South Africa.

28. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, publishes a translation of an extract from Mr. Maurice Evan's book on Black and White in South Africa on the treatment of Indians in South Africa (vide Selections No. 20 of 1912, paragraph 8), and remarks that the Indians have to put up with such oppression not because of their black colour but because "they have the label of subjection on their forehead."

ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

Indians in foreign countries.

29. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, asserts, on the authority of the Punjabee (Lahore) and other Punjab papers, that Hindus domiciled in Afghanistan are maltreated and that no notice is taken of their complaints by the Kabul government. The editor remarks that it is no matter for surprise that Indians are ill-treated in foreign countries, seeing that they are weak, and that they are accorded no better treatment within the British Empire itself. He observes that when Indians are not regarded as human beings in Canada and South Africa, their ill-treatment in German East Africa and Afghanistan is of minor importance.

ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

The evils of subjection.

30. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, says that there is nothing which could be conceived to be more harmful than foreign domination, seeing that subjection kills humanity both in the conquerer and the conquered. The editor remarks that in order to keep human nature noble and pure it is desirable that the evil of subjection should be extirpated from the world. He points out that loss of freedom ultimately leads to degeneration and death through loss of opportunities, and that, according to Hegel, freedom is a synonymous term for religion, which is nothing but the evolution of humanity from animality to divinity. He observes that subjection arrests the development of mental powers and crushes all noble feelings and aspirations among the conquered, and that the desire for domination over others make people mean and selfish, and, thus corrupting their national morals, prevents them from realizing the high ideal of humanity which consists in working for the good of others. He says that in subject countries, where public spirit and patriotism are penalized and the free expression of ideas is regarded as sedition, people lose their humanity gradually and partake more of the nature of animal than of man.

MASHRIQ, 14th May 1912.

Maulana Shibli Nomani and Muslim politics.

31. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer observes that it is always wise for a man to limit his scope of work, rather than to concern himself with many enterprises, like Maulana Shibli has been doing lately. Referring to the Maulana's attack on Sir Saiyid for not having given any political training to Muhammadans, the writer asks the Maulana to demonstrate the success of his theory by imparting political, female, technical and scientific education in the Nadwah which is under his control. He expresses regret at the Maulana's hostile attitude towards the Aligarh College and the Deoband Madrasa, and says that the Maulana cannot help the cause of Muslim progress by opposing every institution of his community.

He deprecates the attacks made by the Maulana on the Muslim League, and remarks that he is not justified in abusing the Agha Khan just because he had not helped the Nadwah in any way.

He goes on to remark that though the Muslim League had, like other infant institutions, many defects, the remedy lay, not in discontinuing its existence but in reforming it. He points out that the Maulana's political scheme can be worked out as well by the Muslim League as by his proposed political association, and says that the proposed institution will be as much in need of public support and charity as the Muslim League is in need of the munificence of the Aghs Khan. He states that the Maulana has been evincing very little enthusiasm for the proposed Muslim University for the reason that he is jealous of the rising of the Aligarh College to a first grade University.

Referring to the Maulana's proposed work on the modern interpretation of the Qoran, he says that the Maulana should try before attempting such a work, to answer the objections raised to his proposed book and translate important treatises dealing with the subject.

MASHRIQ, 14th May 1912.

32. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer deplores the ill-treatment accorded to their leaders by Muhammadans at the instance of a few unscrupulous persons, and contrasts it with the respect shown by Hindus to the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale. He expresses the opinion that the present policy of Muhammadans is in no way open to objection and that the Muslim League with its organizers is doing good work, but he complains that the real workers are not properly honoured and that at some places the local work is suffering in the hands of self-seeking persons. He urges the need for the infusion of new vigour and enthusiasm into the working of the League, and says that local institutions should be better organized.

The future political policy of Muhammadans.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

33. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), refers to a contributed article which appeared in the National Review in which the writer alleged that the Muhammadans of India were no longer contented and peace-loving as they were a few years ago, and that the Government of India were not satisfied with their present attitude, and remarks that if the writer meant by his statement to insinuate that seditious ideas are gaining ground amongst them he was totally in the wrong, but that he was quite justified if he meant to say that the Muhammadans, in order to safeguard their rights, were raising their voices. The editor says that as the result of the Royal announcement of the 12th December 1912 the Muhammadan community began to realize that no consideration was shown to a contented and peaceful community and that the administrative changes had moreover impressed this belief on the minds of its members that the community, which did not agitate for the safeguarding of its rights, could not improve its condition under a constitutional government.

The political awakening amongst the Muhammadans of India.

He says that events in Tripoli and Persia have also played a considerable part in awakening the Muhammadans of India to the need for improving their lot, and that the political agitation which the Indian Muhammadans contemplate to carry on to safeguard their interests is not intended to show any disrespect to Government or to rebel against it, but that they merely wish to carry constitutional agitation to secure their rights.

OUDH AKHBAR, 17th May 1912.

34. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 17th May 1912, observes that the statement made by Mr. Montagu in the House of Commons that the Muhammadans were not a homogenous nationality has rightly given them great offence, and entertains the hope that in future Mr. Montagu will be more careful in giving expression to his views. The editor says that the Muhammadans should take this reproof to heart, and make efforts to become a united and homogenous nationality. He concedes that differences of locality and language have been obstacles in the way of Muslim unity, but remarks that during recent years different conferences and the use of Urdu as a common language have brought Muslims together. He asks them to earnestly strive to wipe off the reproach cast upon their community by Mr. Montagu.

Mr. Montagu and Indian Muhammadans.

LEADER, 17th May 1912.

35. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th May 1912, refers to Mr. Montagu's speech on the second reading of the Government of India Bill in the House of Commons in which he said that the Muhammadans of the different provinces of India were not a homogenous people of one nationality and had little or no relation with each other, except that of religion, and expresses surprise at the resentment caused among Muhammadans by this plain statement of fact.

Mr. Montagu and Indian Muhammadans.

The editor asserts that Mr. Montagu has stated the bare truth, and observes that, though the Muhammadans of India possess a common religion, they cannot by any means be said to have among them any other of the elements which go towards the formation of a distinct nationality. He goes on to say that it is quite natural for those who want to make religion subserve political ends to take offence at Mr. Montagu's speech, and he cautions his readers not to be deceived by the vehement protests that are being engineered on the point.

He remarks that if a common religion will enable the Muhammadans of India to become united more quickly than their other countrymen they are welcome to try for such unity, but he contends that they cannot expect the thinking public to take their aspirations for an accomplished fact. He asserts that in many of the affairs of daily life the Muhammadans cannot be distinguished from their Hindu neighbours, and remarks that, when the claim of Hindus to be a homogenous people on the ground of a common religion is not allowed, the Muhammadans can scarcely expect to substantiate the same claim. He states that there are forces making for greater unity among the various communities of India, and says that neither Muhammadans nor Hindus can claim anything more for themselves.

LEADER, 22nd May 1912.

Mr. Montagu and Indian Muhammadans.

36. Referring to Mr. Montagu's remark that it was a mistake to suppose that the Indian Muhammadans were a homogenous body, the editor of the Leader (Allahabad), in the issue of the 22nd May 1912, remarks that there is nothing in the statement to cause offence to Muhammadans, since it is a simple truth that excepting religion there is nothing common between a Muhammadan of Eastern Bengal and a Muhammadan elsewhere. He takes strong exception to the remarks in the Muslim League's protest to the effect that the Muhammadans were the strongest bulwork against the rising tide of Hindu ascendency, and observes that Muhammadans have sufficiently exploited the recent political unrest for obtaining undue privileges and should have been content by this time. He says that there is no fear of exclusive Hindu ascendency now, and that the policy of separatism adopted by Muhammadans may be advantageous at times, but that it will not always pay.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Administration.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue.

Nil.

(b)—Police.

MASHRIQ, 14th May 1912.

Police reform.

37. The Mashriq (Gorakhpur), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), attributes the abuse of their powers by the police to the fact that policemen are mostly recruited from the uneducated sections of the population, and that they generally follow the example and methods of their predecessors. The editor says that no amount of supervision can be effectual in reforming the constabulary until they are recruited from the intelligent and educated classes. He concedes that the statement that the police do not receive help from the public in conducting their investigations is to a great extent true, and remarks that the unwillingness on the part of the public is due as much to its ignorance as to the unenviable reputation for oppression enjoyed by the police. With regard to the law of confession he suggests that a Select Committee of the Imperial Council should be appointed to enquire into the defects of the present law, and that Mr. Basu be asked to bring forward a bill to remedy those defects.

Adverting to the work of the Criminal Investigation Department he complains of the manner in which it is carried on, suggests that a careful enquiry should be instituted into the work of the department, and that its strength should be reduced.

Referring to the newly-created posts of deputy superintendents of police, he complains that they are allowed very little power, and suggests that they should be given more authority, particularly as they thoroughly understand their Indian subordinates.

In conclusion he emphasizes the need for mass education both for the police and the public, and insists that the police should be thoroughly impressed with their duties towards the public, and that all cases of unjust oppression should be severely dealt with.

He also suggests that there should be a radical change in the methods of investigation, that educated sub-inspectors should be allowed a salary commensurate with their position, that first reports should be minutely scrutinized and that more regard should be paid to the treatment of accused persons.

The Moradabad police training school.

38. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, has the following :— ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

"Four assistant superintendents passed creditably at the last examination of the police training school but the three deputy superintendents were plucked. The latter are recruited from educated Indians. In these circumstances it may be asked how it was that all three deputy superintendents failed, whether it was that they failled in ability and had not received a good education or whether it was due to some idiosyncracies on the part of the examiners."

(c)—Finance and Taxation.

Nil.

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs.

The Allahabad district board.

39. Indra Narayan Dwivedi writing to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), on the affairs of the Allahabad district board points out that it is unreasonable to limit the number of voters in each tahsil to a hundred, and says that in the case of the Allahabad tahsil one-half of its voters are residents of the Allahabad city, who are totally ignorant of the needs of the inhabitants of the tahsil. He complains that several men who pay no land revenue or taxes have been nominated as voters, while the names of respectable persons paying large amounts of money in taxes and land revenue have been omitted from the voters' list. He suggests that a property qualification be required of the voters, that their numbers should not be arbitrarily fixed; and that if a district has a town which has its own municipal board, the inhabitants of the town should not be nominated as voters for the district board. ABHYUDAYA, 2nd May 1912.

He then goes on to discuss the relative numbers of Hindu and Muhammadan officials in the Allahabad tahsil, and points out that out of a total of sixty-one officials only nineteen are Hindus, of whom thirteen are chaprasis, while there are forty-two Muhammadan officials, and he suggests that a question should be put in the Legislative Council about this matter. He says that of all the departments the police and the tahsil officials are most intimately connected with the public, and that Muhammadans preponderate in both services, and he invites the attention of Government and the members of the Legislative Council to the matter.

Expenditure on sanitation by the district board of the United Provinces.

40. A correspondent signing himself "LAHRI" writes in the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, expressing regret at the small amount of money expended by the district board of the United Provinces on sanitation, and enquires why Government does not insist on increased expenditure under this head, when its report shows that it recognizes the urgent need for it. ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

(e)—Education.

The high cost of education in India.

41. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), complains of the growing increase in the cost of education in India, and refers to the limitation of the number of students for each class in government schools. The editor urges his countrymen to open private schools for the education of their children, and says that if these institutions be ably conducted and show signs of progress, Government will certainly give pecuniary aid to them. ZUL QARNAIN, 14th May 1912.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

Female education amongst Muhammadans in India.

42. The Lucknow Gazette of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), expresses satisfaction that the Muhammadans of India have now begun to realize the importance of female education, and approves of the efforts made by them to improve the educational condition of their women.

The editor expresses regret that in municipal and government girls' schools no provision has been made for imparting religious instruction to the students, and he asks his co-religionists to arrange for a religious teacher to give religious instruction for at least an hour daily in every municipal, government or private girls' school.

He also urges his co-religionists not to send their girls to Europe for higher education but to open colleges for girls in India itself, seeing that girls educated in Europe will receive no religious instruction and consequently will have no respect and love for their religion.

SHUBH CHINTAK, 15th May 1912.

The need for an Indian history in Hindi.

43. The Shubh Chintak (Allahabad), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), dwells on the importance of history in securing the progress of a nation and urges that an authentic and detailed history of India should be written in Hindi, which would impress upon the rising generation their ancient greatness and power, and inspire them with healthy ambition. The editor says that the existing histories have almost all of them been written by foreigners, who could not be expected to have a correct and intimate knowledge of ancient India.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

44. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), takes exception to the opinion expressed by His Highness the Agha Khan that no other college besides the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, should be affiliated to the proposed Muslim University, and says that no good can result from the University if its scope of work be limited to the Aligarh College alone.

The editor says that the question of affiliation is very important, and that it should not be decided before ascertaining and carefully considering the opinion of the entire community.

AL KHALIL, 16th May 1912.

The proposed Muslim University.

45. Al Khalil (Bijnor), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), refers to the opinion expressed by the Secretary of State for India against the affiliation of other colleges besides the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College, Aligarh, to the Muslim University, and says that such a restriction imposed on the scope of work of the University will be disapproved of by the whole Muhammadan community.

The editor takes exception to the condition on the part of the Government of India that there should be at least nine Europeans on the staff of the University, and suggests that in case such conditions be imposed on the Muslim University the Muhammadans would be better advised to respectfully refuse the grant of a charter for their University, and to utilize the amount realized for the proposed University in building hostels and in opening schools for Muhammadans in different cities and provinces.

QAISER-I-HIND, 16th May 1912.

The gurukul.

46. The Qaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer states that the Hindus, though blessed with intellect and wealth, are generally wanting in physical development, with the result that they are very anxious to acquire strength and courage. He asserts that the gurukul has been established for this purpose, and that systematic attempts are being made there to gain this end and that, apart from the intellectual training imparted in the institution, endeavour is made to turn cowards into brave men and brave men into heroes. He remarks that it is on account of this feature of the gurukul that many Hindu leaders look upon it with disfavour, and he urges the Hindu public not to support with its charity an institution which, instead of trying to satisfy the actual needs of the age, hankers after an imaginary ideal of creating heroes like Bhishma and Arjuna.

LEADER, 17th May 1912.

University reform in Bombay.

47. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th May 1912, refers to the new course of studies prescribed for all the examinations of the Bombay University recently sanctioned by the Government of Bombay, and expresses regret at the high-handed manner in which the Government sought to force its views on the University. The editor observes that as a whole the new curriculum is a decided improvement on the old, except for the mistake of excluding English history from the list of compulsory subjects for the B.A. examination, at a time when the political condition of India requires that Indian graduates should learn the history of England during the last two centuries.

He congratulates the Government on the abolition of the P.E. as an University examination, the relegation of Sanskrit and other classical languages to their proper secondary place and the establishment of an honour's course.

Discussing the means proposed for the creation of a higher, or what is termed a University atmosphere in Bombay, he remarks that, while well-equipped laboratories and well-stocked and up-to-date libraries are no doubt all good, any real reform of the universities must be preceded by improvements in the standard and method of instruction in the high schools, but a University atmosphere would be created only by the men who would direct and put life into the laboratories, libraries and professorships.

He blames the Government and the University of Bombay for their neglect of the training of teachers, and takes exception to the action of Government in reserving the headmasterships of important high schools for raw and inexperienced youths from England instead of for senior men of the service. He also complains that as soon as these raw men gain a little experience they are either transferred or promoted in utter disregard of the best interests of the schools, with the result that government high schools are now becoming inferior to private institutions, and that instead of serving as models of all that is desirable, they only serve to exhibit prominently defects which should be avoided. He contends that this desire to strengthen the European element in the service at the expense of efficiency will be the real obstacle in the work of creating a University atmosphere, seeing that the human element, which is the most important, will thus become the weakest. He protests against the proposal to fill up the higher appointments in the Royal Institute of Science in Bombay from third and fourth rate men in the present staff, and invites attention to the fact that since the retirement of Dr. Selby, the calibre of the Bombay educational service has been steadily deteriorating. He lays stress on the fact that professors, who belong to a service which does not count among its members even a single man of eminence or strong convictions, cannot be expected to create a University atmosphere, and expresses disapproval of the appointment of Indians qua Indians or of Europeans because they happen to possess a European degree. The editor insists that men of high intellectual calibre, who take a living interest in the subject they teach and whose lives are inspired by high ideals, should alone be appointed, and, with regard to the suggestion for the appointment of an inspector of colleges, he asserts that a man of such extensive attainments as to be able to efficiently inspect all the engineering, medical, commercial, arts and science colleges cannot be easily found either in England or in India.

Muhammadan education in the United Provinces.

48. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th May 1912, complains that the report of the Director of Public Instruction of the United Provinces does not clearly show the number of Muhammadan students in government and recognized Islamia schools nor the amount of grant-in-aid given to Islamia schools and hostels. NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th May 1912.

The editor also states that there is nothing in the Director's report to show the number of scholarships granted to Hindu and Muhammadan students respectively, and that the report does not clearly state the general improvement made by the Muhammadans of the province in their educational condition. He refers to the educational grant of fifty lakhs of rupees announced at Delhi on the occasion of the darbar, and urges his co-religionists to ask Government to allot a reasonable amount from it exclusively for the education of Muhammadans as has been done in the cases of Europeans and Eurasians.

Election of Fellows by graduates of the Allahabad University.

49. The Zul Qarnain (Budaun), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), expresses gratification at the privilege granted to the graduates of the Allahabad University of electing a certain proportion of ordinary Fellows, and entertains the hope that in future ZUL QARNAIN, 14th May 1912.

the educated classes will get more opportunity of managing the affairs of the University.

The editor advises the Muhammadan graduates to avail themselves of the privilege granted to them.

ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

The Allahabad University.

50. A correspondent signing himself "LAHRI" in the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, ridicules the Allahabad University in connection with the proposed re-examination of intermediate class boys in modern history and physiology at the Nagpur centre. He expresses surprise that it should have taken so long to discover the leakage of the question papers, and remarks that it will cause much inconvenience to the students in preparing for the examination and assembling at Nagpur again.

DARBAR, 21st May 1912.

The Allahabad University.

51. The Darbar (Agra), of the 21st May 1912, complains of the delay made by the authorities of the Allahabad University in announcing the re-examination in modern history and physiology for intermediate class students who had appeared at the Nagpur centre. The editor says that the re-examination should have been arranged immediately after the discovery of the leakage of the question papers, as that would have saved the students from unnecessary trouble and inconvenience.

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Nil.

(g)—General.

BHARAT SUDASHA PRAVARTAK, March and April 1912.
VEDA PRAKASH, May 1912.

The new coinage.

52. The Bharat Sudasha Pravartak (Farrukhabad), for March and April 1912 (received on the 17th May), and the Veda Prakash (Meerut), for May 1912, ask Government to have the value of the new coins inscribed in Hindi character on them, on the ground that the character is used by twenty-four crores of Hindus, and that the concession, while involving practically no loss to Government, will secure the good will of its subjects.

JAIN GAZETTE, 10th May 1912.

The new coinage.

53. The Jain Gazette (Jalesar, Etah), of the 10th May 1912 (received on the 22nd May), publishes a long appeal to the Government praying that the value of the coins may be inscribed on the new coins in the Hindi character. The editor says that this concession will earn the gratitude of both Hindus and Jains, and he expresses the hope that Government will not miss this opportunity of securing their good will.

MARYADA, April 1912.

The boycott movement.

54. The Maryada (Allahabad), for April 1912 (received on the 9th May), reproduces from the Prabasi (Calcutta), a story entitled "The vow of the right hand" which is based on the swadeshi and boycott movement.

GARHWALI, April 1912.

Forest re-settlement in Garhwal.

55. The Garhwali (Dehra Dun), for April 1912 (received on the 20th May), urges, in connection with forest re-settlement in Garhwal, that sufficient land should be set apart for grazing purposes, as otherwise the people will be put to much hardship. The editor refers to the rumour that a large portion of the karainkhal pasture in the neighbourhood of Srinagar has been declared as reserved forest, and remarks that if it be true the question of leaving land for grazing purposes should be considered immediately.

GARHWALI, April 1912.

The civil law examination in Kumaun.

56. The Garhwali (Dehra Dun), for April 1912 (received on the 20th May), expresses appreciation of the notification published in the United Provinces Government Gazette of the 11th January 1912, requiring all officials in Kumaun to pass an examination in civil law, on the ground that such an arrangement will result in the better administration of civil justice in the division. The editor expresses the hope that no officials will ever be exempted from passing the examination, or else the notification will lead to no good results.

ABHYUDAYA, 2nd May 1912.

The excise duty on cotton.

57. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), expresses gratification that Mr. Silver, president of the last United Provinces Industrial Conference, condemned the excise duty on cotton, and suggests that if Government has really at heart the economic and industrial development of the country it should abolish this import, and should make good the loss thus caused by levying a countervailing duty on foreign goods.

ABHYUDAYA, 2nd May 1912.

58. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), complains that far from granting the repeated prayers and representations of the inhabitants of the United Provinces to publish official papers in the Hindi language and otherwise patronize it, Government has added to their grievances by discontinuing the publication of the Behar and Orissa Gazette in that language, and the editor observes that such an uncompromising attitude towards Hindi does not become a just government.

Official displeasure on the Hindi language.

ABHYUDAYA, 2nd May 1912.

59. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), expresses regret that no Indian representative has been appointed on the Empire Trade Commission, although India is the most important part of the British Empire. The editor points out that India was not represented in the Imperial Conference held last year, and remarks that these two instances show that the Imperial Government does not care for the claims of this country in such matters.

The Empire Trade Commission.

ABHYUDAYA, 2nd May 1912.

60. An anonymous correspondent writing to the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 2nd May 1912 (received on the 20th May), takes exception to the action of the Court of Wards in proposing to close the Hanumat press of the Kalakankar estate and to sell it, and questions the propriety of its action when the late Raja Rampal Singh made a waqf (endowment) for the maintenance of the press. He points out that the waqf has been held to be valid by law courts on more than one occasion, and that the Court of Wards are not justified in making it of no effect. He asks public men, and especially Lala Sukhbir Singh, to put a question on the subject in the council, and to see that the waqf of the late Raja Rampal Singh is kept intact.

The closing of the Hanumat press of the Kalakankar estate.

ABHYUDAYA, 16th May 1912.

61. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), refers to a report in the Bengalee (Calcutta), to the effect that the number of Japanese prostitutes had considerably increased of late in Calcutta owing to the activity of certain people who made large profits by importing these women from Japan.

Japanese prostitutes in Calcutta.

The editor invites the attention of Government to the increase of immorality in the country, and urges that steps should be taken to check the traffic.

SAHIFA, 12th May 1912.

62. The Sahifa (Bijnor), of the 12th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), publishes a cartoon in which India is represented as an Indian woman following and remonstrating with a European who is driving off a cart loaded with sacks of Indian corn.

The export of corn to Europe.

The following dialogue between India and Europe is given at the bottom of the cartoon :—

INDIA : Sir, we Indians will all die of hunger.
EUROPE : Well, I do not care in the least.
INDIA : Please leave the barley at any rate.
EUROPE : Our horses will eat it and there is (moreover) a famine in Russia.
INDIA : Shall we get nothing then ?
EUROPE : Yes ! I am sorry.

Below the cart sacks is written a couplet to the following effect :—

"The soldiers came and robbed the sepoys. It is a pity that hungry men should rob naked people."

PREM, 15th April 1912.

63. The Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), of the 15th April 1912 (received on the 18th May), expresses regret that some Indians, when they rise to high posts, begin to look down upon their countrymen and thus create discontent. The editor remarks that there are also a large number of Indians who make it their business to abuse any of their countrymen who have risen to high official position, and he urges all Indians, official and non-official, to strive for peace and harmony.

Relations between Indian officials and the public.

ABHYUDAYA, 16th May 1912.

64. The Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer suggests the holding of a provincial students'

A suggestion for an United Provinces students' conference.

conference annually at some important centre in the province. He says that the existing debating societies in different schools and colleges may be utilized for the formation of local associations, which will send delegates to the provincial conference, and he expresses the hope that the Education department of these provinces will extend its sympathy to the proposed conference.

NAIYAR-I-AZAM, 19th May 1912.

Complaint against emigration agents.

65. The Naiyar-i-Azam (Moradabad), of the 19th May 1912, complains that recruiting agents gain the consent of intending emigrants by holding out false inducements and temptations, and invites the attention of Government to the matter. The editor says that the people of Moradabad have recently become dissatisfied with Government, because they are under the impression that Government has authorized the agents to kidnap persons and to send them to the colonies as labourers.

He asks Government to insist that a detailed account of the work required of emigrants and of the wages which they would receive in the colonies should be published so that no one should be deceived by false inducements on the part of the recruiting agents.

ABHYUDAYA, 19th May 1912.

An attempted murder in Raswara in the Mirzapur district.

66. A correspondent in the Abhyudaya (Allahabad), of the 19th May 1912, says that in connection with the recent attempted murder of a gwala in Raswara in the Mirzapur district the accused with his associates is trying to dissuade people from giving evidence against him by bribing them or by using threats. He says that as a result it is unlikely that sufficient evidence will be available against him.

The editor remarks that if this account be correct the inhabitants of Raswara must be in a very deplorable condition, and he asks the District Magistrate to take immediate steps to punish the local badmashes in order to secure protection to the villagers.

V.—Legislation.

PREM, 15th April 1912.

The Elementary Education Bill.

67. The Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), of the 15th April 1912 (received on the 18th May), says that the Lieutenant Governor has remarked in the Provincial Legislative Council that the agricultural industry could not be developed properly until the agriculturists were educated, and expresses the hope that in view of the fact that agriculture is the mainstay of the country, Government will recognize the advisability of passing the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill when it is again introduced in the Imperial Council.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

The Waqf Validation Bill and the Muslim League.

68. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), takes exception to the fact that the Muslim League attributes to its own efforts the acceptance of the principles of the Waqf Validation Bill by the Secretary of State for India, and asserts that it was only through the efforts of Maulana Shibli Nomani and the authorities of the Nadwat-ul-Ulma, who continually expressed their resentment at the decision of the Privy Council with reference to the principle of waqf-allal-aulad amongst Muhammadans, that the principles of the bill have been accepted by the Secretary of State.

The editor states that the Muslim League has never done any useful work for the Muhammadan community, and that it does not know how to conduct agitation, and he urges the leaders to reform the constitution of the League in accordance with the wishes of the Muhammadan public.

He says that if the constitution of the League and its system of doing work be not reformed and changed as desired by the people, the national organs of the Muhammadans will be constrained to denounce it as a useless body and declare its existence to be opposed to the interests of the Muhammadans.

ADVOCATE, 19th May 1912.

Anti-gambling legislation.

69. The Advocate (Lucknow), of the 19th May 1912, congratulates Sir George Clarke on having appreciated that gambling on the race courses had become an evil which called for remedy in the public interest, and expresses the hope that the measure passed by the Bombay Legislative Council will form a precedent for similar legislation in other provinces. The editor expresses regret that the Government of Bombay omitted from the bill the clauses empowering it to restrict the number of race meetings at Bombay and Poona and to abolish bookmakers from the course. He expresses the opinion that the objection of the Western India Turf Club that racing in Bombay and Poona would suffer on account of the abolition of professional bookmakers, so long as such a provision did not exist in other parts of India, can be met by the introduction of similar legislation in other provinces. He deplores the rejection of the amendments brought forward by the Hon'ble Sir Pherozshah Mehta and the Hon'ble Mr. Setalvad which required that the conditions of the license should be laid down in a schedule annexed to the Act, and contends that the publication of the conditions of the license in the Government Gazette would be a wholly ineffective remedy. He points out that the Government of Bombay did not undertake legislation against totalizators, as it was anxious to pass the measure in the present session, and with that object in view did all in its power to conciliate those who were opposed to it. He expresses gratification that the Western India Turf Club has promised to co-operate in every way with the Government in putting down "bucket shop" betting.

VI.—Railway.

70. The Prem (Bindraban, Muttra), of the 5th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), complains of cattle being run over on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway, and suggests that the railway authorities should have the line near Bindraban properly fenced in order to prevent the recurrence of such accidents.

The Rajputana-Malwa Railway.

PREM, 5th May 1912.

71. The Leader (Allahabad), of the 17th May 1912, publishes a contributed article in which the writer refers to a letter entitled "Grievances of the Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway," which appeared in the Leader of the 30th April (vide Selections No. 18 of 1912, paragraph 40), and mentions a case in which an Indian subordinate of the office of District Traffic Superintendent, Moradabad, was dismissed in September 1911 on a report of the station master of Moradabad that he had been found travelling without a ticket. He states that the charge was not proved against him at an enquiry which was held subsequently, and expresses regret that a man who had served for six years without complaint should have been discharged with an unsatisfactory conduct certificate.

He states that the appeals of the unfortunate man to the Traffic Superintendent and Manager of the railway and to the Railway Board have failed to secure any redress, and he suggests that the Railway Board does not recognize its position as an appellate court.

Grievances of the Indian employes on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

LEADER, 17th May 1912.

VII.—Post Office.

Nil.

VIII.—Native societies and religious and social matters.

72. The Bharat Sudasha Pravartak (Farrukhabad), for March and April 1912 (received on the 17th May), says that the constantly increasing slaughter of cows for purposes of food and hides is having a very disastrous effect on the agricultural and dairy industries of the country, and asserts that cattle will soon become extinct when all Indian communities as well as Government will suffer.

The editor suggests that measures be taken both by Government and the people for putting a stop to their slaughter and for protecting and improving their breed, and he urges that as the question has no longer a religious aspect and has now become a purely economic problem its solution should not be neglected any more.

The cow-protection movement.

BHARAT SUDASHA PRAVARTAK, March and April 1912.

73. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 22nd May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains of the dearness of milk and butter, and says that it is due to the deterioration in the breed of cows. The editor suggests that more grazing lands should be provided and that agricultural farms and gaushalas should be opened in villages. He deplores the slaughter of cows for purposes of food during famine time, and says that it is a mistake on the part of the Muhammadans to think that it is their religious duty to sacrifice cows. He states that Muhammadan zamindars and agriculturists derive the greatest benefit from cows and bullocks, and reminds them that they are ruining their own interests in decreasing the number of cows. He expresses gratification at the opening of agricultural farms and gaushalas in some parts of the Punjab, and urges district boards to induce villagers to increase the area of grazing lands.

The cow-protection movement.

RAHBAR, 14th May 1912.

ZIA-UL-ISLAM, May 1912.

The sanctity of the Vedas.

74. The Zia-ul-Islam (Moradabad), for the month of May 1912, publishes an article on the Vedas, in which the editor asserts that the Vedas show that the early Aryans sacrificed horses and cows and were also addicted to the use of intoxicants.

He contests the claim that the Vedas are inspired or revealed books, and says that the language used shows that they are a comparatively recent production, and that they were written at different periods.

He points out that the little respect in which the Vedas are held by the followers of the Vedic faith is clearly indicated by the fact that these religious books were neglected and lost sight of until they were brought to light by the exertions of European scholars.

ZIA-UL-ISLAM, May 1912.

The parda system amongst the Muhammadans.

75. The Zia-ul-Islam (Moradabad), for the month of May 1912, has an article on the parda system amongst Muhammadans, in which the editor expresses himself in favour of female education, but strongly protests against any great liberty being given to women. He contends that it is contrary to the laws of nature that the gentler sex should be on an equality with the stronger sex, and urges that women should not be allowed the same liberty as men. He remarks that it would be fatal to the religious and national existence of Muhammadans to permit of any relaxation in the parda system, and states that if Indian ladies were allowed to appear in public they would run the risk of insult and annoyance. He concludes by saying that any social improvement in the condition of Muhammadan women, which was not in conformity with religious teaching, would be opposed to all principles of morality, decency and refinement.

RAHBAR, 14th May 1912.

The condition of Hindus.

76. The Rahbar (Moradabad), of the 14th May 1912 (received on the 22nd May), says that, while the Muhammadans are making great progress in education and are gaining special privileges from Government, the condition of Hindus is becoming more deplorable every day. The editor states that the number of Hindu zamindars is decreasing, and that, while the Muhammadans are making every effort to raise their lower classes, the Hindus are treating their depressed classes with supreme indifference and contempt. He goes on to describe how the Muhammadans are showing signs of activity and progress in Bengal, how they are taking to new professions and trades and elbowing out the Hindus in every direction. He discusses the special political importance attached by Government to Muhammadans, and says that they are quite justified in their hopes of a bright future. He concludes the article by saying that the Hindus are declining in numbers, strength, wealth and ability, and attributes it to the failure on the part of Hindus to treat their depressed classes with consideration.

LUCKNOW GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

Muhammadan government employes and Friday prayers.

77. The Lucknow Gazette of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), expresses regret that the Muhammadans do not lay their religious needs before Government, seeing that it has bestowed religious freedom on its subjects, and lays stress on the importance of Juma prayers from the Muhammadan religious point of view. The editor asks Government to allow its Muhammadan employés two hours' leave on Fridays to discharge this most important religious obligation.

He urges his co-religionists throughout India to hold meetings in support of the resolution passed at the last anniversary of the Nadwat-ul-Ulma, to the effect that Muhammadan government servants should be permitted to leave their offices for two hours on Fridays for prayers.

TAJIR, 4th and 11th May 1912.

The Tajir (Meerut), in the combined issue of the 4th and 11th May 1912 (received on the 20th May), contains a similar article.

ARYA MITRA, 16th May 1912.

The proselytising work of the Arya Samaj.

78. One Niranjan Singh writing in the Arya Mitra (Agra), of the 16th May 1912 (received on the 22nd May), deplores that while Muhammadan maulvis and Christian missionaries are working earnestly and strenuously to gain converts to their religions the Arya Samaj has made no systematic effort in proselytising work. He states that the All-India Shuddhi Sabha, which made high professions of reclaiming nau-Muslims, has accomplished very little and has only put the maulvis on their guard. He urges the Arya Pritinidhi Sabhas to take special measures for preparing preachers and to send them out to propagate the doctrines of the Vedic religion.

OUDH AKHBAR, 21st May 1912.

Dedication of minor girls and young women to temples.

79. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 21st May 1912, denounces the disgraceful custom of dedicating minor girls and young women to the service of temples, and says that there is no reason to continue it. The editor expresses gratification that a bill is shortly to be introduced into the Imperial Legislative Council in order to put a stop to this immoral practice. He urges that women should not be given away in gift like inanimate objects, and expresses regret that, though the Hindu community was fully alive to the pernicious effects of this custom, it could not reform it on its own initiative, and remarks that a great service will be done to Hindu society if this bill be passed into law.

IX.—Miscellaneous.

NASIM-I-AGRA, 15th May 1912.

Rumour regarding the building of the Saraghat bridge.

80. The Nasim-i-Agra of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), has the following :—

"It is rumoured in Dacca that with the permission of Government 101 children are required to be sacrificed at the Saraghat bridge, and that emissaries have been sent to different places to kidnap children."

HITAISHI, 12th May 1912 and the CAWNPORE GAZETTE, 15th May 1912.

The Hitaishi (Pilibhit), of the 12th May 1912, and the Cawnpore Gazette of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 18th May), also refer to the existence of a strange rumour in Dacca that 101 children are to be sacrificed at the Saraghat bridge.

C. E. W. SANDS,

Asst. to the Dy. Inspr. General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department,
United Provinces.

NAINI TAL :
The 25th May 1912.

PRINTED BY J. R. MIDDLETON AT THE GOVT. CAMP BRANCH PRESS, NAINI TAL.

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

Published in the UNITED PROVINCES

Received up to 31st May 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—POLITICS.

(a)—Foreign:

1. The situation in Persia 511
2. The situation in Persia 511
3. The situation in Persia 511

(b)—Home:

4. The backwardness of the Hindu community 511
5. Representation of landowners on the United Provinces Legislative Council ... 512
6. Muhammadan representatives in the Legislative Council 512
7. The coming council elections... ... 512
8. The coming council elections... ... 512
9. East and West in India 513
10. Lord Carmichael 513
11. European colonies in India 513
12. Muhammadans and political agitation ... 513
13. The meaning of liberty according to Indian philosophy 514
14. Coloured races in South Africa ... 514
15. The admission of Indians into the commissioned ranks of the Army 514
16. The admission of Indians into the commissioned ranks of the Army and the police 514
17. Indians in the higher ranks of the public service 515
18. Self-government in India 515
19. The treatment of Asiatics by Europeans... 515
20. Indian Muhammadans and Muslim countries 515
21. The All-India Muslim League... ... 516
22. Mr. Montagu and the Muhammadans ... 516
23. Mr. Montagu and the Muhammadans ... 516

Page.

24. Mr. Montagu and the Muhammadans ... 516

II.—AFGHANISTAN AND TRANS-FRONTIER.

Nil.

III.—NATIVE STATES.

25. The Hindu-Muhammadan question in the Kashmir State 517

IV.—ADMINISTRATION.

(a)—Judicial and Revenue:

26. Civilian judges in India 517
27. Perjury in India and England ... 517
28. Impleading of co-parceners in cases affecting Hindu joint family property ... 518

(b)—Police:

Nil.

(c)—Finance and Taxation:

29. Provincial financial autonomy ... 518

(d)—Municipal and Cantonment Affairs:

30. Roads in Chitrakot 518
31. Separate electorates 518
32. Municipal commissioners and sanitation... 519
33. The water supply at Allahabad ... 519
34. Indian sanitation 519
35. The Sultanpur Municipality 519
36. The segregation of prostitutes ... 519
37. Japanese prostitutes in Calcutta ... 520
38. Japanese prostitutes in Calcutta ... 520
39. The segregration of prostitutes and public morality 520

(e)—Education:

40. The King George Medical College, Lucknow 520
41. Urdu instruction in schools 520

		Page.
42.	The Islamia High School, Etawah ...	520
43.	The Islamia High School, Etawah ...	520
44.	The proposed Muslim University ...	520
45.	The proposed Muslim University ...	521
46.	The Gurukul	522
47.	The Allahabad University examination results	522

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land :

Nil.

(g)—General :

48.	The Hindi Literary Conference ...	522
49.	Gambling in cotton and opium ...	523
50.	The revival of indigenous arts and industries	523
51.	Census of wells and tanks	523
52.	Famine and the organization of private relief	523
53.	Jail manufactures	523
54.	The People's Industrial Bank, Limited ...	523
55.	Need for a cheaper Government Gazette in Urdu	524
56.	Indian lascars and the P. and O. Company	524
57.	Scarcity of labour...	524

V.—LEGISLATION.

58.	The proposed bill for the protection of minor girls	524

		Page.
	VI.—RAILWAY.
59.	Refreshment cars for Indian passengers...	525
60.	The need for renaming the railway stations in Muttra and for specifying particular stations on the railway receipts for Agra	525
61.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway administration	525
62.	Grievances of the Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	525
63.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	525

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

64.	The cow-protection movement ...	525
65.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	526
66.	Discrepancies in the Qoran	526
67.	The missing verses from the Qoran ...	526
68.	The Caste System	526

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

69.	A man-eating tiger in Kota in the Naini Tal district	527

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st May 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian	Lucknow ...	Quarterly ...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	300 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	3,000 „
4	Hindustán Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ghulam Muhammad	700 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P.	450 „
11	Theosophy in India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehangir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Ram Deva; B.A., Arya; 31 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintamani; Madrasi; 30 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Madho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European; 28 ... Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	1,500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	150 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudagar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Nath Vaishya; 36 ...	300 „
†20	Álamgir	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal, Vaishya; 41	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Áwarif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40...	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra ...	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kasim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nazir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A. ... ... Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ram Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ánand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Ram Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43 ...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam	200 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumar; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsar	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zamin; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulla, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29 ...	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

		Page.
42.	The Islamia High School, Etawah ...	520
43.	The Islamia High School, Etawah ...	520
44.	The proposed Muslim University ...	520
45.	The proposed Muslim University ...	521
46.	The Gurukul	522
47.	The Allahabad University examination results	522

(f)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land:

Nil.

(g)—General:

48.	The Hindi Literary Conference ...	522
49.	Gambling in cotton and opium ...	523
50.	The revival of indigenous arts and industries	523
51.	Census of wells and tanks	523
52.	Famine and the organization of private relief	523
53.	Jail manufactures	523
54.	The People's Industrial Bank, Limited ...	523
55.	Need for a cheaper Government Gazette in Urdu	524
56.	Indian lascars and the P. and O. Company	524
57.	Scarcity of labour...	524

V.—LEGISLATION.

58.	The proposed bill for the protection of minor girls	524

		Page.
	VI.—RAILWAY.
59.	Refreshment cars for Indian passengers...	525
60.	The need for renaming the railway stations in Muttra and for specifying particular stations on the railway receipts for Agra	525
61.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway administration	525
62.	Grievances of the Indian employés on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	525
63.	The Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway ...	525

VII.—POST OFFICE.

Nil.

VIII.—NATIVE SOCIETIES AND RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL MATTERS.

64.	The cow-protection movement ...	525
65.	Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans	526
66.	Discrepancies in the Qoran	526
67.	The missing verses from the Qoran ...	526
68.	The Caste System	526

IX.—MISCELLANEOUS.

69.	A man-eating tiger in Kota in the Naini Tal district	527

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS.

[Corrected up to the 1st May 1912.]

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
	ENGLISH.
†1	Lucknow Collegian	Lucknow ...	Quarterly ...	Rev. T. C. Badley, of Lucknow; American; 45.	1,200 copies.
2	Meerut College Magazine ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Professor C. H. Lea; European; 35 ...	300 „
3	Central Hindu College Magazine.	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Mrs. Annie Besant; European (Theosophist); 68.	8,000 „
4	Hindustán Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidanand Sinha, Barrister-at-law; Kayasth; 39.	1,500 „
5	Jain Gazette	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Jagmandir Lal, Jaini, M.A., Barrister-at-law.	1,000 „
6	Mahámandal Magazine ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	B. Kali Prasanno Chaterji; 50 ...	3,000 „
7	Muslim Review	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ghulam Muhammad	700 „
8	Prabudha Bhárat	Almora ...	Do. ...	Swámi Virjánand; Bengali Sanyási; 36.	1,700 „
9	Sons of India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. G. S. Arundale; European (Theosophist); 41.	2,000 „
10	Student World	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	H. Banbury, B.A., L.C.P.	450 „
11	Theosophy in India	Benares ...	Do. ...	Mr. Jehangir Sorábji; Pársi (Theosophist); 51.	5,500 „
12	Vedic Magazine	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Professor Ram Deva; B.A., Arya; 31 ...	600 „
13	Allahabad Law Journal ...	Allahabad ...	Weekly ...	Dr. Tej Bahádur Sapru, M.A., LL.D.; Kashmiri Brahman; 41. / Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, M.A., LL.D.; Bengali Brahman; 47.	2,000 „
14	Advocate	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,100 „
15	Leader	Allahabad ...	Daily ...	Mr. C. Y. Chintamani; Madrasi; 30 ...	2,100 „
	ANGLO-HINDI.
*16	Khichri Samáchár	Mirzapur ...	Weekly ...	Madho Prasád; Khatri; 60 ...	75 copies.
	ANGLO-URDU.
*17	Aligarh Monthly	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Mr. D. Auchterlonie; European; 28 ... / Háfiz Muhammad Matin Khán; Muhammadan; 35.	1,500 copies.
	URDU.
18	Adib	Allahabad ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Pyáre Lál Shakar; 32 ...	150 copies.
19	Akhbár Saudagar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Lála Kedár Nath Vaishya; 36 ...	300 „
†20	Álamgir	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Piarey Lal, Vaishya; 41	1,000 „
21	Al Fasih	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Hakím Fasih-uz-Zaman Asar; Muhammadan; 45.	400 „
22	Al Áwarif	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Hakím Kásim Ali; Muhammadan; 40...	900 „
23	Al Aziz	Agra	Do. ...	Abdul Aziz Khán; Muhammadan, Pathán; 28.	300 „
†24	Al Islám	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Ahmad Husain; Muhammadan; 43 ...	300 „
25	Al Kasim	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan.	3,000 „
26	An Nadwah	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Shibli Nománi; Muhammadan; 56. / Maulvi Habib-ur-Rahman; Muhammadan; 40.	625 „
27	An Nazir	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Wasi-ul-Hasan Ulvi, B.A. ... ... / Zafar-ul-Mulk Ulvi	400 „
28	An Najm	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abdus Shakur; 34	900 „
29	Árya Patra	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ram Kayasth; 33	850 „
30	Árya Samáchár	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Ánand Sarúp; Kayasth; 42 ...	390 „
31	Educational Magazine ...	Ghazipur ...	Do. ...	Pande Ram Saran Lál; Kayasth; 43 ...	70 „
32	Edward	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Shyam Sunder Lal Nigam	200 „
*33	Gurukul Samáchár	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Prasanno Kumar; Brahman; 24.	600 „
34	Hamdard-i-Qaum	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Bábu Raghubir Singh; Vaishya; 34 ...	900 „
35	Istibsar	Rae Bareli ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zamin; Muhammadan; 40.	400 „
36	Khátún...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdulla, B.A., LL.B.; Muhammadan; 36.	500 „
*37	Khurshíd-i-Nánpára ...	Nanpara (Bahraich)	Do. ...	Muhammad Taqi; Muhammadan; 29 ...	525 „
38	Kul Bháskar	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Shridhar Prasád; Kayasth; 30 ...	500 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
39	Old Boy	Aligarh ...	Monthly ...	Itrat Husain, B.A.; 39	1,000 copies.
40	Pardah Nashin	Agra	Do. ...	Mrs. Khámosh; 35	500 „
41	Postal Magazine	Agra	Do. ...	Muhammad Abdul Rauf Khán; Muhammadan; 29.	500 „
42	Satopkári	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Lála Rámdhan Dás; Khatri; 56 ...	1,600 „
*43	Tabsira	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Muhammad Zakir Ali Khan ...	600 „
44	Tohfa-i-Muhammadia ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Shah Muhammad Fazil; 35 ...	500 „
45	Tyagi Brahman	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Salig Ram Sharma.
46	Urdu-i-Mualla	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	M. Fazal-ul-Husan, B.A., Muhammadan; 34.	500 copies.
47	Vaishya Hitkári	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Rám Dayal Vidyarthi; 35	709 „
48	Zamána	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dayá Naráyan Nigam, B.A.; Kayasth; 30.	1,400 „
49	Ziá-ul-Islám	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain Bismil; Muhammadan; 38.	550 „
50	Akhbár-i-Imámia	Lucknow ...	Twice a month	Saiyid Ábid Ali; Muhammadan, Shiah; 75.	200 „
51	Al Nazir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Abu Rahmat; Muhammadan; 56.	200 „
†52	Guldasta-i-Anwár-i-Alam ...	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Ilahi Bakhsh; Amir Bakhsh; Muhammadans.	125 „
53	Jain Prachárak	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Joti Prasád; Jaini; 29	1,000 „
54	Lucknow Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Manzur Ahmad; 35	200 „
55	Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar ...	Fatehpur ...	Do. ...	Lála Mathura Prasád; Kayasth; 35 ...	125 „
56	Vyápari and Karígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	350 „
57	All-India Shiah Gazette ...	Lucknow ...	Three times a month.	Saiyid Mubarak Ali; 32	600 „
58	Agra Akhbár	Agra	Weekly ...	Khwája Siddiq Husain; Muhammadan; 36.	300 „
59	Al Bashír	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Bashir-ud-din; Kamboh Muhammadan; 54.	1,050 „
60	Al Khalil	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Khalíl-ur-Rahmán; Muhammadan; 41.
61	Al Mushir	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Fazl Husain; 38	600 copies.
62	Aligarh Institute Gazette ...	Aligarh ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Muktada Khan; 32 ...	800 „
63	Anwar-i-Alam	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Yusuf Khan.
64	Áwáza-i-Khalq	Benares ...	Do. ...	Munshi Gulab Chand; Kayasth; 31 ...	300 copies.
65	Cawnpore Gazette	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Bábu Harnám Singh; Khatri; 58 ...	500 „
66	Dabdaba-i-Sikandari ...	Rampur ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Fárúk Hasan; Muhammadan; 58.	300 „
67	Darbar	Agra	Do. ...	Dr. Wazir Muhammad; 45... ...	223 „
68	Fitnah	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	300 „
69	Hitaishi	Pilibhit ...	Do. ...	Munshi Dál Chand; Kayasth; 72 ...	200 „
70	Independent	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal, Khatri; 55 ...	100 „
71	Ittihad	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Mujahid Husain Jauhar; 39 ...	400 „
*72	Jádu	Jaunpur ...	Do. ...	Háfiz Abdur Rahmán Khán; Muhammadan; 39.	40 „
73	Kaisar-i-Hind	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Muhammad Hamid; 24	500 „
74	Káyasth Hitkári	Ágra	Do. ...	Kamta Prasád; Kayasth; 57 ...	500 „
75	Mashriq	Gorakhpur ...	Do. ...	Hakím Abdul Karím Khán Barham; Muhammadan; 48.	925 „
76	Medina	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Saiyid Nur-ul-Hasan, Muhammadan.
77	Mukhbir-i-Álam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Qázi Abdul Ali; Muhammadan; 40 ...	300 copies.
78	Musáfir	Agra	Do. ...	Pandít Tara Dat; Arya; 26 ...	1,800 „
79	Muslim Gazette	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Wahid-ud-din.
80	Naiyar-i-Ázam	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Ibn-i-Ali; Muhammadan; 47 ...	450 copies.

* Irregular.

† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(continued).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
81	Nizam-ul-Mulk	Moradabad ...	Weekly ...	Qazi Fahim-ud-din; Muhammadan; 54.	400 copies.
82	Oudh Punch	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Sajjád Husain; Muhammadan; 56.	225 „
83	Rahbar	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banwári Lál; Vaishya; 31 ...	400 „
84	Rohilkhand Gazette ...	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Shaikh Abdul Aziz; Muhammadan; 47	200 „
85	Sahifa	Bijnor	Do. ...	Maulvi Majid Hasan; Muhammadan; 29.	250 „
86	Sar Punch	Shahjahanpur ...	Do. ...	Saiyid Zahur Ahmad; Muhammadan; 26.	300 „
87	Surma-i-Rozgár	Agra	Do. ...	Munshi Itrat Husain; Muhammadan; 50.	250 „
88	Tafrih	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rámshankar Prasád; Kayasth; 26 ...	400 „
89	Tajir	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Maulvi Nasir Ahmad; 35	328 „
90	Tohfa-i-Hind	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Sajjad Husain; Shaikh; 33	400 „
91	Union Gazette	Bareilly ...	Do. ...	Munshi Karam Iláhi; Muhammadan; 32.	500 „
92	Zul Qarnain	Budaun ...	Do. ...	Nizám-ud-din Husain; Muhammadan; 43.	1,000 „
93	Hindustáni	Lucknow ...	Twice a week	Hon'ble Munshi Gangá Prasád Varmá; Khatri; 55.	1,700 „
94	Nasím-i-Agra	Agra	Do.	Bábu Harish Sányál; Bengali Brahman; 59.	500 „
95	Oudh Akhbár	Lucknow ...	Daily ...	Munshi Jálpá Prasád; Kayasth; 52 ...	300 „
	ARABIC-URDU.
†96	Al Bayán	Lucknow ...	Monthly ...	Maulvi Saiyid Sulaiman; Muhammadan; 30. Maulvi Abdul Wali; 27	300 copies.
	HINDI.
97	Almora Akhbár	Almora ...	Monthly ...	Munshi Sadánand Sanwál; Brahman; 58.	155 copies.
†98	Ánand Kádambini... ...	Mirzapur ...	Do. ...	Pandit Badri Naráyan; Chaudhari; Brahman; 56	100 „
99	Bharatodaya	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Padam Singh Sharmá; 37	650 „
100	Bharát Sudashá Pravartak ...	Farrukhabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Ganesh Prasád Sharmá; Brahman; 45.	450 „
101	Bháskar	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Raghubir Saran	180 „
102	Bráhman Samáchár... ...	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Narayan Prasad; Brahman... ...	405 „
103	Bráhman Sarvasva	Etawah ...	Do. ...	Pandit Bhimsen Sharmá; Brahman; 55	700 „
104	Dehati	Benares ...	Do. ...	Gulab Chand Srivastava; Kayasth ...	600 „
†105	Dharm Divákar	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; 60	500 „
*106	Dharm Kusumakar	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Rai Debi Prasad Purna, B.A.; 40 ...	1,000 „
107	Garhwáli	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Pandit Girja Dutt; Naithani Brahman; 36.	600 „
108	Griha Lakshmi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Sudarshanacharya, B.A.; 40 ... Shri Mati Gopal Devi	1,300 „
†109	Gurukul Samáchár	Sikandarabad (Bulandshahr).	Do. ...	...	300 „
110	Indu	Benares ...	Do. ...	Ambika Prasád Gupta; 26	650 „
†111	Jain Nari Hitkari	Deoband (Saharanpur).	Do. ...	Jyoti Prasad; Jain; 29	1,000 „
112	Jásús	Gahmar (Ghazipur)	Do. ...	Gopál Rám; Bania; 45	300 „
*113	Jiwan	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Ram Prasad Misra; 22	1,000 „
114	Kalwár Mitra	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Prem Nath Yogishwar; 37... ...	450 „
115	Kányakubj Hitkári	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Pandit Manohar Lal Misra; 46 ...	1,500 „
*116	Khatri Hitkári	Benares ...	Do. ...	Balmakund Varmá; Khatri; 25 ...	400 „
*117	Maheswari	Aligarh ...	Do.	Joti Sarup, Brahman; 42	3,000 „
118	Maryáda	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya; 27 ...	1,600 „
119	Nágri Prachárak	Lucknow ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; Brahman; 28 ...	400 „
†120	Naraini or The Vedanta Patrika	Fyzabad ...	Do. ...	Munshi Ramnandhan; Kayasth; 32 ...	325 „

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

List of newspapers and periodicals—(concluded).

No.	Name of publication.	Where published.	Edition.	Name, caste and age of editor.	Circulation.
121	Nava Jiwan	Benares ...	Monthly ...	Keshavdeva Shastri; 37	1,000 copies.
122	Nigamágam Chandriká ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Rúp Naráyan Pande; 27	4,500 „
*123	Palliwál Patrika	Fatehgarh ...	Do. ...	Pandit Gauri Shankar Sharmá; 25 ...	200 „
124	Rasik Mitra	Cawnpore ...	Do. ...	Manohar Lál; Brahman; 35 ...	500 „
125	Sanádhyopkárak	Agra	Do. ...	Lakshmi Narayan Dube	700 „
126	Sanátan Dharm Patáka ...	Moradabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Rám Sarúp; Brahman; 41 ...	1,550 „
127	Saraswati	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Mahabir Prasad Dwivedi; 46 ...	4,000 „
128	Stri Darpan	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Rámeswari Devi Nehru; Kashmiri; 30.	800 „
129	Stri Dharm Shikshak ...	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Srimati Yasoda Devi; 31	3,000 „
*130	Sudhanidhi	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Jagannath Prasád Shukla; Vaidye; 36.	500 „
131	Swadesh Bándhavá	Agra	Do. ...	Kunwar Hanumant Singh; Rajput; 45	600 „
132	Vaidic Sarvaswa	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Pandit Indra Narayan Dwivedi; Brahman; 35.	1,000 „
133	Vaishya	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Sangam Lal; Agarwal; 22... ...	200 „
*134	Vánijya Sukhdáyak	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Jagannáth Prasád; Máthur Brahman; 38.	1,000 „
135	Veda Prakásh	Meerut ...	Do. ...	Swami Tulsi Rám; Brahman, Arya; 41	1,030 „
136	Bharat Dharm Neta... ...	Benares ...	Twice a month	Dharam Dutt, Vedshashtri; 26 ...	500 „
†137	Kam Dhenu	Hardwar ...	Do. ...	Baba Bhagwan Das Udasi; 46 ...	500 „
138	Kshattriya Mitra	Benares ...	Do. ...	Prasidha Naráyan Singh, B.A.; Kshattriya; 44.	1,000 „
139	Rájpút	Agra	Do. ...	Thakur Hanumant Singh; 45 ...	1,700 „
140	Vyápári and Kárígar ...	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Thákur Prasád; Khatri; 46 ...	770 „
141	Prem	Bindraban (Muttra)	Three times a month.	Mahendra Pratap; Hindu.
142	Ánand	Lucknow ...	Weekly ...	Pandit Shiva Náth; Brahman; 45 ...	200 copies.
143	Árya Mitra	Agra	Do. ...	Pandit Rudra Dutt; Brahman; 60 ...	1,600 „
144	Bhárat Jíwan	Benares ...	Do. ...	Bábu Shri Krishna Varmá; Khatri; 31	1,500 „
145	Jain Gazette	Jalesar (Etah) ...	Do. ...	Bábu Banarsi Das Jain, B.A.; 35 ...	1,000 „
146	Kaisar Hind	Benares ...	Do. ...	Babu Bansi Dhar
				Sita Ram Dinkar; 45	500 „
†147	Mahila Hitkarak	Dehra Dun ...	Do. ...	Srimati Vidyavati Devi	250 „
148	Saddharm Prachárak ...	Bijnor... ...	Do. ...	Lala Munshi Rám; Khatri; 56 ...	3,000 „
149	Shubh Chintak	Allahabad ...	Do. ...	Babu Lal Bihari Lal; Khatri; 55 ...	1,000 „
150	Abhyudaya	Allahabad ...	Twice a week	Pandit Krishna Kant Malviya; 28 ...	2,000 „
	ANGLO-BENGALI.
151	Trishul	Benares ...	Weekly ...	J. N. Bysak	1,000 copies.

* Irregular.
† Temporarily stopped.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), of the 22nd May 1912 (received on the 25th May), refers to the desecration of the shrine of Imam Raza at Meshed by Russian troops, and remarks that the incident has proved that the European Powers have no respect for the feelings of Asiatic people. The editor expresses surprise that the All-India Muslim League has not yet recorded its resentment at the objectionable action of the Russians at Meshed by holding monster meetings in different parts of the country, and he urges his co-religionists to hold protest meetings, and to apprise Government of their sentiments.

MUSLIM GAZETTE, 22nd May 1912.

The situation in Persia.

2. Al Bashir (Etawah), of the 28th May 1912, discusses the situation in Persia and holds Russia responsible for the trouble in that country. The editor expresses regret that the Persian government has become so weak that it cannot put down internal disorder and anarchy, and says that in these circumstances it would have been much better if only England had occupied Persia, as that would have saved the country from pillage and bloodshed. He contends that the Anglo-Russian Convention, notwithstanding all professions to the contrary, has done much injury to Persia, and observes that if England does not occupy Persia it would be better if it be taken possession of by Russia on a permanent basis, on the ground that Persians would fare better than they do at present, and would enjoy the same rights as have been granted to Muhammadans in Central Asia under Russian protection.

AL BASHIR, 28th May 1912.

The situation in Persia.

He asserts that the present state of affairs in Persia calls for the cancellation of the Anglo-Russian Convention, and suggests that the British Government should forcibly defeat Russian designs in Persia. He says that the Muhammadans throughout the world would support England if she were to adopt such a policy in Persia.

3. The Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 29th May 1912, referring to the desecration of a mosque at Meshed by the Russian troops. remarks that outrage has shocked the whole civilized world and that if Persia had been strong enough the bombardment of Meshed would have led to terrible reprisals. The editor expresses regret that the European Powers have not even protested against the outrage. He goes on to say that, when the Persians themselves have become blind to their own interests, it is idle to expect any sympathy for them from the European Powers, and that even England cannot be expected to extend its sympathy to the Persians when all their troubles are the result of their own shortcomings and weakness.

OUDH AKHBAR, 29th May 1912.

The situation in Persia.

(b)—Home.

4. The Arya Patrika (Bareilly), for the month of May 1912, observes that the Hindus are passing through a most critical period of their existence, and that it behoves them torealize the gravity of the situation before it is too late. The editor deplores the absence of any Hindu political organization in these provinces and expresses regret that the followers of Swami Dayanand, instead of bridging the gulf between the different sections of the Hindu community, have rather increased it. He notes that there is no institution in these provinces where proper instruction in the ancient Hindu scriptures is given, with the result that the Hindu community is rapidly losing all religious spirit.

ARYA PATRIKA, May 1912.

The backwardness of the Hindu community.

With regard to the representation of Hindus and Muhammadans on municipal and district boards, he states that the Muhammadans, who form only fourteen per cent. of the population, have repesentation out of proportion to their numbers. He remarks that the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya is the only political leader who has a real regard for the interests of the Hindus, and that men like the Hon'ble Babu Ganga Prasad Varma should not be regarded as leaders of the Hindu community.

He says that the Hindu community is deteriorating in every way, that Hindu learning is languishing for want of encouragement, and that large bodies of Hindus are deserting their religion.

The editor remarks that there are very few representative Hindu newspapers in these provinces as compared with the number of Muhammadan papers, which make it their chief business to protect Muhammadan interests and are always prepared to oppose the Hindus, and concludes the article with the following remarks :—

"There are no political leaders among the Hindus, no social reformers and no learned theologians. There are also no newspapers, which are really inspired with such devotion to the Hindu community as to be prepared to make any sacrifice for it, and to be constantly considering measures for its welfare. Therefore there is also no public spirit, and it is not surprising that we are in this deplorable condition. We cannot say what progress the Hindu community may make in future, but at present it is in a very deplorable condition and that is the reason why our brethren of other provinces scorn and despise us."

RAJPUT, 15th May 1912.

Representation of landowners on the United Provinces Legislative Council.

5. The Rajput (Agra), of the 15th May 1912 (received on the 25th May), says that the United Provinces Government has introduced the Agra Estates Bill and the Agra Settled Estates Bill in the Provincial Legislative Council for the protection of large estates, and urges those who represent the landowners on the Council to realize the importance of these measures and, to ensure that they are passed into law in spite of the opposition of the members of the professional classes who, it must be remembered, stand to gain by their rejection. The editor advises that such representatives to be really useful should be chosen from the class of hereditary landowners.

QAISER-I-HIND, 23rd May 1912.

Muhammadan representatives in the Legislative Council.

6. The Qaiser-i-Hind (Fyzabad), of the 23rd May 1912 (received on the 29th May), publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains that editors of newspapers are in the habit of attacking the Muhammadan members of Council and of imputing to them all sorts of unworthy motives, and he expresses apprehension that this objectionable practice may induce the present members to retire from their seats, with the result that all the seats will fall into the hands of the Hindus. He urges the Muhammadans to patiently watch the work of their representatives and endeavour to remedy their defects and shortcomings.

He suggests the formation of local committees to advise the members as to their procedure in the Council, and says that in case they do not discharge their duties properly they should not be re-elected.

TAFRIH, 21st May 1912.

The coming council elections.

